 I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury 12
North Good, an God will!

L Bard As good as heart can wish.
 The king is almost wounded to the death,
 And, in the fortune of my lord your son, Prince Harry slain outright, and both the

Blunts 16
 Kill'd by the hand of Douglas, young Prince
 John

And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir
 John

Is prisoner to your son. O! such a day, 20
 So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
 Came not till now to dignify the times Since Cæsar's fortunes

North How is this deriv'd?
 Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

L Bard I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence, 25

A gentleman well bred and of good name,
 That freely render'd me these news for true

North Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent 28

On Tuesday last to listen after news.
L Bard My lord, I over-rode him on the way,

And he is furnish'd with no certainties
 More than he haply may retail from me. 32

Enter TRAVERS.

North Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Tra My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me
 back

With joyful tidings, and, being better hors'd,
 Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard 36
 A gentleman, almost spent with speed,
 That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied

horse

He ask'd the way to Chester, and of him
 I did demand what news from Shrewsbury 40

He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
 And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.

With that he gave his able horse the head,
 And, bending forward struck his armed heels 44

Against the panting sides of his poor jade
 Up to the rowl-head, and, starting so,

He seem'd in running to devour the way,
 Staying no longer question.

North Ha! Agam 48
 Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
 Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion

Had met ill luck?
L Bard My lord, I'll tell you what
 If my young lord your son have not the day, 52

Upon mine honour, for a silken point

I'll give my barony never talk of it.

North Why should the gentleman that rode by Travers

Give then such instances of loss?

L Bard Who, he? 56

He was some hilding fellow that had stolen

The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,

Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news

Enter MORTON

North Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, 60

Foretells the nature of a tragic volume

So looks the strond, whereon the imperious

Hath left a witness'd usurpation

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury? 64

Mor I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord, Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask

To fright our party

North How doth my son and brother?

Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek

Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand. 69

Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,

So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,

Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, 72

And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd,

But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,

And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it.

This thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and

thus, 76

Your brother thus, so fought the noble Douglas,

Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds

But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,

Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, 80

Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead'

Mor Douglas is living, and your brother,

yet,

But, for my lord your son,—

North Why, he is dead.—

See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! 84

He that but fears the thing he would not know

Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes

That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak,

Morton

Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, 88

And I will take it as a sweet disgrace

And make thee rich for doing me such wrong

Mor You are too great to be by me gainsaid,

Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's

dead

I see a strange confession in thine eye

Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin

To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so, 96

The tongue offends not that reports his death—

And he doth sin that doth belie the dead.

Not he which says the dead is not alive.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100

Hath but a losing office, and his tongue

Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,

Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

L Bard I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead 104

Mor I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen,
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rendering faint quittance, weaned and outbreath'd, 108
To Harry Monmouth, whose swift wrath bear
down

The never daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprung up
In few, his death,—whose spirit lent a fire 112
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,—
Being bruted once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd courage in his troops,
For from his metal was his party steel'd, 116
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, 120
So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear

That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim Than did our soldiers aiming at their safety, Fly from the field Then was that noble Worcester 125

Too soon ta'en prisoner, and that furious Scot, The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword

Had three times slain the appearance of the
king 128

'Gan vault his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs, and in his flight,

Stumbling in fear, was took The sum of all
Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out
A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmoreland This is the news at full North For this I shall have time enough to mourn 136

In poison there is physic, and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,
Being sick, have in some measure made me well
And as the wretch, whose fever-weak'n'd joints, Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, 141
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, 144

Are thrice themselves Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch!

A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel Must glove this hand and hence, thou sickly quail!

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head 148
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron, and approach
The ragged st hour that time and spite dare bring

To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland!
Let heaven kiss earth! now let not nature's
hand 153

Keep the wud flood confin'd! let order die!
And let this world no longer be a stage

To feed contention in a lingering act, 156
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead! 160

Tra This strained passion doth you wrong,
my lord

L Bard Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour

Mor The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health, the which, if you give o'er
To stormy passion must perforce decay 165
You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And summ'd the account of chance, before you said,

'Let us make head' It was your presumise 168
That in the dole of blows your son might drop
You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge
More likely to fall in than to get o'er,
You were advis'd his flesh was capable 172
Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd

Yet did you say, 'Go forth' and none of this, Though strongly apprehended, could restrain 176

The stiff-borne action what hath then befallen, Or what hath this bold enterprise brought
forth,

More than that being which was like to be?

L Bard We all that are engaged to this loss Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas
That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to one
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd, 184
And since we are o'er-set, venture again
Come, we will all put forth, body and goods

Mor 'Tis more than time and, my most noble lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth, 188
The gentle Archbishop of York is up,
With well-appointed powers he is a man
Who with a double surety binds his followers
My lord your son had only but the corpse', 192
But shadows and the shows of men to fight,
For that same word rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls,
And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd, As men drunk potions, that their weapons only

Seem'd on our side but, for their spirits and souls,

This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
As fish are in a pond But now the bishop 200
Turns insurrection to religion
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts
He's follow'd both with body and with mind,
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood 204
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones,

Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause,
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke, 208
And more and less do flock to follow him

North I knew of this before, but, to speak truth,

This present grief had wip'd it from my mind
Go in with me, and counsel every man 212
The aptest way for safety and revenge Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed
Never so few, and never yet more need

[Exeunt]

SCENE II — London A Street

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler

Fal Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water, but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for 5

Fal Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me the brim of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels I was never manned with an agate till now, but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel, the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek, and yet he will not stick to say, his face is a face-royal God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it, and yet he will be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him What said Master Dombledon about the satin for my short cloak and my slops? 33

Page He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph, he would not take his bond and vours he liked not the security 37

Fal Let him be damned like the glutton!
may his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel!
a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles, and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security I looked a' should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him. Where's Bardolph? 54

Page He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse

Fal I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived. 60

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant

Page Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for stinking him about Bardolph

Fal Wait close, I will not see him. 64

Ch Just What's he that goes there?

Ser Falstaff, an't please your lordship

Ch Just He that was in question for the robbery? 68

Ser He, my lord, but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster 72

Ch Just What, to York? Call him back
again

Ser Sir John Falstaff!

Fal Boy, tell him I am deaf 76

Page You must speak louder, my master is deaf

Ch Just I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good Go, pluck him by the elbow, I must speak with him.

Ser Sir John!

Fal What! a young knave and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels want soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser You mistake me, sir 90

Fal Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldier-ship aside, I had had in my throat if I had said so 94

Ser I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside, and give me leave to tell you you he in your throat if you say I am any other than an honest man. 98

Fal I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gett'st any leave of me, hang me if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter hence! avaunt! 103

Ser Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch Just Sir John Falstaff, a word with
you.

Fal My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day I am glad to see your lordship abroad I heard say your lordship was sick.
I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice.
Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time, and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health. 115

Ch Just Sir John, I send for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury

Fal An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales. 120

Ch. Just I talk not of his majesty. You would not come when I sent for you. 120

Fal And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy. 124

Ch. Just Well, heaven mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you. 124

Fal This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship, a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling. 124

Ch. Just What tell you me of it? be it as it is. 131

Fal It hath its original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness. 131

Ch. Just I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you. 137

Fal Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal. 141

Ch. Just To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears, and I care not if I do become your physician. 144

Fal I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty, but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself. 150

Ch. Just I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me. 150

Fal As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come. 156

Ch. Just Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy. 156

Fal He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less. 160

Ch. Just Your means are very slender, and your waste is great. 160

Fal I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 160

Ch. Just You have misled the youthful prince. 160

Fal The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog. 168

Ch. Just Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gads-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action. 173

Fal My lord! 173

Ch. Just But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf. 176

Fal To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox. 176

Ch. Just What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out. 180

Fal A wassail candle, my lord, all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth. 180

Ch. Just There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity. 183

Fal His effect of gravity, gravity, gravity. 183

Ch. Just You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. 188

Fal Not so, my lord, your ill angel is light, but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell: Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young, you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls, and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too. 203

Ch. Just Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John! 212

Fal My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hollang, and singing of anthems: To approve my youth further, I will not the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding, and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord: I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents, marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack. 226

Ch. Just Well, God send the prince a better companion! 226

Fal God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him. 230

Ch. Just Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry: I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland. 234

Fal Yea, I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day, for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever. But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death. 234 with rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch Just Well, be honest, be honest, and God bless your expedition.

Fal Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Ch Just Not a penny, not a penny, you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit CHIEF JUSTICE and Servant.
Fal If I do, fill me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than he can part young lumbs and lechery, but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other, and so both the degrees prevent my curses. Boy!

Fal What money is in my purse?

Fal I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the prince, this to the Earl of Westmoreland, and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it you know where to find me. [Exit PAGE.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt, I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything, I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit

SCENE III — York. A Room in the ARCHBISHOP'S Palace

Enter the ARCHBISHOP of YORK, LORD HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH

Arch Thus have you heard our cause and known our means,

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes

And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it?

Mowb I well allow the occasion of our arms, But gladly would be better satisfied

How in our means we should advance ourselves To look with forehead bold and big enough

Upon the power and puissance of the king

Hast Our present musters grow upon the file To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice,

And our supplies live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns

With an incensed fire of injuries

L Bard The question, then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand May hold up head without Northumberland

Hast With him, we may

L Bard Ay, marry, there's the point But if without him we be thought too feeble,

My judgment is, we should not step too far so Till we had his assistance by the hand,

For in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surmise

Of aids incertain should not be admitted

Arch 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph, for, indeed

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury

L Bard It was, my lord, who lnd himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply,

Flattering himself with project of a power Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts,

And so, with great imagination Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,

And winking leap'd into destruction

Hast But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope

L Bard Yes, if this present quality of war,— Indeed the instant action,—a cause on foot,

Lives so in hope, as in an early spring We see the appearing buds, which, to prove fruit,

Hope gives not so much warrant as despair That frosts will bite them When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model, And when we see the figure of the house,

Then must we rate the cost of the erection, Which if we find outweighs ability,

What do we then but draw anew the model In fewer offices or at last deist

To build at all? Much more, in this great work,— Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down

And set another up,—should we survey The plot of situation and the model,

Consent upon a sure foundation, Question surveyors, know our own estate,

How able such a work to undergo, To weigh against his opposite, or else,

We fortify in paper, and in figures, Using the names of men instead of men

Like one that draws the model of a house Beyond his power to build it, who, half through,

Grives o'er and leaves his part-created cost A naked subject to the weeping clouds,

And waste for churlish winter's tyranny

Hast Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,

Should be still-born, and that we now possess d The utmost man of expectation,

I think we are a body strong enough, Even as we are, to equal with the king

L Bard What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand?

Hast To us no more; nay, not so much, Lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl, Are in three heads one power against the French, And one against Glendower, perforce, a third Must take up us so is the unfirm king

In three divided, and his coffers sound With hollow poverty and emptiness

Arch That he should draw his several strengths together

And come against us in full puissance, Need not be dreaded.

Hast If he should do so, He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh

Baying him at the heels never fear that. 80
L. Bard Who is it like should lead his forces hither?

Hast The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland,
 Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth

But who is substituted 'gainst the French 84
 I have no certain notice.

Arch Let us on
 And publish the occasion of our arms
 The commonwealth is sick of their own choice,
 Their over-greedy love hath surfeited 88
 A habitation giddy and unsure Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart
 O thou fond many! with what loud applause Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Boling-broke 92

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be
 And being now trimm'd in thine own desires, Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of hum
 That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up 96
 So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
 Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
 And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
 And howl'st to find it! What trust is in these times? 100

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him
 die,

Are now become enamour'd on his grave
 Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head, When through proud London he came sighing
 on 104

After the admired heels of Bolingbroke, Cry'st now, 'O earth! yield us that king again,
 And take thou this!' O, thoughts of men accurst!

Past and to come seem best, things present worst. 108

Mowb Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?

Hast We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I.—London A Street

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY FANG, and his Boy, with her, and SNARE following Quick Master Fang, have you entered the exion?

Fang It is entered.

Quick Where's your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will a' stand to't?

Fang Sirrah, where's Snare?

Quick O Lord, ay! good Master Snare

Snare Here, here

Fang Snare we must arrest Sir John Fal-staff 8

Quick Yea, good Master Snare, I have entered him and all 12

Snare It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab

Quick Alas the day! take heed of him he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly In good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth if his weapon be out he will foam like any devil, he will spare neither man, woman, nor child 20

Fang If I can close with him I care not for his thrust

Quick No, nor I neither I'll be at your elbow 24

Fang An I but fist him once, an a' come but within my vice,—

Quick I am undone by his going, I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score Good Master Fang, hold him sure good Master Snare, let him not 'scape A comes continually to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle, and he's indited to dinner to the Lub-ber's Head in Lumber-Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear, and I have borne, and borne, and borne, and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on There is no honesty in such dealing, unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong Yonder he comes, and that arrant malmseynose knave, Bardolph, with him Doyour offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare, do me, do me, do me your offices 47

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, Page, and BARDOLPH

Fal How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly 51

Fal Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph cut me off the villain's head, throw the quean in the channel! 54

Quick Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardy rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue!
 thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller 61

Fal Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang A rescue! a rescue!

Quick Good people, bring a rescue or two!
 Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't ta? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed! 66

Fal Away, you scullion! you rampallian!
 you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, attended

Ch Just What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Quick Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me! 72

Ch Just How now, Sir John! what! are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business?

You should have been well on your way to York

Stand from him, fellow wherefore hang'st upon him?

Quick O, my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch Just For what sum?

Quick It is more than for so me, my lord, it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home, he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare.

Fal I think I am as like to ride the mare if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch Just How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Quick Marry, if thou wert in honest man, thyself and the money too. I thou didst swear to me upon a parrot-gilt goblet sitting in my Dolphin-chamber at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar telling us she had a good dish of prawns whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath deny it if thou canst.

Fal My lord, this is a poor mad soul, and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them.

Ch Just Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration, you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person.

Quick Yea, in troth, my lord.

Ch Just Prithce peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and repay the villany you have done her the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness if a man will make curtsy, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deurance from these officers being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch Just You speak as having power to do wrong but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal Come hither, hostess [Taking her aside]

Enter GOWER

Ch Just Now, Master Gower! what news?

Gow The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand the rest the paper tells.

Fal As I am a gentleman [Gives a letter]

Quick Nay, you said so before.

Fal As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Quick By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal Glasses glasses, is the only drinking and for the walls a pretty sight drollery or the story of the Prodigal or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come an it were not for thy humours there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me dost not know me? Come, come I know thou wast set on to this.

Quick Prithce Sir John let it be but twenty nobles in faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me! Ja!

Fal Let it alone, I'll make other shift you'll be a fool still.

Quick Well you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Fal Will I live? [To BARDOLPH] Go, with her, with her hook on, hook on.

Quick Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal No more words let's have her.

[Exeunt MISTRESS QUICKLY, BARDOLPH, Officers, and Page]

Ch Just I have heard better news.

Fal What's the news, my good lord?

Ch Just Where lay the king last night?

Gow At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal I hope, my lord, all's well what is the news, my lord?

Ch Just Come all his forces back?

Gow No, fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse.

Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland and the archbishop.

Fal Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch Just You shall have letters of me presently.

Come, so along with me, good Master Gower

Fal My lord!
Ch Just What's the matter?
Fal Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?
Gow I must wait upon my good lord here, I thank you, good Sir John.
Ch Just Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.
Fal Will you sup with me, Master Gower?
Ch Just What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?
Fal Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord, tap for tap, and so part far.
Ch Just Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool.

Prince Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick. Albeit I could tell to thee,—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,—I could be sad, and sad indeed too.
Poins Very hardly upon such a subject.
Prince By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and pers'ency. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick, and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.
Poins The reason?
Prince What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep?
Poins I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

SCENE II—The Same Another Street

Enter the PRINCE and POINS.

Prince Before God, I am exceeding weary.
Poins Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.
Prince Faith, it does me, though it discolors the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?
Poins Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince Belike then my appetite was not princely got, for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast, viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts, as, one for superfluity, and one other for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there, as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland. And God knows whether those that bawl out the runs of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom, but the madwives say the children are not in the fault, whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?
Poins Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than mine.

Poins Go for! I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince It would be every man's thought, and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks. Never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine. Every man would think me a hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?
Poins Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engrafted to Falstaff.
Prince And to thee.
Poins By this light, I am well spoke on, I can hear it with mine own ears. The worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands, and these two things I confess I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page

Prince And the boy that I gave Falstaff a' had him from me Christian, and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Bard God save your Grace!

Prince And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Bard [To the Page] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is it such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead?

Page A' calls me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window. At last, I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

Prince Hath not the boy profited?

Bard Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Prince Instruct us, boy, what dream, boy?

Page Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a firebrand, and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince A crown's worth of good interpretation. There it is, boy.

Poins O! that this good blessing could be kept from cankers. Well, there is s'pence to preserve thee.

Bard An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong

Prince And how doth thy master, Bardolph?
Bard Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town there's a letter for you.
Poins Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard In bodily health, sir.
Poins Marry, the immortal part needs a physician, but that moves not him though that be sick, it dies not.

Prince I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog, and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poins 'John Falstaff, knight,'—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself even like those that are akin to the king, for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There is some of the king's blood spilt.' How comes that? says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, I am the king's poor cousin, sir.

Prince Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter.

Poins Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince Peace!

Poins I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity sure he means brevity in breath, short-winded—I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell.
 Repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so farewell.

Thine, by yea and no,—which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, JACK FAL-STAFF, with my familiars JOHN, with my brothers and sisters, and SIR JOHN with all Europe.

My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins God send the wench no worse fortune!
 but I never said so.

Prince Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard Yes, my lord.

Prince Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bard At the old place, my lord, in East-cheap.

Prince What company?

Page Ephesians, my lord, of the old church.

Prince Sup any women with him?

Page None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince What pagan may that be?

Page A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

Prince Even such kin as the parish herfers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince Surrah, you boy, and Bardolph; he word to your master that I am yet come to town there's for your silence.

Bard I have no tongue, sir.

Page And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Prince Fare ye well, go. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.] His Doll Tearsheet should be some road.

Poins I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

Prince How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince From a god to a bull! a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transformation! that shall be mine, for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt]

SCENE III — Warkworth Before NORTHUMBER- LAND'S Castle

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBER-LAND, and LADY PERCY

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs.
 Put not you on the visage of the times,
 And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no
 more.

Do what you will, your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas! sweet wife, my honour is at pawn,

And, but my going nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O! yet for God's sake, go not to these wars.

The time was, father, that you broke your word.
 When you were more endear'd to it than now.

When your own Percy, when my heart's dear
 Harry,

Threw many a northward look to see his father
 Bring up his powers, but he did long in vain.

Who then persuaded you to stay at home?

There were two honours lost, yours and your son's.

For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!
 For his, it stuck upon him as the sun

In the grey vault of heaven, and by his light
 Did all the chivalry of England move.

To do brave acts he was indeed the glass
 Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.

He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait,
 And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish,

Became the accents of the valiant,
 For those that could speak low and tardily,

Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
 To seem like him so that, in speech, in gait, in in diet, in affections of delight, in military rules, humours of blood,

He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him!

O miracle or men! him did you leave,— Second to none, unseconded by you,—
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage, to abide a field 35
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's
name

Did seem defensible so you left him
Never, O! never do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice 40
With others than with him let them alone
The marshal and the archbishop are strong
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, 44
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave

North Peshew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights
But I must go and meet with danger there, 48
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided

Lady N O! 'twas to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons
Have of their puissance made a little taste 52

Lady P If they get ground and vantage of the King,

Then join you to them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger, but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. So did your son,
He was so suffer'd so came I a widow, 57
And never shall have length of life enough
To run upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband 61

North Come, come, go in with me 'Tis with my mind
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way 64
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company 68
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap

Enter two Drawers.

First Draw What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john. 3

Sec Draw Mass, thou sayst true The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns, and, putting off his hat, said, 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old withered knights.' It angered him to the heart, but he hath forgot that. 10

First Draw Why then, cover, and set them down and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise, Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch the room where they supped is too hot they'll come in straight. 15

Sec Draw Surrah, here will be the prince and Master Poms anon, and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons, and Sir John must not know of it Bardolph hath brought word 20

First Draw By the mass, here will be old utus it will be an excellent stratagem

Sec Draw I'll see if I can find out Sneak
[Exit]

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEAR-SHEET

Quick I'faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality your pul-sidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire, and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la! But, i'faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? How do you now? 32

Doll Better than I was hem!

Quick Why, that's well said, a good heart's worth gold Lo! here comes Sir John

Enter FALSTAFF, singing

Fal When Arthur first in court—Empty the jordan —[Exit First Drawer]—And was a worthy king How now, Mistress Doll! 38

Quick Sick of a calm yea, good sooth

Fal So is all her sect, an they be once in a calm they are sick 41

Doll You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll 44

Do! I make them! gluttony and diseases make them, I make them not

Fal If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you, grant that, my poor virtue, grant that 50

Doll Ay, marry, our chains and our jewels

Fal Your brooches, pearls, and owches '— for to serve bravely is to come halting off you know to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely, to venture upon the charged chambers bravely,— 56

Doll Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Quick By my troth, this is the old fashion, you two never meet but you fall to some discord, you are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts, you cannot one bear with another's confirmities What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel 65

Doll Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack, thou art going to the wars, and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. 72

Re-enter First Drawer

First Draw Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul mouthed rascal here in England.

Quick If he swagger, let him not come here no, by my faith, I must live amongst my neighbours, I'll no swaggerers. I am in good name and fame with the very best. Shut the door, there comes no swaggerers here. I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now shut the door, I pray you.

Fal Dost thou hear, hostess?

Quick Pray you, pacify yourself. Sir John there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Quick Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, the other day, and, as he said to me — 'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last, — 'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, — 'Master Dumble, our minister, was by then, — 'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, receive those that are civil, for,' said he, 'you are in an ill name,' now, a' sa d so, I can tell whereupon, 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on, therefore take heed what guests you receive.' receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here — you would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal He's no swaggerer, hostess: a tame cheater, I' faith, you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer.

[Exit First Drawer]

Quick Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater, but I do not love swaggering, by my troth, I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake look you, I warrant you.

Dol So you do, hostess.

Quick Do I? vea, in very truth do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page

Pist God save you, Sir John!

Fal Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal She is pistol-proof, sir, you shall hardly offend her.

Quick Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets. I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist Then to you, Mistress Dorothy, I will charge you.

Dol Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy hung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps: an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light! with two points on your shou'lder? much!

Pist God let me not live. I will murder your ruff for this!

Fal No more, Pistol. I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Quick No, good captain Pistol, not here, sweet captain.

Dol Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word occupy, which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to it.

Bard Pray tace, go down, good ancient.

Fal Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist Not I, I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her. I'll be revenged of her.

Pist I'll see her damned first to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dog! down fates! Have we not Hiren here?

Quick Good Captain Peesel, be quiet, it is very late, I' faith. I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses,

And hollow pumper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty miles a day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with Caribæas,
And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with

King Cerberus, and let the welkin roar

Shall we fall foul for toys?

Quick By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here?

Quick O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? for God's sake! be quiet.

Pist Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis. Come, give's some sack.

Si fortuna me tormenta, sperato me contento
I fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire. Gave me some sack, and, sweetheart, be thou there.

[Laying down his sword]
Come we to full points here, and are at ceteras nothing?

Fal Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif What! we have seen the seven stars. 200

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs! I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist 'Thrust him down stairs!' know we not Galloway nags? 204

Fal. Quot him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling nay, an a' do nothing but speak nothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs 208

Pist What! shall we have incision? we imbrue? [Snatching up his sword]
Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos,
I say! 212

Quick Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw 216

Fal. Get you down stairs [Drawing]

Quick Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tinnits and frights. So, murder, I warrant now Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons [Exeunt BARDOLPH and PISTOL.]

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet, the rascal's gone. Ah! you whoreson little valiant villain, you! 225

Quick Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly

Re-enter BARDOLPH

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors? 228

Bard. Yes, sir the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest! Come, let me wipe thy face, come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket. 240

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart an thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver

Dol. I faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew bear-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and fighting o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven? 252

Enter behind the arras and doors, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of? Fal. A good shallow young fellow a' would have made a good pantler, a' would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit 260

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and he plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys, and jumps upon joint-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories, and such other gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admires him for the prince himself is such another, the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois 277

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore 280

Prince. Look'st, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance? 284

Fal. Kiss me, Doll

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not hisping to his master's old tables, his note-book his counsel-keeper 290

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all 296

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song! come it grows late, we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone 301

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a-weeping an thou sayst so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end. 305

Fal. Some sack, Francis!

Prince. [Coming forward] Anon, anon

Poins. Sir 308

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's? And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead! 312

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman, thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears. 316

Quick. O! the Lord preserve thy good Grace, by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales? 320

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood [pointing to DOLL], thou art welcome

Dol How, you fat fool! I scorn you. 324

Poins My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince Youwhoreson candle-mme, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Quick Blessing on your good heart! and so she is, by my troth. 332

Fal Didst thou hear me?

Prince Yea, and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience 337

Fal No, no, no, not so, I did not think thou wast within hearing

Prince I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse, and then I know how to handle you

Fal No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour, no abuse 344

Prince Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal No abuse, Hal.

Poins No abuse! 348

Fal No abuse, Ned, in the world, honest Ned, none I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him, in which doing I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal, none, Ned, none no, faith, boys, none. 355

Prince See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked? 362

Poins Answer, thou dead elm, answer

Fal The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable, and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him, but the devil outbids him too 368

Prince For the women?

Fal For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money, and whether she be damned for that, I know not. 373

Quick No, I warrant you.

Fal No, I think thou art not, I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law, for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Quick All victuals do so what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent? 381

Prince You, gentlewoman,—

Dol What says your Grace?

Fal His Grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking within]

Quick Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO

Prince Peto, how now! what news? 388

Peto The king your father is at Westminster, And there are twenty weak and wearied posts Come from the north and as I came along, I met and overtook a dozen captains, 392

Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff

Prince By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,

So idly to profane the precious time, 396

When tempest of commotion, like the south,

Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt

And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night. [Exeunt the PRINCE, POINS, PETO, and BARDOLPH.

Fal Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked. [Knocking within] More knocking at the door! 404

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard You must away to court, sir, presently,

A dozen captains stay at door for you. 407

Fal [To the Page] Pay the musicians, sirrah.

Farewell, hostess, farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after the undeserver may sleep when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches

If I be not sent away post, I will see you again

ere I go 414

Dol I cannot speak, if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself 417

Fal Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Quick Well, fare thee well I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peace of time, but an honest, and truer-hearted man,—well, fare thee well.

Bard [Within] Mistress Tearsheet!

Quick What's the matter? 424

Bard [Within] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master

Quick. O! run, Doll, run, run, good Doll.

[Exeunt

ACT III

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY in his night-gown, with a Page.

K Hen. Go, call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick,

But ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,

And well consider of them. Make good speed.

How many thousand of my poorest subjects 4

Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!

Nature's soft nurse, how have I flighted thee,

That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness? 8
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,

Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, 12
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch
A watch-case or a common 'larum bell? 17
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge, 20
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging
them

With deaf'ning clamour in the slippery clouds,
That with the hurly death itself awakes? 25
Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night, 28
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY

War Many good morrows to your majesty!

K Hen Is it good morrow, lords? 33

War 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

K Hen Why then, good morrow to you all,
my lords

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War We have, my liege 37

K Hen Then you perceive the body of our kingdom,

How foul it is, what rank diseases grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it 40

War It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd,
Which to his former strength may be restor'd
With good advice and little medicine

My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd 44

K Hen O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,— Weary of solid firmness,—melt itself 48
Into the sea! and, other times, to see
The beaky girdle of the ocean Too wide for Neptune's hips, how chances mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration 52
With divers liquors! O! if this were seen,
The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue,
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die
'Tis not ten years gone 57 Since Richard and Northumberland, great
friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after
Were they at wars! it is but eight years since 60
This Percy was the man nearest my soul,
Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs
And laid his love and life under my foot,

Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard 64 Gave him defiance! But which of you was by,— [To WARWICK.] You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember,—

When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland, 68
Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
'Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne.'
Though then, God knows, I had no such intent,
But that necessity so bow'd the state 73
That I and greatness were compelled to kiss
'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it
'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering
head, 76

Shall break into corruption!—so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition
And the division of our amity

War There is a history in all men's lives, 80
Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd,
The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds 84
And weak beginnings lie intresured
Such things become the hatch and brood of time,
And by the necessary form of this King Richard might create a perfect guess 88
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness,
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

K Hen Are these things then necessities? 93
Then let us meet them like necessities,
And that same word even now cries out on us
They say the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong

War It cannot be, my lord!
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd! Please it your Grace
To go to bed upon my soul, my lord, 99
The powers that you already have sent forth Shall bring this prize in very easily
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, 104
And these unseason'd hours perforce must add Unto your sickness

K Hen I will take your counsel
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land 108
[Exeunt]

SCENE II—Court before JUSTICE SHALLOW'S House in Gloucestershire

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting, MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULLCalf and Servants, behind

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir, give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence? 4

Sil Good morrow, good cousin Shallow Shal And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen? 8

Shal Alas! a black ousel, cousin Shallow!
Shal By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not? 12

Sir Indeed, sir, to my cost Shal A' must, then, to the inns o' court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn, where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet. 16 Sir You were called 'lusty Shallow' then,
 cousin.

Shal By the mass, I was called any thing and I would have done any thing indeed too and roundly too. There was I and Little John Doit of Staffordsire and Black George Barnes, and Francis Picklore, and Will Squeale a Cotswold man, you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns o' court again. And, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were and red the best of them all at commandment.
 I was Jack Falstaff now, Sir John a boy and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sir Thus Sir John, cousin, that comes nether anon about soldiers? 31

Shal The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the cou- gate when a' was a crack not thus high, and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a flutterer behind Gray's Inn. Jesu! Jesu!
 the mad days that I have spent, and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead! 38

Sir We shall all follow cousin Shal Certain, 'tis certain, very sure, very sure, death, 'tis the Psalmist saith, is certain to all, all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair? 44

Sir Truly, cousin, I was not there.
Shal Dead his certain. Is old Double of your town living yet? 48

Sir Dead, sir.
Shal Jesu! Jesu! dead! a' drew a good bow, and dead! a' shot a fine shoot. John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score, and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now? 55

Sir Thereafter as they be a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal And is old Double dead?
Sir Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men as I think. 60

Enter BARDOLPH, and One with him

Bard Good morrow, honest gentlemen. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal I am Robert Shallow, sir, a poor esquire of this country, and one of the king's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me? 66

Bard My captain, sir, commends him to you, my captain, Sir John Falstaff, a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader. 69

Shal He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backward man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard Sir, pardon, a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife. 74

Shal It is well said in faith, sir, and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated! it is good, yea indeed, is it good phrases are surely and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodo very good, a good phrase. 80

Bard Pardon me, sir, I have heard the word 'Phrase, call you it.' By this good day, I know not the phrase, but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated that is, when a man is, as they say accommodated, or when a man is being whereby a may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing. 89

Enter FALSTAFF

Shal It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you look well and bear your years very well. Welcome, good Sir John. 94

Fal I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Sureward as I think.

Shal No, Sir John, it is my cousin, Silence in commission with me.

Fal Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace. 100

Sir Your good worship is welcome.
Fal Fie! his is hot weather, gentlemen.
 Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men? 104

Shal Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?
Fal Let me see them. I beseech you.

Shal Where's the roll? where's the roll?
 where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see.
 So, so, so, so, so, so, so, so, yea, marry, sir, Ralph Mouldy! let them appear as I call, let them do so.
 Let them do so. Let me see where is Mouldy? 112

Moul Here, an't please you.
Shal What think you, Sir John? a good-limbed fellow, young, strong, and of good
 friends. 116

Fal Is thy name Mouldy?
Moul Yea, an't please you.

Fal 'Tis the more time thou wert used.
Shal Ha, ha, ha! most excellent i' faith!
 things that are mouldy lack use, very singular good. In faith, well said, Sir John, very well said. 122

Fal Prick him.
Moul I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone, my old dame will be undone now for you to do her husbandry and her drudgery, you need not to have pricked me, there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal Go to, peace, Mouldy! you shall go Mouldy, it is time you were spent. 130

Moul Spent!

Shal Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside, know you where you are? For the other, Sir John, let me see, Simon Shadow!

Fal Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under, he's like to be a cold soldier. 136

Shal Where's Shadow?
Shad Here, sir
Fal Shadow, whose son art thou Shad My mother's son sir 140
Fal Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow so the son of the female is the shadow of the male it is often so, indeed, but not o' the father's substance 144 Shal Do you like him, Sir John?
Fal Shadow will serve for summer, prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book 148
Shal Thomas Wart?
Fal Where's he?
Wart Here, sir
Fal Is thy name Wart? 152
Wart Yea, sir
Fal Thou art a very ragged wart Shal Shall I prick him, Sir John?
Fal It were superfluous, for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins prick him no more 158
Shal Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir, you can do it I commend you well Francis Feeble!
Fee Here, sir
Fal What trade art thou, Feeble?
Fee A woman's tailor, sir
Shal Shall I prick him, sir? 164
Fal You may, but if he had been a man's tailor he'd have pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 168
Fee I will do my good will, sir you can have no more Fal Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse Prick the woman's tailor, well, Master Shallow, deep, Master Shallow Fee I would Wart might have gone, sir 176
Fal I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him, and make him fit to go I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands let that suffice, most forcible Feeble 181
Fee It shall suffice, sir
Fal I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble Who is next? 184 Shal Peter Bullcalf o' the green!
Fal Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf
Bull Here, sir
Fal 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again 189
Bull O Lord! good my lord captain,— Fal What! dost thou roar before thou art pricked? 192 Bull O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.
Fal What disease hast thou?
Bull A whoreson cold, sir a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir 197
Fal Come thou shalt go to the wars in a gown, we will have away thy cold, and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee Is here all? 201 Shal Here is two more called than your number, you must have but four here, sir and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner 204 Fal Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner I am glad to see you, by my troth Master Shallow Shal O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's fields?

Fal No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that 212 Shal Ha! it was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?
Fal She lives, Master Shallow
Shal She never could away with me 216
Fal Never, never, she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow Shal By the mass, I could anger her to the heart She was then a bona-roba Doth she hold her own well? 221
Fal Old, old, Master Shallow
Shal Nay, she must be old, she cannot choose but be old, certain she's old, and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn
Sir That's fifty-five year ago 227
Shal Ha! cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen Ha! Sir John, said I well?
Fal We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow 232 Shal That we have, that we have, that we have, in faith, Sir John, we have Our watchword was, 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner, come, let's to dinner Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come 237

[Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE]

Bull Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care, but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much. 245
Bard Go to, stand aside
Moul And, good Master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend she has nobody to do any thing about her when I am gone, and she is old, and cannot help herself You shall have forty, sir
Bard Go to, stand aside 252
Fee By my troth, I care not, a man can die but once, we owe God a death I'll ne'er bear a base mind an't be my destiny, so, an't be not, so No man's too good to serve's prince, and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next Bard Well said, thou'rt a good fellow Fee Faith, I'll bear no base mind 260

Re-enter FALSTAFF and the Justices.

Fal Come, sir, which men shall I have?
Shal Four, of which you please.
Bard [To FALSTAFF] Sir, a word with you I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf

Fal [Aside to BARDOLPH.] Go to; well. 265 Shal Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal Do you choose for me 268
Shal Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow

Fal Mouldy, and Bullcalf for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it I will none of you 274

Shal Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best. 277

Fal Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man? Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart, you see what a ragged appearance it is a' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And thus same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me this man, he presents no mark to the enemy, the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat, how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O' give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph. 293

Bard Hold, Wart, traverse, thus, thus, thus Fal Come, manage me your caliver. So very well go to, very good exceeding good O, give me always a little, lean, old, choppy'd, bald shot. Well said, I' faith, Wart, thou'rt a good scab hold, there's a tester for thee. 299

Shal He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and a' would manage you his piece thus and a' would about and about, and come you in, and come you in, 'rah, tah, tah,' would a' say, 'bounce,' would a' say, and away again would a' go, and again would a' come I shall never see such a fellow 309

Fal These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence. I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both. I thank you. I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats

Shal Sir John, the Lord bless you! and prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house, let our old acquaintance be renewed. peradventure I will with ye to the court. 319

Fal Fore God I would you would, Master Shallow

Shal Go to, I have spoke at a word. God keep you. 323

Fal Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exit SHALLOW and SILENCE.] On, Bardolph, lead the men away [Exit BARDOLPH, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices. I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow Lord, Lord! how subject we old men are to this vice of lying. This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street, and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring when a' was naked he was for all the world like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible a' was the very genius of famine, yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake a' came ever in the rearward of the fashion and sung those tunes to the over-scuthed huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him, and I'll be sworn a' never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name, for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin, the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court, and now has he land and beefs. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let um shape, and there an end. [Exit]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and Others

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your Grace

Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies. 4

Hast. We have sent forth already

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd

New-dated letters from Northumberland, 8

Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus

Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality,

The which he could not levy, whereupon 12

He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,

To Scotland, and concludes in hearty prayers

That your attempts may overlive the hazard

And fearful meeting of their opposite. 16

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground

And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Meis. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,

In goodly form comes on the enemy, 20
 And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number
 Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand Mowb The just proportion that we gave them out
 Let us sway on and face them in the field 24

Enter WESTMORELAND

Arch What well-appointed leader fronts us
 here?
Mowb I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland
West Health and fair greeting from our general,
 The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster Arch Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace, 29

What doth concern your coming
West Then, my lord,
 Unto your Grace do I in chief address
 The substance of my speech. If that rebellion Came like itself, in base and abject routs, 33
 Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
 And countenanc'd by boys and beggary,
 I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd, 36
 In his true, native, and most proper shape,
 You, reverend father, and these noble lords
 Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
 Of base and bloody insurrection 40
 With your fair honours You, lord archbishop,
 Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd, Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd,
 Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd, 44

Whose white investments figure innocence,
 The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
 Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
 Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war, 49 Turning your books to greaves, your ink to
 blood,
 Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
 To a loud trumpet and a point of war? 52

Arch Wherefore do I this? so the question stands
 Briefly to this end we are all diseas'd,
 And, with out surfeiting and wanton hours
 Have brought ourselves into a burning fever 56
 And we must bleed for it of which disease
 Our late king, Richard, being infected died.
 But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
 I take not on me here as a physician, 60
 Nor do I as an enemy to peace
 Troop in the throngs of military men,
 But rather show a while like fearful war,
 To diet rank minds sick of happiness 64
 And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
 Our very veins of life Hear me more plainly
 I have in equal balance justly weigh'd What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer, 68

And find our griefs heavier than our offences
 We see which way the stream of time doth run
 And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere

By the rough torrent of occasion, 72
 And have the summary of all our griefs,
 When time shall serve, to show in arduous,
 Which long ere this we offer'd to the king,
 And might by no suit gain our audience 76
 When we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs,

We are denied access unto his person
 Even by those men that most have done us
 wrong

The dangers of the days but newly gone,— 80
 Whose memory is written on the earth
 With yet appearing blood,—and the examples
 Of every minute's instance, present now,
 Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms, 84
 Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
 But to establish here a peace indeed,
 Concurring both in name and quality

West Whenever yet was your appeal denied?
 Wherein have you been galled by the king?
 What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,
 That you should seal this lawless bloody book
 Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine, 92
 And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch My brother general, the commonwealth,

To brother born an household cruelty,
 I make my quarrel in particular 96

West There is no need of any such redress,
 Or if there were, it not belongs to you

Mowb Why not to him in part, and to us all
 That feel the bruises of the days before, 100
 And suffer the condition of these times
 To lay a heavy and unequal hand Upon our honours?

West O! my good Lord Mowbray, Construe the times to their necessities, 104
 And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
 And not the king, that doth you injures
 Yet, for your part, it not appears to me
 Either from the king or in the present time
 That you should have an inch of any ground
 To build a grief on were you not restor'd 110
 To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,
 Your noble and right well-remember'd father's?

Mowb What thing, in honour, had my father lost, 113

That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
 The king that lov'd him as the state stood then,
 Was force perforce compell'd to banish him
 And then that Harry Bolingbroke and he, 117
 Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
 Their neighing couriers daring of the spur,
 Their armed staves in charge, their beavers
 down, 120

Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,

And the loud trumpet blowing them together, Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, 124
 O! when the king did throw his warder down,
 His own life hung upon the staff he threw,
 Then threw he down himself and all their lives
 That by indictment and by dint of sword 128
 Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman
Who knows on whom Fortune would then have smiled?

But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry,
For all the country in a general voice
Cried hate upon him and all their prayers and love

Were set on Hereford whom they doted on And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king

But this is mere digression from my purpose Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs, to tell you from his Grace That he will give you audience, and wherein It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them, every thing set off
That might so much as think you enemies

Mowb But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,
And it proceeds from policy, not love

West Mowbray, you overween to take it so Thus offer comes from mercy, not from fear
For, lo! within a ken our army lies Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best,
Then reason will our hearts should be as good Say you not then our offer is compell'd

Mowb Well, by my will we shall admit no parley

West That argues but the shame of your offence

A rotten case abides no handling Hast Hath the Prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West That is intended in the general's name
I muse you make so slight a question

Arch Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,

For this contains our general grievances
Each several article herein redress'd,
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form
And present execution of our wills
To us and to our purposes consign'd,
We come within our awful banks again
And knit our powers to the arm of peace

West This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet,
And either end in peace, which God so frame!
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it

Arch My lord, we will do so
[Exit WESTMORELAND]

Mowb There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand Hast Fear you not that if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains

Mowb Yea, but our valuation shall be such That every slight and false derived cause, Yea, every idle, nice and wanton reason Shall to the king taste of this action

That, were our royal faith's martyrs in love
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff
And good from bad find no partition

Arch No, no, my lord. Note this: the king is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances
For he hath found to end one doubt by death Revives two greater in the hours of life

And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance, for full well he knows

He cannot so precisely weed this land
As his misdoubts present occasion

His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,

He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife,

That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up

And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution

Hast Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods

On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement,

So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold

Arch 'Tis very true
And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,

If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken lumb united,

Grow stronger for the breaking Mowb Be it so

Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland

Re-enter WESTMORELAND

West The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship,

To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies?

Mowb Your Grace of York, in God's name then, set forward

Arch Before, and greet his Grace my lord, we come. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the ARCHBISHOP, HASTINGS, and Others from the other side, JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, Officers, and Attendants.

Lanc You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop,

And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to a!
My Lord of York, it better shov'd with you, 4
When that your flock, assembled by the bell, Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man, 8
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death
That man that sits within a monarch's heart
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, 12
Would he abuse the countenance of the king, Alack! what mischief might he set abroad
In shadow of such greatness With you, lord bishop,

It is even so Who hath not heard it spoken 16
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us, the speaker in his parliament,
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself,
The very opener and intelligencer 20
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings O! who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place Employ the countenance and grace of heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father, 28
And both against the peace of heaven and him
Have here upswarm'd them

Arch Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace,
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland, 32
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up I sent your Grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,— 36
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,—

Whereon this Hydra son of war is Lorn, Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep 39

With grant of our most just and right desires,
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty

Mowb If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man

Hast And though we here fall down, 44
We have supplies to second our attempt
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them,
And so success of mischief shall be born
And hear from heir shall hold this quarrel up 48
While England shall have generation

Lanc You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,

To sound the bottom of the after-times West Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly 52

How far forth you do like their articles.
Lanc I like them all, and do allow them
well,

And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook, 56
And come about him have too lavishly Wrested his meaning and authority
My lord these griefs shall be with speed redress'd,

Upon my soul, they shall If this may please
you, 60

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home
Of our restored love and amity 65

Arch I take you, princely word for these addresses

Lanc I give it you, and will maintain my
word

And thereupon I drink unto your Grace 68 Hast [To an Officer] Go, captain, and deliver to the army

This news of peace let them have pay, and part

I know it will well please them, hie thee, captain [Exit Officer]

Arch To you, my noble Lord of Westmore-
land 72

West I pledge your Grace and, if you know what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely, but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter 76

Arch I do not doubt you West

I am glad of it
Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray Mowb You wish me health in very happy season,

For I am, on the sudden, something ill 80
Arch Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness forebuds the good event

West Therefore be merry, coz, since sudden sorrow

Serves to sav thus, Some good thing comes to-morrow 84

Arch Believe me I am passing light in spirit Mowb So much the worse if your own rule be true [Shouts within]

Lanc The word of peace is render'd hark, how they shout! 87

Mowb This had been cheerful, after victory
Arch A peace is of the nature of a conquest,

For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser

Lanc Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too 92

[Exit WESTMORELAND]

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains

March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal

Arch Go, good Lord Hastings, 96
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by

[Exit HASTINGS]

Lanc I trust, lords, we shall be to-night together

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?
West The leaders, having charge from you to stand,

Will not go off until they hear you speak. 100

Lanc They know their duties

Re-enter HASTINGS

Hast My lord, our army is dispers'd already Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses 104

East, west, north, south, or, like a school broke
up,

Each hurries toward his home and sporting-
place

West Good tidings, my Lord Hastings, for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason 108
And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray,

Of capital treason I attach you both

Mowb Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West Is your assembly so? 112

Arch Will you thus break your faith?

Lanc I pawn'd thee none
I promis'd you redress of these same grievances

Whereof you did complain, which, by mine honour

I will perform with a most Christian care 116
But for you, rebels, look to taste the due

Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours
Most shallowly did you these arms commence,

Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd stray

God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day Some guard these traitors to the block of
death, 123

Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath
[Exeunt

SCENE III—Another Part of the Forest

Alarums Excursions Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting

Fal What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole I am a knight, sir, and my name is Coleville of the dale 4

Fal Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale.

Coleville shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough, so shall you be still Coleville of the dale

Cole Are not you Sir John Falstaff? 11

Fal As good a man as he, sir, whome'er I am.
Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy 17

Cole I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me

Fal I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifference, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our
general. 26

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and Others

Lanc The heat is past, follow no further
now

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland
[Exit WESTMORELAND

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while? 29

When everything is ended, then you come
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,

One time or other break some gallows back 32

Fal I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought?

I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility, I have foundered nine score and odd posts, and here, travel-tainted as I am,

have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy But what of that?

he saw me, and yielded, that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came,

saw, and overcame'

Lanc It was more of his courtesy than your deserving 48

Fal I know not here he is, and here I yield him, and I beseech your Grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds, or, by the Lord,

I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Coleville kissing my foot To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins'

heads to her, believe not the word of the noble.
Therefore let me have right, and let desert
mount. 61

Lanc Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal Let it shine then

Lanc Thine's too thick to shine 64

Fal Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lanc Is thy name Coleville?

Cole It is, my lord 68

Lanc A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal And a famous true subject took him

Cole I am, my lord, but as my betters are That led me hither had they been rul'd by
me 72

You should have won them dearer than you have

Fal I know not how they sold themselves but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee 76

Re-enter WESTMORELAND

Lanc Have you left pursuit?

West Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lanc Send Coleville with his confederates
To York, to present execution. 80

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure. [Exit BLUNT, and Others, with COLEVILLE, guarded.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords

I hear, the king my father is sore sick
Our news shall go before us to his majesty, 84
Which, cousin [addressing WESTMORELAND], you shall bear, to comfort him.

And we with sober speed will follow you
Fal My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go, Through Gloucestershire, and when you come to court

Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report
Lanc Fare you well, Falstaff is, in my condition

Shall better speak of you than you deserve 91
[Exeunt all but FALSTAFF]

Fal I would you had but the wit 'twere better than your dukehood. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh, but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof, for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness, and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends into the brain, dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it, makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of numble fiery and delectable shapes, which deliver'd over to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood, which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm, and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage, and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work, and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant, for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack. 136

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard The army is discharged all and gone Fal Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire. I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Westrunster The Jerusalem Chamber

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others

K Hen Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields
And draw no swords but what are sanctified. 4
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish.

Only, we want a little personal strength, 8
And pause us, till these rebels, now a-foot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy.

K Hen Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the prince your brother? 13

Glo I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K Hen And how accompanied?

Glo I do not know, my lord.
K Hen Is not his brother Thomas of Clarence with him? 16

Glo No, my good lord, he is in presence here.

Cl What would my lord and father?

K Hen Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas,

Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect 24

Of mediation, after I am dead,
Between his greatness and thy other brethren.

Therefore omit him not, blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace. 28

By seeming cold or careless of his will,
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd.

He hath a tear for pity and a hand
Open as day for melting charity, 32

Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint,
As humorous as winter, and as sudden.

As flaws congealed in the spring of day
His temper therefore must be well observ'd. 36

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth,

But, being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, 40

Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,

That the united vessel of their blood, 44
Mingled with venom of suggestion—

As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
 As aconitum or rash gunpowder 43

Cla I shall observe him with all care and love

K Hen Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

Cla He is not there to-day, he dines in London.

K Hen And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla With Poins and other his continual followers

K Hen Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds,

And he, the noble image of my youth,
 Is overspread with them therefore my grief 56
 Stretches itself beyond the hour of death
 The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days
 And rotten times that you shall look upon 60

When I am sleeping with my ancestors
 For when his headstrong not hath no curb

When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
 When means and lavish manners meet together,

O! with what wings shall his affections fly 65
 Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay

War My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite

The prince but studies his companions 68 Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

 'Tis needful that the most immodest word

Be look'd upon, and learn'd, which once attain'd 71

Your highness knows, comes to no further use But to be known and hated So, like gross terms,

 The prince will in the perfectness of time

Cast off his followers, and their memory
 Shall as a pattern or a measure live, 76

By which his Grace must mete the lives of others, Turning past evils to advantages

K Hen 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb

In the dead carrion

Who's here? Westmoreland!

West Health to my sovereign, and new happiness 81

Added to that that I am to deliver!

Prince John your son doth kiss your Grace's hand

Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all
 Are brought to the correction of your law 85

There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
 But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.

The manner how this action hath been borne,
 Here at more leisure may your highness read

With every course in his particular
K Hen O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird, 91

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
 The lifting up of day

Enter HARCOURT

Look! here's more news

Har From enemies heaven keep your majesty,

And, when they stand against you, may they fall
 As those that I am come to tell you of! 96

The Earl Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolf,

With a great power of English and of Scots,
 Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown

The manner and true order of the fight 100
 This packet please it you, contains at large

K Hen And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will Fortune never come with both hands full
 But write her fair words still in foulest letters?

She either gives a stomach and no food, 105
 Such are the poor, in health, or else a feast

And takes away the stomach, such are the rich,
 That have abundance and enjoy it not 108

I should rejoice now at this happy news,
 And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy

O me! come near me, now I am much ill Glo Comfort your majesty!

Cla O my royal father! 112 West My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself look up!

War Be patient, princes you do know these fits

 Are with his highness very ordinary

Stand from him, give him air, he'll straight be well 116

Cla No, no, he cannot long hold out these pangs

The incessant care and labour of his mind Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in

 So thin, that life looks through and will break

out 120
Glo The people fear me, for they do observe

Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature
 The seasons change their manners, as the year

Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over 124

Cla The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between,

And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
 Say it did so a little time before

That our great-grandure, Edward, sick'd and died. 128

War Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers

Glo This apoplexy will certain be his end.

K Hen I pray you take me up, and bear me
 hence

Into some other chamber. softly, pray 132

SCENE V—Another Chamber

KING HENRY lying on a bed CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and Others in attendance

K Hen Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends,

Unless some dull and favourable hand
 Will whisper music to my weary spirit. 3

War Call for the music in the other room.

K Hen Set me the crown upon my pillow here
Cla His eye is hollow, and he changes much.
War Less noise, less noise!

Enter the PRINCE

Prince Who saw the Duke of Clarence?
Cla I am here, brother, full of heaviness.
Prince How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
 How doth the king?

Glo Exceeding ill.

Prince Heard he the good news yet?
 Tell it him.

Glo He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

Prince If he be sick with joy, he will recover without physic.

War Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet prince, speak low.

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla Let us withdraw into the other room.

War Will't please your Grace to go along with us?

Prince No, I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Exeunt all but the PRINCE]
 Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
 Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
 To many a watchful night! Sleep with it now!

Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet.
 As he whose brow with homely biggin bound

Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!
 When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit

Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
 That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath

There lies a downy feather which stirs not.
 Did he suspire, that light and weightless down

Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed, this is a sleep
 That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd

So many English kings. Thy due from me
 Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,

Which nature, love, and filial tenderness Shall, O dear father! pay thee plenteously.

My due from thee is this imperial crown,
 Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,

Derives itself to me. Lo! here it sits,
 [Putting it on his head]

Which heaven shall guard, and put the world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force
 This lineal honour from me. Thus from thee

Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit]

K Hen [Waking] Warwick! Gloucester!

Clarence!

Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and the rest.

Cla Doth the king call?

War What would your majesty? How fares your Grace?

K Hen Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Cla We left the prince my brother here, my liege.

Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

K Hen The Prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him.

He is not here.

War The door is open, he is gone this way.
Glo He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

K Hen Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?

War When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

K Hen The prince hath ta'en it hence. go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
 My sleep my death?

Find him, my Lord of Warwick, chide him hither.

[Exit WARWICK]
 This part of his conjoins with my disease,
 And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are!

How quickly nature falls into revolt
 When gold becomes her object!

For this the foolish over-careful fathers
 Have broke their sleeps with thought,

Their brains with care, their bones with industry.

For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
 The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold,

For this they have been thoughtful to invest
 Their sons with arts and martial exercises.

When like the bee, culling from every flower
 The virtuous sweets,

Our thighs packed with wax, our mouths with honey,

We bring it to the hive, and like the bees,
 Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste

Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Re-enter WARWICK

Now, where is he that will not stay so long Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War My lord, I found the prince in the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
 With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow

That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
 Would by beholding him have wash'd his knife

With gentle eye drops. He is coming hither.

K Hen But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter the PRINCE

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry.
 Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exeunt WARWICK, and the rest]
Prince I never thought to hear you speak again.

K Hen Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
 Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair

That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!

Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm
thee 96
Stay but a little, for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop my day is dim Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours 100
Were thine without offence, and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it 104
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself, 109
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crown'd, not that I am dead
Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head 113
Only compound me with forgotten dust,
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees
For now a time's come to mock at form 117
Harry the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity!
Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors,
hence!
And to the English court assemble now, 120
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum
Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance, Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit 124
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy! he will trouble you no more
England shall double gild his treble guilt England shall give him office, honour, might
For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent 131
O my poor kingdom! sick with civil blows
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when not is thy care?
O! thou wilt be a wilderness again
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants 136 Prince O! pardon me, my liege, but for my
tears,
The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown,
And he that wears the crown immortally Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown, 144
Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
Which my most true and inward dutiful spirit Teacheth,—this prostrate and exterior bending God witness with me when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your majesty, 149
How could it strike my heart! if I do feign,
O! let me in my present wildness die
And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed 153
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,

I spake unto the crown as having sense 156
And thus upbraided it 'The care on thee depending
Hath fed upon the body of my father,
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious, 160
Preserving life in medicine potable But thou most fine, most honour'd, most re-nown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up' Thus, my most royal
liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head, 164
To try with it as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor
But if it did infect my blood with joy, 168
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride,
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it, 172
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
K. Hen. O my son! 176
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's
love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it
Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed 180
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown, and I myself know well 184
How troublesome it sat upon my head
To thee it shall descend with better quiet, Be'er opinion, be'er confirmation,
For all the soil of the achievement goes 188
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances, 192
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed, Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears Thou seest with peril I have answered
For all my reign hath been but as a scene 196
Acting that argument, and now my death Changes the mone for what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort,
So thou the garment wear'st successively 200 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green,
And all my friends, which thou must make thy
friends
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out,
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd, 205
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd which to avoid,
I cut them off, and had a purpose now 208
To lead out many to the Holy Land
Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course so busy giddy minds 212
With foreign quarrels, that action, hence borne
out,

May waste the memory of the former days
 More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
 That strength of speech is utter'y denied me 216
 How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
 And grant it may with thee in true peace live Prince My gracious liege,
 You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me, 220
 Then plain and right must my possession be Which I with more than with a common pain
 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER

K Hen Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster 224
Lanc Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!
K Hen Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John
 But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
 From this bare wither'd trunk upon thy sight
 My worldly business makes a period 229
 Where is my Lord of Warwick?
Prince My Lord of Warwick!

Re-enter WARWICK and Others

K Hen Doth any name particular belong
 Unto the lodging where I first did swoond? 232 War 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord K Hen Laud be to God! even there my life must end
 It hath been prophesied to me many years
 I should not die but in Jerusalem, 236
 Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land
 But bear me to that chamber, there I'll lie
 In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I.—Gloucestershire A Hall in SHALLOW's House

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What! Davy, I say Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow 4
Shal. I will not excuse you, you shall not be excused, excuses shall not be admitted, there is no excuse shall serve, you shall not be excused. Why, Davy! 8

Enter DAVY

Davy Here, sir
Shal Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy, let me see yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused. 13
Davy Marry, sir, thus, those precepts cannot be served and again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat? 16 Shal With red wheat, Davy But for William cook are there no young pigeons?
Davy Yes, sir Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons 20

Shal Let it be cast and paid Sir John, you shall not be excused

Davy Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had, and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair? 26

Shal A' snail answer it Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook

Davy Doth the man of war stay all night,
 sir? 32

Shal Yea, Davy I will use him well A friend i' t' e court is better than a penny in purse Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite 36

Davy No worse than they are back-bitten, sir, for they have marvellous foul linen

Shal Well conceited, Davy about thy business, Davy 40

Davy I beseech you, sir, to countenance
 William Visor of Wincot against Clement
 Perkes of the mill

Shal There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge 46

Davy I grant your worship that he is a knave sir, but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years, and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship The knave is mine honest friend, sir, therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced 57

Shal Go to, I say he shall have no wrong
 Look about, Davy [Exit DAVY] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots Give me your hand, Master Bardolph. 61

Bard I am glad to see your worship
Shal I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph — [To the Page] and welcome, my tall fellow Come, Sir John 65

Fal I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow [Exit SHALLOW] Bardolph, look to our horses [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page] If I were sawed into quanties, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as Master Shallow It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices, he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants
 It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carnage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another therefore let men take heed of their company I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions,—which is four terms, or two actions,—and a shall laugh without intervallums O! it is much that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders O! you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up! 94

Shal [Within] Sir John!
Fal I come, Master Shallow I come, Master Shallow
[Exit]

SCENE II — Westminster An Apartment in the Palace

Enter WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE

War How now, my Lord Chief Justice! whither away?

Ch Just How doth the king?

War Exceeding well his cares are now all ended

Ch Just I hope not dead

War He's walk'd the way of nature, 4
And to our purposes he lives no more

Ch Just I would his majesty had call'd me with him

The service that I truly did his life

Hath left me open to all injuries 8

War Indeed I think the young king loves you not.

Ch Just I know he doth not, and do arm myself,

To welcome the condition of the time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me 12
Than I have drawn it in my fantasy

Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WESTMORELAND and Others

War Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry

O! that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen. 16
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch Just O God! I fear all will be overturn'd

Lanc Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow 20

Glo } Good morrow, cousin.
Cl }

Lanc We meet like men that had forgot to speak

War We do remember, but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk. 24

Lanc Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch Just Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glo O! good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed, 27

And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow it is sure your own

Lanc Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation

I am the sornier, would 'twere otherwise 32

Cl Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair,

Which swims against your stream of quality
Ch Just Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul, 36

And never shall you see that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission

If truth and upright innocence fail me, 40

I'll to the king my master that is dead,

And tell him who hath sent me after him

War Here comes the prince

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH, attended

Ch Just Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

K Hen V This new and gorgeous garment majesty, 44

Sits not so easy on me as you think

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear

This is the English, not the Turkish court,

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds, 48

But Harry Harry Yet be sad, good brothers,

For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you

Sorrow so royally in you appears

That I will deeply put the fashion on 52

And wear it in my heart Why then, be sad,

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,

Than a joint burden laid upon us all

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, 56

I'll be your father and your brother too,

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares

Yet weep that Harry's dead and so will I

But Harry lives that shall convert those tears 60

By number into hours of happiness

Lanc, &c We hope no other from your majesty

K Hen V You all look strangely on me [To the CHIEF JUSTICE] and you most,

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not 64

Ch Just I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,

Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me

K Hen V No! 67

How might a prince of my great hopes forget

So great indignities you laid upon me?

What! rate rebuke and roughly send to prison

The immediate heir of England! Was this easy? 72

May this be wash'd in Lethe and forgott'n?

Ch Just I then did use the person of your father,

The image of his power lay then in me

And, in the administration of his law,

Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth 76

Your highness pleased to forget my place,

The majesty and power of law and justice,

The image of the king whom I presented

And struck me in my very seat of judgment, 80

Whereon, as an offender to your father,

I gave bold way to my authority,

And did commit you If the deed were ill,

Be you contented wearing now the garland, 84

To have a son set your decrees at nought,

To pluck down justice from your awful bench

To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword

That guards the peace and safety of your person 88

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image

And mock your workings in a second body

Question your royal thoughts, make the case
yours

Be now the father and propose a son,
Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted, Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd,
And then imagine me taking your part,
And in your power soft silencing your son
After this cold consideration, sentence me,
And, as you are a king, speak in your state
What I have done that hath misbecame my place,
My person, or my liege's sovereignty

A Henry You are right, justice, and you weigh this well,

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword
And I do wish your honours may increase Till you do live to see a son of mine

Offend you and obey you, as I did So shall I live to speak my father's words

'Happy am I, that have a man so bold
That dares do justice on my proper son,
And not less happy, having such a son,

That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice' You did commit me
For which, I do commit into your hand

The unsundered sword that you have us'd to bear,
With this remembrance, that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit

As you have done against me There is my hand
You shall be as a father to my youth
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,

And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-plac'd wise directions
And, princes all, believe me I beseech you,

My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections,
And with his spirit sadly I survive,

To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down

After my seeming The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now
Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,

Where it shall mingle with the state of floods
And flow henceforth in formal majesty
Now call we our high court of parliament,

And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation,

That war or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us,
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand

Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state
And, God consigning to my good intents,

No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day

[Exit

SCENE III — Gloucestershire The Garden of

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY

Shal Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth come, cousin Silence, and then to bed

Fal Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich

Shal Barren, barren, barren, beggars all, beggars all, Sir John marry, good air Spread, Davy, spread, Davy well said Davy

Fal This Davy serves you for good uses, he is your serving-man and your husband

Shal A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper a good varlet

Now sit down now sit down Come, cousin Sil Ah, surrah! quoth a, we shall

Do nothing but eat and make good cheer
And praise God for the merry year
When flesh is cheap and females dear
And lusty lads roam here and there

So merrily
And ever among so merrily

Fal There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon

Shal Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy Davy Sweet sir, sit, I'll be with you anon most sweet sir, sit, Master page good master page, sit Proface! What you want in meat we'll have in drink but you must bear the heart's all [Exit

Shal Be merry, Master Bardolph, and my little soldier there, be merry

Sil Be merry be merry my wife has all
For women are hew'd both short and tall
Tis merry in hall when beard, wag all
And welcome merry Shrove tide

Be merry be merry

Fal I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle

Sil Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now

Re enter DAVY

Davy There's a dish of leather-coats for you.
[Setting them before BARDOLPH

Shal Davy!
Davy Your worship! I'll be with you straight
A cup of wine, sir?

Sil A cup of wine that's brisk and fin
And drink unto the leman mine,
And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal Well said, Master Silence Sil And we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night

Fal Health and long life to you, Master
Silence

Sil Fill the cup and let it come
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom

Shal Honest Bardolph, welcome if thou want-est anything and wilt not call beshrew thy heart, [To the Page] Welcome, my little tony thief, and welcome indeed too I'll drink to Master Bardolph and to all the cavaleroes about London

Davy I hope to see London once ere I die

Bard An I might see you there, Davy,— Shal By the mass, you'll crack a quart together ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot

Shal By God's higgins I thank thee The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that a will not out, he is true bred 68
Bard And I'll stick by him, sir Shal Why there spoke a king Lack nothing be merry [Knocking with a] Look who's at door there Ho! who knocks? [Exit DAVY] Fal [To SILENCE, who drinks a bumper]
 Why, now you have done me right 74
Sil Do me right
 And dub me knight
 Samirgo

Is't not so?
Fal 'Tis so
Sil Is't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat 81

Re-enter DAVY

Davy An't please your worship there's one Pistol come from the court with news
Fal From the court! let him come in 84

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol!
Pst Sir John, God save you sir!
Fal What wind blew you hither, Pistol?
Pst Not the ill wind which blows no man to good 88
 Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm

Sil By r lady, I think a' be, but Goodman Puff of Barson. 92
Pst Puff

Puff in thy teeth most recreant coward base!
 Sir John I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
 And helter-skelter have I rode to thee, 96
 And tidings do I bring and lucky joys
 And golden times and happy news of price Fal I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world

Pst A foutra for the world and worldlings base! 100
 I speak of Africa and golden joys Fal O base Assyrian knight, what is thy
 news?

Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof
Sil And Robin Hood Scarlet and John 104
Pst Shall dunghill curs confront the Helcors?

And shall good news be baffled?
 Then, Pistol lay thy head in Furies' lap Shal Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding 109

Pst Why then lament therefore Shal Give me pardon, sir if sir you come with news from the court, I take it there is but two ways either to utter them or to conceal them.
 I am, sir under the king in some authority Pst Under which king, Bezonian? speak or die 115

Shal Under King Harry Pst Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?
Shal Harry the Fourth
Pst A foutra for thine office!
 Sir John thy tender lambkin now is king,

Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth
 When Pistol lies, do this, and fig me like 120
 The bragging Spaniard

Fal What! is the old king dead?
Pst As rail in door the things I speak are just 123

Fal Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land us thine Pistol I will double-charge thee with dignities

Bard O joyful day! 128

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune

Pst What! I do bring good news

Fal Carry Master Silence to bed Master

Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt I am Fortune's steward Get on thy boots we'll ride all night O sweet Pistol! Away Bardolph!

[Exit BARDOLPH] Come Pistol, utter more to me and withal devise something to do thyself good Boot, boot, Master Shallow I know the young king is sick for me Let us take any man's horses the laws of England are at my commandment Happy are they which have been my friends, and woe unto my lord chief justice! 142

Pst Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!

'Where is the life that late I led?' say they

Why, here it is welcome these pleasant days!

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — London A Street

Enter BEADLES, dragging in MISTRESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET

Quick No, thou arrant knave I would to God I might die that I might have thee hanged, thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint

First Bead The constables have delivered her over to me and she shall have whipping cheer enough I warrant her there hath been a man or two lately killed about her 7

Dol Nut-hook nu-hook, you lie Come on I'll tell thee what thou damned tripe visaged rascal an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother thou paper-faced villain 12

Quick O the Lord! that Sir John were come, he would make this a bloody day to somebody
 But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

First Bead If it do you shall have a dozen of cushions again you have but eleven now Come, I charge you both go with me for the man's dead that you and Pistol beat among you

Dol I'll tell thee what thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swinged for this you blue bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner! if you be not swinged, I'll for-swear half-kirtles 24

First Bead Come come, you she knight-errant come

Quick O that right should thus overcome might! Well of sufferance comes ease

Dol Come, you rogue, come bring me to a justice 29

Quick Ay come, you starved blood hound.
Dol Goodman death! goodman bones!

Quick Thou atomy, thou! 32
Dol Come, you thun'ging, come, you rascal!
First Bead Very well [Exeunt]

SCENE V — A public Place near Westminster Abbey

Enter two Grooms, strewn with rushes

First Groom More rushes more rushes
Sec Groom The trumpets have sounded twice 3
First Groom It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch [Exeunt]

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and the Page

Fal Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow, I will make the king do you grace. I will leer upon him as a comes by and do but mark the countenance that he will give me 9

Pist God bless thy lungs, good knight

Fal Come here, Pistol, stand behind me. O! if I had had time to have made new liveries I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter, this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him 16

Shal It doth so

Fal It shows my earnestness of affection

Shal It doth so

Fal My devotion 20

Shal It doth, it doth, it doth

Fal As it were, to ride day and night, and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me 24

Shal It is most certain

Fal But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est. 'Tis all in every part 32

Shal 'Tis so, indeed

Pist My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,

And make thee rage

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, 36
 Is in base durance and contagious prison, Hal'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake, 40

For Doll is in. Pistol speaks nought but truth

Fal I will deliver her

[Shouts within and trumpets sound]
Pist There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH and his Train, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE among them

Fal God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal! 45

Pist The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal God save thee, my sweet boy! 48

K Hen V My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch Just Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

K Hen V I know thee not, old man. Fall to thy prayers, 52

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
 I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
 So surfeit-swell'd, so o'd, and so profane,
 But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream. 56 Make less thy body hence, and more thy
 grace,
 Leave gormandising, know the grave doth gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest. 60

Presume not that I am the 'hung I was,
 For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self,
 So will I those that kept me company. 64

When thou dost hear I am a I have been,

Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tutor and the feeder of my riots

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, 68

As I have done the rest of my misleaders,

Not to come near our person by ten mile

For competence of life I will allow you,

That lack of means enforce you not to evil. 72

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will, according to your strength and qualities,

Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of our word. 76

Set on [Exeunt KING HENRY V and his Train]

Fal Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound

Shal Ay marry, Sir John, which I beseech you to let me have home with me. 80

Fal That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this. I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements. I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal I cannot perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand. 89

Fal Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir John. 93

Fal Fear no colours: go with me to dinner. Come, Lieutenant Pistol, come, Bardolph. I shall be sent for soon at night. 96

Re-enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, Officers with them

Ch Just Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet.

Take all his company along with him.

Fal My lord, my lord!

Ch Just I cannot now speak I will hear you soon 100

Take them away

Pist Si fortuna me tormenta, spero contenta [Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, Page, and Officers

Lanc I like this fair proceeding of the king's He hath intent his wonted followers 104

Shall all be very well provided for,

But all are banish'd till their conversations

Appear more wise and modest to the world

Ch Just And so they are 108

Lanc The king hath call'd his parliament,
my lord

Ch Just He hath

Lanc I will lay odds, that, ere this year expire,

We bear our civil swords and native fire 112

As far as France I heard a bird so sing,

Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king

Come, will you hence? [Exeunt

EPILOGUE

Spoken by a Dancer

First, my fear then, my curtsy, last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure, my curtsy, my duty, and my speech, to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me for what I have to say is of mine own making and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you,—as it is very well,—I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I did mean indeed to pay you with this which if like an ill venture it come unluckily home I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some and I will pay you some and as most debtors do, promise you infinitely. 18

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me if the gentlemen will not then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen which was never seen before in such an assembly. 27

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France where for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat unless already a be killed with your hard opinions for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary when my legs are too, I will bid you good night and so kneel down before you but indeed, to pray for the queen. 38

ACT I

SCENE I.—London An Antechamber in the KING'S Palace

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY

Cant My lord, I'll tell you, that self bill is urg'd,
Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scrambling and unquiet time 4
Did push it out of farther question
Ely But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
Cant It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession, 8
For all the temporal lands which men devout
By testament have given to the church Would they strip from us, being valu'd thus As much as would maintain, to the king's
honour, 12
Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights, Six thousand and two hundred good esquires,
And, to relief of lazars and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil, 16
A hundred almshouses right well supplied,

And to the coffers of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by the year Thus runs the bill

Ely This would drink deep

Cant 'Twould drink the cup and all

Ely But what prevention?

Cant The king is full of grace and fair regard

Ely And a true lover of the holy church

Cant The courses of his youth promis'd it

not

The breath no sooner left his father's body

But that his wildness, mortified in him,

Seem'd to die too, yea, at that very moment,

Consideration like an angel came,

And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,

Leaving his body as a paradise,

To envelop and contain celestial spirits

Never was such a sudden scholar made,

Never came reformation in a flood,

With such a heady currance, scouring faults,

Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness

So soon did lose his seat and all at once

As in this king

Ely We are blessed in the change

Cant Hear him but reason in divinity,

And, all-admiring, with an inward wish

You would desire the king were made a prelate

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,

You would say it hath been all in all his study

List his discourse of war and you shall hear

A fearful battle render'd you in music

Turn him to any cause of policy,

The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,

Familiar as his garter that, when he speaks,

The air, a charter'd libertine is still

And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,

To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences,

So that the art and practice part of life

Must be the mistress to this theoric

Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean

it,

Since his addiction was to courses vain,

His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow,

His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets,

sports,

And never noted in him any study,

Any retirement, any sequestration

From open haunts and popularity

Ely The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best

Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality

And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation

Under the veil of wildness, which, no doubt,

Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,

Unseen, yet crevice in his faculty

Cant It must be so, for miracles are ceas'd,

And therefore we must needs admit the means

How things are perfected

Ely But my good lord,

How now for mitigation of this bill

Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty

Incline to it, or no?

Cant He seems indifferent,

Or rather swaying more upon our part

Than cherishing the exhibitors against us,
For I have made an offer to his majesty,
Upon our spiritual convocation,

And in regard of causes now in hand,

Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,

As touching France, to give a greater sum

Than ever at one time the clergy yet

Did to his predecessors part withal

Ely How did this offer seem receiv'd, my

lord?

Cant With good acceptance of his majesty,

Save that there was not time enough to hear,—

As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have done,—

The severals and unhidden passages

Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,

And generally to the crown and seat of France,

Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather

Ely What was the impediment that broke this off?

Cant The French ambassador upon that instant

Crav'd audience and the hour I think is come

To give him hearing is it four o'clock?

Ely It is

Cant Then go we in to know his embassy,

Which I could with a ready guess declare

Before the Frenchman speak a word of it

Ely I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same The Presence Chamber

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and Attendants

K Hen Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury?

Exe Not here in presence

K Hen Send for him, good uncle

West Shall we call in the ambassador, my

hege?

K Hen Not yet, my cousin we would be

resolv'd,

Before we hear him, of some things of weight

That task our thoughts, concerning us and

France

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the

BISHOP OF ELY

Cant God and his angels guard your sacred throne,

And make you long become it!

K Hen Sure, we thank you

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,

And justly and religiously unfold

Why the law Salique that they have in France

Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim.

And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,

That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul

With opening titles miscreate, whose right

Suits not in native colours with the truth;

For God doth know how many now in health

Shall drop their blood in approbation

-- what your reverence shall incite us to 20 Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,
 How you awake the sleeping sword of war
 We charge you in the name of God, take heed
 For never two such kingdoms did contend 24
 Without much fall of blood, whose guiltless drops
 Are every one a woe, a sore complaint, Against him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords
 That make such waste in brief mortality 28
 Under this conjuration speak, my lord,
 And we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
 That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd
 As pure as sin with baptism 32 Cant Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,
 That owe yourselves, your lives, and services
 To this imperial throne There is no bar
 To make against your highness' claim to France
 But this, which they produce from Pharamond, in terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant, 38
 No woman shall succeed in Salique land
 Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze
 To be the realm of France, and Pharamond 41
 The founder of this law and female bar
 Yet their own authors faithfully affirm
 That the land Salique is in Germany, 44
 Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe, Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons,
 There left behind and settled certain French,
 Who, holding in disdain the German women
 For some dishonest manners of their life, Establish'd then this law, to wit no female
 Should be inheritrix in Salique land 51
 Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
 Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.
 Then doth it well appear the Salique law
 Was not devised for the realm of France,
 Nor did the French possess the Salique land 56
 Until four hundred one-and-twenty years
 After defunction of King Pharamond, Idly suppos'd the founder of this law,
 Who died within the year of our redemption 60
 Four hundred twenty-six, and Charles the Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French Beyond the river Sala, in the year
 Eight hundred five Besides, their writers say, King Pepin, which deposed Childeric, 65
 Did, as heir general, being descended
 Of Balthild, which was daughter to King Clothair, Make claim and title to the crown of France. 68
 Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male
 Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great,
 To find his title with some shows of truth,— 72 Though in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,— Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Ingare, Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
 To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son 76
 Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth,
 Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,

Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
 Wearing the crown of France till satisfied 80
 That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
 Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles the aforesaid Duke of Lorraine
 By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great 84
 Was re-united to the crown of France
 So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
 King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
 King Lewis his satisfaction all appear 88
 To hold in right and title of the female
 So do the kings of France unto this day,
 Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law
 To bar your highness claiming from the female,
 And rather choose to lude them in a net 93
 Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
 Usurp'd from you and your progenitors K Hen May I with right and conscience make this claim? 96 Cant The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
 For in the book of Numbers is it writ
 'When the son dies, let the inheritance
 Descend unto the daughter' Gracious lord, 100
 Stand for your own, unwind your bloody flag,
 Look back into your mighty ancestors Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's tomb,
 From whom you claim; invoke his war-like spirit, 104
 And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black
 Prince,
 Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
 Making defeat on the full power of France,
 Whiles his most mighty father on a hill 108
 Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp Forage in blood of French nobility
 O noble English! that could entertain
 With half their forces the full pride of France,
 And let another half stand laughing by, 113
 All out of work, and cold for action Ely Awake remembrance of these valiant
 dead,
 And with your puissant arm renew their feats
 You are their heir, you sit upon their throne,
 The blood and courage that renowned them
 Runs in your veins, and my thrice-puissant hege
 Is in the very May-morn of his youth, 120
 Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises Exe Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
 Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
 As did the former lions of your blood 124 West They know your Grace hath cause and means and might,
 So hath your highness, never King of England
 Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England 128
 And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.
Cant O! let their bodies follow, my dear
 hege,
 With blood and sword and fire to win your
 right,

In aid whereof we of the spirituality 132
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors

K Hen We must not only arm to invade the French, 136

But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages

Cant They of those marches, gracious sovereign, 140

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers

K Hen We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot, 144
Who hath been such a giddy neighbour to us,

For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France

But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach, 149

With ample and brim fullness of his force, Galling the gleaned land with hot essays,

Girding with grievous siege castles and towns,
That England, being empty of defence 153

Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbourhood

Cant She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege,

For hear her but exemplified by herself 156
When all her chivalry hath been in France

And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,

But taken and impounded as a stray 160
The King of Scots, whom she did send to

France,
To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,

And make your chronicle as rich with praise 164
As is the owse and bottom of the sea

With sunken wrack and sunless treasuries
West But there's a saying very old and true,

*If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin* 168

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot

Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat, 172

To tear and havoc more than she can eat Exe It follows then the cat must stay at home

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,

Since we have locks to safeguard necessities 176
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves

While that the armed hand doth fight abroad
The advised head defends itself at home

For government, though high and low and lower, 180

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent, Congreering in a full and natural close,

Like music.
Cant Therefore doth heaven divide 184

The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion,

To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience for so work the honey-bees,

Creatures that by a rule in nature teach 188

The act of order to a peopled kingdom.

They have a king and officers of sorts,
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,

Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings, 193

Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,
Which pillage they with merry march bring

home
To the tent-royal of their emperor 196

Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,

The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in 200

Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,

Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I thus infer, 204

That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously,

As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark as many ways meet in one

town, 208
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea

As many lines close in the dial's centre,
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,

End in one purpose, and be all well borne 212
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege,

Divide your happy England into four,
Whereof take you one quarter into France,

And you withal shall make all Gallia shake 216
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,

Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried and our nation lose

The name of hardness and policy 220 K Hen Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin [Exit an Attendant.

Now are we well resolv'd, and by God's help,

And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe

Or break it all to pieces or there we'll sit, Ruling in large and ample empery

O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn, 228

Tombless, with no remembrance over them
Either our history shall with full mouth

Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave, Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless

mouth, 232
Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin, for we hear

Your greeting is from him, not from the king First Amb May't please your majesty to give us leave 237

Freely to render what we have in charge;

Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy? 240

K Hen We are no tyrant, but a Christian
king,

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons

Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plain-
ness 244

Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

First Amb Thus then, in few
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third

In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says that you savour too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd there's nought in
France

That can be with a numble galliard won, 252
You cannot revel into dukedoms there
He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure, and, in lieu of this Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim Hear no more of you This the Dauphin speaks

K Hen. What treasure, uncle?
Eve Tennis-balls, my liege K Hen We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us

His present and your pains we thank you for When we have match'd our rackets to these balls, 261

We will in France, by God's grace, play a set Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler 264

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chaces And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them 268
We never valu'd this poor seat of England,
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous licence, as 'tis ever common That men are merriest when they are from
home 272

But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king and show my sail of greatness
When I do rouse me in my throne of France
For that I have laid by my majesty 276
And plodded like a man for working-days,
But I will rise there with so full a glory
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France, Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us
And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones, and his soul

Shall stand sore-charged for the wasteful vengeance

That shall fly with them, for many a thousand widows 284

Shall thus his mock mock out of their dear husbands,
Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles
down,

And some are yet ungotten and unborn
That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn 288

But this lies all within the will of God,
To whom I do appeal, and in whose name Tell you the Dauphin I am coming on,
To vengeance as I may and to put forth 292
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause
So get you hence in peace, and tell the Dauphin
His jest will savour but of shallow wit
V' thousands weep more than did laugh at 296

Convey them with safe conduct Fare you well [Exeunt Ambassadors]

Eve This was a merry message

K Hen We hope to make the sender blush at it

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour 300
That may give furtherance to our expedition,
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business Therefore let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon That may with reasonable swiftness add 306
More feathers to our wings, for, God before,
We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door
Therefore let every man now task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought [Exeunt Flourish]

ACT II

Enter Chorus

Chor Now all the youth of England are on fire,

And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies
Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought Reigns solely in the breast of every man 4

They sell the pasture now to buy the horse,
Following the murmur of all Christian kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries
For now sits Expectation in the air 8

And hides a sword from hilts unto the point
With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets, Promis'd to Harry and his followers

The French, advis'd by good intelligence 12
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear, and with pale policy

Seek to divert the English purposes
O England! model to thy mind and greatness, 16
Like little body with a mighty heart,

What might'st thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and natural!
But see thy fault! France hath in thee found 20

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills With treacherous crowns and three corrupted
men,

One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,
Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third,
Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland,

Have, for the guilt of France,—O guilt, indeed!—
Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France,
And by their hands this grace of kings must 28

die —
If hell and treason hold their promises,— Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton Linger your patience on and well digest

The abuse of distance while we force a play 32
The sum is paid the traitors are agreed
The king is set from London, and the scene

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton
There is the playhouse now, there must you sit
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,
And bring you back, charming the narrow seas

To give you gentle pass for, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play 40
But, till the king come forth and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene

[Exit.

SCENE I—London Eastcheap

Enter NYM and BARDOLPH.

Bard Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph

Bard What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym For my part, I care not I say little but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles, but that shall be as it may I dare not fight, but I will wink and hold out mine iron It is a simple one, but what though? it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will and there's an end 11

Bard I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France let it be so, good Corporal Nym

Nym Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it, and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it 18

Bard It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and, certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her 21

Nym I cannot tell, things must be as they may men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and, some say, knives have edges It must be as it may though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod
There must be conclusions Well, I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife Good corporal, be patient here How now, mine host Pistol!

Pistol Base like, callst thou me host?
Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term, 32
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers

Host No, by my troth, not long, for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentle-women that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdyhouse straight [NYM and PISTOL draw] O well-a-day, Lady! if he be not drawn now we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed 40

Bard Good lieutenant! good corporal! offer nothing here

Nym Pish!

Pistol Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-eared cur of Iceland! 44

Host Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour and put up your sword

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus [Sheathing his sword]

Pistol Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile!
The solus in thy most mercurious face;

The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy,

And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth! 52

I do retort the solus in thy bowels,
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow 56

Nym I am not Barbason, you cannot con-jure me I have an humour to knock you indifferently well If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may, and that's the humour of it

Pistol O braggart vile and damned furious wight! 64

The grave doth gape, and doting death is near,
Therefore exhale

Bard Hear me, hear me what I say he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilt, as I am a soldier [Draws]

Pistol An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give,

Thy spirits are most tall

Nym I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms, that is the humour of it.

Pistol Coupe le gorge!

That is the word I thee defy again 76

O hound of Crete, thinkst thou my spouse to get?

No, to the spital go,

And from the powdering-tub of infamy

Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, 80

Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her espouse
I have, and I will hold, the quoi dam Quickly

For the only she, and—pauca, there's enough Go to Enter the Boy

Boy Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your hostess he is very sick, and would to bed Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets and do the office of a warming-pan Faith, he's very ill. 89

Bard Away, you rogue!

Host By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days The king has killed his heart. Good husband, come home presently

[Exeunt Hostess and Boy]
Bard Come, shall I make you two friends?
We must to France together Why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats? 97

Pistol Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym You'll pay me the eight shillings I won
of you at betting?

Pistol Base is the slave that pays 101

Nym That now I will have, that's the humour of it,

Pistol As manhood shall compound push home [They draw]

Bard By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him, by this sword, I will Pistol Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course 107

Bard Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends an thou wilt not, why then, be enemies with me too Prithce, put up.

Nym I shall have my eight shillings I won
of you at betting? 112

Pist A noble shalt thou have, and present pay,
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood

I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me
Is not this just? for I shall suttler be 117 Unto the camp, and profits will accrue
Give me thy hand

Nym I shall have my noble? 120

Pist In cash most justly paid [Paying him

Nym Well then, that's the humour of it

Re-enter Hostess

Host As ever you came of women come in quickly to Sir John Ah poor heart! he is so shaked of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold Sweet men, come to
him

Nym The king hath run bad humours on the knight, that's the even of it 129

Pist Nym thou hast spoke the right,
His heart is fracted and corroborate

Nym The king is a good king but it must be as it may, he passes some humours and careers 134

Pist Let us condole the knight, for, lamb-kins, we will live [Exeunt

SCENE II — Southampton A Council-chamber

Enter EXETER, BLDFOED, and WESTMORELAND

Bed 'Fore God, his Grace is bold to trust these traitors

Exe They shall be apprehended by and by West How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat, 4

Crowned with faith and constant loyalty Bed The king hath note of all that they intend,

By interception which they dream not of Exe Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours, 9

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound Enter KING HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants

K Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard 12

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts

Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of
France, 16

Doing the execution and the act
For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K Hen I doubt not that, since we are well persuaded 20

We carry not a heart with us from hence
That grows not in a fair consent with ours,
Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us 24

Cam Never was monarch better fear'd and
lov'd

Than is your majesty there's not I think, a subject

That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government 28

Grey True those that were your father's enemies

Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve
you

With hearts create of duty and of zeal

K Hen We therefore have great cause of thankfulness, 32

And shall forget the office of our hand,
Sooner than quitance of desert and merit
According to the weight and worthiness

Scroop So service shall with steeled sinews toil, 36

And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your Grace incessant services

K Hen We judge no less Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committ'd yesterday 40

That rail'd against our person we consider It was excess of wine that set him on,

And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop That's mercy, but too much security
Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example

Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind K Hen O! let us yet be merciful

Cam So may your highness, and yet punish too 48

Grey Sir,
You show great mercy, if you can save him life

After the taste of much correction.

K Hen Alas! your too much love and care of me 52

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch.
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,

Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, 56

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their
dear care,

And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes 60

Who are the late commissioners?

Cam I one, my lord
Your highness bade me ask for it to-day

Scroop So did you me, my liege 64

Grey And I, my royal sovereign

K Hen Then, Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
there is yours,

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham, and, sir
knight, 67

Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours
Read them, and know, I know your worthiness

My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter.

We will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentlemen!
 What see you in those papers that you lose 72
 So much complexion? Look ye, how they change!
 Their cheeks are paper Why, what read you there,
 That hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood
 Out of appearance? I do confess my fault, 76
 And do submit me to your highness' mercy
Grey } To which we all appeal Scroop }
K Hen The mercy that was quick in us but late 79
 By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd
 You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy
 For your own reasons turn into your bosoms
 As dogs upon their masters, worrying you See you, my princes and my noble peers, 84
 These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here,
 You know how apt our love was to accord
 To furnish him with all appertinents Belonging to his honour, and this man 88
 Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd,
 And sworn unto the practices of France,
 To kill us here in Hampton to the which
 This knight, no less for bounty bound to us 92
 Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O!
 What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou cruel,
 Ingrateful, savage and inhuman creature!
 Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels,
 That knew'st the very bottom of my soul, 97
 That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy use!
 May it be possible that foreign hire 100
 Could out of thee extract one spark of evil
 That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange That, though the truth of it stands off as gross
 As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it Treason and murder ever kept together, 105
 As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
 Working so grossly in a natural cause
 That admiration did not whoop at them 108
 But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder
 And whatsoever cunning fiend it was That wrought upon thee so preposterously 112
 Hath got the voice in hell for excellence
 And other devils that suggest by treasons
 Do both and bungle up damnation With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetch'd 116
 From glistering semblances of piety,
 But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up, Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
 Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor
 If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
 He might return to vasty Tartar back,
 And tell the legions, 'I can never win 124
 A soul so easy as that Englishman's.'
 O! how hast thou with jealousy infected

The sweetness of affiance. Show men dutiful?
 Why, so didst thou seem they grave and learned? 128
 Why, so didst thou come they of noble family?
 Why, so didst thou seem they religious?
 Why, so didst thou or are they spare in diet,
 Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger, 132
 Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood, Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
 Not working with the eye without the ear,
 And but in purged judgment trusting neither?
 Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem 137
 And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
 To mark the full-fraught man and best indu'd
 With some suspicion I will weep for thee, 140
 For this revolt of thine methinks, is like Another fall of man Their faults are open Arrest them to the answer of the law,
 And God acquit them of their practices! 144 Exe I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge
 I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham 148
 I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland
Scroop Our purposes God justly hath discover'd,
 And I repent my fault more than my death, 152
 Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it Cam For me, the gold of France did not seduce,
 Although I did admit it as a motive 156
 The sooner to effect what I intended
 But God be thanked for prevention,
 Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God and you to pardon me 160
Grey Never did faithful subject more rejoice
 At the discovery of most dangerous treason
 Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
 Prevented from a damned enterprise 164
 My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign K Hen God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence
 You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers 168
 Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death, Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,
 His princes and his peers to servitude,
 His subjects to oppression and contempt, 172
 And his whole kingdom into desolation.
 Touching our person seek we no revenge
 But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
 Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
 We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence, Poor miserable wretches, to your death,
 The taste whereof, God of his mercy give you Patience to endure and true repentance 180
 Of all your dear offences! Bear them hence.
 [Exeunt CAMBRIDGE, SCROOP, and GREY, guarded.
 Now, lords, for France! the enterprise whereof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.
 We doubt not of a fair and lucky war, 184

Since God so graciously hath brought to light
 This dangerous treason lurking in our way
 To hinder our beginnings We doubt not now
 But every rub is smoothened on our way 183
 Then forth, dear countrymen let us deliver
 Our pussance into the hand of God,
 Putting it straight in expedition
 Cheerly to sea! the signs of war advance 192
 No king of England, if not king of France

[Exeunt

SCENE III — London Before a Tavern in Lastcheap

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy

Host Prithce, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines

Pist No, for my manly heart doth yearn Bardolph, be blithe, Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins, 4

Boy, bristle thy courage up, for Falstaff he is
 dead,

And we must yearn therefore

Bard Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell! 8

Host Nay, sure, he's not in hell he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom A made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child, a' parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide for after I saw him fumble with the sheets and play with flowers and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way, for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a' babbled of green fields 'How now, Sir John!' quoth I
 'what man! be of good cheer' So a' cried out
 'God, God, God!' three or four times now I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not think of God, I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet So a' bade me lay more clothes on his feet I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone, then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone 28

Nym They say he cried out of sack.

Host Ay, that a' did.

Bard And of women

Host Nay, that a' did not. 32

Boy Yes, that a' did, and said they were devils incarnate.

Host A' could never abide carnation, 'twas a colour he never liked 36

Boy A' said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host A' did in some sort, indeed, handle women, but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon. 41

Boy Do you not remember a' saw a flea stuck upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a black soul burning in hell-fire? 44

Bard Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire that s all the riches I got in his service

Nym Shall we shog? the king will be gone from Southampton 49

Pist Come, let's away My love, give me thy lips

Look to my chattels and my moveables
 Let senses rue, the word is, 'Pitch and pay,' 52 Trust more,

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck
 Therefore, caveto be thy counsellor 56

Go, clear thy crystals Yoke-fellows in arms,
 Let us to France, like horse-leeches, my boys,
 To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy And that's but unwholesome food,
 they say 61

Pist Touch her soft mouth, and march Bard Farewell, hostess [Kissing her

Nym I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it, but, adieu 65

Pist Let housewifery appear keep close, I tnee command

Host Farewell, adieu [Exeunt

SCENE IV — France An Apartment in the FRENCH KING'S Palace

Flourish Enter the FRENCH KING, attended the DAUPHIN, the DUKES of BERRI and BRITAINNE, the CONSTABLE, and Others

Fr King Thus come the English with full power upon us,

And more than carefully it us concerns

To answer royally in our defences

Therefore the Dukes of Berri and Britaine, 4

Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make
 forth,

And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war

With men of courage and with means defendant 8

For England his approaches makes as fierce

As waters to the sucking of a gulf

It fits us then to be as provident

As fear may teach us, out of late examples 12

Left by the fatal and neglected English

Upon our fields

Dau My most redoubted father,

It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe,
 For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom,—

Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,— 17

But that defences, musters, preparations,
 Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,

As were a war in expectation 20

Therefore I say 'tis meet we all go forth

To view the sick and feeble parts of France

And let us do it with no show of fear,

No, with no more than if we heard that England 25

Were busied with a Whatsun morris-dance

For, my good hege, she is so idly kmg'd,

Her sceptre so fantastically borne

By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, 28

That fear attends her not.

Con O peace, Prince Dauphin!
 You are too much mistal en in this krig
 Question your Grace he late ampassadors
 With what great statc he heard their embassv
 How well supplied with noble co inselors, 23
 How modest in exception and, w. hal
 How terrible in constant resolution,
 And you shall find his var iet es fort-sent 36
 Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus, Covering discretion with a coat of folly,
 As gardeners do with ordure hide th ose roots
 That shall first spring and be most d.lic e 40

Dau Well, 'tis not so my lord high constable,

But though we think it so, it is no matter
 In cases of defence us best to weigh
 The enemy more nightv than ne seems 44
 So the proportions of defence are fill d
 Which of a weak and ruggardly p-ect on Doth like a muser spoil his coat with scanning
 A little cloth

Fr King Think we King Harry strong, 48
 And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet
 him

The k ndred of him hath been fles'd upon us,
 And he is bred out of that bloody strar
 That haunted us in our familiar paths 52
 W nes, our too much memorabl'e share
 When Cressy bu t'l' fatally was struck
 And all our princes captiv d by the hand Of that black nam., Edward Black Prince of Wales 56

Whiles that his mounting sire, on mountain standing

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun
 Saw his heroical seed and smul d to see him
 Mangle the work of nature and deface 60
 The patterns that by God and by French fathers Had twenty years been made ' This is a stem
 Of that victorious stock and let us fear
 The native mightiness and fate of him 64

Enter a Messenger

Mess Ambassadors from Harry King of England

Do crave admittance to your majesty
Fr King We'll give them present audience
 Go, and bring them

[Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords
You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends

Dau Turn head, and stop pursuit, for coward dogs 69
 Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten

Runs far before them Good my sovergn,
 Take up the English short, and let them know
 Of what a monarchy you are the head 73
 Self-love my liege, is not so vile a sin
 As self-neglecting

Re enter Lords, with EXETER and Train

Fr King From our brother England?
Exe From him, and thus he greets your
 majesty 76

He wils you, in the name of God Almighty,
 That you divest yourself, and lay apart

The borrow d glories that by gift of heaven,
 In law or nature and of nations long 80
 To him ar l d as hars namely, the crown
 And all w d stetched honours th a. pertain
 By cus om and the ordir nce of times Unto the crown of France That you may know
 'Tis no smister nor no awv ar' clam, 85
 P ch d fion t e worm noes of long-vanish d a y s

Nor f om the dust of old solvior rak'd,
 He sends you this most mer'vial e line, 88

[Gives a red gree
In every briner truly demonstra' e, Wuling you ov r'look thas pedigree

And wh- r you find him evenly deriv d
 From his most fam d of famous arcestors, 92

Eoa and ths Thurd he bids you then resign
 Your cion and kingsom indrectly held

From your tre tative and true chall'nger
Fr King Or else what fol ovs? 96

Exe Bloody constrat nt for if you hide the crown

Ev n your hearts there will be rake for it Therefore in fierc tempest is he coming

In thunder and in err tempe like a Jove, 100
 That if requirng fau he w ll corpel,

Ar d bds you r the bowels of he Lord,
 Delve up the crown, and to take mercy

On the poor soul's for whom this hungry war 104
 Opens his vasty jaws, and on your head

Turning the widows ears the orphans cries
 The dead mens b'ood the pining maidens

groans,
 For husbands fathers and betrotnd lovers 108

That shall be swallow d in this controversy
 This is his clam, his threatning, and my message

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
 To whom expressly I bring greeting too 112

Fr King For us, we will consider of this further

To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
 Back to our brother England

Dau For the Dauphin
 I stand here for him what to him from England? 116

Exe Scorn and defiance, slight regard, contempt

And anything that may not misbecome
 The mighty sender doth he prize you at

Thus says my king an if your father's high-
 ness 120

Do not in grant of all demands at large,
 Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,

He ll call you to so hot an answer of it,
 That caves and womby vaultages of France 124

Shall chide your trespass and return your mock
 In second accent of his ornaunce

Dau Say, if my father render fair return,
 It is against my wil for I desire 128

Nothing but odds with England to that end,
 As matching to his youth and vanity

I did present him with the Paris baills Exe He ll make your Paris Louvre shake for it, 132

Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe

And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference—
As we his subjects have in wonder found—
Between the promise of his greener days 136
And these he masters now. Now he weighs time Even to the utmost grain that you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France

Fr King To-morrow shall you know our mind at full 140

Exe King Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our
king 142

Come here himself to question our delay,
For he is footed in this land already

Fr King You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions 144

A night is but small breath and little pause
To answer matters of this consequence

[Flourish. Exeunt]

ACT III

Enter Chorus

Chor Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies 146

In motion of no less celerity Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen 148

The well-appointed king at Hampton pier 4
Embark his royalty and his brave fleet With silken streamers the young Phæbus fanning 150

Play with your fancies, and in them behold
Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys clumping 8 Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give To sounds confus'd behold the threaden sails, Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea, 12

Breasting the lofty surge O! do but think You stand upon the rivage and behold
A city on the inconstant billows dancing,
For so appears this fleet majestical, 16
Holding due course to Harfleur Follow, follow!
Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,
And leave your England, as dead midnight still,
Guarded with grandures, babies, and old women,
Either past or not arriv'd to pith and puissance
For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair, that will not follow Those cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to
France? 24

Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege 26
Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on grided Harfleur Suppose the ambassador from the French comes
back 28

Tells Harry that the king doth offer him
Katharine his daughter, and with her, to dowry,
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms
The offer likes not and the humble gunner 32
With instock now the devilish cannon touches, [Alarum, and chambers go off]
And down goes all before them Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind

[Exit.]

SCENE I—France Before Harfleur

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY, EALTER, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers, with scaling ladders

A Hen Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more,
Or close the wall up with our English dead!

In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility 4

But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger,
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage,
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect,
Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like the brass cannon, let the brow o'erwhelm it As fearfully as doth a galled 'ock 12

O'erhang and jutty his confounded base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide, Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his full height! On, on, you noblest English!
Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof,
Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument 21

Dishonour not your mothers' row attest
That those whom you call'd fathers did beget
you.

Be copy now to men of grosser blood, 24
And teach them how to war. And you, good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us
here

The mettle of your pasture, let us swear
That you are worth your breeding, which I doubt not, 28

For there is none of you so mean and base
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips, Straining upon the start. The game's afoot
Follow your spirit and, upon this charge Cry 'God for Harry! England and Saint George!'
[Exeunt Alarum, and chambers go off]

SCENE II—The Same

Enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy

Bard On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay the knocks are too hot, and for mine own part, I have not a case of lives the number of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it

Pist The plain-song is most just, for humours do abound 8

Knocks go and come God's vassals drop and die
And sword and shield
In bloody field
Doth win immortal fame. 12

Boy Would I were in an alehouse in London!
I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, and safety

Pist And I

If wishes would prevail with me
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I lie.

Boy

As duly
But not as truly
As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN

Flu Up to the breach, you dogs! avault, you culhons! [Driving them forward]

Pist Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould!

Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage!

Abate thy rage, great duke!

Good bawcock, bate thy rage, use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym These be good humours! your honour wins bad humours

[Exeunt NYM, PISTOL, and BARDOLPH, followed by FLUELLEN]

Boy As young as I am, I have observed these threeswashers I am boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me, for indeed three such antiques do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-livered and red-faced, by the means whereof, a' faces it out but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword, by the means whereof a' breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest a' should be thought a coward. But his few bad words are matched with as few good deeds, for a' never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal any thing and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel,—I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals,—they would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers which makes much against my manhood if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine, for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them and seek some better service. Their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit]

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following

Gow Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines. The Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu To the mines! tell you the duke it is not so good to come to the mines. For look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war, the concavities of it is not sufficient, for, look you, th' athversary—you may discuss under the duke, look you—is digt himself four yards under the countermines by Cheshu, I think, a' will plow up all if there is not better directions.

Gow The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the 16 order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, i' faith

Flu It is Captain Macmorris, is it not? 76

Gow I think it be

20 Flu By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world
I will verify as much in his beard. He has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog. 82

Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance

Gow Here a' comes, and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans. 91

Jamy I say gud day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu God-den to your worship, good Captain James

Gow How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioners given o'er?

Mac By Chrish, la! tish ill done the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done, it ish give over. I would have blowed up the town so Chrish save me, la! in an hour. O! tish ill done, tish ill done, by my hand tish ill done! 103

Flu Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication, partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline that is the point. 112

Jamy It sa'll be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath [Aside] and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion, that sall I, marry.

Mac It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes. It is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach, and we talk, and be Chrish, do nothing. tis shame for us all, so God sa' me, tis shame to stand still, it is shame, by my hand, and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la! 125

Jamy By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile do gud service, or aile hg i' the grund for it, ay, or go to death, and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sal I suerly do, that is the breff and the long.
Marry, I wad full farn heard some question
'tween you tway. 132

Flu Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation.— 135

Mac Of my nation! What ish my nation?
ish a villan, and a bastard, and a knave, and a 1 rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of 2 my nation? 159

Flu Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that a facility as in discretion you ought to use me, look you, being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities 146

Mac I do not know you so good a man as myself so Christ save me, I will cut off your head. 149

Cow Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other

Jamy A! that's a foul fault [4 parley sounded

Gow The town sounds a parley 153

Flu Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of wars, and there is an end [Exeunt

SCENE III — The Scene Before the Gates of Harfleur

The Governor and some Citizens on the walls, the English forces below Enter KING HENRY and his Train

K Hen How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parley we will admit
Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves,
Or like to men proud of destruction 4
Defy us to our worst for, as I am a soldier —
A name that in my thoughts, becomes me best, —

If I begin the battery once again,
I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur 8
Till in her ashes she lie buried

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up,
And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,
In liberty of bloody hand shall range 12
With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants

What is it then to me if impious war,
Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends 16
Do, with his smutch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause
If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20
Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness
When down the hill he holds his fierce career?
We may as bootless spend our vain command
Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil 25
As send precepts to the leviathan

To come ashore Therefore, you men of Harfleur, Take pity of your town and of your people 28
Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command

Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of heady murder spoil and vulgary 32

If not why, in a moment look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters,

Your fathers taken by the silver beards 36
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls,

Your naked infants spilt upon pikes, Whiles the mad mothers with their howls con-fus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen 41
What say you? will you yield and thus avoid?
Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gow Our expectation hath this day an end
The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated, 45
Returns us that his powers are yet not ready To raise so great a siege Therefore, great
sir,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy
Enter our gates dispose of us and ours, 49
For we no longer are defensible

K Hen Open your gates! Come, uncle
Exeter

Go you and enter Harfleur, there remain 52
And fortify it strongly against the French Use mercy to them all For us dear uncle,
The winter coming on and sickness growing Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais 56

To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest,
To-morrow for the march are we address'd [Flourish KING HENRY and his Train enter the town

SCENE IV — Rouen A Room in the Palace

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE

Kath Alice, tu as este en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage

Alice Un peu, madame 3

Kath Je te prie, m'enseignez il faut que j'apprenne a parler Comment appelez vous la main en Anglois?

Alice La main? elle est appelee, de hand 8

Kath De hand? Et les doigts?

Alice Les doigts? ma foy, je oublie les doigts mais je me souviendrai Les doigts? je pense qu'ils sont appellees de fingres, ouv, de fingres 12

Kath La main, de hand les doigts, de fingres Je pense que je suis le bon escolier J'ai gagne deux mots d'Anglois vistement

Comment appelez vous les ongles? 16

Alice Les ongles? nous les appellons de nails

Kath De nails Escoutez dites moy, si je pa le bien de hand, de fingres, et de nails Alice C'est bien dict, madame il est fort bon Anglois 21

Kath Dites moy l'Anglois pour le bras

Alice De arm, madame

Kath Et le coude? 24

Alice De elbow

Kath De elbow Je m'en fais la repetition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris des a present 28

Alice Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense

Kath Excusez moy Alice escoutez de hand, de fingres de nails, de arma de bilbow 32

Alice De elbow, madame

Kath O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie, de elbow Comment appelez vous le col?

Alice De nails, madame
Kath De nails, de arme, de elbow
Alice Sauf vostre honneur, d'elbow Kath Ainsi dis je d'elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez vous le pied et la robe?
Alice De foot, madame et de coun Kath De foot, et de coun? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user Je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde Foh! le foot, et le coun Néantmoins je reciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble de hand, de fingre, de nails, d'arm, d'elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de coun Alice Excellent, madame!
Kath C'est assez pour une fois allons nous a diner.

SCENE V—The Same Another Room in the Palace

Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAUPHIN, DUKE OF BOURBON, the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, and Others

Fr King 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river Somme

Con And if he be not fought withal, my lord,
 Let us not live in France, let us quit all,
 And give our vineyards to a barbarous people

Dau. O D eu vivant! shall a few sprays of us,
 The emptying of our fathers' luxury,
 Our scions, put in wild and savage stock.
 Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds,

And overlook their grafters?
Bour Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!

Mort de ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom,
 To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm
 In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull,
 On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth, Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
 And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,

Seem frosty? O! for honour of our land,
 Let us not hang like roping icicles Upon our houses thatch, whiles a more frosty
 people
 Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields, Poor we may call them in their native lords
Dau By faith and honour,
 Our madams mock at us, and plainly say
 Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth
 To new-store France with bastard warriors Bour They bid us to the English dancing-schools
 And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos,
 Saying our grace is only in our heels,
 And that we are most lofty runaways Fr King Where is Montjoy the herald?
 speed him hence
 Let him greet England with our sharp defiance
 Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour edg'd
 More sharper than your swords, hie to the field
 Charles Delabreth High Constable of France,
 You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and Berni, Alençon, Brabant Bar and Burgundy, Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont, Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg, Foix, Lestrale, Bouciquait, and Charolois, High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,

For your great seats now quit you of great shames

Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our
 land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
 Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat
 The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon Go down upon him, you have power enough.
 And in a captive chariot into Roan
 Bring him our prisoner

Con This becomes the great Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
 His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march,
 For I am sure when he shall see our army
 He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
 And for achievement offer us his ransom

Fr King Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy,

And let him say to England that we send
 To know what willing ransom he will give Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Roan

Dau Not so, I do beseech your majesty Fr King Be patient, for you shall remain with us

Now forth lord constable and princes all,
 And quickly bring us word of England's fall

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI—The English Camp in Picardy

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN

Gow How now, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon, and a man that I love and honour with my soul and my heart, and my duty and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power he is not—God be praised and blessed!—any hurt in the world but keeps the pride most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ancient lieutenant there at the pride. I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony, and he is a man of no estimation in the world, but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow What do you call him?

Flu He is called Aunchient Pistol.

Gow I know him not.

Enter PISTOL.

Flu Here is the man.

Pist Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours.

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu Ay, I praise God, and I have mented some love at his hands.

Pist Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart,

And of buckram valour, hath, by cruel fate And giddy Fortune's furious sickle wheel, That goddess blind

That stands upon the rolling restless stone,—

Flu By our patience, Aunchient Pistol Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation, and her foot look you is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it. Fortune is an excellent moral.

Pist Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him,

For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must a' be, A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free.

And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate.

But Exeter hath given the doom of death.

For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak, the duke will hear thy voice.

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut.

With edge of penny cord and vile reproach.

Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at, for, if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure and put him to execution, for discipline ought to be used.

Pist Die and be damn'd, and figo for thy friendship!

Flu It is well.

Pist The fig of Spain!

[Exit

Flu Very good.

Gow Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal. I remember him now, a bawd, a cut-purse.

Flu I'll assure you a' uttered as prave words at the pride as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well, what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names and they will learn you by rote where services were done, at such and such a scone, at such a breach, at such a convoy, who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on, and thus they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths and what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mislook.

Flu I tell you what, Captain Gower, I do perceive, he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is. If I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pride.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

Flu God pless your majesty!

K Hen How now, Fluellen! cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter hath very gallantly maintained the pride, the Frenchsgone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pride, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pride. I can tell your majesty the duke is a prave man.

K Hen What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great, marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man, his face is all bubukles, and wheelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire, and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K Hen We would have all such offenders so cut off and we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language, for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket Enter MONTJOY

Mont You know me by my habit. 124

K Hen Well then I know thee. what shall I know of thee?

Mont My master's mind.

K Hen Unfold it. 127

Mont Thus says my king Say thou to Harry of England Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep advantage is a better soldier than rashness Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe now we speak upon our cue and our voices imperial England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance Bid him therefore consider of his ransom which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested, which, in weight to re- answer, his pettiness would bow under For our losses his exchequer is too poor, for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number, and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction To this add defiance and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced So far my king and master, so much my office

K Hen What is thy name? I know thy quality. 149

Mont Montjoy

K Hen Thou dost thy office fairly Turn thee back.

And tell thy king I do not seek him now. 152

But could be willing to march on to Calais

Without impeachment, for, to say the sooth,—

Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much

Unto an enemy of craft and vantage.— 156

My people are with sickness much enfeebled,

My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French

Who, when they were in health, I tell thee, herald, 160

I thought upon one pair of English legs

Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me,

God,

That I do brag thus! this your air of France

Hath blown that vice in me, I must repent. 164

Go therefore, tell thy master here I am

My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk,

My army but a weak and sickly guard,

Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, 168

Though France himself and such another neighbour

Stand in our way There's for thy labour,

Montjoy

Go, bid thy master well advise himself

If we may pass, we will, if we be hinder'd, 172

We shall your tawny ground with your red

blood

Discolour and so, Montjoy, fare you well.

The sum of all our answer is but this

We would not seek a battle as we are, 176

Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it

So tell your master

Mont. I shall deliver so Thanks to your highness. [Exit

Glo I hope they will not come upon us

now 180

K Hen We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs

March to the bridge, it now draws toward night

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves,

And on to-morrow bid them march away 184

[Exit

SCENE VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBURES the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, and Others

Con Tut! I have the best armour of the world Would it were day

Orl You have an excellent armour, but let my horse have his due 4

Con It is the best horse of Europe

Orl Will it never be morning?

Dau My Lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour— 8

Orl You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world

Dau What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns Ca, ha! He bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narnes de feu!

When I bestride him I soar, I am a hawk he trots the air, the earth sings when he touches it, the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes

Orl He's of the colour of the nutmeg. 20

Dau And of the heat of the ginger It is a beast for Perseus he is pure air and fire, and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him he is indeed a horse, and all other jades you may call beasts

Con Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse 28

Dau It is the prince of palfreys, his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage

Orl No more, cousin. 32

Dau Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey it is a theme as fluent as the sea, turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all. 'Tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on, and for the world—familiar to us, and unknown—to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus 'Wonder of nature!'

Orl I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress 44

Dau Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser, for my horse is my mistress.

Orl Your mistress bears well Dau Me well, which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress 53

Con Ma foi, methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly sh'ook your back. 53

Dau So perhaps did yours 56

Con Mine was not bridled

Dau O! then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off and in your straight strossers 60

Con You have good judgment in horsemanship

Dau Be warned by me, then they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs I had rather have my horse to my mistress 65

Con I had as lief have my mistress a jade

Dau I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair 68

Con I could make as true a boast as that if I had a sow to my mistress

Dau Le chien est retourne à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavee au boubrier thou makest use of any thing 73

Con Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose 76

Ram My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it?

Con Stars, my lord 80

Dau Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope

Con And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away 86

Con Even as your horse bears your praises, who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted 89

Dau Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot tomorrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces 93

Con I will not say so for fear I should be faced out of my way But I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English. 97

Ram Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them 101

Dau 'Tis midnight I'll go arm myself

[Exit]

Orl The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram He longs to eat the English. 104

Con I think he will eat all he kills

Orl By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath 109

Orl He is simply the most active gentleman of France

Con Doing is activity, and he will stul be doing 113

Orl He never did harm, that I heard of Con Nor will do none to-morrow he will keep that good name still 116

Orl I know him to be valiant

Con I was told that by one that knows him better than you

Orl What's he? 120

Con Marry, he told me so himself and he said he cared not who knew it

Orl He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him. 124

Con By my faith, sir, but it is, never any body saw it but his lackey 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appears, it will bate

Orl 'Til will never said well? 128

Con I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship'

Orl And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due' 132

Con Well placed there stands your friend for the devil have at the very eye of that proverb, with 'A pox of the devil'

Orl You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot' 137

Con You have shot over

Orl 'Tis not the first time you were overshot

Enter a Messenger

Mess My lord high constable, the English he within fifteen hundred paces of your tents 141

Con Who hath measured the ground?

Mess The Lord Grandpre

Con A valiant and most expert gentleman Would it were day! Alas! poor Harry of England, he longs not for the dawning as we do

Orl What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con If the English had any apprehension they would run away 151

Orl That they lack, for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces

Ram That island of England breeds very valiant creatures their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage 157

Orl Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crushed like rotten apples You may as well say that a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion. 162

Con Just, rust, and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils 168

Orl Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef

Con Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stromachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm, come, shall we about it? 173

Orl It is now two o'clock. But, let me see, by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt]

ACT IV

Enter Chorus

Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark Fills the idle vessel of the universe From camp to camp, through the foul womb of
night,

The hum of either army stilly sounds
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch Fire answers fire, and through their pale flames
Each battle sees the other's umber'd face
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs Piercing the night's dull ear, and from the tents
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name
Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French Do the low-rated English play at dice
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth lump
So tediously away. The poor condemned English, Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The morning's danger, and their gesture sad
Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats Presenteth them unto the gazing moon So many horrid ghosts. O! now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent, Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'
For forth he goes and visits all his host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest smile,
And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen

Upon his royal face there is no note
How dread an army hath enrouned him,
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watch'd night
But freshly looks and overbars attaint
With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty,
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks
A largess universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear. Then mean and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the right
And so our scene must to the battle fly
Where — O for pity! — we shall much disgrace,
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill dispos'd in brawl ridiculous,
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see Minding true things by what their mockeries be
[Exit]

SCENE I — The English Camp at Agincourt

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER

K Hen Gloucester, tis true that we are in great danger,
The greater therefore should our courage be Goodmorrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty!

There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out,
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful, and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward consciences,
And preachers to us all, admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end,
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself

Enter ERPINGHAM

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham.
A good soft pillow for that good white head.
Were better than a churlish turf of France.
Erp Not so, my liege. This lodging likes me better,

Since I may say, 'Now lie I like a king.' K Hen 'Tis good for men to love their present pains.
Upon example, so the spirit is eas'd.
And when the mind squaken'd out of doubt,
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legibility.
Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers both Commend me to the princes in our camp,
Do my good morrow to them and anon Desire them all to my pavilion

Glo We shall, my liege.

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and BEDFORD]

Erp Shall I attend your Grace?

K Hen No, my good knight,

Go with my brothers to my lords of England.

I and my bosom must debate awhile,

And then I would ro other company.

Erp The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble

Harry!

K Hen God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speakest cheerfully

Enter PISTOL

Pist Qui va la?

K Hen A friend.

Pist Discuss unto me, art thou officer?

Or art thou base, common and popular?

K Hen I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist Trailst thou the püssant pike?

K Hen Even so. What are you?

Pist As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K Hen Then you are a better than the king.

Pist The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold.

A lid of hilt, an imp of fame

Of parents good, of fist most valiant

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-string

I love the lovely bully. What's thy name?

K Hen Harry le Roy.

Pist Le Roy! a Cornish name, art thou of Cornish crew?

K Hen No, I am a Welshman.

Pist Knowst thou Fluellen?

K Hen Yes.

Pist Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate.

Upon Saint Davy's day

K Hen Do not you wear your dagger in; our cap that day, lest he knock that about yours 57

Pist Art thou his friend?

K Hen And his kinsman too

Pist The figo for thee then! 60

K Hen I thank you God be with you!

Pist My name is Pistol called [Exit

K Hen It sorts well with your fierceness [Retires

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER, severally

Gow Captain Fluellen! 64

Flu So! in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and auncient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle-taddle nor pibble-pabble in Pompey's camp, I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cries of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise 76

Gow Why, the enemy is loud, you heard him all night

Flu If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb in your own conscience now?

Gow I will speak lower 83

Flu I pray you and peseech you that you will [Exit GOWER and FLUELLEN

K Hen Though it appear a little out of fashion,

There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS

Court Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder? 89

Bates I think it be, but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day

Will We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it Who goes there?

K Hen A friend.

Will Under what captain serve you? 96

K Hen Under Sir Thomas Erpingham

Will A good old commander and a most kind gentleman. I pray you, what thinks he of our estate? 100

K Hen Even as men wracked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide

Bates He hath not told his thought to the king? 104

K Hen No; nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am the violet smells to him as it doth to me, the element shows to him as it doth to me, all his senses have but human conditions his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man, and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army 118

Bates He may show what outward courage he will, but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck, and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here 123

K Hen By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king I think he would not wish himself any where but where he is

Bates Then I would he were here alone, so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved 129

K Hen I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak thus to feel other men's minds Methinks I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable

Will That's more than we know 136

Bates Ay, or more than we should seek after, for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us 140

Will But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make, when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all, 'We died at such a place,' some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left I am afraid there are few die well that die in a battle, for how can they charitably dispose of any thing when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection 155

K Hen So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcilable iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation But this is not so the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant, for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers Some peradventure have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder, some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury, some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God war is his beadle, war is his vengeance, so that here men are punished for being e-brac'd of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel where they feared the death they have borne life away, and where they would be safe they perish. Then, if they die unapprov'd, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's, but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore could every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every nook out of his conscience and dying so, death is to him advantage, or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained, and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, if at making God so free an offer he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head, the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

A. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully, but when our throats are cut he may be ransom'd, and we never the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch. You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round, I should be angry with you if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet; then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove, give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap, if ever thou come to me and say after to-morrow, 'This is my glove,' by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou darest as well be hang'd.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word, fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends; we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders; but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

[Exeunt Soldiers]

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, Our children, and our sins lay on the king! 252 We must bear all. O hard condition!

Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel But his own wringing! What infinite heart's ease 256

Must kings neglect that private men enjoy! And what have kings that privates have not too? Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

And what art thou, thou idle ceremony? 260 What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?

What are thy rents? what are thy comings in? O ceremony! show me but thy worth! 264 What is thy soul of adoration?

Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form, Creating awe and fear in other men? Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd, 268 Than they in fearing?

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet, But poison'd flattery? O! be sick, great greatness! 272

And bid thy ceremony give thee cure. Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation?

Will it give place to flexure and low-bending? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee, 276

Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream, That play'st so subtly with a king's repose,

I am a king that find thee, and I know 'Tis not the balm, the sceptre and the ball, 280 The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,

The intertissued robe of gold and pearl, The farced title running 'fore the king,

The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp 284 That beats upon the high shore of this world,

No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony, Not all these, laid in bed majestical,

Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave, 288 Who with a body fill'd and vacant mind

Get him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread, Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,

But, like a lackey, from the rise to set 292 Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night Sleeps in Elysium, next day after dawn, Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse, And follows so the ever-running year 296 With profitable labour to his grave.

And, but for ceremony, such a wretch, Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep,

Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king 300 The slave, a member of the country's peace,

Enjoys it, but in gross brain little wots What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace, Whose hours the peasant best advantages. 304

Re-enter ERPINGHAM

Erp My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence, Seek through your camp to find you
K Hen Good old knight, Collect them all together at my tent
I'll be before thee

Erp I shall do't, my lord [Exit]
K Hen O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts, Possess them not with fear, take from them now
The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them Not to-day, O Lord!
312

O! not to-day, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown.
I Richard's body have interr'd anew,
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears
Than from it issu'd forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood, and I have buit 320
Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests
Sing still for Richard's soul More will I do, Though all that I can do is nothing worth,
Since that my penitence comes after all, 324 Imploring pardon

Re-enter GLOUCESTER

Glo My liege!
K Hen My brother Gloucester's voice! Ay,
I know thy errand, I will go with thee 328
The day, my friends, and all things stay for me
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — The French Camp

Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and Others

Orl The sun doth gild our armour up, my lords!
Dau Montez à cheval! My horse! varlet!
lacquais! ha!
Orl O brave spirit!
Dau Via! les eaux et la terre!
Orl Rien plus? l'air et le feu.
Dau Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my lord constable!
Con Hark how our steeds for present service neigh!
Dau Mount them, and make incision in their hides,
That their hot blood may spm in English eyes,
And dout them with superfluous courage ha!
Ram What! will you have them weep our horses' blood? 12
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger

Mess The English are embattail'd, you French peers.
Con To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!
Do but behold yon poor and starved band, 16

And your fair show shall suck away their souls, Leaving them but the shales and husks of men
There is not work enough for all our hands, Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins 20
To give each naked curtal-axe a stain,
That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheathe for lack of sport let us but blow on them,

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them 24
'Tis positive ganst all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,
Who in unnecessary action swarm
About our squares of battle, were enow 28
To purge this field of such a hiding foe, Though we upon this mountain's basis by Took stand for idle speculation
But that our honours must not. What's to say?
A very little little let us do, 33
And all is done Then let the trumpets sound
The tucket sonance and the note to mount
For our approach shall so much dare the field,
That England shall couch down in fear and yield.

Enter GRANDPRÉ

Grand Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?
Yon island carrions desperate of their bones,
Ill-favour'dly become the morning field, 40
Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
And our air shakes them passing scornfully Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,
And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps 44
The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,
With torch-staves in their hand, and their poor jades Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,
The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes, 48
And in their pale dull mouths the gimmel bit Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless,
And their executors, the knavish crows,
Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour 52
Description cannot suit itself in words
To demonstrate the life of such a battle
In life so lifeless as it shows itself
Con They have said their prayers, and they stay for death. 56
Dau Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits,
And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?
Con I stay but for my guard on, to the field! 60
I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste Come, come, away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day
[Exeunt]

SCENE III — The English Camp

Enter the English host GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, SALISBURY, and WESTMORELAND Glo Where is the king?
Bed The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand

Ene There's five to one, besides, they all are fresh

Sal God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds

God be wi' you, princes all, I'll to my charge
If we no more meet till we meet in heaven,

Then, joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford, 8
My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord

Exeter
And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu!

Bed Farewell, good Salisbury, and good luck go with thee!

Ene Farewell, kind lord Fight valiantly to-day 12

And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour

[Exit SALISBURY]
Bed He is as full of valour as of kindness, Princely in both.

Enter KING HENRY

West O! that we now had here 16
But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work to-day

K Hen What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin

If we are mark'd to die, we are enow 20
To do our country loss, and if to live,

The fewer men, the greater share of honour God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold, 24
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost,

It yearns me not if men my garments wear,
Such outward things dwell not in my desires

But if it be a sin to covet honour, 28
I am the most offending soul alive

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour

As one man more, methinks, would share from me, 32

For the best hope I have O! do not wish one more

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart, his passport shall be made, 36

And crowns for convoy put into his purse
We would not die in that man's company

That fears his fellowship to die with us
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian 40

He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,

And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age, 44

Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,
And say, 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian'

Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say, 'These wounds I had on Crispin's day' 48

Old men forget yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember with advantages

What feats he did that day Then shall our names, Familiar in his mouth as household words, 52

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,

Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd
This story shall the good man teach his son, 56

And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,

But we in it shall be remembered,
We few, we happy few we band of brothers 60

For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother, be he ne'er so vile

This day shall gentle his condition
And gentlemen in England now a-bed 64

Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,

And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day

Re-enter SALISBURY

Sal My sov'reign lord, bestow yourself with speed 68

The French are bravely in their battles set,
And will with all expedience charge on us

K Hen All things are ready, if our minds be so

West Perish the man whose mind is backward now! 72

K Hen Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,

Without more help, could fight this royal battle!

K Hen Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men, 76

Which likes me better than to wish us one
You know your places God be with you all!

Tucket Enter MONTJOY

Mont Once more I come to know of thee,
King Harry,

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound, 80
Before thy most assured overthrow

For certainly thou art so near the gulf
Thou needs must be engulft. Besides, in mercy,

The constable desires thee thou wilt mind 84
Thy followers of repentance, that their souls

May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies

Must lie and fester

K Hen Who hath sent thee now? 88
Mont The Constable of France.

K Hen I pray thee, bear my former answer back

Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus? 92

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt Find native graves; upon the which, I trust, 96

Shall witness live in brass of this day's work,
And those that leave their valiant bones in France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dung-hills,
They shall be fam'd, for there the sun shall greet them,
And draw their honours reeking up to heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in
France

Mark then abounding valour in our English,
That being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality
Let me speak proudly tell the constable, 108
We are but warriors for the working-day,
Our gayness and our gilt are all besmurch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field,
There's not a piece of feather in our host— 112
Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—
And time hath worn us into slovenry
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim
And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night 116
They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers'
heads,

And turn them out of service If they do this,—
As, if God please, they shall,—my ransom then Will soon be levied Herald, save thou thy labour, 121
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints,

Which if they have as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the constable Mont I shall, King Harry And so, fare thee well

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit K. Hen I fear thou'lt once more come again for ransom. 128

Enter YORK.

York My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg

The leading of the vaward.

K. Hen. Take it, brave York Now, soldiers, march away

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle

Alarums Excursions Enter French Soldier, PISTOL, and Boy

Pist Yield, cur!

Fr Sol. Je pense que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité

Pist. Quality? Calen O custure me! Art thou a gentleman? 4

What is thy name? discuss.

Fr Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist O Signieur Dew should be a gentle-
man—

Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark
O Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox y Except, O signieur, thou do give to me Egregious ransom.

Fr Sol O, prenez misericorde! ayez pitié de moy! 13

Pist Moy shall not serve, I will have forty moys,

Or I will fetch thy rum out at thy throat
In drops of crimson blood 16

Fr Sol Est-il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras?

Pist Brass, cur!

Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, 20
Offer st me brass?

Fr Sol O pardonnez moy!

Pist Sayst thou me so? is that a ton of moys?
Come hither, boy ask me this slave in French
What is his name 25

Boy Escoutez comment estes vous appelle?

Fr Sol Monsieur le Fer

Boy He says his name is Master Fer 28

Pist Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firke him, and ferret him Discuss the same in French unto him

Boy I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke. 33

Pist Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat

Fr Sol Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prest, car ce soldat icy est disposé tout à cette heure de couper vostre gorge.

Pist Ouy, cuppele gorge, permafoy

Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns, 40

Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword

Fr Sol O! je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne maison gardez ma vie, et je vous don-neray deux cents escus 45

Pist What are his words?

Boy He prays you to save his life he is a gentleman of a good house, and, for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns 49

Pist Tell him, my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take

Fr Sol Petit monsieur, que dit-il? 52

Boy Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier, neant-moins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchise-
ment 57

Fr Sol Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerciements et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre

Pist Expound unto me, boy 63

Boy He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks, and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one—as he thinks—the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England. 68

Pist As I suck blood, I will some metcye show—

Follow me!

[Exeunt PISTOL and French Soldier Boy Survez vous le grand capitaine I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty

a heart but the saving is true, 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound' Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil! the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are born raised, and so would this be if he durst steal anything adventurously I must stay with the 'ackys, with the luggage of our camp the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but oovs

SCENE V—Another Part of the Field

Alarums Enter DALPHIN, ORLEANS, BOURBON, CONSTABLE, RAMBURES, and Others

Con O diable!

Orl O seigneur! le jour est perdu! tout est perdu!

Dau Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all! Reproach and everlasting shame

Sit mocking in our plumes O meschante fortune!

Do not run away [4 short alarum

Con V hy, all our ranks are broke

Dau O perdurable shame! let's stab ourselves

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?

Orl Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bour Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let's die in honour! once more back again, And he that will not follow Bourbon now,

Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand, Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door

Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contaminated Con Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives

Orl We are enough yet living in the field

To smother up the English in our throngs, so If any order might be thought upon

Bour The devil take order now! I'll to the throng

Let life be short, else shame will be too long

SCENE VI—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums Enter KING HENRY and Forces, EXETER, and Others

K Hen Well have we done, thrice-vaunt countrymen

But all's not done, yet keep the French the field

Exe The Duke of York commends him to your majesty

K Hen Lives he good uncle? thrice within this hour

I saw him down, thrice up again, and fighting, From helmet to the spur all blood he was

Exe In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie, Larding the plain, and by his bloody side,— Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,—

The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies Suffolk first died and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd, 12
And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawn upon his face
And cries aloud, 'Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven, 16
Tarry, sweet soul for mine, then fly abreast,
As in this glorious and well-foughten field,
We kept together in our chivalry!'

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up
He smil'd me in the face, taught me his hand,
And with a feeble gripe says, 'Dear my lord Commend my service to my sovereign'

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck 24
He threw his wounded arm and kiss'd his lips,
And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A testament of noble ending love

The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd 28 Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd,

But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears

K Hen I blame you not, 32
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too

[Alarums
But hark! what new alarm is this same?

The French have runforc'd their scatter'd men
Then every soldier kill his prisoners! 37 Give the word through

[Exeunt

SCENE VII—Another Part of the Field

Alarums Enter ELUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu Kill the boys and the 'uggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer't in your conscience now, is it not? 4

Gow 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive, and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle have done this slaughter besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent, wherefore the king most worthily hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O! 'tis a gallant king, 11

Flu Ay, he was born at Monmouth, Captain Gower What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?

Gow Alexander the Great. 15

Flu Why, I pray you, is not pig great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations. 19

Gow I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon, his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is born I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the world, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth it is called Wye at Monmouth, but it is out of my prams what is the name of the other river, but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander,—God knows, and you know,—in his rages, and his fumes, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moocs, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicated in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Cleitus.

Gow Our king is not like him in that he never killed any of his friends.

Flu It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it, as Alexander killed his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups, so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great belly-douplet he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks, I have forgot his name.

Gow Sir John Falstaff.

Flu That is he. I'll tell you, there is good men porn at Monmouth.

Gow Here comes his majesty.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, with a part of the English Forces, WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Others.

K Hen I was not angry since I came to France.

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald, 60 Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill.
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field, they do offend our sight.
If they'll do neither, we will come to them, 64
And make them skirr away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings.
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have,
And not a man of them that we shall take. 68
Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY

Exe Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

K. Hen How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not?

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont No, great king.

I come to thee for charitable licence,
That we may wander o'er this bloody field. 76
To book our dead, and then to bury them,
To sort our nobles from our common men,
For many of our princes—woe the while!—
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood. 80
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes, and their wounded steeds Fret fetlock-deep in gore, and with wild rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,

Killing them twice. O! give us leave, great king,
To view the field in safety and dispose Of their dead bodies.

K Hen I tell thee truly, herald, I know not if the day be ours or no, 88
For yet a many of your horsemen peer
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont The day is yours.
K Hen Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by?

Mont They call it Agincourt. 93

K Hen Then call we this the field of Agincourt.

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave battle here in France. 100

K Hen They did, Fluellen.

Flu Your majesty says very true. If your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps, which, your majesty know, to this hour is an honourable badge of the service, and I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day. 109

K Hen I wear it for a memorable honour, For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your body, I can tell you that. Got pless it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K Hen Thanks, good my countryman. 116

Flu By Jeshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it, I will confess it to all the 'orld. I need not be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man. 121

K Hen God keep me so! Our heralds go with him.

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead.

On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to WILLIAMS. Exeunt MONTJOY and Others.]

Exe Soldier, you must come to the king.
K Hen Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap? 127

Will An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K Hen An Englishman?

Will An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night, who, if a' live and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear. Or, if I can see my glove in his cap,—which he swore as he was a soldier he would wear if alive,—I will strike it out soundly. 137

K Hen What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience. 141

K Hen It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself it is necessary, look your Grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjured, see you now his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la! 151

K Hen Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow

Will So I will, my liege, as I live

K Hen Who servest thou under?

Will Under Captain Gower my liege 156

Flu Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the wars

K Hen Call him hither to me, soldier

Will I will, my liege

[Exit

K Hen Here, Fluellen wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together I plucked this glove from his helm. If any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon and an enemy to our person, if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love 167

Flu Your Grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects. I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all, but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see 173

K Hen Knowest thou Gower?

Flu He is my dear friend, an't please you.

K Hen Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent 177

Flu I will fetch him

[Exit

K Hen My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels 180

The glove which I have given him for a favour, May haply purchase him a box o' the ear, It is the soldier's, I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick

If that the soldier strike him,—as, I judge 185

By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,—

Some sudden mischief may arise of it,

For I do know Fluellen valiant, 188

And touch'd with choier hot as gunpowder,

And quickly will return an injury

Follow and see there be no harm between them

Go you with me, uncle of Exeter [Exeunt

SCENE VIII —Before KING HENRY's Pavilion

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS

Will I warrant it is to knight you, captain

Enter FLUELLEN

Flu God's will and his pleasure, captain I beseech you now come apace to the king there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of 5

Will Sir, know you this glove?

Flu Know the glove! I know the glove is a glove. 8

Will I know this, and thus I challenge it [Strikes him

Flu 'Sblood! an arrant traitor as any's in the universal orld, or in France or in England

Gow How now, sir! you villain! 12

Will Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu Stand away, Captain Gower, I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you

Will I am no traitor 16

Flu That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his majesty's name apprehend him: he is a friend o' the Duke Alençon's

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER

War How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu My Lord of Warwick, here is,—praised be God for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty 24

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER

K Hen How now! what's the matter?

Flu My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your Grace has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon

Will My liege, this was my glove: here is the fellow of it and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap. I promised to strike him if he did. I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word 34

Flu Your majesty hear now,—saving your majesty's manhood,—what an arrant rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is. I hope your majesty is peer me testimony and witness, and avowments, that this is the glove of Alençon that your majesty is give me in your conscience now

K Hen Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it 42

'Twas I, indeed thou promisedst to strike And thou hast given me most bitter terms

Flu An't please your majesty, let his neck answer for it: if there is any martial law in the world

K Hen How canst thou make me satisfaction? 49

Will All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your majesty 52

K Hen It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will Your majesty came not like yourself you appeared to me but as a common man witness the night, your garments, your lowliness, and what your highness suffered under that shape. I beseech you, take it for your own fault and not mine: for had you been as I took you for I made no offence: therefore, I beseech your highness pardon me 61

K Hen Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,

And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow, And wear it for an honour in thy cap 64

Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns And, captain, you must needs be friends with him

Flu By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve

God, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, 'tis the better for you 72

Will I will none of your money

Flu It is with a good will, I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shoes come, wherefore should you be so pashu? your shoes is not so good 'tis a good shilling, I warrant you, or I will change it 78

Enter an English Herald

K Hen Now herald, are the dead number'd?

Her Here is 'the number of the slaughtered French [Delivers a paper]

K Hen What prisoners of good sort are taken uncle? 81

Exc Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the king,

John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciquault Of other lords and barons, knights and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men

K Hen This note doth tell me of ten thousand French

That in the field lie slain of princes, in this number, 87

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead One hundred twenty-six added to these, Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen Eight thousand and four hundred, of the which Five hundred were but yesterday duob'd knights So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries, The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality 96

The names of those their nobles that lie dead Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France, Jacques of Chatillon, Admiral of France, The master of the cross-bows, Lord Ramibures Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guischaud Dauphin, 101

John Duke of Alençon, Antony Duke of Brabant,

The brother to the Duke of Burgundy, And Edward Duke of Bar of lussy earls, 104 Grandpré and Roussi Fauconberg and Foix Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrale Here was a royal fellowship of death!

Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another paper]

Edward the Duke of York the Earl of Suffolk, Sir Richard Ketley, Davy Gam, esquire

None else of name and of all other men 111

But five and twenty O God! thy arm was here,

And not to us, but to thy arm alone,

Ascribe we all When, without stratagem,

But in plain shock and even play of battle,

Was ever known so great and little loss 116

On one part and on the other? Take it, God,

For it is none but thine!

Exc 'Tis wonderful!

K Hen Come, go we in procession to the village 119

And be it death proclaimed through our host

To boast of this or take the praise from God

Which is his only

Flu Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed? 124

K Hen Yes, captain, but with this acknowledgment,

That God fought for us

Flu Yes, my conscience, he did us great good

K Hen Do we all holy rites 128

Let there be sung Non nobis and Te Deum,

The dead with charity enclosed in clay

'Ye'd then to Calais, and to England then,

Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men [Exit]

ACT V

Enter Chorus

Chor Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them and of such as have, I humbly pray them to admit the excuse

Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, 4

Which cannot in their huge and proper life

Be here presented Now we bear the king Toward Calais grant him there, there seen,

Heave him away upon your winged thoughts 8

Athwart the sea Behold, the English beach

Pules in the flood with men, with wives, and boys,

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deepmoun'd sea,

Which like a mighty whiffler 'fore the king, 12

Seems to prepare his way so let him land

And solemnly see him set on to London

So swift a pace hath thought that ever now

You may imagine him upon Blackheath 16

Where that his lords desire him to have borne

His bruised helmet and his banded sword

Before him through the city he forbids it,

Being free from vaunness and self-glorious pride 20

Giving full trophy signal and ostent,

Quite from himself, to God But now behold,

In the quick forge and working-house of thought,

How London doth pour out her citizens 24

The mayor and all his brethren in best sort,

Like to the senators of the antique Rome

With the plebeians swarming at their heels,

Go forth and fetch their conquering Caesar in

As, by a lower but loving likelihood, 29

Were now the general of our gracious empress,—

As in good time he may,—from Ireland coming,

Bringing rebellion broached on his sword, 32

How many would the peaceful city quit

To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,

Did they this Harry Now in London place him!

As yet the lamentation of the French 36

Invites the King of England's stay at home,—

The emperor's coming in behalf of France,

To order peace between them,—and omit

All the occurrences, whatever chance'd, 40

Till Harry's back-return again to France

There must we bring him and myself have play'd

The interim, by remembering you 'tis past

Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,

After your thoughts, straight back again to France [Exit]

SCENE I—France. An English Court of GuardEnter FLUELLEN and GOVER

Gow Now thou'st right but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things. I will tell you asse my friend Captain Gover. I ne rascally, scald beggar yousy praggng knave, Pistol,—which you and yourself and all the world know to be no better than a fellow—look you now, of non ems, he is come to me and pings me pread and salt yesterday, look you and pings me my leek. It was in a place where I could not preed no creature with him, but I will be so po'd as to wear it in my cap all I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey cock.

Enter PISTOL

Flu 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God bless you, Auncient Pistol! you scurvy lousy knave. God bless you!

Pist Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst base Troyan?

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web? Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu I pesech you heartily, scurvy lousy knave, at my desires and my requests and my petitions to eat, look you, this leek, because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections and your appetites and your digestions does not agree with it. I would desire you to eat it.

Pist Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.

Flu [Strikes him] There is one goat for you. Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist Base Troyan, thou shalt die.

Flu You say very true, scald knave, when God's will's. I will desire you to live in the mean time and eat your victuals, come, there is sauce for it. [Strikes him again] You called me yesterday mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall to if you can mock a leek. You can eat a leek.

Gow Enough, captain. You have astonished him.

Flu I say I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will beat his pate four days. Brie I pray you, it is good for your green wound and your bloody coxcomb.

Pist Must I bite?

Flu Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too and ambiguities.

Pist By this leek, I will most horribly revenge I eat and eat, I swear—

Flu Eat, I pray you. Will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist O, yet thy cudgel thou dost see I eat.

Flu Much good do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away, the skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em, that is all.

Pist Good.
Flu Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist Me a groat!
Flu Yes, verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.
Flu If I owe you anything, I will pay you in cudgels. You shall be a wood-nonger and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God bless you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit]

Pist Ah, hell shall sit for thee.

Gow Go go, you are a cowardly cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition legua upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of pre-eminence, your honour, and daring to a touch in your worded an of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gun-man twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel. You find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit]

Pist Dost Fortune play the huswife with me now?

News have I that my Nell is dead in the spital Of malady of France.

And there my rencevous is quite cut off. 88
Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs

Honour is cudgelled. Well, bawd I'll turn,
And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand.

To England will I steal, and there I'll steal. 92
And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars,

And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit]

SCENE II—Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace

Enter, from one side, KING HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords, from the other side the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS KATHARINE, ALICE and other Ladies, the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train

K Hen Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Unto our brother France, and to our sister, Health and fair time of day, joy and good wishes

To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine, And, as a branch and member of this royalty,

By whom this great assembly is contriv'd, We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy,

And, princes French, and peers, health to you all.

Fr King Right joyous are we to behold your face,

Most worthy brother England, fairly met. So are you, princes English, every one.

Q Isa So happy be the issue, brother England,

Of this good day and of this gracious meeting, As we are now glad to behold your eyes;

Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them

Against the French, that met them in their bent,

The fatal balls of murdering basilisks
 The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
 Have lost their quality, and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love

K Hen To cry amen to that, thus we appear

Q Isa. You English princes all, I do salute
 you.

Bar My duty to you both, on equal love, Great Kings of France and England! That I have labour'd

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours,

To bring your most imperial majesties
 Unto this bar and royal interview, Your mightiness on both parts best can witness

Since then my office hath so far prevail'd
 That face to face, and royal eye to eye,
 You have congreed, let it not disgrace me
 If I demand before this royal view,

What rub or what impediment there is,
 Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace,

Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births,
 Should not in this best garden of the world,

Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage?
 Alas! she hath from France too long been chas'd,

And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
 Corrupting in its own fertility

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
 Unpruned dies, her hedges even-pleach'd,

Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
 Put forth disorder'd twigs, her fallow leas

The darnel, hemlock and rank fumitory
 Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts

That should deracinate such savagery,
 The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth

The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover, Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,

Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems
 But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,

Losing both beauty and utility,
 And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and

hedges,
 Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,

Even so our houses and ourselves and children
 Have lost, or do not learn for want of time,

The sciences that should become our country,
 But grow like savages,—as soldiers will,

That nothing do but meditate on blood,—
 To swearing and stern looks diffus'd attire,

And every thing that seems unnatural
 Which to reduce into our former favour

You are assembled, and my speech entreats
 That I may know the let why gentle Peace

Should not expel these inconveniences,
 And bless us with her former qualities

K Hen If, Duke of Burgundy, you would
 the peace,

Whose want gives growth to the imperfections Which you have cited, you must buy that

peace
 With full accord to all our just demands,

Whose tenours and particular effects
 You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands

Bur The king hath heard them, to the which as yet

There is no answer made

K Hen Well then the peace,
 Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer

Fr King I have but with a cursory eye
 O'erglanc'd the articles pleaseeth your Grace

To appoint some of your council presently
 To sit with us once more, with better heed

To re-survey them, we will suddenly Pass our accept and peremptory answer

K Hen Brother, we shall Go, uncle Exeter,
 And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester,

 Warwick and Huntingdon, go with the king,

And take with you free power to ratify,
 Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best

Shall see advantageous for our dignity,
 Anything in or out of our demands,

And we'll consign thereto Will you, fair sister,
 Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q Isa Our gracious brother, I will go with
 them

Haply a woman's voice may do some good When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on

K Hen Yet leave our cousin Katharine nere
 with us

She is our capital demand, compris'd
 Within the fore-rank of our articles

Q Isa She hath good leave [Exeunt all except KING HENRY,

KATHARINE, and ALICE
K Hen Fair Katharine, and most fair!

Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms,
 Such as will enter at a lady's ear,

And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?
Kath Your majesty shall mock at me, I cannot speak your English K Hen O fair Katharine! if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your

English tongue Do you like me, Kate?
Kath Pardonnez moy, I cannot tell vat is 'like me'

K Hen An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel Kath Que dit-il? que je suis semblable a les anges?

Alice Ouy, vrayment, sauf vostre grace, ainsi dit-il

K Hen I said so, dear Katharine, and I must not blush to affirm it Kath O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines des tromperies K Hen What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice Ouy, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits dat is de princess K Hen The princess is the better Englishwoman I faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding I am glad thou canst speak no better English, for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to munge it in love, but directly to say I love you then, if you urge me further than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit Give me your answer 'I' faith do and so clap hands and a bargain How say you, lady?

Kath Sauf vostre honneur, me understand vell
K Hen Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me for the one, I have neither words nor measure, and for the other, I have no strength in measure yet a reasonable measure in strength If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off But before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation, only downright oaths which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook I speak to thee plain soldier if thou canst love me for this, take me if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true, but for thy love, by the Lord, no, yet I love thee too And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncomely constancy, for he performs must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places, for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rime themselves in a ladies' favours they do always reason themselves out again What! a speaker is but a prater, a rime is but a ballad A good leg will fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curled pate will grow bald, a fair face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow, but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon, or, rather, the sun, and not the moon, for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly If thou would have such a one, take me, and take me, take a soldier, take a soldier, take a king And what sayest thou to me my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee

Kath. Is it possible that I should love the enemy of France? 178

K Hen No, it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate, but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France, for I love France so well, that I will not part with a village of it, I will have it all mine and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. 185

Kath I cannot tell what is dat.

K Hen No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off Je quand sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moy,—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—donc vostre est France, et vous estes mienne It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as to speak so much more French I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me. 197

Kath Sauf vostre honneur, le François que vous parlez est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle 200

K Hen No, faith, is't not, Kate, but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English, Canst thou love me? 205

Kath I cannot tell

K Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them Come, I know thou lovest me, and at night when you come into your closet you'll question this gentlewoman about me, and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart but, good Kate, mock me mercifully, the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly If ever thou be'st mine, Kate,—as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt,—I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier breeder Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce? 224

Kath I do not know dat.

K Hen No, 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy, and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très cher et divine déesse? 231

Kath Your majesty avefausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France 234

K Hen Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English I love thee, Kate by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me, yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage Now beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better I shall appear my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst, and thou shalt wear me if thou wear me better and better And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes, avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress, take me by the hand, and say 'Harry of England, I am thine' which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud—'England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine,' who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music, for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all,

Catharine, break thy mind to me in broken English wilt thou have me? 265

Kath Dat is as it sall please de roy mon pere

K Hen Nay, it will please him well, Kate, shall please him, Kate 268

Kath Den it sall also content me

K Hen Upon that I kiss your hand, and I ill you my queen

Kath Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! la foy, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez vostre andeur, en baissant la main d'une vostre ingne serviteure excusez moy, je vous supplie, on tres puissan' seigneur 276

K Hen Then I will kiss your lips, Kate

Kath Les dames, et demoiselles, pour estre usées devant leur nocces, il n'est pas la coume de France 280

K Hen Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice Dat it is not be de fashion pour les dies of France,—I cannot tell what is baiser English. 284

K Hen To kiss

Alice Your majesty entendre better que moy

K Hen It is not a fashion for the maids in rance to kiss before they are married, would ie say? 289

Alice Ouy, vrayment

K Hen O Kate nice customs curtsy to great ings Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined tllun the weak list of a country's fashion we e the makers of manners, Kate, and the erty that follows our pines stops the mouths fall find-faults as I will do yours, for uphold- ing the nice fashion of your country in denying e a kiss therefore, patiently, and yielding issing her] You have watchcraft in your lips, ate there is more eloquence in a sugar touch them, than in the tongues of the French uncl, and they should sooner persuade arry of England than a general petition of onarchs Here comes your father 304

Enter the KING and QUEEN, BURGUNDY, BED-FORD, GLOUCESTER EXETER, WARWICK, WEST-MORELAND, and other French and English
Lords

Bur God save your majesty! My royal usin, teach you our princess English?

K Hen I would have her learn, my fair usin, how perfectly I love her, and that is ed English 309

Bur Is she not apt?

K Hen Our tongue is rough, coz, and my addition is not smooth, so that, having neither voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I anot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, at he will appear in his true likeness 315

Bur Pardon the frankness of my mirth if I ewer you for that If you would conjure in , you must make a circle, if conjure up Love her in his true likeness, he must appear ed and blind Can you blame her then, ng a maid yet rosed over with the virgin ason of modesty, if she deny the appearance a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self?

It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to 325

K Hen Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces

Bur They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do 329

K Hen Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking

Bur I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K Hen This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer, and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too 341

Bur As love is, my lord, before it loves

K Hen It is so and you may some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way 346

Fr King Yes, my lord, you see them per- spectively, the cities turned into a maid, for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never entered.

K Hen Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr King So please you 352

K Hen I am content so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her so the ma d that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will 356

Fr King We have consented to all terms of reason.

K Hen Is't so, my lords of England?

West The king hath granted every article His daughter first, and then in sequel all, 361 According to their firm proposed natures

Exe Only he hath not yet subscribed this Where your majesty demands, that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French, Notre très cher filz Henry roy d'Angleterre, Hcriter de France, and thus in Latin, Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Angliæ, et Hæres Franciæ

Fr King Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,

But your request shall make me let it pass 372

K Hen I pray you then, in love and dear alliance,

Let that one article rank with the rest,

And thereupon give me your daughter
Fr King Take her, fair son, and from her blood raise up 376

Issue to me, that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale

With envy of each other's happiness, May cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France

All Amen!

K Hen Now, welcome, Kate and bear me witness all,
That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen

[Flourish]
Q Isa God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love, 389
So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal

That never may ill office, or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,

To make divorce of their incorporate league
That English may as French, French Englishmen,

Receive each other! God speak this Amen! 396
All Amen!

K Hen Prepare we for our marriage on which day

My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath,
And all the peers', for surety of our leagues 400

Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me,
And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!

[Sennet. Exeunt]

SCENE — Partly in England, and partly in France

ACT I

SCENE I — Westminster Abbey

Dead March Enter the Funeral of KING HENRY THE FIFTH attended on by the DUKES OF BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER, the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Heralds, &c.

Bed Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars,
That have consented unto Henry's death! 5
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth

Glo England ne'er had a king until his time Virtue he had, deserving to command 9
His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams,

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings,
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire, 12
More dazzled and drove back his enemies
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces

What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech
He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered 16
Exe We mourn in black why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive.

Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
And death's dishonourable victory 20
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow? 24
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win He was a king bless'd of the King of kings 28

Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought
The church's prayers made him so prosperous Glo The church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd 3

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd
None do you like but an effeminate prince, Whom like a school-boy you may over-awe 36

Win Gloucester, whate'er we like thou art protector,
And lookest to command the prince and realm.
Thy wife is proud, she holdeth thee in awe,
More than God or religious churchmen may 40

Glo Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh,

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace!
Let s to the altar heralds, wait on us
Instead of gold we'll offer up our arms,
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.
Posterity, await for wretched years, When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,
Our isle be made a marsh of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.
Henry the Fifth! thy ghost I invoke Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Cæsar, or bright—

Enter a Messenger

Mess My honourable lords, health to you
all!
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfigure
Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guysors, Poitiers are all quite lost

Bed What sayst thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?

Speak softly, or the loss of those great towns Will make him burst his lead and rise from
death

Glo Is Paris lost? is Roan yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again

These news would cause him once more yield the ghost

Exe How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess No treachery, but want of men and money

Among the soldiers this is muttered,
That here you maintain several factions,
And, whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,

You are disputing of your generals.
One would have lingering wars with little cost,

Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings,
A third thinks, without expense at all,

By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd Awake, awake English nobility!

Let not sloth dim your honours new-begot
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms,

Of England's coat one half is cut away
Exe Were our tears wanting to this funeral

These tidings would call forth their flowing tides Bed Me they concern, Regent I am of

France
Give me my steeld coat I'll fight for France.

Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,

To weep their intermissive miseries

Enter another Messenger

Sec Mess Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance

France is revolted from the English quite, Except some petty towns of no import

The Dauphin Charles is crowned king
Rheims,

The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd,

Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part,
The Duke of Alençon flieth to his side

Exe The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to
him!

O! whither shall we fly from this reproach?
Glo We will not fly, but to our enemies'

throats
Bedford if thou be slack, I'll fight it out

Bed Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness?

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is overrun

Enter a third Messenger

Thurd Mess My gracious lords, to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal fight

Between the stout Lord Talbot and the French Win What! wherein Talbot overcame?

Thurd Mess O, no! wherein Lord Talbot was o'erthrown

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large
The tenth of August last this dreadful lord,

Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,

By three-and-twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.

No leisure had he to enrank his men,
He wanted pikes to set before his archers,

Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges

They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in

More than three hours the fight continued,
Where valiant Talbot above human thought

Enacted wonders with his sword and lance Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand

him,
Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he flew

The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms,
All the whole army stood agaz'd on him.

His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! A Talbot! cried out amain,

And rush'd into the bowels of the battle
Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,

If Sir John Fastolf had not play'd the coward
He, being in the vaward,—plac'd behind,—

With purpose to relieve and follow them,— Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke

Hence grew the general wrack and massacre,
Enclosed were they with their enemies

A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace, Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back,

Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,

Durst not presume to look once in the face.
Bed Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself,

For living idly here in pomp and ease
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,

Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd, Thurd Mess O no! he liveth, but is took prisoner,

And Lord Scalls with him, and Lord Hungerford

Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise Bed His ransom there is none but I shall pay ¹⁴⁸
 I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne,
 His crown shall be the ransom of my friend,
 Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours
 Farewell, my masters, to my task will I, ¹⁵² Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
 To keep our great Saint George's feast withal Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take, Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake ¹⁵⁶
Third Mess So you had need, for Orleans is besieg'd,
 The English army is grown weak and faint,
 The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
 And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, ¹⁶⁰
 Since they, so few, watch such a multitude Exe Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,
 Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
 Or bring him in obedience to your yoke ¹⁶⁴ Bed I do remember it, and her- take my leave,
 To go about my preparation. [Exit Glo I'll to the Tower with all the haste I can,
 To view the artillery and munition, ¹⁶⁸
 And then I will proclaim young Henry king [Exit Exe To Eltham will I, where the young king is,
 Being ordain'd his special governor,
 And for his safety there I'll best devise [Exit Win Each hath his place and function to attend ¹⁷³
 I am left out, for me nothing remains
 But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office
 The king from Eltham I intend to steal, ¹⁷⁶
 And sit at chiefest stern of public weal [Exit

SCENE II —France Before Orleans

Flourish Enter CHARLES, with his Forces
 ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others

Char Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens
 So in the earth, to this day is not known Late did he shine upon the English side,
 Now we are victors, upon us he smiles ⁴
 What towns of any moment but we have
 At pleasure here we lie near Orleans, Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,
 Faintly besiege us one hour in a month ⁸ Alen They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves
 Either they must be dieted like mules
 And have their provender tied to their mouths,
 Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice, ¹² Reig Let's raise the siege why live we idly
 here
 Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear
 Remaneth none but mad-bran'd Salisbury,
 And he may well in fretting spend his gall, ¹⁶
 Nor men nor money hath he to make war

Char Sound, sound alarum! we will rush on
 them
 Now for the honour of the forlorn French!
 Him I forgive my death that killeth me ²⁰
 When he sees me go back one foot or fly
[Exeunt

Alarum. Excursions afterwards a retreat
Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and Others

Char Who ever saw the like? what men have I!
 Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled
 But that they left me 'midst my enemies ²⁴
Reig Salisbury is a desperate homicide,
 He fighteth as one weary of his life
 The other lords, like lions wanting food,
 Do rush upon us as their hungry prey ²⁸
Alen Froissart, a countryman of ours, records,
 England all Olivers and Rowlands bred
 During the time Edward the Third did reign
 More truly now may this be verified, ³²
 For none but Samsons and Goliases,
 It sendeth forth to skirmish One to ten!
 Lean raw-bon'd rascals! who would e'ersuppose
 They had such courage and audacity? ³⁶ Char Let's leave this town, for they are hare-bran'd slaves,
 And hunger will enforce them to be more eager.
 Of old I know them, rather with their teeth
 The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege ⁴⁰
Reig I think, by some odd gimmals or device,
 Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on,
 Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do
 By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone ⁴⁴ Alen Be it so

Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS

Bast Where's the prince Dauphin? I have news for him
Char Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us Bast Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd ⁴⁸
 Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
 Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand
 A holy maid hither with me I bring,
 Which by a vision sent to her from heaven ⁵²
 Ordained is to raise this tedious siege,
 And drive the English forth the bounds of
 France
 The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
 Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome, ⁵⁶
 What's past and what's to come she can descry Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,
 For they are certain and unfallible Char Go call her in. [Exit BASTARD] But first, to try her skill, ⁶⁰
 Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place
 Question her proudly, let thy looks be stern
 By this means shall we sound what skill she hath. [Retires]

Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with JOAN LA PUCELLE and Others

Reig Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats? 64

Joan Reigmer, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me?

Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind.

I know thee well, though never seen before. Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me 68

In private will I talk with thee apart.

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave a while

Reig She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Joan Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter, 72

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art. Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd

To shine on my contemptible estate

Lo! whilst I waited on my tender lambs, 76

And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,

God's mother deigned to appear to me,

And in a vision full of majesty

Will'd me to leave my base vocation 80

And free my country from calamity

Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success,

In complete glory she reveal'd herself,

And, whereas I was black and swart before, 84

With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,

That beauty am I bless'd with which you see

Ask me what question thou canst possible

And I will answer unpremeditated. 88

My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,

And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.

Resolve on this, thou shalt be fortunate

If thou receive me for thy war-like mate 92

Char Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,

In single combat thou shalt buckle with me,

And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true, 96

Otherwise I renounce all confidence

Joan I am prepar'd here is my keen-edg'd sword,

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side,

The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard, 100

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char Then come, o' God's name, I fear no woman.

Joan And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[They fight, and JOAN LA PUCELLE overcomes

Char Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon, 104

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Joan Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me

Impatiently I burn with thy desire, 108

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,

Let me thy servant and not sovereign be,

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus. 112

Joan I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred from above

When I have chased all thy foes from hence,

Then will I think upon a recompense 116

Char Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock,

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean? 121

Alen He may mean more than we poor men do know

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues

Reig My lord, where are you? what devise you on? 124

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Joan Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp, I will be your guard.

Char What she says, I'll confirm we'll fight it out. 128

Joan Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars. 132

Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.

With Henry's death the English circle ends,

Dispersed are the glories it included. 137

Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once.

Char Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired then. 141

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters were like thee,

Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,

How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen Leave off delays and let us raise the siege. 146

Reig Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours

Drive them from Orleans and be immortalis'd.

Char Presently we'll try Come, let's away about it

No prophet will I trust if she prove false 150

[Exeunt

SCENE III.—London. Before the Tower.

Enter at the Gates the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his Serving-men, in blue coats

Glo I am come to survey the Tower this day,

Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance

Where be these warders that they wait not here?

Open the gates! 'Tis Gloucester that calls. 4

[Servants knock

First Ward [Within] Who's there that knocks so imperiously?

First Serv It is the noble Duke of Gloucester

Sec Ward [Within] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

First Serv Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector? 8

First Ward [Within] The Lord protect him!
so we answer him

We do not otherwise than we are will'd Glo Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine?

There's none protector of the realm but I 12
Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[GLOUCESTER's Men rush at the Tower gates, and WOODVILLE the Lieutenant speaks within Wood What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?
Open the gates! here's Gloucester that would enter 17

Wood [Within] Have patience, noble Duke,
I may not open,
The Cardinal of Winchester forbids

From him I have express commandment 20
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in Glo Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him fore me?

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate, Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook? 24

Thou art no friend to God or to the king
Open the gates or I'll shut thee out shortly First Serv Open the gates unto the Lord Protector,

Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly 28

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by Serving-men in tawny coats

Win How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this?

Glo Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win I do, thou most usurping proditor,
And not protector, of the king or realm. 32

Glo Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, Thou that contriv'dst to murder our dead
lord,

Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin
I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat, 36
If thou proceed in this thy insolence

Win Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot

This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt 40

Glo I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee
back

Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth
I'll use to carry thee out of this place

Win Do what thou dar'st, I'll beard thee to thy face 44

Glo What! am I dar'd and bearded to my face?

Draw, men, for all this privileged place, Blue coats to tawny-coats. Priest, beware your beard, [GLOUCESTER and his men attack the
CARDINAL

I mean to tug it and to cuff you soundly 48
Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat,
In spite of pope or dignities of church,

Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down

Win Gloucester, thou'lt answer this before the pope 52

Glo Winchester goose! I cry a rope! a rope!
Now beat them hence, why do you let them stay?

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array Out, tawny coats! out, scarlet hypocrite! 56

Here GLOUCESTER's Men beat out the Cardinal's Men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers

May Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!
Glo Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor
King,

Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use 61

Win Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens,
One that still motions war and never peace,

O'ercharging your free purses with large fines,
That seeks to overthrow religion 65

Because he is protector of the realm,
And would have armour here out of the Tower,

To crown himself king and suppress the prince Glo I will not answer thee with words, but blows [Here they skirmish again

May Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife

But to make open proclamation
Come, officer as loud as e'er thou canst, 72

Cry

Off All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places, and not to wear, handle or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death 80

Glo Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law,
But we shall meet and break our minds at large

Win Gloucester, we will meet to thy cost, be sure

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work May I'll call for clubs if you will not away

This cardinal's more haughty than the devil 86 Glo Mayor, farewell thou dost but what thou mayst

Win Abominable Gloucester! guard thy head,
For I intend to have it ere long

[Exeunt, severally, GLOUCESTER and WIN-CHESTER, with their Serving-men

May See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart 90

Good God! these nobles should such stomachs bear,

I myself fight not once in forty year [Exeunt

SCENE IV.—France Before Orleans
Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his Boy

M Gun Surrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won
Son Father, I know and oft have shot at them,

Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim. 4

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not Be thou rul'd by me
 Chief master-gunner am I of this town,
 Something I must do to procure me grace
 The prince's espials have informed me 8
 How the English, in the suburbs, close entrench'd Wont through a secret gate of iron bars
 In yonder tower to overpeer the city,
 And thence discover how with most advantage
 They may vex us with shot or with assault 13
 To intercept this inconvenience,
 A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd,
 And fully even these three days have I watch'd
 If I could see them Now, boy, do thou watch,
 For I can stay no longer 18
 If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word,
 And thou shalt find me at the Governor's [Exit]
Son. Father, I warrant you, take you no care, 21
 I'll never trouble you if I may spy them. [Exit]

Enter, on the turrets, the LORDS SALISBURY and TALBOT, SIR WILLIAM GLANSDALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE, and Others

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy! again return'd!
 How wert thou handled being prisoner? 24
 Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd, Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner
 Called the brave Lord Ponton de Santraillles, 28
 For him I was exchange'd and ransomed.
 But with a baser man at arms by far
 Once in contempt they would have barter'd me
 Which I disdaining scorn'd, and craved death
 Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd. 33
 In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
 But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my
 heart
 Whom with my bare fists I would execute 36
 If I now had him brought into my power

Sal. Yet tell st thou not how thou wert entertain'd

Tal. With scoffs and scorns and contumelous taunts
 In open market-place produc'd they me, 40
 To be a public spectacle to all Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
 The scarecrow that affrights our children so Then broke I from the officers that led me, 44
 And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground
 To hurl at the beholders of my shame
 My grisly countenance made others fly
 None durst come near for fear of sudden death
 In iron walls they deem'd me not secure, 49
 So great fear of my name mongst them was spread
 That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel
 And spurn in pieces posts of adamant 52
 Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had
 That walk'd about me every minute-while,
 And if I did but stir out of my bed
 Ready they were to shoot me to the heart. 56

Enter the Boy with a linstock

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd,
 But we will be reveng'd sufficiently

Now it is supper-time in Orleans
 Here, through this grate, I count each one, 60
 And view the Frenchmen how they fortify
 Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,
 Let me have your express opinions 64
 Where is best place to make our battery next.
Gar. I think at the North gate, for there stand lords Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge
Tal. For aught I see, this city must be fam-ish'd, 68
 Or with light skirmishes enfeebled

[*Here they shoot SALISBURY and SIR
 THOMAS GARGRAVE fall*]

Sal. O Lord! have mercy on us, wretched sinners

Gar. O Lord! have mercy on me, woeful
 man

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us? 72

Speak, Salisbury, at least, if thou canst speak
 How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?
 One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off!
 Accursed tower! accursed fatal hand 76
 That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!
 In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame,
 Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars, Whilst any trumpet did sound or drum struck
 up, 80
 His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,

One eye thou hast to look to heaven for grace
 The sun with one eye vieweth all the world 84
 Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
 If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands!
 Bear hence his body, I will help to bury it.
 Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life? 88
 Speak unto Talbot, nay, look up to him Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort, Thou shalt not die whilst—
 He beckons with his hand and smiles on me, 92
 As who should say, 'When I am dead and gone, Remember to avenge me on the French.'
 Plantagenet I will, and like thee, Nero,
 Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn 96
 Wretched shall France be only in my name

[It thunders and lightens An alarm.
 What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?
 Whence cometh this alarm and the noise?

Enter a Messenger

Mess. My lord, my lord! the French have gather'd head 100
 The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,
 A holy prophetess new risen up
 Is come with a great power to raise the siege

[Here SALISBURY lifteth himself up and groans]

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan! 104
 It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you

Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains Convey me Salisbury into his tent, 110
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the bodies]

SCENE V — The Same Before one of the Gates

Alarum Skirmishings Enter TALBOT, pursuing the DAUPHIN, drives him in, and exit then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them Then re-enter TALBOT

Tal Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?

Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them,
A woman clad in armour chaseth them

Re-enter JOAN LA PUCELLE

Here, here she comes, I'll have a bout with thee Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee 5
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to humthousery 'st

Joan Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee [They fight]

Tal Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?

My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet 12

[They fight again]

Joan. Talbot, farewell, thy hour is not yet come

I must go victual Orleans forthwith

[A short alarum, then LA PUCELLE enters the town with Soldiers]

O'ertake me if thou canst, I scorn thy strength Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men, 16

Help Salisbury to make his testament
This day is ours, as many more shall be. [Exit]

Tal My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel,

I know not where I am, nor what I do 20
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal, Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists

So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,

Are from their hives and houses driven away 24
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs, Now, like to whelps, we crying run away

[A short alarum.]

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat, 28

Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,

Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves. 32

[Alarum. Another skirmish]

It will not be retire into your trenches
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,

For none would strike a stroke in his revenge
Pucelle is entered into Orleans 36

In spite of us or aught that we could do

O' would I were to die with Salisbury
The shame hereof will make me hide my head

[Alarum Retreat Exeunt TALBOT and his Forces, &c]

SCENE VI — The Same

Flourish Enter, on the walls, JOAN LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers

Joan Advance our waving colours on the walls,

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word

Char Divynest creature, Astræa's daughter, 4
How shall I honour thee for this success?

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetic! 8
Recover'd is the town of Orleans

More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state
Reig Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets, 13

To celebrate the joy that God hath given us
Alen All France will be replete with mirth and joy,

When they shall hear how we have play'd the men 16

Char 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won,

For which I will divide my crown with her,
And all the priests and friars in my realm

Shall in procession sing her endless praise 20
A statelier pyramid to her I'll rear

Than Rhodope's or Memphis ever was In memory of her when she is dead,

Her ashes, in an urn more precious 24
Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius,

Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.

No longer on Saint Dens will we cry, 28
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint

Come in, and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory

[Flourish Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I. — Before Orleans

Enter to the Gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Serg Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.
If any noise or soldier you perceive

Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard. 4

First Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.]

Thus are poor servitors—
When others sleep upon their quiet beds—

Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces with scaling-ladders, their drums beating a dead march

Tal Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach the regions of Artois, 9
Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted, 12
Embrace we then this opportunity,
As fitting best to quittance their deceit
Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery

Bed Coward of France! how much he wrongs his fame, 16

Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches and the help of hell!

Bur Traitors have never other company
But what s that Pucelle whom they terms o pure?

Tal A maid, they say

Bed A maid, and be so martial! 21

Bur Pray God she prove not masculine ere
long,

If underneath the standard of the French
She carry armour, as she hath begun 24

Tal Well, let them practise and converse with spirits,

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their finty bulwarks

Bed Ascend, brave Talbot, we will follow
thee 28

Tal Not all together better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways,

That if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force 32

Bed Agreed I'll to yond corner

Bur And I to this

Tal And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear 36

How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls, crying, 'Saint George! 'A Talbot!' and all enter the town

First Sent Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the Walls in their shirts Enter, several ways, BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready

Alen How now, my lords! what! all un-ready so?

Bast Unready! ay, and glad we 'scap'd so
well. 40

Reig 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarums at our chamber-doors.

Alen Of all exploits since first I follow'd
arms,

Ne'er heard I of a war-like enterprise 44

More venturous or desperate than this

Bast I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour
him

Alen Here cometh Charles I marvel how he sped 48

Bast Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Enter CHARLES and JOAN LA PUCELLE

Char Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
Make us partakers of a little gain, 52

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Joan Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping or waking must I still prevail, 56

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fall'n Char Duke of Alençon, this was your default,

That, being captain of the watch to-night, 61
Did look no better to that weighty charge

Alen Had all your quarters been so safely kept

As that whereof I had the government, 64
We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast Mine was secure

Reig And so was mine, my lord

Char And for myself, most part of all this
night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct 68
I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels
Then how or which way should they first break in?

Joan Question, my lords, no further of the case, 72

How or which way 'tis sure they found some
place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made

And now there rests no other shift but this,
To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,

And lay new platforms to endamage them. 77

Alarum Enter an English Soldier, crying, 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind

Sold I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword,
For I have loaden me with many spoils, 80

Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit

SCENE II—Orleans Within the Town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain, and Others

Bed The day begins to break, and night is fled,

Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

[Retreat sounded

Tal Bring forth the body of old Salisbury, 4
And here advance it in the market-place,

The middle centre of this cursed town.
Now have I paid my vow unto his soul,

For every drop of blood was drawn from him 8
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-
night.

And that hereafter ages may behold
 What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,
 Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
 A tomb wherein his corse shall be interr'd
 Upon the which, that every one may read,
 Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans,
 The treacherous manner of his mournful death,
 And what a terror he had been to France
 But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
 I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,
 His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,
 Nor any of his false confederates

Bed 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
 Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
 They did amongst the troops of armed men
 Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field

Bur Myself—as far as I could well discern For smoke and dusky vapours of the night—
 Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull, When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,
 Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves
 That could not live asunder day or night.
 After that things are set in order here,
 We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger

Mess All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train
 Call ye the war-like Talbot, for his acts
 So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal Here is the Talbot who would speak
 with him?

Mess The virtuous lady, Countess of Au-vergne,
 With modesty admiring thy renown,
 By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe

To visit her poor castle where she lies,
 That she may boast she hath beheld the man Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars
 Will turn into a peaceful comic sport,
 When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.

You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.
Tal Her trust me then, for when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory, Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ruled
 And therefore tell her I return great thanks,
 And in submission will attend on her

Will not your honours bear me company?
Bed No, truly, it is more than manners will.

And I have heard it said, unbidden guests
 Are often welcomest when they are gone

Tal Well then, alone,—since there's no remedy,—

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy Come hither, captain. [Whispers] You perceive
 my mind

Capt I do, my lord, and mean accordingly

[Exeunt]

SCENE III — Auvergne Court of the Castle

Enter the COUNTESS and her Porter

Count Porter, remember what I gave in charge,
 And when you have done so, bring the keys to
 me

Port Madam, I will

Count The plot is laid if all things fall out
 right,

I shall as famous be by this exploit
 As Scythian Tomyras by Cyrus' death
 Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
 And his achievements of no less account Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine
 ears,
 To give their censure of these rare reports

Enter Messenger and TALBOT

Mess Madam,
 According as your ladyship desir'd,
 By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come Count And he is welcome What! is this the

 man?

Mess Madam, it is Count Is this the scourge of France?

Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad,
 That with his name the mothers still their babes?
 I see report is fabulous and false

I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
 A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
 And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs

Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf
 It cannot be this weak and writhled shrump
 Should strike such terror to his enemies

Tal Madam, I have been bold to trouble
 you,

But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
 I'll sort some other time to visit you Count What means he now? Go ask him whither he goes

Mess Stay, my Lord Talbot, for my lady craves

To know the cause of your abrupt departure
Tal Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
 I go to certify her Talbot's here

Re-enter Porter, with keys

Count If thou be he, then art thou prisoner Tal Prisoner! to whom?

Count To me, blood-thirsty lord,
 And for that cause I train'd thee to my house

Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to
 me,

For in my gallery thy picture hangs
 But now the substance shall endure the like,
 And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,

That hast by tyranny, these many years
 Wasted our country, slain our citizens
 And sent our sons and husbands captivate

Tal Ha, ha, ha!
Count Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan

Tal I laugh to see your ladyship so fond To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,

Whereon to practise your severity

Count Why, art not thou the man?

Tal I am, indeed

Count Then have I substance too

Tal No, no, I am but shadow of myself
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here,
For what you see is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity
I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,

Your roof were not sufficient to contain it Count This is a riddling merchant for the nonce,

He will be here, and yet he is not here

How can these contraries agree?

Tal That will I show you presently

He winds a horn Drums strike up a peal of ordnance The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded That Talbot is but shadow of himself?
These are his substance, sinews, arms, and
strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate

Count Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath,
For I am sorry that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal Be not dismay'd, fair lady, nor miscon-ster

The mind of Talbot as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body
What you have done hath not offended me,
Nor other satisfaction do I crave,
But only, with your patience, that we may Taste of your wine and see what cates you have,
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well

Count With all my heart, and think me honoured

To feast so great a warrior in my house.
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — London The Temple Garden

Enter the EARLS OF SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and a Lawyer

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf Within the Temple hall we were too loud

The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth,

Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it,

And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us

War Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch,

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper
mouth,

Between two blades, which bears the better temper,

Between two horses which doth bear him best,
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,

I have perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment,

But in these nice sharp quilllets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw

Plan Tut, tut! here is a mannerly forbearance

The truth appears so naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye Plan Since you are tongue-tied, and so loath to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts
Let him that is a true-born gentleman,

And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

From off this brier pluck a white rose with me Som Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me

War I love no colours, and, without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf I pluck this red rose with young Somerset

And say withal I think he held the right.
Ver Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck
no more,

Till you conclude that he, upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,

Shall yield the other in the right opinion Som Good Master Vernon, it is well objected

If I have fewest I subscribe in silence.

Plan And I Ver Then for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off, Lest bleeding you do paint the white rose red,
And fall on my side so, against your will.

Ver If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, come on who else?
Law [To SOMERSET] Unless my study and my books be false,

The argument you held was wrong in you,
In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som Here, in my scabbard, meditating
that

Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Meantime, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses,
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet, 64
'Tis nor for fear but anger that thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset? 65
Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet? 69

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth,
Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses, 72

That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,

I scorn thee and thy faction, peevish boy 76

Suf. Turn not thy scorns thus way, Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away! good William de la Pole.

We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will thou wrong'st him, Somerset 82

His grandfather was Lionel, Duke of Clarence, Third son to the third Edward, King of England.

Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,

Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words 88

On any plot of ground in Christendom.

Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge,

For treason executed in our late king's days?

And, by his treason stand'st not thou attained,

Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?

His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood, 94

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not attainted.

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor,

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,

Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.

For your partaker Pole and you yourself, 100

I'll note you in my book of memory,

To scourge you for this apprehension.

Look to it well and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for thee still, 104

And know us by these colours for thy foes,

For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,

As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, 108

Will I for ever and my faction wear,

Until it wither with me to my grave.

Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition 112

And so farewell until I meet thee next. [Exit.

Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.

Plan. How I am brav'd and must perforce endure it! 116

War. This blot that they object against your house.

Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament,
Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester,

And if thou be not then created York,

I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 120

Meantime in signal of my love to thee,

Against proud Somerset and William Pole,

Will I upon thy party wear this rose.

And here I prophesy this brawl to-day, 124

Grown to this faction in the Temple garden,

Shall send between the red rose and the white

A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you, 128

That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still would I wear the same.

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir. 132

Come, let us four to dinner. I dare say

This quarrel will drink blood another day.

[Exeunt]

SCENE V—London A Room in the Tower.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair by two Gaolers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,

Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.

Even like a man new haled from the rack,

So fare my limbs with long imprisonment, 4

And these gray locks, the pursuivants of death,

Nestor-like aged, in an age of care,

Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent, 8

Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent,

Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief,

And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine

That droops his sapless branches to the ground.

Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb, 13

Unable to support this lump of clay,

Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,

As witting I no other comfort have. 16

But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

First Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come.

We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber,

And answer was return'd that he will come. 20

Mor. Enough, my soul shall then be satisfied.

Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.

Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,

Before whose glory I was great in arms, 24

This loathsome sequestration have I had,

And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd,

Depriv'd of honour and inheritance.

But now the arbitrator of despairs, 28

Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,

With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence.

I would his troubles likewise were expur'd,

That so he might recover what was lost. 32

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET

First Keep My lord, your loving nephew now is come Mor Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he
come?

Plan Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late despoiled Richard, comes 36

Mor Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp

O! tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss 40
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,

Why didst thou say of late thou wert despoil'd?
Plan First, lean thine aged back against mine arm,

And in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease. 44

This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me,
Among which terms he us'd a lavish tongue

And did upbraid me with my father's death 48
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet, 52

And for alliance sake, declare the cause

My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head

Mor That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth 56

Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant and cannot guess. 60

Mor I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done
Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king,

Depos'd his nephew Richard, Edward's son, 64
The first-begotten, and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent

During whose reign the Percies of the North,
Finding his usurpation most unjust, 68

Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this

Was, for that—young King Richard thus re-mov'd,

Leaving no heir begotten of his body— 72
I was the next by birth and parentage,
For by my mother I deriv'd am

From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son
To King Edward the Third, whereas he 76

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree, Being but fourth of that heroic line.

But mark as, in this haughty great attempt
They labour'd to plant the rightful heir, 80

I lost my liberty, and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the Fifth

Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign, Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd 84

From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York, Marrying my sister that thy mother was,

Again in pity of my hard distress
Levied an army, weening to redeem 88

And have install'd me in the diadem,

But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd. 92

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor True, and thou seest that I no issue
have,

And that my fainting words do warrant death
Thou art my heir, the rest I wish thee gather 96

But yet be wary in thy studious care.
Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with
me.

But yet methinks my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny 100

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And like a mountain, not to be remov'd.

But now thy uncle is removing hence, 104
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O uncle! would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age 108 Mor Thou dost then wrong me,—as the slaughterer doth,

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill.—
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good,

Only give order for my funeral 112
And so farewell, and far be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war!

[Dies
Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage, 116
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast,
And what I do imagine let that rest.

Keepers, convey him hence, and I myself 120
Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out the body of MORTIMER

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer, Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort

And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries, 124
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress,

And therefore haste I to the parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood, 128

Or make my ill the advantage of my good.
[Exit

ACT III

SCENE I—London. The Parliament House

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and Others. GLOUCESTER offers to put up a bill. WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloucester? If thou canst accuse,

Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge, 4
Do it without invention, suddenly,

As I, with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object

Glo Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience

Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able

Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen
No, prelate, such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissention pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride

Thou art a most pernicious usurer, Froward by nature, enemy to peace,
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems

A man of thy profession and degree,
And for thy treachery, what's more manifest?

In that thou laud'st a trap to take my life
As well at London Bridge as at the Tower

Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The king, thy sov'reign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart

Win Gloucester, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply
If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,

As he will have me, how am I so poor?
Or how haps it I seek not to advance

Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?
And for dissension, who preferreth peace

More than I do, except I be provok'd?
No, my good lords, it is not that offends

It is not that that hath incens'd the duke
It is, because no one should sway but he,
No one but he should be about the king,

And that engenders thunder in his breast,
And makes him roar these accusations forth

But he shall know I am as good—Glo As good!

Thou bastard of my grandfather!
Win Ay, lordly sir, for what are you, I pray,

But one imperious in another's throne?
Glo Am I not protector, saucy priest?

Win And am not I a prelate of the church?
Glo Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,

And useth it to patronage his theft.
Win Unreverent Gloucester!

Glo Thou art reverent,
Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life

Win Rome shall remedy this.
War Roam thither then

Som My lord, it were your duty to forbear
War Ay, see the bishop be not overborne

Som Methinks my lord should be religious,
And know the office that belongs to such.

War Methinks his lordship should be humbler,

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead Som Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War State holy, or unhallow'd, what of

that?
Is not his Grace protector to the king?

Plan [Aside] Plantagenet, I see, must hold
his tongue,

Let it be said, 'Speak, surrah, when you should,

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?'
Else would I have a flogging at Winchester

K Hen Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester,

The special watchmen of our English weal,
I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,

To join your hearts in love and amity
O! what a scandal is it to our crown,

That two such noble peers as ye should jar Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell

Civil dissension is a viperous worm,
That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth

[A noise within] 'Down with the tawny coats!'
What tumult's this?

War An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the bishop's men

[A noise again within] 'Stones! Stones!'
Enter the Mayor of London, attended

May O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry, Pity the city of London, pity us!

The bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's men, Forbidden late to carry any weapon,

Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones,
And banding themselves in contrary parts

Do pelt so fast at one another's pate,
That many have their giddy brains knock'd

out
Our windows are broke down in every street,

And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops
Enter, skirmishing, the Serving-men of GLOUCESTER and WINCHESTER, with bloody pates

K Hen We charge you, on allegiance to ourselves,

To hold your slaught'ring hands, and keep the peace—

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife
First Serv Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth Sec Serv Do what ye dare, we are as resolute [Skirmish again]

Glo You of my household, leave this peevish broil,

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside

Third Serv My lord, we know your Grace to be a man

Just and upright, and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty,

And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,

To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight,

And have our bodies slaught'ring by thy foes First Serv Ay, and the very parings of our nails

Shall pitch a field when we are dead

[Skirmish again]
Glo Stay, stay, I say!

And, if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear a while

K Hen O! how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent?

Who should be pitiful if you be not?

Or who should study to prefer a peace
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War Yield, my Lord Protector, yield, Winchester, 112

Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sov'reign and destroy the realm
You see what mischief and what murder too
Hath been enacted through your enmity 116
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win He shall submit or I will never yield.
Glo Compassion on the king commands me stoop,

Or I would see his heart out ere the priest 120
Should ever get that privilege of me

War Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothened brows it doth appear 124
Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glo Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand
K Hen Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,

That malice was a great and grievous sin, 128
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?

War Sweet king! the bishop hath a kindly gird

For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent! 132
What! shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee,

Love for thy love and hand for hand I give Glo [Aside] Ay, but I fear me, with a hollow heart. 136

See here, my friends and loving countrymen,
This token serveth for a flag of truce,

Between ourselves and all our followers.
So help me God, as I dissemble not! 140

Win [Aside] So help me God, as I intend it not!

K Hen O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract!
Away, my masters! trouble us no more, 144

But join in friendship, as your lords have done
First Serv Content! I'll to the surgeon's

Sec Serv And so will I
Thrd Serv And I will see what physic the tavern affords

[Exeunt Mayor, Serving-men, &c
War Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign, 148

Which in the night of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty

Glo Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick for, sweet prince,

As if your Grace mark every circumstance, 152
You have great reason to do Richard right, Especially for those occasions

At Eltham-place I told your majesty
K Hen And those occasions, uncle, were of force 156

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is That Richard be restored to his blood.

War Let Richard be restored to his blood,
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd. 160

Win As will the rest, so willethe Winchester
K Hen If Richard will be true, not that alone,

But all the whole inheritance I give That doth belong unto the house of York, 164
From whence you spring by lineal descent

Plan Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service till the point of death

K Hen Stoop then and set your knee against my foot, 168

And, in requerdon of that duty done
I girt thee with the valiant sword of York

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York 172

Plan And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!

And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!

All Welcome, high prince, the mighty Duke of York! 176

Som [Aside] Perish, base prince, ignoble Duke of York!

Glo Now, will it best avail your majesty
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in France

The presence of a king engenders love 180
Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies

K Hen When Gloucester says the word, King Henry goes,

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes 184
Glo Your ships already are in readiness

[Flourish Exeunt all except EXETER.
Exe Ay, we may march in England or in France,

Not seeing what is likely to ensue
This late dissension grown betwixt the peers

Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love
And will at last break out into a flame

As fester'd members rot but by degree,
Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away, 192

So will this base and envious discord breed
And now I fear that fatal prophecy

Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fifth,
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe, 196

That Henry born at Monmouth should win all,
And Henry born at Windsor should lose all

Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time 200

[Exit

SCENE II — France Before Roan

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, disguised, and Soldiers dressed like countrymen, with sacks upon their backs

Joan These are the city gates, the gates of Roan,

Through which our policy must make a breach Take heed, be wary how you place your words,

Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men 4
That come to gather money for their corn.

If we have entrance,—as I hope we shall,—
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,

I'll by a sign give notice to our friends, 8
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them

First Sold Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,

And we be lords and rulers over Roan.
 Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks Guard [Within.] Qui est là? 13
Joan. Pasans, pauvres gens de France
 Poor market-folks that come to sell their corn.
Guard [Opening the gates.] Enter, go in, the market-bell is rung 16 Joan. Now, Roan, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground
 [JOAN LA PUCELLE, &c, enter the city]

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Forces

Char Saint Denis bless this happy strata-gem!
 And once again we'll sleep secure in Roan.
Bast Here enter'd Pucelle and her practisans, 20
 Now she is there how will she specify Where is the best and safest passage in?
Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower,
 Which, once discern'd, shows that her meaning is, 24
 No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE on a battlement, holding out a torch burning

Joan Behold! this is the happy wedding torch
 That joineth Roan unto her countrymen, 27
 But burning fatal to the Talbotites! [Exit Bast See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend,
 The burning torch in yonder turret stands.
Char Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
 A prophet to the fall of all our foes! 32 Alen. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends,
 Enter, and cry 'The Dauphin!' presently,
 And then do execution on the watch

[They enter the town]

Alarum. Enter TALBOT in an Excursion

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears, 36
 If Talbot but survive thy treachery
Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress, Hath wrought this helish mischief unawares,
 That hardly we escap'd the pride of France. 40
 [Exit]

Alarum. Excursions. Enter from the town, BED-FORD, brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY, and the English Forces. Then, enter on the walls, JOAN LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Others

Joan. Good morrow, gallants! Want ye corn for bread?
 I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast
 Before he'll buy again at such a rate.
 'Twas full of darnel do you like the taste? 44 Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shameless courtizan!
 I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own,

And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.
Char Your Grace may starve perhaps, before that time. 48
Bed. O! let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason!
Joan What will you do, good grey-beard?
 break a lance,
 And run a tilt at death within a chair?
Tal Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite, 52

Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours!
 Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age
 And twit with cowardice a man half dead?
Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again, 56
 Or else let Talbot perish with this shame Joan Are you so hot, sir? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace,

If Talbot do but thunder, ram will follow [TALBOT and the rest consult together God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker? 60
Tal Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field?
Joan Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,

To try if that our own be ours or no
Tal I speak not to that railing Hecate, 64
 But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest,
 Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?
Alen. Signior, no
Tal Signior, hang! base muleters of
 France! 68

Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,
 And dare not take up arms like gentlemen Joan Away, captains! let's get us from the walls,
 For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks 72 God be wi' you, my lord! we came but to tell
 you
 That we are here

[Exeunt JOAN LA PUCELLE, &c, from the Walls]

Tal And there will we be too, ere it be long,
 Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame! 76
 Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house,— Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in
 France,—
 Either to get the town again, or die,
 And I, as sure as English Henry lives, 80
 And as his father here was conqueror,
 As sure as in this late-betrayed town
 Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried,
 So sure I swear to get the town or die 84 Bur My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal But, ere we go, regard this dying prince,
 The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord,
 We will bestow you in some better place, 88
 Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me
 Here will I sit before the walls of Roan,
 And will be partner of your weal or woe 92 Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence, for once I read,

That stout Pendragon in his litter, sick,
Came to the field and vanquished his foes 96
Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts, Because I ever found them as myself

Tal Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!
Then be it so heavens keep old Bedford
safe! 100

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather we our forces out of hand,
And set upon our boasting enemy
[Exeunt all but BEDFORD and Attendants]

Alarum Excursions, in one of which, enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE and a Captain.

Cap Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste? 104

Fast Whither away! to save myself by flight
We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap What! will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast Ay,
All the Talbots in the world, to save my life

Cap Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit]

Retreat Excursions Re-enter, from the town, JOAN LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, CHARLES, &c., and exeunt, flying

Bed Now, quiet soul, depart when Heaven
please, 110

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?

They, that of late were daring with their scoffs
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried off in his char]

Alarum *Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY,
and Others*

Tal Lost, and recover'd in a day again!
This is a double honour, Burgundy 116

Yet heavens have glory for this victory!
Bur Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy

Enshrines thee in his heart, and there erects
Thy noble deeds as valour's monument 120

Tal Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep
Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What! all amott? Roan hangs her head for grief, 124

That such a valiant company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the town,

Placing therein some expert officers,
And then depart to Paris to the king, 128

For there young Henry with his nobles lie.
Bur What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy

Tal But yet, before we go, let's not forget

The noble Duke of Bedford late deceas'd, 132
But see his exequies fulfill'd in Roan

A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never sway in court,

But kings and mightiest potentates must die, 136
For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Plains near Roan.

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, ALEN-ÇON, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces

Joan Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Roan is so recovered

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied. 4

Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail,

We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd 8

Char We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no diffidence

One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.
Bast Search out thy wit for secret policies,

And we will make thee famous through the world 13

Alen We'll set thy statue in some holy place
And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint

Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our
good 16

Joan Then thus it must be, this doth Joan devise

By fair persuasions mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the Duke of Burgundy

To leave the Talbot and to follow us 20 Char Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do

that,
France were no place for Henry's warriors,

Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirp'd from our provinces 24

Alen For ever should they be expuls'd from France,

And not have title of an earldom here Joan Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end 28

[Drums heard afar off]
Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive

Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

Here sound an English march. Enter, and pass over, TALBOT and his Forces

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him. 32

A French march. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and his Forces

Now in the rearward comes the duke and his Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.

Summon a parley, we will talk with him.
[A parley]

Char A parley with the Duke of Burgundy!
Bur Who craves a parley with the Burgundy? 37

Joan The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur What sayst thou, Charles? for I am

Marching hence.
Char Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words. 40

Joan Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of

France!
Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur Speak on, but be not over-tedious
Joan Look on thy country, look on fertile France,
 And see the cities and the towns defac'd 44
 By wasting ruin of the cruel foe
 As looks the mother on her lowly babe
 When death doth close his tender dying eyes, 48
 See, see the pining malady of France,
 Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds
 Which thou thyself hast giv'n her woeful breast
 O! turn thy edged sword another way, 52
 Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help
 One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom, Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore 55
 Return thee therefore, with a flood of tears,
 And wash away thy country's stained spots
Bur Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,
 Or nature makes me suddenly relent.
Joan Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, 60 Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny
 Who join'st thou with but with a lordly nation
 That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?
 When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
 And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill, 65
 Who then but English Henry will be lord,
 And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?
 Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof,
 Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe,
 And was he not in England prisoner?
 But when they heard he was thine enemy,
 They set him free, without his ransom paid, 72
 In spite of Burgundy and all his friends
 See then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen!
 And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men.
 Come, come, return, return, thou wand'ring lord, 76
 Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.
Bur I am vanquished, these haughty words of hers
 Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
 And made me almost yield upon my knees 80
 Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!
 And lords, accept this hearty kind embrace
 My forces and my power of men are yours.
 So, farewell, Talbot, I'll no longer trust thee.
Joan Done like a Frenchman turn, and turn again! 85
Char Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh Bast And doth beget new courage in our breasts Alen Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this, 88
 And doth deserve a coronet of gold Char Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers
 And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt

SCENE IV — Paris A Room in the Palace

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER, VERNON, BASSET, and Others To them with his Soldiers, TALBOT
Tal My gracious prince, and honourable peers,
 Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
 I have a while giv'n truce unto my wars,
 To do my duty to my sovereign 4
 In sign whereof, this arm,—that hath reclaim'd
 To your obedience fifty fortresses,
 Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength, Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,— 8
 Lets fall his sword before your highness' feet, [Kneels
 And with submissive loyalty of heart, Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,
 First to my God, and next unto your Grace 12
K Hen Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester, That hath so long been resident in France?
Glo Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege
K Hen Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord! 16
 When I was young,—as yet I am not old,—
 I do remember how my father said,
 A stouter champion never handled sword
 Long since we were resolved of your truth, 20
 Your faithful service and your toil in war,
 Yet never have you tasted our reward,
 Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks,
 Because till now we never saw your face 24
 Therefore, stand up, and for these good deserts,
 We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury,
 And in our coronation take your place
 [Flourish Exeunt all but VERNON and BASSET
Ver Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea, 28
 Disgracing of these colours that I wear
 In honour of my noble Lord of York,
 Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st? 32
Bas Yes, sir as well as you dare patronage
 The envious barking of your saucy tongue Against my lord the Duke of Somerset Ver Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is Bas Why, what is he? as good a man as York. 36
Ver Hark ye, not so in witness, take ye that. [Strikes him Bas Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such That, whoso draws a sword, 'tis present death,
 Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood. 40
 But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
 I may have liberty to vengeance wrong;
 When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.
Ver Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you, 44
 And, after, meet you sooner than you would. [Exeunt

ACT IV

SCENE I—Paris A Room of State

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, WARWICK, TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and Others

Glo Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win God save King Henry, of that name the sixth.

Glo Now, Governor of Paris, take your oath,—

[Governor kneels]
That you elect no other king but him, 4
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,
And none your foes but such as shall pretend Malicious practices against his state
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God! 8 [Exeunt Governor and his Train]

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE

Fast My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,

To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your Grace from the Duke of Burgundy
Tal Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee! 13

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg,

[Plucking it off]
Which I have done, because unworthily 16
Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,

When but in all I was six thousand strong, 20
And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men, Myself, and divers gentlemen beside, 25

Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss,

Or whether that such cowards ought to wear 28
This ornament of knighthood, yea, or no?

Glo To say the truth, this fact was infamous
And ill beseeeming any common man,

Much more a knight, a captain and a leader 32 Tal When first this order was ordain'd, my

lords,
Knights of the garter were of noble birth,

Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars, 36

Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes

He then that is not furnish'd in this sort Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight, 40

Profaning this most honourable order,
And should—if I were worthy to be judge—

Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood 44

K Hen Stain to thy countrymen! thou hearest thy doom.

Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight,
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death

[Exit FASTOLFE.]

And now, my Lord Protector, view the letter 48
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy

Glo [Viewing superscription] What means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his style?

No more, but plain and bluntly, To the King!
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign? 52

Or doth this churlish superscription Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's here? I have, upon especial cause,
Mov'd with compassion of my country's wrack,

Together with the pitiful complaints 57
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,

Forsaken your pernicious faction,
And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of

France 60
O, monstrous treachery! Can this be so,

That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling guile?

K Hen What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt? 64

Glo He doth, my lord, and is become your foe

K Hen Is that the worst this letter doth contain? 68

Glo It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes

K Hen Why then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him, 72

And give him chastisement for this abuse
How say you, my lord? are you not content?

Tal Content, my liege! Yes but that I am prevented,

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd. 76

K Hen Then gather strength, and march unto him straight

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to flout his friends

Tal I go, my lord, in heart desiring still 76
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit]

Enter VERNON and BASSET

Ver Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign! 80

Bas And me, my lord, grant me the combat
too! 84

York This is my servant hear him, noble
prince! 88

Som And this is mine sweet Henry, favour
him!

K Hen Be patient, lords, and give them
leave to speak.

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom? 84

Ver With him, my lord, for he hath done
me wrong

Bas And I with him, for he hath done me
wrong

K Hen What is that wrong whereof you both complain? 88

First let me know, and then I'll answer you. 88 Bas Crossing the sea from England into

France, 92
This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,

Upbraided me about the rose I wear,
Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves 92
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth
About a certain question in the law
Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York and him, 96
With other vile and ignominious terms
In confutation of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms 100

Ver And that is my petition, noble lord
For though he seem with forged quaint conceit,
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him, 104
And he first took exceptions at this badge, Pronouncing, that the paleness of this flower
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart

York Will not this malice, Somerset, be left? 108

Som Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out,

Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it K Hen Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men,

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause, 112
Such factious emulations shall arise!
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace

York Let this dissension first be tried by fight, 116

And then your highness shall command a peace
Som The quarrel toucheth none but us alone, Betwixt ourselves let us decide it, then.

York There is my pledge, accept it, Somers-
set. 120

Ver Nay, let it rest where it began at first Bas Confirm it so, mine honourable lord

Glo Confirm it so! Confounded be your strife!

And perish ye, with your audacious prate! 124
Presumptuous vassals! are you not ashamed,
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?—
And you, my lords, methinks you do not well 128
To bear with their perverse objections,
Much less to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves

Let me persuade you take a better course. 132 Exe It grieves his highness good my lords, be friends.

K Hen Come hither, you that would be combatants.

Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause 136
And you, my lords, remember where we are,
In France, amongst a fickle wav'ring nation.

If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree, 140
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel!

Beside, what infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified 144
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers and chief nobility

Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France!

O! think upon the conquest of my father, 148
My tender years, and let us not forego
That for a trifle that was bought with blood!
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife
I see no reason, if I wear this rose, 152

[Putting on a red rose
That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York

Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both.
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,

Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd
But your discretions better can persuade

Than I am able to instruct or teach
And therefore, as we hither came in peace, 160
So let us still continue peace and love

Cousin of York, we institute your Grace
To be our regent in these parts of France

And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite 164
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot,
And like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together and digest

Your angry choler on your enemies 168
Ourself, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
After some respite will return to Calais,

From thence to England, where I hope ere
long

To be presented by your victories, 172
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but YORK, WARWICK,
EXETER, and VERNON

War My Lord of York, I promise you, the
king

Prettily, methought, did play the orator
York And so he did, but yet I like it not,

In that he wears the badge of Somerset 177 War Tush! that was but his fancy, blame him not,

I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm

York An if I wist he did,—But let it rest,
Other affairs must now be managed 181

[Exeunt YORK, WARWICK, and VERNON Exe Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice,

For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there

More rancorous spite, more furious raging
broils,

Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd
But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees

This jarring discord of nobility, 188
This shouldering of each other in the court,
This factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.

'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands,
But more, when envy breeds unkind division

There comes the rum, there begins confusion.
[Exit

SCENE II.—Before Bourdeaux
Enter TALBOT, with his Forces

Tal Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter,

Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a parley Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and Others English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth, Servant in arms to Harry King of England, 4
 And thus he would Open your city gates,
 Be humble to us, call my sov'reign yours,
 And do him homage as obedient subjects,
 And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power, 8
 But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
 You tempt the fury of my three attendants, Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing
 fire,

Who in a moment even with the earth 12
 Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
 If you forsake the offer of their love Gen Thou ominous and fearful owl of
 death,

Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge! 16
 The period of thy tyranny approacheth
 On us thou canst not enter but by death,
 For, I protest, we are well fortified,
 And strong enough to issue out and fight 20
 If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
 Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee
 On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd,

To wall thee from the liberty of fight, 24
 And no way canst thou turn thee for redress
 But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
 And pale destruction meets thee in the face
 Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
 To rive their dangerous artillery 29
 Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
 man,

Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit 32
 This is the latest glory of thy praise,
 That I, thy enemy, 'due thee withal,
 For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
 Finish the process of his sandy hour, 36
 These eyes, that see thee now well coloured, Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead

[Drum afar off]
 Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
 bell,

Sings heavy music to thy tumorous soul, 40
 And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c., from the Walls]
Tal. He fables not, I hear the enemy Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O! negligent and heedless discipline, 44
 How are we park'd and bounded in a pale,
 A little herd of England's tumorous deer,
 Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
 If we be English deer be then, in blood, 48
 Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,
 But rather moody-mad and desperate stags,
 Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
 And make the cowards stand aloof at bay 52
 Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
 And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
 right,

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight! 56
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III —Plans in Gascony

Enter YORK, with Forces to him a Messenger

York Are not the speedy scouts return'd
 again,

That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?

Mess They are return'd, my lord and give it out,

That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
 To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along, 5
 By your espials were discovered

Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
 Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux. 8

York A plague upon that villain Somerset,
 That thus delays my promised supply

Of horsemen that were levied for this siege!

Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid, 12

And I am louted by a traitor villain,

And cannot help the noble chevalier

God comfort him in this necessity!

If he miscarry, farewell wars in France. 16

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY

Lucy Thou princely leader of our English
 strength,

Never so needful on the earth of France,

Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,

Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 20

And hemm'd about with grim destruction.

To Bourdeaux, war-like duke! To Bourdeaux, York!

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's
 honour

York O God! that Somerset, who in proud
 heart 24

Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place!

So should we save a valiant gentleman

By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.

Mad ire and wrathful fury, make me weep 28

That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy O! send some succour to the distress'd lord.

York He dies we lose, I break my war-like
 word,

We mourn, France smiles, we lose, they daily
 get, 32

All along of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy Then God take mercy on brave Tal-bot's soul,

And on his son young John, whom two hours since

I met in travel toward his war-like father 36

Thus seven years did not Talbot see his son,

And now they meet where both their lives are
 done

York Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot
 have,

To bid his young son welcome to his grave? 40

Away! vexation almost stops my breath

That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.

Lucy, farewell no more my fortune can,

But curse the cause I cannot aid the man. 44

Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won
 away,

'Long all of Somerset and his delay

Lucy Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders, Sleeping neglecton doth betray to loss 49
The conquest of our scarce cold conqueror,
That ever living man of memory,
Henry the Fifth, whiles they each other cross, Lives, honours, lands, and all hurry to loss 53
[Exit

SCENE IV —Other Plains in Gascony

Enter SOMERSET, with his Army, a Captain of TALBOT'S with him.

Som It is too late, I cannot send them now
This expedition was by York and Talbot Too rashly plotted all our general force Might with a sally of the very town 4
Be buckled with the over-daring Talbot Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure York set him on to fight and die in shame, 8 That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the
name

Cap Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'ermatch'd forces forth for aid

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY

Som How now, Sir William! whither were you sent? 12

Lucy Whither, my lord? from bought and sold Lord Talbot

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions
And whiles the honourable captain there 17
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue You, his false hopes, the trust of England's
honour, 20

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman, 24
Yields up his life unto a world of odds

Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, Reigner, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default 28

Som York set him on, York should have sent him aid

Lucy And York as fast upon your Grace
exclaims,

Swearing that you withhold his levied host Collected for this expedition. 32

Som York lies, he might have sent and had the horse

I owe him little duty, and less love,
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending Lucy The fraud of England, not the force of France, 36

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot.
Never to England shall he bear his life

But dies betray'd to fortune by your strife Som Come, go, I will dispatch the horsemen straight 40

Within six hours they will be at his aid

Lucy Too late comes rescue he is ta'en or slain,

For fly he could not if he would have fled,
And fly would Talbot never, though he might 44

Som If he be dead, brave Talbot, then adieu!
Lucy His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt

SCENE V —The English Camp near Bordeaux

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son

Tal O young John Talbot! I did send for
thee

To tutor thee in stratagems of war,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd

When sapless age, and weak unable limbs 4
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair
But,—O malignant and ill-boding stars!

Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavowed danger 8

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest
horse,

And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight come, dally not, be gone

John Is my name Talbot? and am I your son? 12

And shall I fly? O! if you love my mother, Dishonour not her honourable name,

To make a bastard and a slave of me
The world will say he is not Talbot's blood 16

That basely fled when noble Talbot stood Tal Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John He that flies so will ne'er return again
Tal If we both stay, we both are sure to die

John Then let me stay, and, father, do you fly 21

Your loss is great, so your regard should be,
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me

Upon my death the French can little boast, 24
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost

Flight cannot stain the honour you have won,
But mine it will that no exploit have done

You fled for vantage everyone will swear, 28
But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear

There is no hope that ever I will stay
If the first hour I shrink and run away

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality, 32
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy

Tal Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb

Tal Upon my blessing I command thee go
John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.
John No part of him but will be shame in me

Tal Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it 40

John. Yes, your renowned name shall flight abuse it?

Tal Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly 44

Tal And leave my followers here to fight and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame John And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side 48
Than can yourself in twain divide.
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I,
For live I will not if my father die

Tal Then here I take my leave of thee, fair
son, 52
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon
Come, side by side together live and die,
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle

Alarum Excursions, wherein TALBOT'S Son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left us to the rage of France his sword Where is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy breath 4

I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from death John O! twice my father, twice am I thy
son

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done, Till with thy war-like sword, despite of fate, 8
To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date

Tal When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory Then leaden age, 12 Quicken'd with youthful spleen and war-like rage,

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee
The treful bastard Orleans,—that drew blood 16

From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood
Of thy first fight,—I soon encountered

And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed
Some of his bastard blood, and, in disgrace, 20
Bespoke him thus, 'Contaminated, base,
And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,

Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mine

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave
boy ' 24

Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue Speak, thy father's care,

Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, 28

Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?
Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead,
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O! too much folly is it, well I wot, 32
To hazard all our lives in one small boat.
If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age

By me they nothing gain an if I stay, 36
'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day
In thee thy mother dies, our household's name, My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame.

All these and more we hazard by thy stay, 40
All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away

John The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart,

These words of yours draw life-blood from my
heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
To save a paltry life and slay bright fame, 45

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fall and die!

And like me to the peasant boys of France, 48
To be shame's scorn and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot, 52
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side, 56

And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.
[Exeunt

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field

Alarum Excursions Enter Old TALBOT, wounded, led by a Servant.

Tal Where is my other life?—mine own is gone,—

O! where's your young Talbot? where is valiant John?

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee

When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,

And like a hungry lion did commence Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience, 8

But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tendering my ruin and assail'd of none,

Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart
Suddenly made him from my side to start 12

Into the clust'ring battle of the French,
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench

His overmounting spirit, and there died
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride. 16

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of Young TALBOT

Serv O, my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!

Tal Thou antick, death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, 20

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite shall 'scape mortality

O! thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd
death,

Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath, 24
Brave death by speaking whe'r he will of no, Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.

Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should
say,

Had death been French, then death had died
to-day 28

Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms.

My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. [Dies]

Alarums Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces

Char Had York and Somerset brought rescue
in

We should have found a bloody day of this Bast How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood, 35
Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!
Joan Once I encounter'd him, and thus I
said

"Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid"
But with a proud majestical high scorn,
He answer'd thus "Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglot wench." 41
So, rushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Bur Doubtless he would have made a noble
knight, 44

See, where he lies inhearsed in the arms
Of the most bloody nurser of his harms

Bast Hew them to pieces, hack their bones
asunder,

Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder 48

Char O, no! forbear, for that which we have fled

During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended a French Herald preceding

Lucy Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's
tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char On what submissive message art thou sent? 53

Lucy Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word,

We English warriors wot not what it means.
I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en, 56

And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is.

But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy Where is the great Alcides of the field,
Vahant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury? 62

Created, for his rare success in arms, Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence,

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchmfield, 64

Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,

The thrice-victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the noble order of Saint George, 68

Worthy Saint Michael and the Golden Fleece, Great marshal to Henry the Sixth

Of all his wars within the realm of France?

Joan Here is a silly stately style indeed! 72
The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath, Writes not so tedious a style as this.

Him that thou magnifiest with all these titles, Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our feet. 76

Lucy Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?
O! were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,

That I in rage might shoot them at your faces!
O! that I could but call these dead to life! 81

It were enough to fright the realm of France
Were but his picture left among you here

It would amaze the proudest of you all. 84

Give me their bodies, that I may bear them
hence,

And give them burial as becometh their worth.
Joan I think this upstart is old Talbot's
ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.
For God's sake, let him have 'em, to keep them
here 89

They would but stink and putrefy the air
Char Go, take their bodies hence

Lucy I'll bear them hence
But from their ashes shall be rear'd 92

A phoenix that shall make all France afraid Char So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein
All will be ours now bloody Talbot's slain 96

[Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I.—London A Room in the Palace

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

K Hen Have you perus'd the letters from
the pope,

The emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac?
Glo I have, my lord, and their intent is this

They humbly sue unto your excellence 4
To have a godly peace concluded of Between the realms of England and of France

K Hen How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo Well, my good lord, and as the only means 8

To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And establish quietness on every side

K Hen Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought

It was both impious and unnatural 12
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect
And surer bind this knot of amity, 16

The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,

Proffers his only daughter to your Grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry

K Hen Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are young, 21

And fitter is my study and my books

Than wanton dalliance with a paramour
Yet call the ambassadors, and, as you please, 24
So let them have their answers every one
I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with WINCHESTER, now CARDINAL BEAUFORT, and habited accordingly

Exe [Aside] What! is my Lord of Winchester install'd, 28

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then, I perceive that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,—
'If once he come to be a cardinal,' 32
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown

K Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd, and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable 36
And therefore are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace,
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France 40 Glo And for the proffer of my lord your master,

I have inform'd his highness so at large,
As—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dower,— 44
He doth intend she shall be England's queen

K Hen. [To the Ambassador] In argument and proof of which contract,

Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded, 48
And safely brought to Dover, where unshipp'd Commit them to the fortune of the sea

[Exeunt KING HENRY and Train GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and Ambassadors]

Win Stay, my lord legate you shall first receive

The sum of money which I promised 52
Should be deliver'd to his holiness

For clothing me in these grave ornaments Leg I will attend upon your lordship's leisure

Win [Aside] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow, 56

Or be inferior to the proudest peer Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive

That neither in birth or for authority
The bishop will be overborne by thee 60
I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny [Exeunt]

SCENE II—France Plains in Anyou

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, JOAN LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching

Char These news, my lord, may cheer our drooping spirits,

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt,
And turn again unto the war-like French

Alen. Then, march to Paris, royal Charles of
France, 4

And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Joan. Peace be amongst them if they turn
to us,
Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout Success unto our valiant general, 8
And happiness to his accomplices!

Char What tidings send our scouts? I prithce speak.

Scout The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one, 12
And means to give you battle presently

Char Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is

But we will presently provide for them.
Bur I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there

Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear Joan Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine,
Let Henry fret and all the world repine. 20

Char Then on, my lords, and France be fortunate! [Exeunt]

SCENE III—France Before Angiers.

Alarum Excursions Enter JOAN LA PUELLE

Joan. The regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly

Now help, ye charming spells and periapts,
And ye choice spirits that admonish me
And give me signs of future accidents 4

[Thunder]
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Fiends

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustom'd diligence to me 9

Now, ye familiar spirits, that are cull'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field

[They walk, and speak not]
O! hold me not with silence over-long 13
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood, I'll lop a member off and give it you.

In earnest of a further benefit, 16
So you do condescend to help me now

[They hang their heads]
No hope to have redress? My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads]
Cannot my body nor blood-sacrifice 20
Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?

Then take my soul, my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart]
See! they forsake me Now the time is come, 24
That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.

My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with 28
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

[Exit.]

Alarum Enter French and English fighting
JOAN LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand
JOAN LA PUCELLE is taken The French fly

York Damsel of France, I think I have you fast

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
 And try if they can gain your liberty 32
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!

See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
 As if with Circe she would change my shape

Joan Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be York O! Charles the Dauphin is a proper man,

No shape but his can please your daunt eye
Joan A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd 40
 By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!

Joan I prithee, give me leave to curse a while

York Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake [Exeunt]

Alarum Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET in his hand

Suf Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner [Gazes on her]

O fairest beauty! do not fear nor fly,
 For I will touch thee but with reverent hands

I kiss these fingers for eternal peace, 48
 And lay them gently on thy tender side

What art thou? say, that I may honour thee
Mar Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,

The King of Naples, whosoe'er thou art 52
Suf An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd

Be not offended, nature's miracle
 Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, 56
 Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings

Yet if this servile usage once offend,
 Go and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going]
 O stay! I have no power to let her pass, 60
 My hand would free her, but my heart says no

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, Twinking another counterfeited beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes 64
 Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak

I'll call for pen and ink and write my mind.
 Fie, De la Pole! disable not thyself,

Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner? 68

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?
 Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough

Mar Say, Earl of Suffolk,—if thy name be so,— 72

What ransom must I pay before I pass?
 For I perceive, I am thy prisoner

Suf [Aside] How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,

Before thou make a trial of her love? 76

Mar Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf [Aside] She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd,

She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea or no? 80

Suf [Aside] Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife,

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar I were best to leave him, for he will not hear

Suf [Aside] There all is marr'd, there lies a cooling card 84

Mar He talks at random, sure, the man is mad

Suf [Aside] And yet a dispensation may be had

Mar And yet I would that you would answer me

Suf [Aside] I'll win this Lady Margaret For whom? 88

Why, for my king tush! that's a wooden thing Mar [Overhearing him] He talks of wood

it is some carpenter

Suf [Aside] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
 And peace established between these realms. 92

But there remains a scruple in that too,
 For though her father be the King of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,
 And our nobility will scorn the match 96

Mar Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf [Aside] It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much

Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.
 Madam I have a secret to reveal 100

Mar [Aside] What though I be enthrall'd? he seems . . . night,

And will not any way dishonour me
Suf Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say

Mar [Aside] Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French, 104

And then I need not crave his courtesy Suf Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar Tush, women have been captivate ere now

Suf Lady, wherefore talk you so? 108

Mar I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid pro quo

Suf Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose

Your bondage happy to be made a queen?

Mar To be a queen in bondage is more vile Than is a slave in base servility, 112

For princes should be free
Suf And so shall you,

If happy England's royal king be free
Mar Why, what concerns his freedom unto me? 116

Suf I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,

To put a golden sceptre in thy hand
 And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my—Mar. What?

Suf His love 120
Mar I am unworthy to be Henry's wife
Suf No, gentle madam, I unworthy am
 To woo so fair a dame to be his wife
 And have no portion in the choice myself 124
How say you, madam, are you so content?
Mar An if my father please, I am content Suf Then call our captains and our colours
 forth!

And madam, at your father's castle walls 128
 We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward]

A Parley sounded Enter REIGNIER on the Walls

Suf See, Reignier, see thy daughter prisoner!
Reig To whom?

Suf To me
Reig Suffolk, what remedy?
 I am a soldier, and unapt to weep, 132
 Or to exclaim on Fortune's fickleness

Suf Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord Consent, and for thy honour, give consent,
 Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king, 136
 Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto,
 And thus her easy-held imprisonment
 Hath gam'd thy daughter princely liberty

Reig Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?
Suf Fair Margaret knows 140
 That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.
Reig Upon thy princely warrant, I descend
 To give thee answer of thy just demand

[Exit from the walls]

Suf And here I will expect thy coming 144
Trumpets sound Enter REIGNIER, below

Reig Welcome, brave earl, into our territories

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases Suf Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a
 child,

Fit to be made companion with a king 148
 What answer makes your Grace unto my suit?
Reig Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord,
 Upon condition I may quietly 152
 Enjoy mine own, the county Maine and Anjou, Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
 My daughter shall be Henry's if he please

Suf That is her ransom, I deliver her, 156
 And those two counties I will undertake
 Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy

Reig And I again, in Henry's royal name,
 As deputy unto that gracious king, 160
 Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith

Suf Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king
 [Aside] And yet, methinks, I could be well content 164

To be mine own attorney in this case
 I'll over then, to England with this news,
 And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.
 So farewell, Reignier set this diamond safe,
 In golden palaces, as it becomes 169

Reig I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
 The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.

Mar Farewell, my lord. Good wishes, praise, and prayers 172
 Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret [Going] Suf Farewell, sweet madam! but hark you,

Margaret,
 No princely commendations 'o my king?
Mar Such commendations as become a maid, 176

A virgin, and his servant, say to him Suf Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

But madam, I must trouble you again,
 No loving token to his majesty? 180

Mar Yes, my good lord, a pure unspotted
 heart,

Never yet tam'd with love, I send the king Suf And thus withal [Kisses her]

Mar That for thyself I will not so presume,
 To send such peevish tokens to a king 185

[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET]

Suf O! wert thou for myself! But Suffolk, stay,

Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth,
 There Minotaur and ugly treasons lurk 188

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise
 Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount
 And natural graces that extinguish art,

Repeat their semblance often on the seas, 192
 That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet, Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder

[Exit]

SCENE IV — Camp of the DUKE OF YORK, in Anjou

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and Others

York Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, guarded and a Shepherd

Shep Ah, Joan! this kills thy father's heart outright

Have I sought every country far and near,
 And, now it is my chance to find thee out, 4
 Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?

Ah, Joan! sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with
 thee

Joan Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
 I am descended of a gentler blood 8

Thou art no father nor no friend of mine Shep Out, out! My lords, an please you, 'tis not so,

I did beget her, all the parish knows
 Her mother liveth yet, can testify 12

She was the first fruit of my bachelorship War Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parent-age?

York This argues what her kind of life hath been

Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes. 16
Shep Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!

God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh,
 And for thy sake have I shed many a tear

Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan 20

Joan Peasant, avaunt! You have suborn'd
 this man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth
Shep 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
 The morn that I was wedded to her mother 24
 Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
 Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time Of thy nativity! I would the milk Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast, 28
 Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!
 Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field
 I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!
 Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab? 32
 O! burn her, burn her! hanging is too good

York Take her away, for she hath liv'd too
 long,

To fill the world with vicious qualities Joan First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd 36

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
 But issu'd from the progeny of kings,
 Virtuous and holy, chosen from above,
 By inspiration of celestial grace, 40
 To work exceeding miracles on earth.
 I never had to do with wicked spirits
 But you,—that are polluted with your lusts, Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents, 44
 Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices — Because you want the grace that others have,
 You judge it straight a thing impossible
 To compass wonders but by help of devils 48
 No misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been A virgin from her tender infancy, Chaste and immaculate in very thought,
 Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd, 52
 Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven

York Ay, ay away with her to execution!
War And hark ye, sirs, because she is a maid,

Spare for no fagots, let there be enow
 Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake, 56
 That so her torture may be shortened

Joan Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity, 60
 That warranteth by law to be thy privilege
 I am with child, ye bloody homicides Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
 Although ye hale me to a violent death 64

York Now, heaven forefend! the holy maid with child!

War The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought!

Is all your strict preciseness come to this?

York She and the Dauphin have been juggling 68

I did imagine what would be her refuge War Well, go to, we will have no bastards live,

Especially since Charles must father it.

Joan You are deceiv'd, my child is none of his 72

It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love

York Alençon! that notorious Machiavell!
 It dies an if it had a thousand lives

Joan O! give me leave, I have deluded you

'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd,
 But Reigmer, King of Naples, that prevail'd War A married man that's most intolerable

York Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well, 80

There were so many, whom she may accuse
War It's sign she hath been liberal and free

York And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee

Use no entreaty, for it is in vain 85

Joan Then lead me hence, with whom I leave my curse

May never glorious sun reflex his beams
 Upon the country where you make abode, 88

But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
 Environ you, till mischief and despair

Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves! [Exit, guarded] 92

York Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,

Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended

Car Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
 With letters of commission from the king

For know, my lords, the states of Christendom, Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,

Have earnestly implor'd a general peace 98
 Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French,

And here at hand the Dauphin, and his train, Approacheth to confer about some matter 102

York Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?
 After the slaughter of so many peers,

So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, 104
 That in this quarrel have been overthrown,

And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
 Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?

Have we not lost most part of all the towns, 108
 By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,

Our great progenitors had conquered?
 O! Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief

The utter loss of all the realm of France 112 War Be patient, York if we conclude a

peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants
 As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby

Enter CHARLES, attended ALENÇON, the BASTARD
 OF ORLEANS, REIGNIER, and Others

Char Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed, 116

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,

We come to be informed by yourselves
 What the conditions of that league must be York Speak, Winchester, for boiling choler chokes 120

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
 By sight of these our baleful enemies

Car Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus
 That, in regard King Henry gives consent, 124

Of mere compassion and of lenity,
 To ease your country of distressful war,

And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,
 You shall become true liegemen to his crown

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity

Alen Must he be then, as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man? 136
This proffer is absurd and reasonless

Char 'Tis known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallian territories,
And them reverenc'd for their lawful king 140
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd, Detract so much from that prerogative
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador, I'll rather keep 144
That which I have than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all

York Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret
means

Us'd intercession to obtain a league, 148
And now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king 152
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars

Reig My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract 156
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity

Alen [Aside to CHARLES] To say the truth, it is your policy

To save your subjects from such massacre 160
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility,
And therefore take this compact of a truce, Although you break it when your pleasure serves 164

War How sayst thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char It shall,
Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison. 168

York Then swear allegiance to his majesty,
As thou art knight, never to disobey
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England

[CHARLES, &c, give tokens of fealty
So, now dismiss your army when ye please, Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace [Exeunt

SCENE V—London A Room in the Palace

Enter KING HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK, GLOUCESTER and EXETER following

K Hen Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart 4
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwrack, or arrive 8

Where I may have fruition of her love
Suf Tush! my good lord, this superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise

The chief perfections of that lovely dame— 12
Had I sufficient skill to utter them—
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit

And, which is more, she is not so divine, 16
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord 21

K Hen And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume

Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glo So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd Unto another lady of esteem,

How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach? 29

Suf As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths,
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists 32
By reason of his adversary's odds
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence

Glo Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that? 36

Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel

Suf Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem, 40

And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance 43

Glo And so the Earl of Armagnac may do, Because he is near kinsman unto Charles

Exe Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower,

Where Reigners sooner will receive than give Suf A dower, my lords' disgrace not so your
king, 48

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth and not for perfect love,
Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him rich 52

So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse

Marriage is a matter of more worth
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship 56

Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed,

And therefore, lords, since he affects her most
It most of all these reasons bindeth us, 60

In our opinions she should be preferr'd
For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?

Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss, 64
And is a pattern of celestial peace

Whom should we match with Henry, being a
king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, join'd with her birth, 68

Approves her fit for none but for a king

Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit—
 More than in women commonly is seen—
 Will answer our hope in issue of a king, 72
 For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
 Is likely to beget more conquerors,
 If with a lady of so high resolve
 As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love 76 Then yield, my lords, and here conclude with
 me
 That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she K Hen Whether it be through force of your report,
 My noble lord of Suffolk, or for that 80
 My tender youth was never yet attain'd
 With any passion of inflaming love,
 I cannot tell, but this I am assur'd,
 I feel such sharp dissension in my breast, 84
 Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,
 As I am sick with working of my thoughts Take, therefore, shipping, post, my lord, to
 France,
 Agree to any covenants, and procure 88
 That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come

To cross the seas to England and be crown'd
 King Henry's faithful and anointed queen
 For your expenses and sufficient charge, 92
 Among the people gather up a tenth
 Be gone, I say, for till you do return
 I rest perplexed with a thousand cares
 And you, good uncle, banish all offence 96
 If you do censure me by what you were,
 Not what you are, I know it will excuse
 This sudden execution of my will
 And so, conduct me, where, from company
 I may revolve and ruminate my grief [Exit Glo Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EXETER Suf Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd, and thus 103
 he goes,
 As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
 With hope to find the like event in love,
 But prosper better than the Trojan did Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the 107
 king,
 But I will rule both her, the king, and realm
 [Exit

ACT I

SCENE I — London. A room of State in the Palace

Flourish of Trumpets then hautboys Enter, on one side, KING HENRY, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT, on the other, QUEEN MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK, YORK SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and Others, following

Suf As by your high imperial majesty
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace, 4
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,
In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Britaine, and Alençon,
Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops, 8

I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen 12
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent,
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd 16

K Hen Suffolk, arise Welcome, Queen
Margaret

I can express no kinder sign of love
Than this kind kiss O Lord! that lends me life, Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness! 20
For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts

Q Mar Great King of England and my gracious lord, 24

The mutual conference that my mind hath had
By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams,
In courtly company, or at my beads,
With you, mine alderhest sovereign, 28
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister

K Hen Her sight did ravish, but her grace in speech, 32

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys,
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my
love 36

All Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar We thank you all. [Flourish Suf My Lord Protector, so it please your
Grace,

Here are the articles of contracted peace 40
Between our sovereign and the French King Charles,

For eighteen months concluded by consent

Glo Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William De la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing Item, That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father — [Lets the paper fall]

K Hen Uncle, how now?

Glo Pardon me, gracious lord,
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart
And dumm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
further 56

K Hen Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on Car Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry

K Hen They please us well Lord marquess, kneel down 64

We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword Cousin of York, We here discharge your Grace from being regent

I' the parts of France, till term of eighteen months 68

Be full exquir'd Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick,

We thank you all for this great favour done, 72
In entertainment to my princely queen.

Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.]

Glo Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, 76

To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars? 80
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter a cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?

And did my brother Bedford toil his wits, 84
To keep by policy what Henry got?

Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick, Received deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself, 89

With all the learned council of the realm, Studied so long, sat in the council-house
Early and late, debating to and fro 92 How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?

And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours and these honours die?

Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war and all our counsel die?
O peers of England! shameful is this league,
Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame, 100
Blotting your names from books of memory,
Razing the characters of your renown,
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been 104

Car Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance?

For France, 'tis ours, and we will keep it still Glo Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can,
But now it is impossible we should 109

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast, Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style Agrees not with the leanness of his purse 113

Sal Now, by the death of him who died for
all,

These counties were the keys of Normandy

But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War For grief that they are past recovery
For, were there hope to conquer them again, My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears 119

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both,
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer
And are the cities, that I got with wounds, Deliver'd up again with peaceful words? 124

Mort Dieu!
York For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,

That dims the honour of this war-like isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart
Before I would have yielded to this league 128

I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and downes with their wives,
And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages 132

Glo A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France, 136

Before—
Car My Lord of Gloucester, now you grow too hot

It was the pleasure of my lord the king Glo My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind 140

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye Rancour will out proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury If I longer stay 144

We shall begin our ancient bickerings
Lordings, farewell, and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied France will be lost ere long [Exit]

Car So, there goes our protector in a rage
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy, 149

Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king
Consider lords, he is the next of blood, 152

And heir apparent to the English crown
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,

There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts, be wise and circumspect
What though the common people favour him, Calling him, 'Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester,' 160

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice,
'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!'
With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, 164
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck Why should he then protect our sovereign,

He being of age to govern of himself?
Cousin of Somerset, join you with me, 168
And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk, We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat

Car This weighty business will not brook
delay,

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently [Exit Som Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride 173

And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal
His insolence is more intolerable 176
Than all the princes in the land beside If Gloucester be displac'd, he'll be protector

Buck Or thou or I, Somerset, will be protector,
Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal 180

[Exit BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET Sal Pride went before, ambition follows
him

While these do labour for their own preferment, Behoves it us to labour for the realm

I never saw but Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, Did bear him like a noble gentleman 185
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal

More like a soldier than a man o' the church,
As stout and proud as he were lord of all, 188
Swear like a ruffian and demean himself
Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy planness, and thy housekeeping, 192

Have won the greatest favour of the commons, Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey
And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland, 196

In bringing them to civil discipline,
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert regent for our sovereign,
Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people

Join we together for the public good, 200
In what we can to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition,

And, as we may, chemish Duke Humphrey's deeds, 204

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War So God help Warwick, as he loves the
land,

And common profit of his country!

York [Aside] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause. 208

Sal Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main

War Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost!
That Maine which by main force Warwick did win,

And would have kept so long as breath did last Main chance, father, you meant, but I meant Maine, 213

Which I will win from France, or else be slain [Exit WARWICK and SALISBURY]

York Anjou and Maine are given to the French,

Paris is lost, the state of Normandy 216
Stands on a tickle point now they are gone

Suffolk concluded on the articles,
The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair
daughter 220

I cannot blame them all what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.

Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtizans,
Still revelling like lords till all be gone, 225

While as the silly owner of the goods
Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,

While all is shar'd and all is borne away, 229
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own

So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue
While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland 233

Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood
As did the fatal brand Althæa burn'd

Unto the prince's heart of Calydon. 236
Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!

Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come when York shall clam his own,
And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts 241

And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit. 244

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,

Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.

Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve Watch thou and wake when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state,

Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love, 252
With his new bride and England's dear-bought

queen,
And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars

Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose, With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd, 256

And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster,

And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the
crown,

Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit]

SCENE II.—The Same A Room in the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER's HouseEnter GLOUCESTER and his DUCHESSDuch Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd cornHanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,As frowning at the favours of the world? 4
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem Enchas'd with all the honours of the world? 8
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold
What! is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine, 12And having both together heav'd it up, We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our sight so low
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.Glo O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord, 17
Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world! 21
My troublous dream this night doth make me sad*Duch* What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,Was broke in twain, by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the cardinal,
And on the pieces of the broken wand 28
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset,And William De la Pole, first Duke of Suffolk
This was my dream what it doth bode, God knows*Duch* Tut! this was nothing but an argument 32That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke Methought I sat in seat of majesty 36In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are crown'd,

Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me,

And on my head did set the diadem. 40

Glo Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outrightPresumptuous dame! ill-nurtur'd Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, belov'd of him? 44
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband and thyself 48
From top of honour to disgrace's feet?Away from me, and let me hear no more Duch What, what, my lord! are you so cholericWith Eleanor, for telling but her dream? 52
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd*Glo* Nay, be not angry, I am pleas'd again*Enter a MessengerMess* My Lord Protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure 56You do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's,
Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk Glo I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?Duch Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently 60*[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Messenger]*Follow I must, I cannot go before, While Gloucester bears this base and humble mindWere I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks
And smooth my way upon their headless necks,
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in Fortune's pageant
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not, man, 68

We are alone, here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUMEHume Jesus preserve your royal majesty!Duch What sayst thou? majesty! I am but Grace*Hume* But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice, 72Your Grace's title shall be multiplied Duch What sayst thou, man? hast thou as yet conferr'dWith Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer? 76
And will they undertake to do me good?Hume This they have promised, to show your highnessA spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions 80
As by your Grace shall be propounded him*Duch* It is enough I'll think upon the questionsWhen from Saint Alban's we do make return
We'll see these things effected to the full 84
Here, Hume, take this reward, make merry, man,

With thy confed'rates in this weighty cause

[Exit Hume]
Hume Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold,

Marry and shall But how now, Sir John Hume! 88

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum
The business asketh silent secrecyDame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil 92Yet have I gold flies from another coast
I dare not say from the rich cardinal

And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk,

Yet I do find it so for, to be plain, 96
 They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,
 Have hired me to undermine the duchess
 And buzz these conjurations in her brain
 They say, 'A crafty knave does need no broker,' Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near To call them both a pair of crafty knaves
 Well, so it stands, and thus, I fear, at last 104
 Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wrack,
 And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall
 Sort how it will I shall have gold for all. [Exit

SCENE III.—The Same A Room in the Palace

Enter three or four Petitioners, PETER, the Armourer's man, being one

First Pet My masters, let's stand close my Lord Protector will come this way by and by,
 and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

Sec Pet Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN MARGARET

First Pet Here a' comes, methinks, and the queen with him I'll be the first, sure

Sec Pet Come back, fool! this is the Duke of Suffolk and not my Lord Protector

Suf How now, fellow! wouldst anything
 with me? 12

First Pet I pray, my lord, pardon me I took ye for my Lord Protector

Q Mar [Glancing at the Superscriptions] To my Lord Protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them what is thine?

First Pet Mine is, an't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, my wife and all, from me 21

Suf Thy wife too! that is some wrong indeed.
 What's yours? What's here? Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford! How now, sir knave! 25

Sec Pet Alas! sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township

Peter [Presenting his petition] Against my master, Thomas Horner for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q Mar What sayst thou? Did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown? 32

Peter That my master was? No, forsooth my master said that he was, and that the king was an usurper

Suf Who is there? 36

Enter Servants

Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently We'll hear more of your matter before the king

[Exit Servants with PETER]

Q Mar And as for you, that love to be protected 40
 Under the wings of our protector's grace,

Begin your suits anew and sue to him.

[Tears the petitions]

Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go

All Come, let's be gone 44

[Exit Petitioners] Q Mar My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashion of the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And thus the royalty of Albion's king? 48

What! shall King Henry be a pupil still

Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke? 52

I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours

Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,

I thought King Henry had resembled thee 56

In courage, courtship, and proportion

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads,

His champions are the prophets and apostles,

His weapons holy saws of sacred writ, 61

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.

I would the college of the cardinals 64

Would choose him pope, and carry him to

Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head

That were a state fit for his holiness

Suf Madam, be patient, as I was cause 68

Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your Grace's full content

Q Mar Beside the haught protector, have 72

we Beaufort

The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham, 76

And grumbling York, and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the king

Suf And he of these that can do most of all

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils 76

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers

Q Mar Not all these lords do vex me half 80

so much

As that proud dame, the Lord Protector's wife

She sweeps it through the court with troops of 80

ladies,

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's 84

wife.

Strangers in court do take her for the queen.

She bears a duke's revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scorns our poverty 84

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?

Contemptuous base-born callot as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day

The very train of her worst wearing gown 88

Was better worth than all my father's lands,

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf Madam, myself have him d a bush for 92

her,

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds 96

That she will list to listen to the lays,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest, and, madam, list to me, 96

For I am bold to counsel you in this.

Although we fancy not the cardinal,

Yet must we join with him and with the lords
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace
For the Duke of York, this late complaint Take but little for his benefit For ye, we'll weed them all at last,
You yourself shall steer the happy helm

Enter KING HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET, DUKE and DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK

K Hen For my part, noble lords, I care not which, 104

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me
York If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deny'd the regentship
Som If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent, I will yield to him. 109

War Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no,

Dispute not that York is the worthier
Car Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak 112

War The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick

War Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Sci Peace, son! and show some reason, Buckingham, 116

Why Somerset should be prefer'd in this Q Mar Because the king, forsooth, will have it so

Glo Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure these are no women's matters 120

Q Mar If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be protector of his excellence?

Glo Madam, I am protector of the realm,
And at his pleasure will resign my place. 124

Suf Resign it then and leave thine insolence
Since thou wert king,—as who is king but thou?—

The commonwealth hath daily run to wrack,
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas,
And all the peers and nobles of the realm 129
Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty

Car The commons hast thou rack'd, the clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions. 132

Som Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire

Have cost a mass of public treasury
Buck Thy cruelty in execution

Upon offenders hath exceeded law, 136
And left thee to the mercy of the law

Q Mar Thy sale of offices and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great,
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit GLOUCESTER. The QUEEN drops her fan.

Give me my fan what, minion! can ye not?

[Giving the DUCHESS a box on the ear
I cry you mercy, madam, was it you?

Duch Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-woman

Could I come near your beauty with my nails
I'd set my ten commandments in your face 145

K Hen Sweet aunt, be quiet, 'twas against her will.

Duch Against her will! Good king, look to't in time,

She'll hamper thee and dandle thee like a baby

Though in this place most master wear no breeches, 149

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreveng'd
[Exit

Buck Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds

She's tickled now, her fume can need no spurs, She'll gallop far enough to her destruction.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo Now, lords, my choler being over-blown
With walking once about the quadrangle, 156

I come to talk of commonwealth affairs
As for your spiteful false objections,

Prove them, and I lie open to the law
But God in mercy so deal with my soul 160

As I in duty love my king and country!
But to the matter that we have in hand,

I say, my sov'reign, York is meepest man
To be your regent in the realm of France 164

Suf Before we make election, give me leave
To show some reason, of no little force,

That York is most unmeet of any man.
York I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet 168

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride, Next, if I be appointed for the place,

My Lord of Somerset will keep me here,
Without discharge, money, or furniture, 172

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.
Last time I danc'd attendance on his will

Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost War That can I witness, and a fouler fact

Did never traitor in the land commit. 177 Suf Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of SUFFOLK, bringing in HORNER and PETER

Suf Because here is a man accus'd of treason 180

Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself!
York Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

K Hen What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?

Suf Please it your majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his master of high treason 185

His words were these that Richard, Duke of York,

Was rightful heir unto the English crown,
And that your majesty was an usurper. 188

K Hen Say, man, were these thy words?
Hor An t shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain 192
Pet By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour York Base dunghill villain and mechanical, I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech I do beseech your royal majesty 198
 Let him have all the rigour of the law
Hor Alas! my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words My accuser is my prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me I have good witness of this therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation
K Hen Uncle, what shall we say to this in law? 207

Glo This doom, my lord, if I may judge Let Somerset be regent o'er the French, Because in York this breeds suspicion, And let these have a day appointed them For single combat in convenient place, 212
 For he hath witness of his servant's malice This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom

K Hen Then be it so My Lord of Somerset, We make your Grace lord regent o'er the French. 216

Som I humbly thank your royal majesty
Hor And I accept the combat willingly Pet Alas! my lord, I cannot fight for God's sake, pit/ my case! the spite of man prevaileth against me O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow O Lord, my heart!

Glo Surrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd 224

K Hen Away with them to prison, and the day

Of combat shall be the last of the next month. Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.
 [Exeunt]

SCENE IV — The Same The DUKE OF GLOUCESTER's Garden

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE

Hume Come, my masters, the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises

Boling Master Hume, we are therefore provided Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms? 5

Hume Ay, what else? fear you not her courage

Boling I have heard her reported to be a woman of invincible spirit but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft while we be busy below, and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth, John Southwell, read you, and let us to our work.

Enter DUCHESS aloft, HUME following
Duch Well said, my masters, and welcome all. 16
 To this gear the sooner the better
Boling Patience, good lady, wizards know their times Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
 The time of night when Troy was set on fire, 20
 The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,
 And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,
 That time best fits the work we have in hand
 Madam, sit you, and fear not whom we raise
 We will make fast within a hallow'd verge 25 [Here they perform the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle BOLINGBROKE, or SOUTHWELL reads, Conjuro te, &c It thunders and lightens terribly, then the Spirit riseth
Spr Asdum
M Jourd Asmath!
 By the eternal God, whose name and power 28
 Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask,
 For till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence Spr Ask what thou wilt. That I had said and done!
Boling First, of the king what shall of him become? 32
Spr The Duke yet lives that Henry shall depose,
 But him outlive, and die a violent death
 [As the Spirit speaks, SOUTHWELL writes the answers Boling What fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
Spr By water shall he die and take his end Boling What shall befall the Duke of Somerset? 37
Spr Let him shun castles
 Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
 Than where castles mounted stand 40
 Have done, for more I hardly can endure Boling Descend to darkness and the burning lake!
 False fiend, avoid!
 [Thunder and lightning Spirit descends.
 Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM, hastily, with their Guards, and Others
York Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash. 44
 Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an inch.
 What! madam, are you there? the king and commonweal
 Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains
 My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, 48
 See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.
Duch Not half so bad as thine to England's king, Injurious duke, that threat'st where is no cause.
Buck True, madam, none at all. What call'st you this? [Showing her the papers.
 Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close

And kept asunder You, madam, shall with us
Stafford, take her to thee —

[Exeunt above, DUCHESS and HUME guarded]

We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming
All, away!

[Eveunt SOUTHWELL, BOLINGBROKE, &c, guarded]

York Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd her well

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!
Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ
What have we here?

*The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose,
But him outlive, and die a violent death*
Why, this is just

Aio te, Æacida, Romanos vincere posse
Well, to the rest

*Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
By water shall he die and take his end*

*What shall be the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shun castles*

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains

I than where castles mounted stand Come, come, my lords, these oracles

Are hardly attain'd, and hardly understood
The king is now in progress towards Saint Alban's,

With him, the husband of this lovely lady Thither go these news as fast as horse can carry
them,

A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector Buck. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York,

To be the post, in hope of his reward
York At your pleasure, my good lord Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Serving-man.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick

To sup with me to-morrow night Away!

[Flourish Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I — St Alban's.

Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers, hollaing

Q Mar Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day
Yet by your leave, the wind was very high,
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out

K Hen But what a point, my lord, your falcon made,

And what a pitch she flew above the rest!

To see how God in all his creatures works!
Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high

Suf No marvel, an it like your majesty,
My Lord Protector's hawks do tower so well,
They know their master loves to be aloft,

And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch Glo My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind

That mounts no higher than a bird can soar Car I thought as much, he'd be above the clouds

Glo Ay, my Lord Cardinal, how think you by that?

Were it not good your Grace could fly to heaven?

K Hen The treasury of everlasting joy Car Thy heaven is on earth, thine eyes and
thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart, Pernicious protector, dangerous peer,

That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal!

Glo What! cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantane animus celestibus ira?
Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hude such malice,

With such holiness can you do it?

Suf No malice, sir, no more than well becomes

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer

Glo As who, my lord?

Suf Why, as you, my lord,
An't like your lordly lord protectorship

Glo Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence

Q Mar And thy ambition, Gloucester

K Hen I prithee, peace,
Good queen, and whet not on these furious peers,

For blessed are the peacemakers on earth
Car Let me be blessed for the peace I make Against this proud protector with my sword!

Glo [Aside to the CARDINAL] Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that!

Car [Aside to GLOUCESTER] Marry, when thou dar'st

Glo [Aside to the CARDINAL] Make up no factious numbers for the matter,

In thine own person answer thy abuse

Car [Aside to GLOUCESTER] Ay, where thou dar'st not peep an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the grove

K Hen How now, my lords!

Car Believe me, cousin Gloucester,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,

We had had more sport [Aside to GLOUCESTER] Come with thy two-hand sword

Glo True, uncle

Car Are you advis'd? [Aside to GLOUCESTER] the east side of the grove

Glo [Aside to the CARDINAL] Cardinal, I am with you

K Hen Why, how now, uncle Gloucester!

Glo Talking of hawking, nothing else, my
lord —

[Aside to the CARDINAL] Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown

For this or all my fence shall fail

Car [Aside to GLOUCESTER] Medice teipsum
Protector, see to't well, protect yourself

K Hen The winds grow high, so do your stomachs, lords

How irksome is this music to my heart!

When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife

Enter One, crying, 'A Miracle'

Glo What means this noise?
Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim? 60

One A miracle! a miracle!

Suf Come to the king, and tell him what miracle

One Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine

Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight,
A man that ne'er saw in his life before 65

K Hen Now, God be praised, that to believing souls

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's, and his Brethren, and SIMPCOX, borne between two persons in a chair, his Wife and a great multitude following

Car Here comes the townsmen on procession,
To present your highness with the man 69

K Hen Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,

Although by his sight his sin be multiplied
Glo Stand by, my masters, bring him near 72

His highness' pleasure is to talk with him
K Hen Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,

That we for thee may glorify the Lord What! hast thou been long blind, and now 76

restor'd?

Simp Born blind, an't please your Grace Wife Ay, indeed, was he Suf What woman is this?

Wife His wife, an't like your worship 80

Glo Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told

K Hen Where wert thou born?
Simp At Berwick in the north, an't like 84

your Grace
K Hen Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done

Q Mar Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine? 88

Simp God knows, of pure devotion, being call'd

A hundred times and oft'ner in my sleep,
By good Saint Alban who said, 'Simpcox, come,

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee' Wife Most true, forsooth, and many time 93 and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so

Car What! art thou lame?
Simp Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf How cam'st thou so?
Simp A fall off of a tree 96

Wife A plum-tree, master
Glo How long hast thou been blind?

Simp O! born so, master
Glo What! and wouldst climb a tree?

Simp But that in all my life, when I was a youth

Wife Too true, and bought his climbing very dear 100

Glo Mass, thou lov'dst plums well that wouldst venture so

Simp Alas! master, my wife desir'd some damsons,

And made me climb with danger of my life
Glo A subtle knave! but yet it shall not 104

serve
Let me see thine eyes wink now now open them

In my opinion yet thou seest not well
Simp Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban Glo Sayst thou me so? What colour is this cloak of? 108

Simp Red, master, red as blood Glo Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp Black, forsooth, coal-black as jet K Hen Why then, thou know'st what colour 112 jet is of?

Suf And yet, I think, jet did he never see

Glo But cloaks and gowns before this day a many Wife Never, before this day, in all his life

Glo Tell me, sirrah, what's my name? 116

Simp Alas! master, I know not.
Glo What's his name?

Simp I know not.
Glo Nor his? 120

Simp No, indeed, master
Glo What's thine own name?

Simp Saunderson Simpcox, an if it please you, master

Glo Then, Saunderson, sit there, the lyngest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle, and would ye not think that cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp O, master, that you could! 133

Glo My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beards in your town, and things called whips? 136

May Yes, my lord, if it please your Grace Glo Then send for one presently

May Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant]

Glo Now fetch me a stool hither by and by [A stool brought out] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away 144

Simp Alas! master, I am not able to stand alone

You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, and a Beadle with a whip

Glo Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool. 149

Bead I will, my lord. Come on, surrah, off with your doublet quickly

Sump Alas! master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand 153

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away and the people follow and cry, 'A miracle!'

K Hen O God! seest thou this, and bear'st so long?

Q Mar It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glo Follow the knave, and take thus drab
away 156

Wife Alas! sir, we did it for pure need

Glo Let them be whipp'd through every market town

Till they come to Berwick, from whence they came [Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c

Car Duke Humphrey has done a miracle
to-day 160

Suf True, made the lame to leap and fly
away

Glo But you have done more miracles than I,
You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

K Hen What tidings with our cousin Buckingham? 164

Buck Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent,
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife, 168

The ringleader and head of all this rout,
Have practis'd dangerously against your state,

Dealing with witches and with conjurers
Whom we have apprehended in the fact, 172

Raising up wicked spirits from under-ground,
Demanding of King Henry's life and death,

And other of your highness' privy council,
As more at large your Grace shall understand

Car And so, my Lord Protector, by this means 177

Your lady is forthcoming yet at London.
This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge,

"Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict
my heart 181

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers,
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee, 184

Or to the meanest groom.

K Hen O God! what mischiefs work the wicked ones,

Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby Q Mar Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest,

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,
How I have lov'd my king and commonweal,

And, for my wife, I know not how it stands.
Sorry I am to hear what I have heard 192

Noble she is, but if she have forgot Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such

As, like to pitch, defile nobility,

I banish her my bed and company, 196

And give her, as a prey, to law and shame,

That hath dishonour'd Gloucester's honest
name

K Hen Well, for this night we will repose us here

To-morrow toward London back again, 200

To look into this business thoroughly,
And call these foul offenders to their answers,

And poise the cause in justice' equal scales, Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails [Flourish Exeunt

SCENE II — London. The DUKE OF YORK'S Garden

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK

York Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave,
In this close walk to satisfy myself,

In craving your opinion of my title, 4
Which is infallible to England's crown

Sal My lord, I long to hear it at full War Sweet York, begin, and if thy claim be

good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command. 8

York Then thus
Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons

The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales,

The second, William of Hatfield, and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence, next to whom 13

Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster,
The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York,

The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, 16

William of Windsor was the seventh and last Edward the Black Prince died before his father,

And left behind him Richard, his only son,
Who after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as king, 20

Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king,

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came, 25

And him to Pomfret, where as all you know, Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously

War Father, the duke hath told the truth,
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York Which now they hold by force and not by right,

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd. 32

Sal But William of Hatfield died without an heir

York The third son, Duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue, Philippe a daughter, Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March 36

Edmund had issue Roger, Earl of March

Roger had issue Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,
As I have read, laid claim unto the crown, 40
And but for Owen Glendower, had been king,
Who kept him in captivity till he died.
But, to the rest

York His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown, 44
Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge, who was son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son

By her I claim the kingdom she was heir
To Roger, Earl of March, who was the son 48
Of Edmund Mortimer, who married Philippe, Sole daughter unto Lionel, Duke of Clarence
So, if the issue of the eldest son

Succeed before the younger, I am king 52 War What plain proceeding is more plain than this?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,

The fourth son, York claims it from the third Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign 56

It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.

Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together
And in this private plot be we the first 60

That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his birthright to the crown

Both Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!

York We thank you, lords! But I am not your king 64

Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster,

And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy 68

Do you as I do in these dangerous days,
Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,

At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham and all the crew of them, 72

Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey

'Tis that they seek, and they, in seeking that Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy 76

Sal My lord, break we off, we know your mind at full

War My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick

Shall one day make the Duke of York a king York And, Nevil, this I do assure myself,

Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England but the king 80

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY, the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard

K Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife.

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great—

Receive the sentence of the law for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death.
You four, from hence to prison back again,
From thence, unto the place of execution
The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes, 7

And you three shall be strangled on the gallows
You, madam, for you are more nobly born,

Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,

Live in your country here, in banishment, 12
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man

Duch. Welcome is banishment, welcome were my death.

Glo Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judg'd thee 15

I cannot justify whom the law condemns — [Exeunt the DUCHESS, and the other Prisoners, guarded]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief
Ah, Humphrey! this dishonour in thine age

Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go,

Sorrow would solace and mine age would ease
K Hen Stay, Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester ere thou go,

Give up thy staff. Henry will to himself Protector be, and God shall be my hope, 24

My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet
And go in peace, Humphrey, no less beloved

Than when thou wert protector to thy king
Q Mar I see no reason why a king of years 28

Should be to be protected like a child
God and King Henry govern England's helm!

Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm
Glo My staff! here, noble Henry, is my staff 32

As willingly do I the same resign
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine,

And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it
As others would ambitiously receive it 36

Farewell, good king! when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne.

[Exit]
Q Mar Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen,

And Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, scarce himself, 40

That bears so shrewd a maim two pulls at once,

His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off,
This staff of honour raght there let it stand,

Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand. 44
Suf Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays,

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days
York Lords, let him go Please it your majesty

This is the day appointed for the combat, 48
And ready are the appellant and defendant.

The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q Mar Ay, good my lord, for purposely therefore 52

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K Hen O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit Here let them end it, and God defend the right!
York I never saw a fellow worse bested, 56
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his Neighbours drinking to him so much that he is drunk, and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it a drum before him on the other side, PETER with a drum and a sand-bag, and Prentices drinking to him

First Neigh Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough. 61

Sec Neigh And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco

Thrd Neigh And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour drink, and fear not your man

Hor Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all, and a fig for Peter! 68

First Pren Here, Peter, I drink to thee, and be not afraid

Sec Pren Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master fight for credit of the prentices 72

Peter I thank you all drink, and pray for me, I pray you, for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer and here, Tom, take all the money that I have O Lord bless me! I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already 80

Sal Come, leave your drinking and fall to blows. Surrah, what's thy name?

Peter Peter, forsooth

Sal Peter! what more? 84

Peter Thump

Sal Thump! then see thou thump thy master well

Hor Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen, and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow! 94

York Dispatch this knave's tongue begins to double

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants [Alarum They fight, and PETER strikes down his Master

Hor Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason [Dies

York Take away his weapon Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way

Peter O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter! thou hast prevailed in right!

K Hen Go, take hence that traitor from our sight, 104

For by his death we do perceive his guilt
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,

Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully 108

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward [Sound a flourish Exeunt

SCENE IV — The Same A Street

Enter GLOUCESTER and Serving-men, in mourning cloaks

Glo Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud,

And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet 4
Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv Ten, my lord

Glo Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess Uneath may she endure the flinty streets, 8
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook

The abject people, gazing on thy face
With envious looks still laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets

But, soft! I think she comes, and I'll prepare My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries 16

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, with papers pinned upon her back, in a white sheet, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand SIR JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers

Serv So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff

Glo No, stir not, for your lives, let her pass by Duch Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too Look! how they gaze 20

See! how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks,

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame, 24
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine!

Glo Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this grief
Duch Ay, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself,

For whilst I think I am thy wedded wife, 28
And thou a prince, protector of this land,

Methinks I should not thus be led along,
Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back,

And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice 32
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans

The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh,

And bid me be advised how I tread 36
Ah, Humphrey! can I bear this shameful yoke?

Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world,
Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?

No, dark shall be my light, and night my day,
To think upon my pomp shall be my hell 41

Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife,

And he a prince and ruler of the land
 Yet so he rul'd and such a prince he was 44
 As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess,
 Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
 To every idle rascal follower
 But be thou mild and blush not at my shame,
 Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will,
 For Suffolk, he that can do all in all 51
 With her that hateth thee, and hates us all,
 And York, and impious Beaufort, that false
 pries
 Have all him d' bushes to betray thy wings
 And fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle
 thee
 But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd, 56
 Nor never seek prevention of thy foes
Glo Ah, Nell! forbear thou'ast all awry,
 I must offend before I be attainted,
 And had I twenty times so many foes 60
 And each of them had twenty times their power,
 All these could not procure me any scath,
 So long as I am loyal, true, and crumeless Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach? 64
 Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
 But I in danger for the breach of law
 Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell
 I pray thee sort thy heart to patience, 68
 These few days wonder will be quickly worn

Enter a Herald

Her I summon your Grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month 72
Glo And my consent ne'er ask'd herein
 before!
 This is close dealing Well, I will be there [Exit Herald
 My Nell, I take my leave and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the king's commission 76
Sher An't please your Grace, here my commission stays,
 And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
 To take her with him to the Isle of Man Glo Must you, Sir John, protect my lady
 here? 80
Stan So am I given in charge, may't please
 your Grace
Glo Entreat her not the worse in that I pray
 You use her well The world may laugh again,
 And I may live to do you kindness if 84
 You do it her and so, Sir John, farewell.
Duch What! gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!
Glo Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak [Exeunt GLOUCESTER and Serving-men Duch Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee! 88
 For none abides with me my joy is death,
 Death, at whose name I oft have been afear'd,
 Because I wish'd this world's eternity
 Stanley, I prithee, go, and take me hence, 92
 I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
 Only convey me where thou art commanded

Stan Why, madam, that is to the Isle of
 Man,
 There to be us'd according to your state 96
Duch That's bad enough, for I am but reproach
 And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?
Stan Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady
 According to that state you shall be us'd 100
Duch Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare, Although thou hast been conduct of my shame Sher It is my office, and madam pardon
 me
Duch Ay, ay, farewell, thy office is dis-charg'd 104
 Come, Stanley, shall we go?
Stan Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,
 And go we to attire you for our journey Duch My shame will not be shifted with my sheet 108
 No, it will hang upon my richest robes,
 And show itself attire me how I can Go, lead the way, I long to see my prison
 [Exeunt

ACT III

SCENE I—The Abbey at Bury St Edmund's

Sound a sennet Enter to the Parliament, KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAU-FORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and Others
K Hen I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come
 'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now Q Mar Can you not see? or will ye not observe
 The strangeness of his alter'd countenance? 4
 With what a majesty he bears himself,
 How insolent of late he is become,
 How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself? 8
 We know the time since he was mild and affable,
 An if we did but glance a far-off look,
 Immediately he was upon his knee,
 That all the court admir'd him for submission
 But meet him now, and, be it in the morn, 13
 When everyone will give the time of day,
 He knits his brow and shows an angry eye,
 And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee, 16
 Disdaining duty that to us belongs
 Small curs are not regarded when they grin,
 But great men tremble when the lion roars,
 And Humphrey is no little man in England, 20
 First note that he is near you in descent,
 And should you fall, he is the next will mount Me seemeth then it is no policy,
 Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears, 24
 And his advantage following your decease,
 That he should come about your royal person
 Or be admitted to your highness' council
 By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts, 28

And when he please to make commotion,
 'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
 Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted,
 Suffer them now and they'll o'ergrow the garden,

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry
 The reverent care I bear unto my lord
 Made me collect these dangers in the duke
 If it be fond, call it a woman's fear,
 Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
 I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the duke
 My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York, Reprove my allegation if you can
 Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf Well hath your highness seen into this duke,

And had I first been put to speak my mind,
 I think I should have told your Grace's tale
 The duchess, by his subornation,
 Upon my life, began her devilish practices
 Or if he were not privy to those faults,
 Yet, by reputing of his high descent,
 As, next the king he was successive heir,
 And such high vaunts of his nobility,
 Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
 By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
 Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,
 And in his simple show he harbours treason.
 The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb
 No, no, my sov'reign, Gloucester is a man Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car Did he not, contrary to form of law,
 Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York And did he not, in his protectorship,
 Levy great sums of money through the realm
 For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
 By means whereof the towns each day revolted

Buck Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown,

Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey

K Hen. My lords, at once the care you have of us,

Tomow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
 Is worthy praise, but shall I speak my conscience,

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
 From meaning treason to our royal person,
 As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove.
 The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given
 To dream on evil, or to work my downfall

Q Mar Ah! what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!

Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
 For he's disposed as the hateful raven.

Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
 For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf

Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
 Take heed, my lord, the welfare of us all

Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
 Is utterly bereft you, all is lost.

K Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset but God's will be done!

York [Aside] Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,

As firmly as I hope for fertile England
 Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,

And caterpillars eat my leaves away,
 But I will remedy this gear ere long,

Or sell my title for a glorious grave

Enter GLOUCESTER

Glo All happiness unto my lord the king!
 Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long

Suf Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon,

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art
 I do arrest thee of high treason here

Glo Well, Suffolk's duke, thou shalt not see me blush,

Nor change my countenance for this arrest
 A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.

The purest spring is not so free from mud
 As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?
York 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,

 And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay,

By means whereof his highness hath lost France Glo Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

 I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,

Nor ever had one penny bribe from France
 So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,

Ay, night by night, in studying good for England,
 That doth that e'er I wrested from the king,

Or any great I hoarded to my use,
 Be brought against me at my trial-day!

No, many a pound of mine own proper store,
 Because I would not tax the needy commons,

Have I disbursed to the garrisons,
 And never ask'd for restitution

Car It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo I say no more than truth, so help me
 God!

York In your protectorship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,

That England was defam'd by tyranny Glo Why, 'tis well known that, whilst I was

protector,
 Pity was all the fault that was in me,

For I should melt at an offender's tears,
 And lowly words were ransom for their fault.

Unless it were a bloody murderer,
 Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment
 Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd

Above the felon or what trespass else Suf My lord, these faults are easy, quickly

answer'd
 But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,

Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself
 I do arrest you in his highness' name,

And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keep until your further time of trial.

K Hen My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope 139

That you will clear yourself from all suspect
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo Ah! gracious lord, these days are dangerous

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand,

Foul subornation is predominant, 145
And equity exil'd your highness' land.

I know their complot is to have my life,
And if my death might make this island happy,

And prove the period of their tyranny, 149
I would expend it with all willingness,

But mine is made the prologue to their play,
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,

Will not conclude their plotted tragedy 153 Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's

malice,
And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate,

Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart, 157

And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,

By false accuse doth level at my life 160
And you, my sov'reign lady, with the rest,

Causeless have laid disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeavour have sturr'd up

My liefe's liege to be mine enemy 164
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together,

Myself had notice of your conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life

I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt, 169

The ancient proverb will be well effected
'A staff is quickly found to beat a dog'

Car My liege, his railing is intolerable 172
If those that care to keep your royal person

From treason's secret knife and traitor's rage Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,

And the offender granted scope of speech, 176
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace

Suf Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here With ignominious words, though clerkly

couch'd,
As if she had suborned some to swear 180

False allegations to o'erthrow his state?
Q Mar But I can give the loser leave to chide Glo Far truer spoke than meant: I lose,

indeed,
Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false!

And well such losers may have leave to speak Buck He'll wrest the sense and hold us here

all day
Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure 188

Glo Ah! thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,

And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee first. 192

Ah! that my fear were false, ah! that it were,
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear

[Exeunt Attendants with GLOUCESTER.]
K Hen My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best

Do or undo, as if ourself were here 196

Q Mar What! will your highness leave the parliament?

K Hen Ay, Margaret, my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes,
My body round engirt with misery, 200

For what's more miserable than discontent?
Ah! uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see

The map of honour, truth, and loyalty,
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come

That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith,
What low'ring star now envies thy estate,

That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life? 208

Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man
wrong,

And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house, 212
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence,

And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,

And can do nought but wail her darling's loss,
Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case,

With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good,

So mighty are his vowed enemies 220
His fortunes I will weep, and, 'twixt each groan,

Say 'Who's a traitor, Gloucester he is none'
[Exit]

Q Mar Fair lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs, 224
Too full of foolish pity, and Gloucester's show

Beguilds him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers,

Or as the snake, roll'd in a flow'ring bank, 228
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a

child
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.

Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,—
And yet herein I judge mine own wit good,—

This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car That he should die is worthy policy,
And yet we want a colour for his death 236

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law
Suf But in my mind that were no policy

The king will labour still to save his life,
The commons haply rise to save his life, 240

And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy

death.
York So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf Ah! York, no man alive so fair as I.

York 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death. 245

But my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Were t not all one an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite, 249
As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector?

Q Mar So the poor chicken should be sure of death

Suf Madam, 'tis true and were't not madness, then, 252

To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who, being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over
Because his purpose is not executed. 256

No, let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege
And do not stand on quilllets how to slay him
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty, Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead, for that is good deceit 264
Which mates him first that first intends deceit.

Q Mar Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke

Suf Not resolute, except so much were done,
For things are often spoke and seldom meant,
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is mentorious,

And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word and I will be his priest 272 Car But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest
Say you consent and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner, 276
I tender so the safety of my liege

Suf Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing

Q Mar And so say I.

York And I and now we three have spoke
it, 280

It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger

Mess Great lords, from Ireland am I come
aman,

To signify that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword. 284
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime, Before the wound do grow uncurable,

For, being green, there is great hope of help Car A breach that craves a quick expedient stop! 288

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York That Somerset be sent as regent thither

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd, 291
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York No, not to lose it all, as thou hast
done 296

I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burden of dishonour home,
By staying there so long till all were lost.

Show me one scar character'd on thy skin 300
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.

Q Mar Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with No more, good York, sweet Somerset be still Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there,

Might happily have prov'd far worse than his York What! worse than nought? nay, then a shame take all

Som And in the number thee, that wishest
shame 308

Car My Lord of York, try what your fortune is

The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen
To Ireland will you lead a band of men, 312 Collected choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York I will, my lord, so please his majesty
Suf Why, our authority is his consent, 316

And what we do establish he confirms Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand

York I am content provide me soldiers,
lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs 320 Suf A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey Car No more of him, for I will deal with him

That henceforth he shall trouble us no more
And so break off, the day is almost spent

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.
York My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers, 328
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland

Suf I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York [Exeunt all except YORK]

York Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful
thoughts,

And change misdoubt to resolution 332
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art

Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born
man,

And find no harbour in a royal heart 336
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies
Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done, 341

To send me packing with a host of men
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,

Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts 344

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me
I take it kindly, yet be well assur'd

You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band, 348

I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell,

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head, 352

Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,

Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw
 And, for a minister of my intent,
 I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman,
 John Cade of Ashford, 357
 To make commotion, as full well he can,
 Under the title of John Mortimer
 In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade 360 Oppose himself against a troop of kerns, And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
 Were almost like a sharp-quill d porpentine
 And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen 364 Him caper upright like a wild Morisco,
 Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells
 Full often, like a shag-hair d crafty kern,
 Hath he conversed with the enemy, 368
 And undiscover'd come to me again,
 And given me notice of their villainies
 This devil here shall be my substitute, 371
 For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
 In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble,
 By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
 How they affect the house and claim of York
 Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured, 376
 I know no pain they can inflict upon him
 Will make him say I mov'd him to those arms Say that he thrive—as 'tis great like he will,— Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength, 380
 And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd,
 For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
 And Henry put apart, the next for me [Exit

SCENE II —Bury St Edmund's A Room in the Palace

Enter certain Murderers, hastily

First Mur Run to my Lord of Suffolk, let him know
 We have dispatch'd the duke, as he commanded
 Sec Mur O! that it were to do What have we done?
 Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter SUFFOLK

First Mur Here comes my lord Suf Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing?
 First Mur Ay, my good lord he's dead Suf Why, that's well said Go, get you to my house, 8
 I will reward you for this venturous deed.
 The king and all the peers are here at hand
 Have you laid fair the bed? is all things well, According as I gave directions? 12
 First Mur 'Tis, my good lord
 Suf Away! be gone [Exeunt Murderers

Sound trumpets Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and Others

K Hen Go, call our uncle to our presence
 straight,
 Say, we intend to try his Grace to-day, 16
 If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf I'll call him presently, my noble lord
 [Exit
 K Hen Lords, take your places and I pray you all,
 Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester Than from true evidence of good esteem, 21
 He be approv'd in practice culpable Q Mar God forbid any malice should prevail
 That faultless may condemn a nobleman! 24
 Pray God, he may acquit him of suspicion!
 K Hen I thank thee, Meg, these words content me much

Re-enter SUFFOLK

How now! why look'st thou pale? why trem-blest thou?
 Where is our uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk? 28
 Suf Dead in his bed, my lord Gloucester
 is dead
 Q Mar Marry, God forfend!
 Car God's secret judgment I did dream to-
 night
 The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word [The KING swoons Q Mar How fares my lord? Help, lords!
 the king is dead 33
 Som Rear up his body, wring him by the nose
 Q Mar Run, go, help, help! O Henry, ope
 thine eyes!
 Suf He doth revive again Madam, be patient 36
 K Hen O heavenly God!
 Q Mar How fares my gracious lord?
 Suf Comfort my sovereign! gracious Henry,
 comfort!
 K Hen What! doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?
 Came he right now to sing a raven's note, 40
 Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers,
 And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
 By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
 Can chase away the first-conceived sound? 44
 Hide not thy poison with such sugar d words Lay not thy hands on me, forbear I say Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting
 Thou baleful messenger out of my sight! 48
 Upon thy eyeballs murderous tyranny
 Sits in grim majesty to fright the world
 Look not upon me for thine eyes are wounding Yet do not go away, come, basilisk, 52
 And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight,
 For in the shade of death I shall find joy,
 In life but double death, now Gloucester's dead Q Mar Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus? 56
 Although the duke was enemy to him,
 Yet he, most Christian-like, laments his death
 And for myself, foe as he was to me,
 Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans
 Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life, 61
 I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans, Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,

- And all to have the noble duke alive 64
 What know I how the world may deem of me?
 For it is known we were but hollow friends
 It may be judg'd I made the duke away So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded, 68
 And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.
 This get I by his death. Ay me, unhappy!
 To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!
K Hen Ah! woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man. 72
Q Mar Be woe for me, more wretched than he is
 What! dost thou turn away and hide thy face?
 I am no loathsome leper, look on me 75
 What! art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?
 Be poisonous too and kill thy forlorn queen
 Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?
 Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy Erect his statua and worship it, 80
 And make my image but an alehouse sign.
 Was I for this nigh wrack'd upon the sea,
 And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
 Drove back again unto my native clime? 84
 What boded this, but well forewarning wind
 Did seem to say, 'Seek not a scorpion's nest, Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?'
 What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts 88
 And he that loos'd them forth their brazen caves,
 And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,
 Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?
 Yet Æolus would not be a murderer, 92
 But left that hateful office unto thee
 The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me, Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore
 With tears as salt as sea through thy unkind-
 ness 96
 The splitting rocks cower'd in the sinking sands,
 And would not dash me with their ragged sides, Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
 Might in thy palace perish Margaret. 100
 As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
 When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,
 I stood upon the hatches in the storm,
 And when the dusky sky began to rob 104
 My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
 I took a costly jewel from my neck,
 A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,
 And threw it towards thy land the sea receiv'd
 it, 108
 And so I wish'd thy body might my heart
 And even with this I lost fair England's view,
 And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,
 And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles
 For losing ken of Albion's wished coast. 113
 How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue—
 The agent of thy foul inconstancy—
 To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did 116
 When he to madding Dido would unfold
 His father's acts, comment'd in burning Troy!
 Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like
 him?
- Ay me! I can no more Die, Margaret! 120
 For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long Noise within Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY
The Commons press to the door War It is reported, mighty sovereign, That good Duke Humphrey trait'rously is murder'd
 By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means
 The commons, like an angry hive of bees 125
 That want their leader, scatter up and down,
 And care not who they sting in his revenge
 Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny, 128
 Until they hear the order of his death K Hen That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true,
 But how he died God knows, not Henry
 Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
 And comment then upon his sudden death 133 War That shall I do, my liege Stay, Salisbury,
 With the rude multitude till I return [WARWICK goes into an inner chamber
 SALISBURY retires
K Hen O! Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts, 136
 My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul
 Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life.
 If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
 For judgment only doth belong to thee 140
 Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
 With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
 To tell my love unto his deaf dumb trunk, 144
 And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling
 But all in vain are these mean obsequies,
 And to survey his dead and earthly image
 What were it but to make my sorrow greater?
- Re-enter WARWICK and Others bearing*
 GLOUCESTER'S body on a bed War Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body 149
K Hen That is to see how deep my grave is
 made,
 For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
 For seeing him I see my life in death 152
War As surely as my soul intends to live With that dread King that took our state upon
 him
 To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
 I do believe that violent hands were laid 156
 Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke Suf A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!
 What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?
War See how the blood is settled in his face.
 Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, 161
 Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
 Being all descended to the labouring heart,
 Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
 Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy,
 Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth 166
 To blush and beautify the cheek again.

But see, his face is black and tull of blood,
His eyeballs further out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man,
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch d with struggling

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking, His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here,
The least of all these signs were probable

Suf Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection,
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers

War But both of you were vow d Duke Humphrey's foes,

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep
'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend,
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy

Q Mar Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,

Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy

Q Mar Are you the butcher, Suffolk?
where's your knife?

Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?

Suf I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping
men,

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET,
and Others.

War What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Q Mar He dares not calm his contumelious
spirit,

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times

War Madam, be still, with reverence may I
say,

For every word you speak in his behalf is slander to your royal dignity

Suf Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!

If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed

Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was grafted with crab-tree slip, whose fruit thou art,

And never of the Nevils' noble race.

War But that the guilt of murder bucklers
thee,

And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sov reign's presence makes me mild,

I would, false murd'rous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,

And say it was thy mother that thou meant st,
That thou thyself wast born in bastardy

And after all this fearful homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,

Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suf Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy
blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me War Away even now, or I will drag thee
hence

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to Duke Humphrey's
ghost.

[Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK K Hen What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted!

Thrice is he arm'd that bath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,

Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted Q Mar What noise is this? [A noise within

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn

K Hen Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence! dare you be so bold?
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury,

Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Noise of a crowd within Re-enter SALISBURY Sal [Speaking to those within] Sirs, stand apart, the king shall know your mind

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death,

Or banished fair England's territories,
They will by violence tear him from your palace

And torture him with grievous lingering death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey
died,

They say, in him they fear your highness' death,
And mere instinct of love and loyalty,

Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,

Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,

That if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge that no man should disturb your rest

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,

Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your majesty,

It were but necessary you were wak'd,
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,

The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

That they will guard you, whe'r you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is,

With whose envenomed and fatal sting,

Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
 They say, is shamefully bereft of life Commons [Within] An answer from the king my Lord of Salisbury!

Suf 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereign,
 But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
 To show how quaint an orator you are But all the honour Salisbury hath won
 Is that he was the lord ambassador,

Commons [Within] An answer from the king, or we will all break in!

K Hen Go, Salisbury, and tell them all
 from me,

I thank them for their tender loving care,
 And had I not been cited so by them,
 Yet did I purpose as they do entreat,
 For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means
 And therefore, by his majesty I swear, Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
 He shall not breathe infection in this air
 But three days longer, on the pain of death.

Q Mar O Henry! let me plead for gentle
 Suffolk

K Hen Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk!

No more, I say, if thou dost plead for him
 Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath
 Had I but said, I would have kept my word,
 But when I swear, it is irrevocable [To SUFFOLK] If after three days' space thou here be'st found

On any ground that I am ruler of,
 The world shall not be ransom for thy life Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with
 me,

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt KING HENRY, WARWICK, Lords, &c]
Q Mar Mischance and sorrow go along with you!

Heart's discontent and sour affliction
 Be playfellows to keep you company!
 There's two of you, the devil make a third,
 And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
 And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave

Q Mar Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?
Suf A plague upon them! Wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
 I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
 As curst, as harsh and horrible to hear,
 Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
 With full as many signs of deadly hate,
 As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave My tongue should stumble in mine earnest
 words,

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint,
 My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract,
 Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban

And even now my burden'd heart would break
 Should I not curse them! Poison be their drink!
 Gall, worse than gall, the damnest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!
 Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks!
 Their softest touch as smart as lizard's stings!
 Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,
 And boding screech-owls make the concert full!
 All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Q Mar Enough, sweet Suffolk, thou torment
 st thyself,

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
 Or like an over-charged gun, recoil,

And turn the force of them upon thyself Suf You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
 Well could I curse away a winter's night,
 Though standing naked on a mountain top,
 Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
 And think it but a minute spent in sport

Q Mar O! let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears,
 Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
 To wash away my woeful monuments
 O! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,

[Kisses his hand]
 That thou mightst think upon these by the seal, Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief,
 'Tis but surmisd whiles thou art standing by,
 As one that surfeits thinking on a want

I will repeat thee, or, be well assur'd, Adventure to be banished myself,
 And banished I am, if but from thee

Go, speak not to me, even now be gone
 O! go not yet Even thus two friends condemn'd

Embrace and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves, Loather a hundred times to part than die
 Yet now farewell, and farewell life with thee!

Suf Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished, Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee
 'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence,
 A wilderness is populous enough,

So Suffolk had thy heavenly company
 For where thou art, there is the world itself,
 With every several pleasure in the world,

And where thou art not, desolation
 I can no more live thou to joy thy life

Myself to joy in nought but that thou liv'st

Enter VAUX

Q Mar Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I prithee?

Vaux To signify unto his majesty
 That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death,

For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
 That makes him gasp and stare, and catch the air,

Blaspheming God, and cursing heaven on earth
 Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
 Were by his side, sometime he calls the king,

And whispers to his pillow, as to him,

The secrets of his overcharged soul 376
And I am sent to tell his majesty
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q Mar Go tell this heavy message to the king

[Exit VAUX]

Ay me! what is this world! what news are these!
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears,
Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?

Now get thee hence the king, thou know'st, is coming 385

If thou be found by me thou art but dead
Suf If I depart from thee I cannot live, 388

And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?

Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle babe, 392

Dying with mother's dug between its lips
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth

So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,

And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium
To die by thee, were but to die in jest, 400

From thee to die were torture more than death
O! let me stay, befall what may befall!

Q Mar Away! though parting be a fretful corsive,

It is applied to a deathful wound. 404
To France, sweet Suffolk let me hear from thee,

For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf I go
Q Mar And take my heart with thee 408

Suf A jewel, lock'd into the woeful'st cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth

Even as a split-ed bark so sunder we Thus way fall I to death

Q Mar This way for me. 412
[Exeunt severally]

SCENE III — London CARDINAL BEAUFORT'S Bedchamber

Enter KING HENRY SALISBURY WARWICK, and Others
The CARDINAL in bed Attendants with him

K Hen How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign

Car If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure

Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain 4

K Hen Ah! what a sign it is of evil life
Where death's approach is seen so terrible

War Beaufort, it is thy sov'reign speaks to thee 7

Car Bring me unto my trial when you will Died he not in his bed? where should he die?

Can I make men live where they will or no?
O! torture me no more, I will confess

Alive again? then show me where he is 12
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them Comb down his hair, look! look! it stands up-

right, 15
Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul

Give me some drink, and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him

K Hen O thou eternal Mover of the heavens!

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch, 20
O! beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul
And from his bosom purge this black despair

War See how the pangs of death do make him grin! 24

Sal Disturb him not! let him pass peaceably

K Hen Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord Cardinal if thou think'st on heaven's bliss, 27

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope
He dies and makes no sign O God, forgive him!

War So bad a death argues a monstrous life K Hen Forbear to judge, for we are sinners

all. 31
Close up his eyes and draw the curtain close

And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I — Kent The Seashore near Dover

Firing heard at Sea Then enter from a boat, a Captain, a Master a Master's-Mate, WALTER WHITMORE, and Others with them SUFFOLK disguised, and other Gentlemen, prisoners

Cap The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day

Is crept into the bosom of the sea,
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades

That drag the tragic melancholy night, 4
Who with their drowsy, slow and flagging wings

Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws

Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air
Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize, 8

For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs
Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,

Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore,
Master, this prisoner freely give I thee 12

And thou that art his mate make boot of this,
The other [Pointing to SUFFOLK], Walter Whitmore, is thy share

First Gent What is my ransom, master? let me know

Master A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head 16

Mate And so much shall you give, or off goes yours

Cap What! think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen?
Cut both the villains' throats! for die you shall
The lives of those which we have lost in fight Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum!

First Gent I'll give it, sir, and therefore spare my life

Sec Gent And so will I, and write home for it straight. 24

Whit I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,

[To SUFFOLK] And therefore to revenge it shalt thou die,

And so should these if I might have my will Cap Be not so rash take ransom, let him live 28

Suf Look on my George, I am a gentleman
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid

Whit And so am I, my name is Walter Whitmore

How now! why start'st thou? what! doth death affright? 32

Suf Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death

A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Water I should die 35

Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded,
Thy name is—Gaultier, being rightly sounded

Whit Gaultier, or Walter, which it is I care not,

Never yet did base dishonour blur our name
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot 40

Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge, Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd

And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!
[Lays hold on SUFFOLK]

Suf Stay, Whitmore, for thy prisoner is a prince, 44

The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole
Whit The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suf Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke

Jove sometimes went disguis'd, and why not I?
Cap But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be. 49

Suf Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's blood,

The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom. 52

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrup?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

How often hast thou waited at my cup, 56
Fed from my trencher kneel'd down at the board,

When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?
Remember it and let it make thee crest-fall'n,

Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride 60
How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood

And duly waited for my coming forth?
This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,

And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue
Whit Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain? 65

Cap First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side 68

Strike off his head
Suf Thou dar'st not for thy own

Cap Yes, Pole Pole!

Suf Pool! Sir Pool! lord! Ay, kennel, puddle, sink, whose filth and dirt Troubles the silver spring where England drinks

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth 73

For swallowing the treasure of the realm
Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground,

And thou, that smil'dst at good Duke Humphrey's death, 76

Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again

And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
For daring to affy a mighty lord 80

Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem

By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd 84

With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart
By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,

The false revolting Normans thorough thee
Disdam to call us lord, and Picardy 88

Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain, 92

As hating thee, are rising up in arms
And now the house of York, thrust from the crown

By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny, 96

Burns with revenging fire, whose hopeful colours
Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,

Under the which is writ Invitus nubibus
The commons here in Kent are up in arms, 100

And to conclude, reproach and beggary
Is crept into the palace of our king,

And all by thee Away! convey him hence Suf O! that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder 104

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges.
Small things make base men proud this villain here,

Being captain of a pannace threatens more Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate 108

Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob bee-hives

It is impossible that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself 111

Thy words move rage, and not remorse in me
I go of message from the queen to France,

I charge thee, waft me safely cross the Channel Cap Walter!

Whit Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death 115

Suf Gelusid tumor occupat artus 'tis thee I fear

Whit Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee

What! are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?

First Gent My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair 120

Suf Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough

Us do command untaught to plead for favour Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit no rather let my head 124

Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any

Save to the God of heaven and to my king,

And sooner dance upon a bloody pole

Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom

True nobility is exempt from fear 129

More can I bear than you dare execute

Cap Hail him away, and let him talk no more

Suf Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can 132

That this my death may never be forgot

Great men oft die by vile bezonians

A Roman sworder and banditto slave

Murder'd sweet Tully Brutus bastard hand

Stab'd Julius Cæsar savage islanders 137

Pompey the Great, and Suffolk dies by pirates

[Exit with SUFFOLK WHITMORE and Others]

Cap And as for these whose ransom we have set,

It is our pleasure one of them depart 140

Therefore come you with us and let him go

[Exeunt all but first Gentleman]

Re-enter WHITMORE, with SUFFOLK'S body

Whit There let his head and lifeless body lie,

Until the queen his mistress bury it [Exit] 144

First Gent O barbarous and bloody spectacle!

His body will I bear unto the king

If he revenge it not yet will his friends,

So will the queen, that living held him dear

[Exit with the body]

SCENE II — Blackheath

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND

Geo Come, and get thee a sword though made of a lath they have been up these two days

John They have the more need to sleep now

then 5

Geo I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it

John So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.

Well, I say it was never merry world in England

since gentlemen came up

Geo O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men 13

John The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons

Geo Nay, more, the king's council are no good workmen 17

John True, and yet it is said 'Labour in thy vocation' which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men, and therefore should we be magistrates 21

Geo Thou hast hit it, for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand

John I see them! I see them! There's

Best's son, the tanner of Wingham, — 25

Geo He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog-s-leather of John And Dick the butcher — 28

Geo Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf

John And Smith the weaver, —

Geo Argo, their thread of life is spun. 32

John Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the

Weaver and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers

Cade We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father, —

Dick [Aside] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings 37

Cade For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes — Command silence 40

Dick Silence!

Cade My father was a Mortimer —

Dick [Aside] He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer 44

Cade My mother a Plantagenet, —

Dick [Aside] I knew her well, she was a midwife

Cade My wife descended of the Lacies, — 48

Dick [Aside] She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces

Smith [Aside] But now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home 53

Cade Therefore am I of an honourable

house

Dick [Aside] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he born, under a hedge, for his father had never a house but the cage

Cade Valiant I am 60

Smith [Aside] A must needs, for beggary is valiant

Cade I am able to endure much

Dick [Aside] No question of that, for I have seen him whipped three market-days together

Cade I fear neither sword nor fire

Smith [Aside] He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof 68

Dick [Aside] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt in the hand for stealing of sheep

Cade Be brave, then for your captain is brave, and vows reformation There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny, the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops, and I will make it felony to drink small beer All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And when I am king — as king I will be, —

All God save your majesty! 80

Cade I thank you, good people there shall be no money, all shall eat and drink on my score and I will apparel them all in one livery that the/ may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord 85

Dick The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers

Cade Nay, that I mean to do Is not this a lametab' thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment! that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings, but I say, 'tis the bee's wax, for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never ruin'd own man since How no! who's there? 95

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham

Smith The clerk of Chatham he can write and read and cast account

Cade O monstrous!

Smith We took him setting of boys' copies

Cade Here's a villain! 100

Smith Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't

Cade Nay, then he is a conjurer

Dick Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand 105

Cade I am sorry for't the man is a proper man, of mine honour, unless I find him guilt-, he shall not die Come hither, surrah, I must examine thee What is thy name? 109

Clerk Emmanuel

Dick They use to write it on the top of letters 'Twill go hard with you 112

Cade Let me alone Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name 117

All He hath confessed away with him! he's a villain and a traitor

Cade Away with him! I say hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck 121

[Exeunt some with the Clerk]

Enter MICHAEL

Mich Where's our general?

Cade Here I am, thou particular fellow

Mich Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces 126

Cade Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself he is but a knight, is a?

Mich No

Cade To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently [Kneels] Rise up Sir John Mortimer [Rises] Now have at him 133

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and WILLIAM his Brother, with drum and Forces

Staff Rebel! our hands, the fifth and scum of Kent

Murder the gallows lay your weapons down,
Home to your cottages forsake this groom

The king is returned, you revolt 137

But angry, wrathful, and inclined to blood!

If you go forward therefore yield, or die Cade As for these silver-coated slaves, I pass not 140

It is to you, good people, that I speak,
O'er whom in time to come I hope to reign,
For I am rightful heir unto the crown

Staff Villain! thy father was a plasterer,
And thou thyself a shearmaster art thou not? 145

Cade And Adam was a gardener

W Staff And what of that?

Cade Marry, this Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, 148

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not? 149

Staff Ay, sir

Cade By her he had two children at one birth

W Staff That's false 152

Cade Ay, there's the question, but I say, tis true

The elder of them, being put to nurse,
Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away,

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, 156
Became a bricklayer when he came to age

His son am I deny it if you can

Dick Nay, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be
king

Smith Sir he made a churney in my father's house, and the bucks are alive at this day to testify it, and the more deny it not

Staff And wilt you credit this base drudge's
words,

That speaks he knows not what? 164

All Ay, marry, will we, therefore get ye
gone

W Staff Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this

Cade [As de] He lies for I invented it myself Go to surrah, tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign, but I'll be a rote-tor over him 172

Dick And furthermore, we'll have the Lord
Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine

Cade And good reason for thereby is England maimed and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up Fellow kings I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it a eunuch, and more than that he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor 181

Staff O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade Nay, answer, if you can the Frenchmen are our enemies, go to then, I ask but this, can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All No, no and therefore we'll have his head

W Staff Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, 188

Assail them with the arm of the king

Staff Herald, away, and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade,
That those which fly before the battle ends 192

May, even in their wives' and children's sight,

Be hang'd up for example at their doors
And you, that be the king's friends, follow me

[Exeunt the two STAFFORDS and Forces

Cade And you, that love the commons
follow me

Now show yourselves men, 'tis for liberty
We will not leave one lord one gentleman
Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon,
For they are the rify honest men, and such as As would, but that they dare not take our
part

Dick They are all in order, and march toward us

Cade But the more are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward!
[Exeunt

SCENE III — Another Part of Blackheath

alarums The two parties enter and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain

Cade Where's Dick the butcher of Ashford?

Dick Here, sir

Cade They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house therefore thus wilt I reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is, and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one

Dick I desire no more

Cade And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less This monument of the victory will I bear

[Puts on SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD'S armour]
And the bodies shall be dragged at my horse heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the Mayor's sword borne before us

Dick If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners

Cade Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London
[Exeunt

SCENE IV — London A Room in the Palace

Enter KING HENRY, reading a Supplication the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and LORD SAY with him at a distance QUEEN MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK'S head

Q Mar Of. have I heard that grief softens the mind

And makes it fearful and degenerate, Think therefore on revenge and cease to weep

But who can cease to weep and look on this?

Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast,
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck What answer makes your Grace to the rebels' supplication?

K Hen I'll send some holy bishop to entreat,
For God forbid so many simple souls Should perish by the sword! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,

Will parley with Jack Cade their general.
But say, I'll read it over once again

Q Mar Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face

Rul'd like a wandering planet over me,
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

K Hen Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have in, head

Say Ay, but I hope your highness shall have his

K Hen How now madam!
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's
death?

I fear me love if that I had been dead Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for
me

Q Mar No my love, I should not mourn but die for thee

Enter a Messenger

K Hen How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess The rebels are in Southwark, fly, my
lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, Descended from the Duke of Clarence house,
And calls your Grace usurper openly,

And vows to crown himself in Westminster
His army is a ragged multitude

Of hinds and peasants rude and merciless
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed

All scro'ars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call false caterpillars, and intend their
death

K Hen O graceless men! they know not what they do

Buck My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth

Until a power be rais'd to put them down

Q Mar Al! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,

These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd

K Hen Lord Say, the traitors hate thee,
Therefore away with us to Killingworth

Say So might your Grace's person be in danger

The sight of me is odious in their eyes,
And therefore in this city will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may

Enter a second Messenger

Sec Mess Jack Cade hath gotten London
bridge,

The citizens fly and forsake their houses,
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor, and they jointly swear

To spoil the city and your royal court

Buck Then linger not, my lord, away! take horse

K Hen Come, Margaret, God, our hope, will succour us

Q Mar My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd

K Hen [To LORD SAY] Farewell, my lord trust not the Kentish rebels

Buck Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd Say The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute
[Exeunt

SCENE V—The Same The Tower

Enter LORD SCALES and Others, on the Walls Then enter certain Citizens, below

Scales How now! is Jack Cade slain?

First Cit No, my lord, nor likely to be slain, for they have won the bridge killing all those that withstand them. The Lord Mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales Such aid as I can spare you shall command,

But I am troubled here with them myself, 8
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower
But get you to Smithfield and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe Fight for your king, your country, and your lives, 12

And so, farewell, for I must hence again 12
[Exeunt]

SCENE VI—London Cannon Street

Enter JACK CADE, and his Followers He strikes his staff on London-stone

Cade Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running

Sold Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade Knock him down there

[They kill him]

Smith If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more. I think he hath a very fair warning. 12

Dick My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade Come then, let's go fight with them. But first, go and set London bridge on fire, and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away 12
[Exeunt]

SCENE VII.—The Same Smithfield

Alarums Enter, on one side, CADE and his company on the other, Citizens, and the KING'S Forces, headed by MATTHEW GOFFE. They fight the Citizens are routed, and MATTHEW GOFFE is slain.

Cade So, sirs—Now go some and pull down the Savoy, others to the inns of court down with them all.

Dick I have a suit unto your lordship. 4
Cade Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth. 8

John [Aside] Mass 'twill be sore law then, for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith [Aside] Nay, John, it will be stinking law, for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. 14

Cade I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away! burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John [Aside] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade And henceforward all things shall be in common. 21

Enter a Messenger

Mess My lord a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France he that made us pay one-and-twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. 25

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY

Cade Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah! thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Monsieur Basimecu, the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school, and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used, and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them, when indeed only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not? 53

Say What of that? 53

Cade Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets. 56

Dick And work in their shirt too, as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say You men of Kent,—

Dick What say you of Kent? 60

Say Nothing but this 'tis bona terra, mala gens.

Cade Away with him! away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will. 64

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ, Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle. Sweet is the country, because full of riches, The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy, 68 Which makes me hope you are not void of pity. I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy, Yet, to recover them, would lose my life. Justice with favour have I always done, 72

Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never

When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, 76
Because my book preferred me to the king,
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, 80
You cannot but forbear to murder me
This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behoof,—

Cade Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field? 85

Say Great men have reaching hands oft have I struck

Those that I never saw, and struck them dead
Geo O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks! 89

Say These cheeks are pale for watching for your good

Cade Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again 92

Say Long sitting, to determine poor men's causes

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases
Cade Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the help of hatchet 96

Dick Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say The palsy, and not fear, provokes me
Cade Nay, he nods at us as who should say I'll be even with you I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no Take him away and behead him 102

Say Tell me wherein have I offended most? Have I affected wealth, or honour? speak Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death? These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding, 108

This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts
O! let me live

Cade [Aside] I feel remorse in myself with his words, but I'll bridle it he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue, he speaks not o' God's name Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently, and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither 119

All It shall be done

Say Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,

God should be so obdurate as yourselves, How would it fare with your departed souls?

And therefore yet relent, and save my life 124

Cade Away with him! and do as I command ye [Exeunt some, with LORD SAY] The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute, there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere they have it, men shall hold of me in capite, and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell 133

Dick My lord, when shall we go to Cheap-side and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade Marry, presently 136

All O' brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of LORD SAY and his Son-in-law

Cade But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France Soldiers defer the spoil of the city until night for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets, and at every corner have them kiss Away! 145 [Exeunt]

SCENE VIII —The Same Southwark

Alarum Enter CADE and all his Rabbblement

Cade Up Fish Street! down St Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! [A parley sounded, then a retreat] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and Old CLIFFORD, with Forces

Buck Ay here they be that dare and will disturb thee

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king 8

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled, And here pronounce free pardon to them all That will forsake thee and go home in peace

Clif What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent 12

And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you, Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?

Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon, Flung up his cap, and say 'God save his majesty!' 16

Who hateth him and honours not his father Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake, Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by

All God save the king! God save the king!

Cade What! Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads ravish your wives and daughters before your faces for me, I will make shift for one, and so, God's curse light upon you all! 35

All We'll follow Cade we'll follow Cade!

Clif Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth,

That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
Alas! he hath no home, no place to fly to,
Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends and us
Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you?
Methinks already in this civil broil
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying Villago unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry, Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy

To France, to France! and get what you have lost,

Spare England, for it is your native coast
Henry hath money you are strong and manly,
God on our side, doubt not of victory

All A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford.

Cade [Aside] Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to a hundred mis-chiefs and makes them leave me desolate I see them lay their heads together to surprise me My sword make way for me, for here is no staying In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heavens and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels

Buck What, is he fled? go some, and follow
him,

And he that brings his head unto the king
Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward

[Exeunt some of them]
Follow me, soldiers we'll devise a mean To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt]

SCENE IX — Kentworth Castle

Trumpets sounded Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN
MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on the terrace

K Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
But I was made a king at nine months old
Was never subject long'd to be a king
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and Old CLIFFORD

Buck Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty!

K Hen Why Buckingham, is the traitor
Cade surpris'd?
Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter, below, a number of CADE'S followers, with halters about their necks

Clif He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield,
And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,

Expect your highness' doom, of! or death K Hen Then, heaven, set o thy everlasting gates,
To entertain my vows of than! and praise!
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And show'd how well you love your prince and country
Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind
And so, with thanks and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries
All God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger

Mess Please it your Grace to be advertised,
The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland
And with a pussant and a mighty power
Of Gallowglasses, and stout kerns,
Is marching hitherward in pious array,
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor

K Hen Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd,
Like to a ship, that, having scap'd a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate
But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd,
And now is York in arms to second him
I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him,
And ask him what's the reason of these arms
Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower,
And Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him

Som My lord,
I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good K Hen In any case, be not too rough in terms.

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language Buck I will, my lord, and doubt not so to deal

As all things shall redound unto your good K Hen Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better,
For yet may England curse my wretched reign.
[Exeunt]

SCENE X — Kent Iden's Garden

Enter CADE

Cade Fie on ambition! fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish!
These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me, but now I am so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallot another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather And I think this word 'sallet' was born to do me good for many a time, but for a sallot, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill, and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in, and now the word sallet must serve me to feed on 17

Enter IDEN with Servants behind

Iden Lord! who would live turmoiled in the court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these? 20

This small inheritance my father left me

Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy

I seek not to wax great by others' waning,

Or gather wealth I care not with what envy

Sufficeth that I have maintains my state, 24

And sends the poor well pleased from my gate

Cade [Aside] Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave Ah, villain! thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him, but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my svord like a great pin, ere thou and I part 32

Iden Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be,

I know thee not, why then should I betray thee?

Is't not enough to break into my garden,

And like a thief to come to rob my grounds, 36

Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,

But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too Look on me well I have eat no meat these five days, yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray

God I may never eat grass more 44

Iden Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,

Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man

Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine, 48

See if thou canst out-face me with thy looks

Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser,

Thy hand is but a finger to my fist,

Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon,

My foot shall fight with all the strength thou

hast, 53

And if mine arm be heaved in the air

Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth

As for more words, whose greatness answers

words, 56

Let this my sword report what speech forbears

Cade By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chunes of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees, thou mayst be turned to hobnails [They fight CADE falls] O, I am slain! Famine and no other hath slain me let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'll defy them all Wither, garden, and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled

Iden Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor? 70

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,

And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead

Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,

But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat, 74

To emblaze the honour that thy master got

Cade Iden, farewell, and be proud of thy victory Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards, for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour [Dies

Iden How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge 81

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare

thee!

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,

So wish I I might thrust thy soul to hell 84

Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels

Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave,

And there cut off thy most ungracious head,

Which I will bear in triumph to the king, 88

Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon

[Ex t, with Servants, dragging out the body]

ACT V

SCENE I—Kent Fields between Dartford and Blackheath

The KING's camp on one side On the other, enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours

York From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,

And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head

Ring, bells, aloud, burn, bonfires, clear and bright,

To entertain great England's lawful king 4

Ah sancta majestas, who would not buy thee

dear?

Let them obey that know not how to rule,

This hand was made to handle nought but gold

I cannot give due action to my words, 8

Except a sword, or sceptre balance it

A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,

On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France

Enter BUCKINGHAM

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb

me? 12

The king hath sent him, sure I must dissemble

Buck York, if thou meanest well, I greet

thee well

York Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept

thy greeting 15

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck A messenger from Henry, our dread

hege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace,

Or why thou,—being a subject as I am,—

Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,

Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave,

Or dare to bring thy force so near the court

York [Aside] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great 23

O! I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,

I am so angry at these abject terms,

And now, like Ajax Telamonius,

On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury
 I am far better born than is the king,
 More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts,
 But I must make fair weather yet awhile,
 Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong [Aloud] Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me, That I have given no answer all this while,
 My mind was troubled with deep melancholy
 The cause why I have brought this army hither
 Is to remove proud Somerset from the king, Seditious to his Grace and to the state

Buck That is too much presumption on thy part
 But if thy arms be to no other end,
 The king hath yielded unto thy demand
 The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower

York Upon thine honour, is he a prisoner?
Buck Upon mine honour, he is a prisoner York Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers

Soldiers, I thank you all, disperse yourselves, Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
 You shall have pay, and everything you wish,
 And let my sov'reign, virtuous Henry,
 Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,
 As pledges of my fealty and love,
 I'll send them all as willing as I live Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have Is his to use, so Somerset may die

Buck York, I commend this kind submission
 We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter KING HENRY, attended.

K Hen Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
 That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?

York In all submission and humility
 York doth present himself unto your highness
K Hen Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?

York To beavethe traitor Somerset from hence,
 And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
 Who since I heard to be discomfited

Enter IDEN, with CADE's head

Iden If one so rude and of so mean condition
 May pass into the presence of a king, Lo! I present your Grace a traitor's head,
 The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew

K Hen The head of Cade! Great God, how just art thou!

O! let me view his visage, being dead,
 That living wrought me such exceeding trouble
 Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden I was, an't like your majesty thy degree?

Iden Alexander Iden, that's my name,
 A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king

Buck So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss

He were created knight for his good service
K Hen Iden, kneel down. [He kneels] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks,
 And will, that thou henceforth attend on us

Iden May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
 And never live but true unto his liege!

K Hen See! Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen

Go, bid her hude him quickly from the duke

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and SOMERSET

Q Mar For thousand Yorks he shall not hude his head,

But boldly stand and front him to his face
York How now! is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
 Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?

False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,
 Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?

King did I call thee? no, thou art not king,
 Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,

Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor
 That head of thine doth not become a crown

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
 And not to grace an awful princely sceptre

That gold must round engirt these brows of mine,

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
 Is able with the change to kill and cure

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
 And with the same to act controlling laws

Give place by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler
Som O monstrous traitor—I arrest thee,

York,
 Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown

Obey, audacious traitor, kneel for grace York Wouldst have me kneel? first let me ask of these

If they can brook I bow a knee to man Surrah, call in my sons to be my bail

[Exit an Attendant]
 I know ere they will have me go to ward,

They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement

Q Mar Call hither Clifford, bid him come amain,

To say if that the bastard boys of York
 Shall be the surety for their traitor father

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]
York O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
 The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,

Shall be their father's bail and bane to those That for my surety will refuse the boys!

[Exit EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with Forces at one side, at the other, with Forces also, Old CLIFFORD and his Son]

See where they come I'll warrant they'll make it good

Q Mar And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.

Clif [Kneeling] Health and all happiness to my lord the king!

York I thank thee, Clifford say, what news with thee?
Nay, do not fright us with an angry look
 We are thy sov'reign, Clifford, kneel again,
 For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee 128
Clif This is my king, York, I do not mistake,
 But thou mistak'st me much to think I do
 To bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?
K Hen Ay, Clifford, a bedlam and ambitious humour 132
 Makes him oppose himself against his king
Clif He is a traitor, let him to the Tower,
 And chop away that factious pate of his Q Mar He is arrested but will not obey
 His sons, he says, shall give their words for him 137
York Will you not, sons?
Edw Ay, noble father, if our words will serve Rich And if words will not, then our weapons shall 140
Clif Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!
York Look in a glass, and call thy image so I am thy king and thou a false-heart traitor
 Call hither to the stake my two brave bears, 144
 That with the very shaking of their chains
 They may astonish these fell-lurking curs Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me
Drums Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with Forces
Clif Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death 148
 And manacle the bear-ward in their chains,
 If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place
Rich Oft have I seen a hot or erweening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld
 Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw, Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried
 And such a piece of service will you do,
 If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick 156
Clif Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
 As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!
York Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon
Clif Take heed lest by your heat you burn yourselves 160
K Hen Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?
 Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,
 Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!
 What! wilt thou on thy death bed play the ruffian, 164
 And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?
 O! where is faith? O, where is loyalty?
 If it be banish'd from the frosty head, 167
 Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?
 Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
 And shame thine honourable age with blood?
 Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
 Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
 For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me, 173
 That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal My lord, I have consider'd with myself
 The title of this most renowned duke, 176
 And in my conscience do repute his Grace
 The rightful heir to England's royal seat
K Hen Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?
Sal I have 180
K Hen Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?
Sal It is a great sin to swear unto a sin,
 But greater sin to keep a sinful oath
 Who can be bound by any solemn vow 184
 To do a murderous deed to rob a man,
 To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
 To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
 To wring the widow from her custom'd right,
 And have no other reason for this wrong 189
 But that he was bound by a solemn oath?
Q Mar A subtle traitor needs no sophister
K Hen Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself 192
York Call Buckingham and all the friends thou hast,
 I am resolv'd for death, or dignity
Clif The first I warrant thee if dreams prove true War You were best to go to bed and dream again, 196
 To keep thee from the tempest of the field
Clif I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
 Than any thou canst conjure up to day,
 And that I'll write upon thy burget, 200 Might I but know thee by thy household badge War Now by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,
 The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
 This day I'll wear aloft my burget,— 204
 As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,
 That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,—
 Even to affright thee with the view thereof
Clif And from thy burget I'll rend thy bear, 208
 And tread it underfoot with all contempt,
 Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear
Y Clif And so to arms, victorious father,
 To quell the rebels and their complacencies 212
Rich Fie! charity! for shame! speak not in spite,
 For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night
Y Clif Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell Rich If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally]

SCENE II—Saint Alban's

Alarums Excursions Enter WARWICK
War Clifford of Cumberland, tis Warwick calls
 And if thou dost not hude thee from the bear,
 Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
 And dead men's cries do fill the empty air 4
 Clifford, I say, come forth, and fight with me!
 Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
 Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK

How now, my noble lord! what! all afoot? 8
York The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed,
 But match to match I have encounter'd him,
 And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
 Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well. 12

Enter Old CLIFFORD

War Of one or both of us the time is come York Hold, Warwick! seek thee out some other chase,
 For I myself must hunt this deer to death
War Then, nobly, York, 'tis for a crown thou fight st 16
 As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
 It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd

[Exit]

Clif What seest thou in me, Yo-k? why dost thou pause?

York With thy brave bearing should I be in love, 20

But that thou art so fast mine enemy
Clif Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,

But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.
York So let it help me now against thy sword
 As I in justice and true right express it. 25

Clif My soul and body on the action both!

York A dreadful lay! address thee instantly

Clif La fin couronne les œuvres 28

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls and dies]

York Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will!

[Exit]

Enter Young CLIFFORD

Y Clif Shame and confusion! all is on the rout 31

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
 Where it should guard. O war! thou son of hell, Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
 Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly
 He that is truly dedicate to war 37
 Hath no self-love, nor he that loves himself Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
 The name of valour [Seeing his father's body]

O! let the vile world end, 40

And the premised flames of the last day
 Kneet heaven and earth together,
 Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
 Particularities and petty sounds 44
 To cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
 To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve

The silver livery of advised age, 47
 And, in thy reverence and thy charr-days thus To die in ruffian battle? Even at this sight

My heart is turn'd to stone and while 'tis mine
 It shall be stony York not our old men spares, 52

No more will I their babes tears virginal Shall be to me even as the dew to fire,

And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
 Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax

Henceforth I will not have to do with pity 56

Meet I an infant of the house of York,
 Into as many gobbets will I cut it
 As wild Medea young Absyrtus did
 In cruelty will I seek out my fame 60
 Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house [Taking up the body]

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
 So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders,
 But then Æneas bare a living load, 64
 Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine [Exit]

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET, fighting SOMERSET is killed

Rich So, lie thou there,
 For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
 The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset 68
 Hath made the wizard famous in his death Sword, hold thy temper, heart be wrathful still Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill [Exit]

Alarums Excursions Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and Others, retreating

Q Mar Away, my lord! you are slow for shame, away! 72

K Hen. Can we outrun the heavens' good Margaret, stay

Q Mar What are you made of? you'll nor fight nor fly

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
 To give the enemy way, and to secure us 76

By what we can, which can no more but fly
[Alarum afar off]

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
 Of all our fortunes but if we haply scape, 79

As well we may, if not through your neglect,
 We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,
 And where this breach now in our fortunes

made
 May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young CLIFFORD

Y Clif But that my heart's on future mischief set, 84

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly,
 But fly you must uncurable discomfit

Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts Away, for your relief! and we will live 88

To see their day and them our fortune give Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—Field near Saint Alban's

Alarum Retreat Flourish then enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours

York Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
 That winter lion, who in rage forgets

Aged contusions and all brush of time
 And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, 4

Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
 Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,

If Salisbury be lost.

Rich My noble father,
 Three times to-day I help him to his horse. 8

Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,

Persuaded him from any further act
 But still, where danger was, still there I met him,
 And like rich hangings in a homely house, 12
 So was his will in his old feeble body
 But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY

Sal Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought
 to day,
 By the mass, so did we all I thank you, 16
 Richard
 God knows how long it is I have to live,
 And it hath pleas'd him that three times today
 You have defended me from imminent death Well, lords, we have not got that which we
 have 20

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
 Being opposites of such repairing nature
York I know our safety is to follow them,
 For, as I hear, the king is fled to London, 24
 To call a present court of parliament
 Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth —
 What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them?
War After them! nay, before them, if we can 28
 Now, by my hand, lords, 'twas a glorious
 day
 Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York,
 Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come Sound, drums and trumpets, and to London
 all 32
 And more such days as these to us befall!
 [Exeunt

SCENE —During part of the Third Act, in France, during the rest of the Play, in England

ACT I

SCENE I —London The Parliament-House

Drums Some Soldiers of YORK's party break in Then, enter the DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Others, with white roses in their hats

War I wonder how the king escap'd our hands

York While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He silly stole away and left his men
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland, 4
Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat, Cheer'd up the drooping army, and himself,
Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking 8

Were by the swords of common soldiers slam Edw Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain or wounded dangerously,
I left his beaver with a downright blow 12
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword Mont And, brother, here's the Earl of Wilt-shire's blood, [To YORK, showing his Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd

Rich Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the DUKE OF SOMERSET'S head.
York Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons 17

But, is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?
Norf Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's
head 20

War And so do I Victorious Prince of York,
Before I see thee seated in that throne

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close 24

This is the palace of the fearful king,
And thus the regal seat possess it, York,

For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs' York Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and 28

I will,
For hither we have broken in by force

Norf We'll all assist you, he that flies shall die.

York Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me,
my lords,

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night. 32

War And when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce
[The Soldiers retire

York The queen this day here holds her parliament,

But little thinks we shall be of her council 36
By words or blows here let us win our right

Rich Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house

War The bloody parliament shall thus be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king, 40

And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice Hath made us by-words to our enemies

York Then leave me not, my lords, be resolute,

I mean to take possession of my right 44

War Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares Resolve thee, Richard, claim the English crown.

[WARWICK leads YORK to the throne, who seats himself]

Flourish Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTH-UMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and Others, with red roses in their hats

K Hen My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,

Even in the chair of state! belike he means—Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer— 52

To aspire unto the crown and reign as king
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father,

And thine, Lord Clifford, and you both have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends North If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on
me! 57

Clif The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West What! shall we suffer thus? let's pluck him down

My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it 60

K Hen Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clif Patience is for poltroons, such as he He durst not sit there had your father liv'd

My gracious lord, here in the parliament 64
Let us assail the family of York.

North Well hast thou spoken, cousin be it so

K Hen Ah! know you not the city favours
them,

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?
Exe But when the duke is slain they'll quickly fly 69

K Hen Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house!
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats, 72

Shall be the war that Henry means to use

[They advance to the DUKE.]
Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet,
I am thy sovereign.

York I am thine 76

Exe For shame! come down he made thee
Duke of York

York 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was

Exe Thy father was a traitor to the crown.
War Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown

In following this usurping Henry 81

Clif Whom should he follow but his natural
king?

War True, Clifford, and that's Richard,
Duke of York

K Hen And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne? 84

York It must and shall be so content thyself

War Be Duke of Lancaster let him be king
West He is both king and Duke of Lancaster,

And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain 88

War And Warwick shall disprove it You forget

That we are those which chas'd you from the field

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March'd through the city to the palace gates 92

North Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my
grief,

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it West Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more lives 96

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins Clif Urge it no more, lest that instead of
words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger
As shall revenge his death before I stir 100

War Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats

York Will you we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field K Hen What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? 104

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York, Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March,

I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,

And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.
War Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

K Hen The Lord Protector lost it, and not I
When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.

Rich You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose 113

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head
Edw Sweet father, do so, set it on your head.

Mont [To YORK] Good brother, as thou lov'st and honour'st arms, 116

Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling thus Rich Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly

York Sons, peace!

K Hen Peace thou! and give King Henry
leave to speak. 120

War Plantagenet shall speak first hear him,
lords,

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.

K Hen Think st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, 124

Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?
No first shall war unpeople this my realm,

Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,

And now in England to our heart's great sorrow, Shall be my winding-sheet Why faint you,
lords? 139

My title's good, and better far than his War Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be
king

K Hen Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown 132

York 'Twas by rebellion against his king

K Hen [Aside] I know not what to say my title's weak

[Aloud] Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
York What then? 136

K Hen An if he may, then am I lawful
king,

For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
Whose heir my father was and I am his 140

York He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce War Suppose, my lords, he did it uncon-strain'd,

Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown? 144

Exe No, for he could not so resign his
crown

But that the next heir should succeed and reign
K Hen Art thou against us Duke of Exeter?

Exe His is the right, and therefore pardon
me 148

York Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Exe My conscience tells me he is lawful king K Hen [Aside] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North Plantagenet, for all the claim thou layst, 152

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War Depos'd he shall be in despite of all North Thou art deceiv'd 'tis not thy southern power,

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk nor of Kent, 156

Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,

Can set the duke up in despite of me

Clif King Henry be thy title right or wrong
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence 160

May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K Hen O Clifford, how thy words revive
my heart!

York Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown
What matter you or what conspire you lords?

War Do right unto this princely Duke of
York, 166

Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,

Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves

K Hen My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word —

Let me for this my life-time reign as king York Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs 172

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st

K Hen I am content Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease

Clif What wrong is this unto the prince your son? 176

War What good is this to England and himself?

West Base, fearful and despairing Henry!
Clif Ho v hast thou injur'd both thyself and us?

West I cannot stay to hear these articles
North Nor I 181

Clif Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these
news

West Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides North Be thou a prey unto the house of
York, 185

And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clif In dreadful war mayst thou be over-
come,

Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd! 188

[Exeunt NORTHUMBERLAND, CLIFFORD, and WESTMORELAND

War Turn this way, Henry, and regard them
not

Exe They seek revenge and therefore will not yield

K Hen Ah! Exeter

War Why should you sigh, my lord?

K Hen Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son, 192

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit
But be it as it may, I here entail

The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever, Conditionally, that here thou take an oath 196

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign,

And neither by treason nor hostility
To seek to put me down and reign thyself 200

York This oath I willingly take and will perform [Coming from the throne

War Long live King Henry! Plantagenet, embrace him

K Hen And long live thou and these thy forward sons!

York Now York and Lancaster are reconciled! 204

Exe Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes! [Sennet The Lords come forward

York Farewell, my gracious lord, I'll to my castle

War And I'll keep London with my soldiers 207

Nor And I to Norfolk with my followers Mont And I unto the sea from whence I came [Exeunt YORK and his Sons, WAR-

WICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and

Attendants

K Hen And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES

Exe Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger

I'll steal away
K Hen Exeter, so will I
Q Mar Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee 213
K Hen Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay Q Mar Who can be patient in such extremes?

Ah! wretched man, would I had died a maid
 And never seen thee, never borne thee son, Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?
 Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I, 220
 Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
 Or nouriish'd him as I did with my blood, Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood
 there,

Rather than have made that savage duke thine
 heir, 224

And disinherited thine only son
Prince Father, you cannot disinherit me
 If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K Hen Pardon me, Margaret, pardon me, sweet son, 228
 The Earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforc'd
 me

Q Mar Enforc'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?

I shame to hear thee speak Ah! timorous
 wretch, 231

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me,
 And given unto the house of York such head
 As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance
 To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
 What is it but to make thy sepulchre, 236
 And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor and the Lord of Calais,
 Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas,
 The duke is made protector of the realm, 240
 And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
 The trembling lamb environed with wolves
 Had I been there, which am a silly woman, The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes 244

Before I would have granted to that act,
 But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour
 And seeing thou dost I here divorce myself, Both from thy tab'e, Henry, and thy bed, 248
 Until that act of parliament be repeal'd Whereby my son is disinherited
 The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours

Will follow mine, if once they see them spread,
 And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,
 And utter ruin of the house of York

Thus do I leave thee Come, son let's away,
 Our army is ready, come we'll after them 256

K Hen Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me
 speak

Q Mar Thou hast spoke too much already, get thee gone

K Hen Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay
 with me?

Q Mar Ay to be murder'd by his enemies.
Prince When I return with victory from the field 261

I'll see your Grace till then, I'll follow her Q Mar Come, son, away, we may not linger thus [Exeunt QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES

K Hen Poor queen! how love to me and to her son 264

Hath made her break out into terms of rage
 Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke,
 Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
 Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle
 Tire on the flesh of me and of my son! 269

The loss of those three lords torments my heart
 I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair
 Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger 272

Exe And I, I hope shall reconcile them all.
 [Exeunt

SCENE II —A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE Rich Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave

Edw No, I can better play the orator Mont But I have reasons strong and forcible

Enter YORK

York Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife? 4

What is your quarrel? how began it first?
Edw No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York About what?
Rich About that which concerns your Grace
 and us, 8

The crown of England, father, which is yours York Mine, boy? not till King Henry be dead

Rich Your right depends not on his life or
 death

Edw Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it
 now 12

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will outrun you, father, in the end York I took an oath that he should quietly
 reign

Edw But for a kingdom any oath may be broken 16

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year

Rich No, God forbid your Grace should be forsworn

York I shall be, if I claim by open war Rich I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak 20

York Thou canst not, son, it is impossible Rich An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate
 That hath authority over him that swears 24

Henry had none, but did usurp the place,
 Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
 Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown, 29

Within whose circuit is Elvsum,

And all that poets feign of bliss and joy
 Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest 32
 Until the white rose that I wear be dy'd
 Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart York Richard, enough, I will be king, or
 die

Brother, thou shalt to London presently, 36
 And whet on Warwick to this enterprise
 Thou, Richard, shalt unto the Duke of Norfolk,
 And tell him privily of our intent
 You, Edward, shalt unto my Lord Cobham, 40
 With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise

In them I trust, for they are soldiers, Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit While you are thus employ'd, what resteth 44
 more,

But that I seek occasion how to rise,
 And yet the king not privy to my drift,
 Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger

But, stay! what news? why com'st thou in such post? 48

Mess The queen with all the northern earls and lords

Intend here to besiege you in your castle
 She is hard by with twenty thousand men,
 And therefore fortify your hold, my lord 52

York Ay with my sword! What! think'st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with
 me,

My brother Montague shall post to London
 Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest, 56

Whom we have left protectors of the king,
 With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
 And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths

Mont Brother, I go, I'll win them, fear it
 not 60

And thus most humbly I do take my leave
 [Exit]

Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER

York Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles!

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour,
 The army of the queen mean to besiege us 64

Sir John She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field

York Wha'! with five thousand men?

Rich Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need

A woman's general, what should we fear? 68
 [A march afar off]

Edw I hear their drums, let's set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight York Five men to twenty! though the odds be great

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory 72

Many a battle have I won in France,
 When as the enemy hath been ten to one

Why should I not now have the like success?
 [Alarum. Excunt]

SCENE III—Field of Battle between Sandal Castle and Wakefield

Alarums. Excursions. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor

Rut Ah, whither shall I fly to scape their hands?

Ah! tutor, look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers

Clif Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life

As for the brat of this accursed duke, 4
 Whose father slew my father, he shall die

Tut And I, my lord, will bear him company
Clif Soldiers, away with him

Tut Ah! Clifford, murder not this innocent
 child, 8

Lest thou be hated both of God and man!
 [Exit forced off by Soldiers]

Clif How now! is he dead already? Or is it fear

That makes him close his eyes? I'll open them Rut So looks the pent-up lion o'er the
 wretch 12

That trembles under his devouring paws,
 And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,

And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder
 Ah! gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword, 16

And not with such a cruel threatening look Sweet Clifford! hear me speak before I die

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath,
 Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live 20

Clif In vain thou speak'st, poor boy, my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter

Rut Then let my father's blood open it again
 He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him 24

Clif Had I thy brethren here, their lives and
 thine

Were not revenge sufficient for me
 No! if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains, 28
 It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart

The sight of any of the house of York
 Is as a fury to torment my soul,

And till I root out their accursed line, 32
 And leave not one alive, I live in hell

Therefore— [Lifting his hand]
Rut O! let me pray before I take my death

To thee I pray sweet Clifford pity me! 36
Clif Such pity as my rapier's point affords

Rut I never did thee harm why wilt thou slay me?

Clif Thy father hath Rut But 'twas ere I was born

Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me, 40 Lest in revenge thereof, with God is just,

He be as miserably slain as I
 Ah! let me live in prison all my days,

And when I give occasion of offence, 44
 Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause

Clif No cause!
 Thy father slew my father, therefore, die

[Stabs him.]

Rut Du faciant laudis summa sit ista tuæ!

[Dies

Clif Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet! 49
And thus thy son's blood cleaving to my blade
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood, Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both
[Exit

SCENE IV—Another Part of the Plains

Alarum Enter YORK.

York The army of the queen hath got the field

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me,
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back and fly, like ships before the wind,
Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves
My sons, God knows what hath bechanced them

But this I know they have demear'd themselves
Like men born to renown by life or death 8
Three times did Richard make a lane to me
And thrice cried, 'Courage, father! fight it out!'
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt 12
In blood of those that had encounter'd him
And when the hardest warriors did reue Richard cried, 'Charge!' and gave no foot of ground! 15

And cried, 'A crown or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!

With this, we charg'd again! but, out alas!
We bodg'd again as I have seen a swan 19
With bootless labour swim against the tide,
And spend her strength with over-matching waves [A short alarum within

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue,
And I am far! and cannot fly their fury,
And were I strong I would not shun their fury 24

The sands are number'd that make up my life,
Here must I stay, and here my life must end

Enter QUEEN MARGARET CLIFFORD NORTH-UMBERLAND, the young PRINCE, and Soldiers Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage 28
I am your butt, and I abide your shot

North Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet

Clif Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm With downright payment show'd unto my father 32

Now Phæton hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick

York My ashes as the phoenix, may bring forth

A bird that will revenge upon you all, 36
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?

Clif So cowards fight when they can fly no
further, 40

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives, Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York O Clifford! but bethink thee once
again, 44

And in thy thought o'er-run my former time,
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere
this 48

Clif I will not bandy with thee word for
word,

But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one [Draws

Q Mar Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes

I would prolong awhile the traitor's life 52 Wrath makes him deaf! speak thou, Northumberland

North Hold, Clifford! do not honour him
so much

To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin, 56
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages,

And ten to one is no impeach of valour 60
[They lay hands on YORK who struggles

Clif Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin

North So doth the cony struggle in the net [YORK is taken prisoner

York So triumph thieves upon their con-quer'd boot

So true men yield with robbers so o'er-matched North What would your Grace have done unto him now? 65

Q Mar Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That taught at mountains with outstretched
arms, 68

Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What! was it you that would be England's
king?

Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent?

Where are your mess of sons to back you
now? 73

The wanton Edward and the lusty George?
And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy, Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?

Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York! I stam'd this napkin with the
blood 79

That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point
Made issue from the bosom of the boy,
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal 83

Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadily,
I should lament thy miserable state

I prithee grieve, to make me merry, York What! hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad, 80

And I, to make thee mad do mock thee thus Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance
Thou wouldst be fee d, I see, to make me sport
York cannot speak unless he wear a crown 93
A crown for York! and, lords, bow low to him Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on [Putting a paper crown on his head]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king! 96
Ay, thus is he that took King Henry's chair,
And thus is he was his adopted heir
But how is it that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soon and broke his solemn oath?
As I bethink me, you should not be king 101 Till our King Henry had shook hands with
death

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem, 104
Now in his life against your holy oath?
O! 'tis a fault too-too unpardonable Off with the crown, and, with the crown, his
head,

And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him
dead 108

Clif That is my office, for my father's sake Q Mar Nay, stay, let's hear the orisons he makes

York She wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth! 112

How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging, 116
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush

To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless 120

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem,
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.

Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen,
Unless the adage must be verified, 126

That beggars mounted run their horse to death
'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud,

But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small
'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd

The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at
'Tis government that makes them seem divine,
The want thereof makes thee abominable. 133

Thou art as opposite to every good
As the Antipodes are unto us,

Or as the south to the septentrion. 136
O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide!

How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the
child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face? 140

Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible,
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless Budd'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish

Wouldst have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will, 144

For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays, the rain begins
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies,
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false French-woman 149

North Beshrew me, but his passion moves me so

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears
York That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood, 153

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,— O! ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania

See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears
This cloth thou dipp'st in blood of my sweet
boy, 157

And I with tears do wash the blood away
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this,

[Giving back the handkerchief]

And if thou tell st the heavy story right, 160
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears,
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,

And say, 'Alas! it was a piteous deed!'
There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse 164

And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world,
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin, 169

I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how only sorrow gripes his soul

Q Mar What! weeping-ripe, my Lord
Northumberland? 172

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears

Clif Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him]

Q Mar And here's to right our gentle-hearted king [Stabbing him]

York Open thy gate of mercy, gracious
God! 177

My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies]

Q Mar Off with his head, and set it on York gates,

So York may overlook the town of York 180
[Flourish Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire

Drums. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Forces, marching

Edw I wonder how our princely father
'scap'd

Or whether he be 'scap'd away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit

Had he been ta'en we should have heard the
news 4

Had he been slain we should have heard the
news,
Or had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape
How fares my brother? why is he so sad? 8

Rich I cannot joy until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become
I saw him in the battle range about, 11

And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth Methought he bore him in the thickest troop
As doth a lion in a herd of neat,

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof and bark at him 17

So far'd our father with his enemies,
So fled his enemies my war-like father
Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son. 20

See how the morning opes her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun,
How well resembles it the prime of youth,

Trim'd d like a younker prancing to his love 24
Edw Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?

Rich Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun,
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky 28

See see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun

In this the heaven figures some event 32
Edw 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of

I think it cites us, brother, to the field,
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds 36

Should notwithstanding join our lights together,
And over-shine the earth as thus the world
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear

Upon my target three fair-shining suns 40 Rich Nay, bear three daughters by your leave I speak it

You love the breeder better than the male
Enter a Messenger

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess Ah! one that was a woeful looker-on,
When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father, and my loving lord

Edw O! speak no more, for I have heard too much 48
Rich Say how he died for I will hear it all

Mess Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy Against the Greeks that would have enter'd 52

Troy
But Hercules himself must yield to odds,
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.

By many hands your father was subdu'd, 56
But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford and the queen,

Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despight,

Laugh'd in his face, and when with grief he wept, 60

The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks,
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford
slain

And after many scorns, many foul taunts, 64
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same, and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd

Edw Sweet Duke of York! our prop to lean upon, 68
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no
stay!

O Clifford! boist'rous Clifford! thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry,
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd 73

thee
Now my soul's palace is become a prison Ah! would she break from hence, that thus my body

Might in the ground be closed up in rest, 76
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O! never, shall I see more joy

Rich I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture
Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
heart 80

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden,
For self-same wind, that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals that fire all my breast,

And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench 84
To weep is to make less the depth of grief Tears then, for babes, blows and revenge for
me!

Richard, I bear thy name I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it 88 Edw His name that valiant duke hath left
with thee,

His dukedom and his chair with me is left Rich Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird, 92

Show thy descent by gazing against the sun
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom
say,

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.
March Enter WARWICK and the MARQUESS OF MONTAGUE, with Forces

War How now, fair lords! What fare?
what news abroad? 96
Rich Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount

Our baleful news, and at each word's deliv'rance Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told The words would add more anguish than the wounds

O valiant lord! the Duke of York is slain. 100 Edw O Warwick! Warwick! that Planta-genet

Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death

War Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears,
And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run Were brought me of your loss and his depart.

I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Must'rd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought,
March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the queen,

Bearing the king in my behalf along,
For by my scouts I was advertised
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament, Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.

Short tale to make, we at Saint Alban's met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought
But whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his war-like queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen,
Or whether 'twas report of her success,
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
I cannot judge but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went,
Our soldiers'—like the night-owl's lazy fight,
Or like a lazy thresher with a flail—
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.

I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay, and great rewards
But all in vain, they had no heart to fight,
And we in them no hope to win the day,
So that we fled the king unto the queen, Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,

In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you,

For in the marches here we heard you were,
Making another head to fight again

Edw Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers,

And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war

Rich 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled

Of have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire.

War Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear,

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine

Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous, and as bold in war
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer

Rich I know it well, Lord Warwick, blame me not

'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak
But, in this troublous time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say 'Ay,' and to it, lords

War Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out,

And therefore comes my brother Montague
Attend me, lords The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament,
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what beside May make against the house of Lancaster
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry, 'Charge upon our foes!'
But never once again turn back and fly

Rich Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries 'Retire,' if Warwick bid him stay

Edw Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean,

And when thou fail'st—as God forbid the hour!

Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forbend!
War No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York

The next degree is England's royal throne,
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd

In every borough as we pass along,
And he that throws not up his cap for joy

Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head, King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,

Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task

Rich Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,—

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,—
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine

Edw Then strike up, drums! God, and Saint George for us!

Enter a Messenger

War How now! what news?
Mess The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,

The queen is coming with a puissant host,
And craves your company for speedy counsel

War Why then it sorts, brave warriors, let's away

[Exeunt]

SCENE II — Before York

Flourish Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD and NORTHUMBERLAND, with drums and trumpets

Q Mar Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

K Hen Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wrack

To see this sight, it irks my very soul
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow

Chf My gracious liege, thus too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?

Not to the beast that would usurp their den Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick
Not his that spoils her young before her face

Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back
The smallest worm will turn being trodden on,

And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows

He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue like a loving sire,
Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,

Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argu'd thee a most unloving father Unreasonable creatures feed their young,

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them, even with those wings

Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,
Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence?

For shame my liege, make them your precedent
Were it not pity that this goodly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,

And long hereafter say unto his child,
'What my great grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly gave away?'

Ah! what a shame were this! Look on the boy,
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart

To hold thine own and leave thine own with him

K Hen Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear That things ill got had ever bad success?

And happy always was it for that son
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind,

And would my father had left me no more!
For all the rest is held at such a rate
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep

Than in possession any jot of pleasure
Ah! cousin York, would thy best friends did know

How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q Mar My lord, cheer up your spirits: our foes are nigh,

And this soft courage makes your followers faint.

You promis'd knighthood to our forward son Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently Edward, kneel down

K Hen Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight,
And learn this lesson, draw thy sword in right

Prince My gracious father, by your kingly leave, I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,

And in that quarrel use it to the death
Chf Why, that is spoken like a toward prince

Enter a Messenger

Mess Royal commanders, be in readiness
For with a band of thirty thousand men
Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York,

And in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaims him king, and many fly to him
Darraign your battle, for they are at hand

Chf I would your highness would depart the field
The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q Mar Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune

K Hen Why, that's my fortune too, therefore I'll stay

North Be it with resolution then to fight

Prince My royal father, cheer these noble lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence Unsheathe your sword, good father: cry, 'Saint

George!

March Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers

Edw Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace,
And set thy diadem upon my head,

Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?
Q Mar Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy!

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms
Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?

Edw I am his king, and he should bow his knee,
I was adopted heir by his consent.

Since when, his oath is broke, for, as I hear,
You, that are king, though he do wear the crown,
Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,

To blot out me, and put his own son in.
Chf And reason too
Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich Are you there, butcher? O! I cannot speak.

Chf Ay, crook-back; here I stand to answer thee.

Or any he the proudest of thy sort.
Rich 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Chf Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

- Rich* For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight. 100
- War* What sayst thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown? 100
- Q Mar* Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick! dare you speak? 105
- When you and I met at Saint Alban's last, Your legs did better service than your hands.
- War* Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine 105
- Chf* You said so much before, and yet you fled.
- War* 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence
- North* No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay 108
- Rich* Northumberland, I hold thee reverently
- Break off the parley, for scarce I can refrain
The execution of my big-swoln heart
Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer 112
- Chf* I slew thy father call'st thou him a child?
- Rich* Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward,
- As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland,
But ere sun-set I'll make thee curse the deed.
- K Hen* Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak 117
- Q Mar* Defy them, then, or else hold close thy lips.
- K Hen* I prithee, give no limits to my tongue
- I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. 120
- Chf* My hege, the wound that bred this meeting here
- Cannot be cur'd by words, therefore be still
- Rich* Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword
- By him that made us all I am resolv'd 124
- That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue
- Edw* Say, Henry, shall I have my right or no? 124
- A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day,
That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown. 128
- War* If thou deny, their blood upon thy head,
- For York in justice puts his armour on.
- Prince* If that be right which Warwick says is right, 131
- There is no wrong, but everything is right
- Rich* Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands,
- For well I wot thou hast thy mother's tongue
- Q Mar* But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam,
- But like a foul misshapen stigmatic. 136
- Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,
As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.
- Rich* Iron of Naples hid with English gilt, Whose father bears the title of a king,— 140
- As if a channel should be call'd the sea,— Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
- To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?
- Edw* A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns, 144
- To make this shameless callet know herself
Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,
Although thy husband may be Menelaus,
And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd
By that false woman as this king by thee
His father revell'd in the heart of France,
And tam'd the king, and made the Dauphin stoop, 151
- And had he match'd according to his state,
He might have kept that glory to this day,
But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day,
Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him, 156
- That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd sedition on his crown at home
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?
- Hadst* thou been meek our title still had slept,
And we, in pity of the gentle king, 161
- Had slipp'd our claim until another age
- Geo* But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
- And that thy summer bred us no increase, 164
- We set the axe to thy usurping root,
And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,
- Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,
Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods
- Edw* And in this resolution I defy thee,
Not willing any longer conference, 171
- Since thou deny'st the gentle king to speak Sound trumpets!—let our bloody colours wave!
And either victory, or else a grave
- Q Mar* Stay, Edward
- Edw* No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay 176
- These words will cost ten thousand lives this day [Exeunt
- SCENE III—A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshre
- Alarums* Excursions Enter WARWICK
- War* Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
- I lay me down a little while to breathe,
For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength, 4
- And spite of spite needs must I rest a while
- Enter EDWARD, running
- Edw* Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death!
- For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded
- War* How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good? 8
- Enter GEORGE.
- Geo* Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair,

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us
 What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?
Edw Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings, 12
 And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD

Rich Ah! Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
 Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
 Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance,
 And in the very pangs of death he cried, 17
 Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,
 'Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!'
 So, underneath the belly of their steeds, 20
 That stam'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
 The noble gentleman gave up the ghost

War Then let the earth be drunken with our
 blood

I'll kill my horse because I will not fly 24
 Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
 Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage,
 And look upon, as if the tragedy 27
 Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?
 Here on my knee I vow to God above, I'll never pause again, never stand still Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
 Or fortune given me measure of revenge 32

Edw O Warwick! I do bend my knee with
 thine,
 And in this vow do chain my soul to thine
 And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold
 face,

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
 Thou setter up and plucker down of kings, 37
 Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
 That to my foes this body must be prey,
 Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
 And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!
 Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
 Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth

Rich Brother, give me thy hand, and, gentle
 Warwick, 44

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms
 I, that did never weep, now melt with woe
 That winter should cut off our spring-time so War Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,
 farewell 48

Geo Yet let us all together to our troops,
 And give them leave to fly that will not stay,
 And call them pillars that will stand to us,
 And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
 As victors wear at the Olympian games
 This may plant courage in their quailing breasts,
 For yet is hope of life and victory
 Forslow no longer, make we hence amain. 56

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Excursions Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD

Rich Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone
 Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
 And this for Rutland, both bound to revenge,

Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall 4 Clif Now, Richard, I am with thee here
 alone

This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York,
 And this the hand that slew thy brother Rut-
 land,

And here's the heart that triumphs in their
 death 8

And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and
 brother,

To execute the like upon thyself,

And so, have at thee!

[They fight WARWICK enters CLIFFORD flies Rich Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase, 12

For I myself will hunt this wolf to death

[Exeunt]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field

Alarum Enter KING HENRY

K Hen This battle fares like to the morn-ing's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light,
 What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,

Can neither call it perfect day nor night 4

Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea

Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind,

Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea

Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind 8

Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind,

Now one the better, then another best,

Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,

Yet neither conqueror nor conquered 12

So is the equal poise of this fell war

Here on this molehill will I sit me down

To whom God will, there be the victory!

For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too, 16

Have chid me from the battle swearing both

They prosper best of all when I am thence

Would I were dead! if God's good will were so,

For what is in this world but grief and woe? 20

O God! methinks it were a happy life,

To be no better than a homely swain,

To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

To carve out dials quaintly, point to point, 24

Thereby to see the minutes how they run,

How many make the hour full complete,

How many hours bring about the day, 28

How many days will finish up the year,

How many years a mortal man may live

When this is known, then to divide the times

So many hours must I tend my flock,

So many hours must I take my rest, 32

So many hours must I contemplate,

So many hours must I sport myself,

So many days my ewes have been with young,

So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean, 36

So many years ere I shall shear the fleece

So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,

Pass'd over to the end they were created,

Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. 40

Ah! what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!

Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade

To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,

Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy 44

To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery?
O, yes! it doth a thousand-fold it doth.
And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle, 48
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup, 52
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum Enter a Son that hath killed his Father, with the dead body

Son Ill blows the wind that profits nobody
This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight, 56
May be possessed with some store of crowns
And I, that haply take them from him now
May yet ere might yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth me 60
Who's this? O God! it is my father's face Whom in this conflict I unware have kill'd.
O heavy times, begetting such events!

From London by the king was I press'd forth, 64
My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man, Came on the part of York press'd by his master,
And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,

Have by my hands of life bereaved him 68
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!
And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks,
And no more words till they have flow'd their fill

K Hen O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their enemy 75
Weep, wretched man, I'll add thee tear for tear
And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief

Enter a Father that hath killed his Son, with the body in his arms

Fath Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold, 80
For I have bought it with a hundred blows
But let me see is this our foeman's face?

Ah! no, no, no, it is mine only son
Ah! boy, if any life be left in thee, 84
Throw up thine eye see, see! what showers arise, Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart
O! pity, God, this miserable age 88

What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly, Erroneous mutinous, and unnatural
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!

O boy! thy father gave thee life too soon, 92
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late

K Hen Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!

O! that my death would stay these ruthless deeds
O! pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity 96
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses
The one his purple blood right well resembles,
The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth
Wither one rose, and let the other flourish! 100
If you contend a thousand lives must wither

Son How will my mother for a father's death
Take on with me and ne'er be satisfied! 104

Fath How will my wife for slaughter of my
son

Shed seas of tears and ne'er be satisfied!

K Hen How will the country for these woeful chances

Misthink the king and not be satisfied! 108

Son Was ever son so rude a father's death?

Fath Was ever father so bemoan'd a son?

K Hen Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much is our sorrow, mine, ten times so much

Son I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill [Exit with the body]

Fath These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet, 114

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go

My sighing breast shall be thy funeral cell,
And so obsequious will thy father be,

E'en for the loss of thee, having no more,

As Priam was for all his valiant sons 120

I'll bear thee hence, and let them fight that will,
For I have murder'd where I should not kill

[Exit with the body]

K Hen Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,

Here sits a king more woeful than you are 124

Alarum Excursions Enter QUEEN MARGARET,

PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER

Prince Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,

And Warwick rages like a chafed bull

Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit

Q Mar Mount you, my lord, towards Berwick post again 128

Edward and Richard like a brace of greyhounds

Having the fearful flying hare in sight,

With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,

And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,

Are at our backs and therefore hence again

Exe Away! for vengeance comes along with
them

Nay stay not to expostulate, make speed,

Or else come after I'll away before 136

K Hen Nay, take me with thee, good sweet
Exeter

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go

Whither the queen intends Forward! away!

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—The Same

A loud alarum Enter CLIFFORD, wounded

Clif Here burns my candle out, ay, here it
dies,

Which, while it lasted, gave King Henry light.

O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow

More than my body's parting with my soul. 4

My love and fear gl'd many friends to thee,

And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt,

Impairing Henry strengthening misprout York

The common people swarm like summer flies, 8

And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?

And who shines now but Henry's enemies?

O Phœbus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phæthon should check thy fiery steeds, 12
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth,
And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,
Or as thy father and his father did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York 16
They never then had sprung like summer flies,
I and ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death,
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace
For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air? 21
And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds,
No way to fly, nor strength to hold our flight 24
The foe is merciless, and will not pity,
For at their hands I have deserved no pity
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.
Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest,
I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast [He faints]

Alarum and Retreat Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers

Edw Now breathe we, lords good fortune bids us pause,
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks 32
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves 36 But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with
them?

War No, 'tis impossible he should escape,
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave,
And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead 41
[CLIFFORD groans and dies]

Edw Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Rich A deadly groan, like life and death's departing

Edw See who it is and now the battle's ended, 44

If friend or foe let him be gently us'd

Rich Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford,

Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth, 48
But set his murder'ring knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,

I mean our princely father, Duke of York

War From off the gates of York fetch down the head, 52

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there, Instead whereof let this supply the room
Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw Bring forth that fatal screech owl to our house, 56

That nothing sung but death to us and ours
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Attendants bring the body forward]

War I think his understanding is bereft, 60 Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to
thee?

Dark cloudy death o'er-shades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say

Rich O! would he did, and so perhaps he doth 64

'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,

Because he would avoid such bitter taunts

Which in the time of death he gave our father

Geo If so thou think'st, vex him with eager
words 68

Rich Clifford! ask mercy and obtain no grace

Edw Clifford, repent in bootless penitence

War Clifford! devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo While we devise fell tortures for thy faults 72

Rich Thou didst love York, and I am son to York

Edw Thou pitiedst Rutland, I will pity thee

Geo Where's Captain Margaret, to fence
you now?

War They mock thee, Clifford swear as thou wast wont 76

Rich What! not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.

I know by that he's dead, and, by my soul,

If this right hand would buy two hours' life,

That I in all despite might rail at him 81

This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing
blood

Stifle the villain whose unstaunched thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy

War Ay, but he's dead off with the traitor's
head, 85

And rear it in the place your father's stands

And now to London with triumphant march,

There to be crowned England's royal king

From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to
France, 89

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen.

So shalt thou smew both these lands together

And having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread 92

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again,

For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,

Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine
ears

First will I see the coronation, 96

And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,

To effect this marriage, so it please my lord

Edw Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be,

For on thy shoulder do I build my seat, 100

And never will I undertake the thing

Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.

Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester,

And George, of Clarence, Warwick, as ourself,

Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best 105

Rich Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloucester,

For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.

War Tut! that's a foolish observation 108

Richard, be Duke of Gloucester Now to London,
To see these honours in possession [Exeunt

ACT III

SCENE I—A Chase in the North of England

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands

First Keep Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves,
For through this laund anon the deer will come,
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer

Sec Keep I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

First Keep That cannot be, the noise of thy cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost Here stand we both, and aim we at the best
And, for the time shall not seem tedious, I'll tell thee what befell me on a day
In this self place where now we mean to stand Sec Keep Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book

K Hen From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,
To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine,
Thy place is fill'd thy sceptre wrung from thee Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed
No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee,
For how can I help them, and not myself?

First Keep Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee

This is the quondam king, let's seize upon him.

K Hen Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,
For wise men say it is the wisest course

Sec Keep Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him

First Keep Forbear awhile, we'll hear a little more

K Hen My queen and son are gone to France for aid,

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister To wife for Edward. If this news be true, Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost,
For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And Lewis a prince soon won with moving
words

By this account then Margaret may win him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much

Her sighs will make a battery in his breast,
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart,

The tiger will be mild while she doth mourn,
And Nero will be tamed with remorse,

To hear and see her plants, her brinish tears
Ay, but she's come to beg, Warwick, to give

She on his left side craving aid for Henry,

He on his right asking a wife for Edward
She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd,
He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd,
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no
more

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place
O Margaret! thus 'twill be, and thou, poor soul, Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn

Sec Keep Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K Hen More than I seem, and less than I was born to

A man at least, for less I should not be,
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

Sec Keep Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king

K Hen Why, so I am, in mind, and that's enough

Sec Keep But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K Hen My crown is in my heart, not on my head,

Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content,

A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy

Sec Keep Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,

Your crown content and you must be contented
To go along with us, for, as we think

You are the king King Edward hath depos'd,
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy

K Hen But did you never swear, and break an oath?

Sec Keep No, never such an oath, nor will not now

K Hen Where did you dwell when I was King of England?

Sec Keep Here in this country, where we now remain

K Hen I was anointed king at nine months old,

My father and my grandfather were kings,
And you were sworn true subjects unto me

And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

First Keep No,
For we were subjects but while you were king

K Hen Why, am I dead? do I not breathe
a man?

Ah! simple men, you know not what you swear
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,

And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,

And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust,

Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths for of that sin

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty Go where you will, the king shall be commanded,

And be you kings command, and I'll obey
First Keep We are true subjects to the king, King Edward.

K Hen So would you be again to Henry,
 If he were seated as King Edward is 96
First Keep We charge you, in God's name, and in the king's,

To go with us unto the officers.

K Hen In God's name, lead, your king's name be obey'd
 And what God will, that let your king perform,
 And what he will, I humbly yield unto [Exeunt]

SCENE II—London A Room in the Palace

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY

K Edw Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Alban's field

This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was slain,
 His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror
 Her suit is now, to repossess those lands, 4
 Which we in justice cannot well deny,
 Because in quarrel of the house of York
 The worthy gentleman did lose his life

Glo Your highness shall do well to grant her suit, 8

It were dishonour to deny it her

K Edw It were no less but yet I'll make a pause

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] Yea, is it so?
 I see the lady hath a thing to grant 12

Before the king will grant her humble suit Clar [Aside to GLOUCESTER] He knows the game how true he keeps the wind!

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] Silence! 1

K Edw Widow, we will consider of your suit, 16

And come some other time to know our mind
L Grey Right gracious lord, I cannot brook
 delay

May it please your highness to resolve me now,
 And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me 20

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases him shall pleasure you,
 Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar [Aside to GLOUCESTER] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall 24

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] God forbid that!
 for he'll take vantages

K Edw How many children hast thou, widow? tell me

Clar [Aside to GLOUCESTER] I think he means to beg a child of her

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] Nay, whip me, then, he'll rather give her two 28

L Grey Three, my most gracious lord Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him K Edw 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands

L Grey Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it
 then. 32

K Edw Lords, give us leave. I'll try this widow's wit.

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] Ay, good leave have you for you will have leave,

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch [Returning with CLARENCE]

K Edw Now, tell me, madam, do you love your children? 36

L Grey Ay, full as dearly as I love myself

K Edw And would you not do much to do them good?

L Grey To do them good I would sustain some harm.

K Edw Then get your husband's lands, to do them good 40

L Grey Therefore I came unto your majesty

K Edw I'll tell you how these lands are to be got

L Grey So shall you bind me to your highness' service

K Edw What service wilt thou do me, if I give them? 44

L Grey What you command, that rests in me to do

K Edw But you will take exceptions to my boon

L Grey No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K Edw Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask 48

L Grey Why, then I will do what your Grace commands

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] He plies her hard, and much rain wears the marble

Clar [Aside to GLOUCESTER] As red as fire!
 nay, then her wax must melt

L Grey Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task? 52

K Edw An easy task 'tis but to love a king

L Grey That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

K Edw Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee

L Grey I take my leave with many thousand thanks 56

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] The match is made,
 she seals it with a curtsy

K Edw But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love
 I mean

L Grey The fruits of love I mean, my loving
 hege. 59

K Edw Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.
 What love think'st thou I sue so much to get?

L Grey My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers

That love which virtue begs and virtue grants

K Edw No, by my troth, I did not mean such love 64

L Grey Why, then you mean not as I thought you did

K Edw But now you partly may perceive
 my mind

L Grey My mind will never grant what I perceive

Your highness aims at, if I am aright. 68

K Edw To tell thee plain, I aim to be with thee.

L Grey To tell you plain, I had rather be in prison.

K Edw Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands
L Grey Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower, 72
 For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K Edw Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily

L Grey Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination 76
 Accords not with the sadness of my suit

Please you dismiss me, either with 'ay,' or 'no'
K Edw Ay, if thou wilt say 'ay' to my request,

No, if thou dost say 'no' to my demand 80
L Grey Then, no, my lord My suit is at an end

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE] The widow likes him not, she knits her brows

Clar [Aside to GLOUCESTER] He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom

K Edw [Aside] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty, 84

Her words do show her wit incomparable,
 All her perfections challenge sovereignty—

One way or other, she is for a king,
 And she shall be my love, or else my queen 88

Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?
L Grey 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord

I am a subject fit to jest withal,
 But far unfit to be a sovereign 92

K Edw Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,

I speak no more than what my soul intends,
 And that is, to enjoy thee for my love

L Grey And that is more than I will yield unto 96

I know I am too mean to be your queen,
 And yet too good to be your concubine

K Edw You cavil, widow I did mean, my queen.

L Grey 'Twill grieve your Grace my sons should call you father 100

K Edw No more than when my daughters call thee mother

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children,

And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor
 Have other some why, 'tis a happy thing 104

To be the father unto many sons.
 Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen

Glo [Aside to CLARENCE.] The ghostly father now hath done his shrift

Clar [Aside to GLOUCESTER.] When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift 108

K Edw Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had

Glo The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad

K Edw You'd think it strange if I should marry her

Clar To whom, my lord?
K Edw Why, Clarence, to myself

Glo That would be ten days' wonder at the least. 113

Clar That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo By so much is the wonder in extremes

K Edw Well, jest on, brothers I can tell you both 116

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman

Nob My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
 And brought as prisoner to your palace gate

K Edw See that he be convey'd unto the Tower 120

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
 To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along Lords, use her honourably
[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER]

Glo Ay, Edward will use women honourably 124

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
 That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,

To cross me from the golden time I look for!
 And yet, between my soul's desire and me— 128

The lustful Edward's title buried,— Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,

And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,
 To take their rooms, ere I can place myself 132

A cold premeditation for my purpose!
 Why then, I do but dream on sovereignty,

Like one that stands upon a promontory,
 And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,

Wishing his foot were equal with his eye, 137
 And chides these that sunders him from thence,

Saying, he'll lade it dry to have his way
 So do I wish the crown, being so far off, 140

And so I chide the means that keep me from it,
 And so I say I'll cut the causes off,

Flattering me with impossibilities
 My eye's too quick, my heart o'erween too much, 144

Unless my hand and strength could equal them

Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard,
 What other pleasure can the world afford?

I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap, 148
 And deck my body in gay ornaments,

And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
 O miserable thought! and more unlikely

Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns 152
 Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb

And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
 She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe,

To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub,
 To make an envious mountain on my back, 157

Where sits deformity to mock my body,
 To shape my legs of an unequal size,

To disproportion me in every part,
 Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp

That carries no impression like the dam.
 And am I then a man to be below'd?

O monstrous fault! to harbour such a thought
 Then, since this earth affords no joy to me 165

But to command, to check, to o'erbear such As are of better person than myself,

I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown,
 And, while I live, to account this world but hell,

Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head
 Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
 And yet I know not how to get the crown, 172
 For many lives stand between me and home
 And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
 That rents the thorns and is rent with the thorns,
 Seeking a way and straying from the way, 176
 Not knowing how to find the open air,
 But toiling desperately to find it out,
 Torment myself to catch the English crown
 And from that torment I will free myself, 180
 Or hew my way out with a bloody axe
 Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile, And cry, 'Content,' to that which grieves my
 heart,
 And wet my cheeks with artificial tears, 184
 And frame my face to all occasions I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall,
 I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk,
 I'll play the orator as well as Nestor, 188 Deceive more shily than Ulysses could,
 And, like a Sinon, take another Troy
 I can add colours to the chameleon, 191
 Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,
 And set the murd'rous Machiavel to school
 Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
 Tut! were it further off I'll pluck it down. [Exit

SCENE III—France A Room in the Palace

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his sister LADY BONA, attended his Admiral called BOURBON the King takes his state. Then enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, and the EARL OF OXFORD LEWIS sits, and riseth up again

K Lew Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
 Sit down with us it ill befits thy state And birth that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit

Q Mar No, mighty King of France now Margaret Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
 Great Albion's queen in former golden days,
 But now mischance hath trod my title down, 8
 And with dishonour laid me on the ground,
 Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
 And to my humble seat conform myself

K Lew Why, say, fair queen, whence springs
 'this deep despair'?

Q Mar From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears
 And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares

K Lew Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself.

And sit thee by our side. [Seats her by him.]
 Yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
 Still ride in triumph over all mischance
 Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief,
 It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief 20

Q Mar Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak
 Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
 That Henry, sole possessor of my love, 24
 Is of a king become a banish'd man,
 And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn, While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York
 Usurps the regal title and the seat 28
 Of England's true-anointed lawful king
 This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
 With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir,
 Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid, 32
 And if thou fail us, all our hope is done
 Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help,
 Our people and our peers are both misled,
 Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, 36
 And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K Lew Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off
Q Mar The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe

K Lew The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee

Q Mar O! but impatience waiteth on true
 sorrow

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow

Enter WARWICK, attended

K Lew What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q Mar Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend

K Lew Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his state QUEEN

MARGARET rises
Q Mar Ay, now begins a second storm to rise,

For this is he that moves both wind and tide 48

War From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
 My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
 I come, in kindness and unfeigned love,

First, to do greetings to thy royal person, 52
 And then to crave a league of amity,
 And lastly to confirm that amity

With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
 That virtuous Lady Bona thy fair sister, 56

To England's king in lawful marriage

Q Mar If that go forward, Henry's hope is
 done.

War [To BONA] And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour, 60
 Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sov'reign's heart,
 Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,

Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue Q Mar King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear
 me speak, 65

Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest

love,
 But from deceit bred by necessity, 68

For how can tyrants safely govern home,
 Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,

That Henry liveth still, but were he dead, 72
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son.

Look, therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour,
For though usurpers sway the rule awhile, 76
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs

War Injurious Margaret!

Prince And why not queen?

War Because thy father Henry did usurp,
And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Oxf Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt, 81

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain,
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,

Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest 84
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,

Who by his prowess conquered all France
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse, 88

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?

Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest, you tell a pedigree 92
Of threescore and two years, a silly time

To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.
Oxf Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyedst thirty and six years, 96
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king

Oxf Call him my king, by whose injurious doom 101

My elder brother the Lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death? and more than so, my father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no, while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster

War And I the house of York. 108
K Lew Queen Margaret, Prince Edward

and Oxford,
Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside,

While I use further conference with Warwick
[They stand aloof]

Q Mar Heaven grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not! 112

K Lew Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen

War Thereon I pawn my credit and mine
honour 116

K Lew But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War The more that Henry was unfortunate K Lew Then further, all dissembling set aside

Tell me for truth the measure of his love 120
Unto our sister Bona

War Such it seems
As may beseech a monarch like himself

Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant, 124

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's

sun,
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,

Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain 128
A Lew Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve Bona Your grant, or your denial, shall be

mine

[To WARWICK] Yet I confess that often ere this
day 131

When I have heard your king's desert recounted, Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire

K Lew Then, Warwick, thus our sister shall be Edward's,

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn Touching the jointure that your king must make, 136

Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd

Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness That Bona shall be wife to the English king

Prince To Edward, but not to the English
king 140

Q Mar Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit

Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend K Lew And still is friend to him and Margaret 144

But if your title to the crown be weak,

As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd

From giving aid which late I promised 148
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand

That your estate requires and mine can yield War Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease,

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose 152
And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,

You have a father able to maintain you,
And better 'twere you troubled him than France

Q Mar Peace! impudent and shameless
Warwick, peace 156

Proud setter up and puller down of kings,
I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,

Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love, 160

For both of you are birds of self-same feather [A horn wended within]

K Lew Warwick, this is some post to us or these.

Enter a Post.

Mess My lord ambassador, these letters are
for you,

Sent from your brother, Marquess Montague
These from our king unto your majesty, 165

[To MARGARET] And, madam, these for you, from whom I know not.

[They all read their letters] Oxf I like it well that our fair queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his 168
Prince Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled
 I hope all s for the best K Lew Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?
Q Mar Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys 172
War Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent
K Lew What! has your king married the Lady Grey?
 And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
 Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? 176
 Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
 Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?
Q Mar I told your majesty as much before This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty 180
War King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of
 heaven,
 And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
 That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's,
 No more my king, for he dishonours me, 184
 But most himself, if he could see his shame
 Did I forget that by the house of York
 My father came untimely to his death?
 Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? 188
 Did I impale him with the regal crown?
 Did I put Henry from his native right?
 And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
 Shame on himself! for my desert is honour 192
 And to repair my honour, lost for him,
 I here renounce him and return to Henry
 My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
 And henceforth I am thy true servitor 196
 I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
 And replant Henry in his former state Q Mar Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love,
 And I forgive and quite forget old faults, 200
 And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend War So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned
 friend
 That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
 With some few bands of chosen soldiers, 204
 I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
 And force the tyrant from his seat by war
 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him
 And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, 208
 He's very likely now to fall from him,
 For matching more for wanton lust than honour,
 Or than for strength and safety of our country Bona Dear brother, how shall Bona be re-veng'd, 212
 But by thy help to this distressed queen?
Q Mar Renowned prince, how shall poor
 Henry live,
 Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?
Bona My quarrel and this English queen's are one 216
War And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with
 yours.
K Lew And mine with hers, and thine and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd
 You shall have aid 220
Q Mar Let me give humble thanks for all
 at once
K Lew Then, England's messenger, return in post,
 And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
 That Lewis of France is sending over masquers,
 To revel it with him and his new bride 225
 Thou seest what's past, go fear thy king withal Bona Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
 I'll wear the willow garland for his sake 228 Q Mar Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,
 And I am ready to put armour on War Tell him from me, that he hath done
 me wrong,
 And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long
 There's thy reward begone [Exit Messenger]
K Lew But, Warwick, 233
 Thou and Oxford with five thousand men,
 Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle,
 And, as occasion serves, this noble queen 236
 And prince shall follow with a fresh supply
 Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt
 What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?
War This shall assure my constant loyalty
 That if our queen and this young prince agree, I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy
 To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands Q Mar Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion 244
 Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
 Therefore delay not give thy hand to Warwick,
 And with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
 That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine Prince Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it, 245
 And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand
 [He gives his hand to WARWICK] K Lew Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,
 And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral, 252
 Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.
 I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
 For mocking marriage with a dame of France [Exeunt all except WARWICK]
War I came from Edward as ambassador,
 But I return his sworn and mortal foe 257
 Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
 But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
 Had he none else to make a stale but me? 260
 Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow
 I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
 And I'll be chief to bring him down again
 Not that I pity Henry's misery, 264
 But seek revenge on Edward's mockery [Exit]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, MONTAGUE, and Others.Glo Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
 Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?
Clar Alas! you know, 'tis far from hence to
 France, 4
 How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Som My lords, forbear this talk, here comes
 the king
Glo And his well-chosen bride 7
Clar I mind to tell him plainly what I think

Flourish Enter KING EDWARD, attended LADY GREY, as Queen PEMROKE, STAFFORD, HAST-INGS, and Others

K Edw Now, brother Clarence, how like you our choice,
 That you stand pensive as half malcontent?
Clar As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick,
 Which are so weak of courage and in judgment
 That they'll take no offence at our abuse 13 K Edw Suppose they take offence without a cause,
 They are but Lewis and Warwick I am Edward,

Your king and Warwick's, and must have my
 will. 16
Glo And you shall have your will, because our king

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well K Edw Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glo Not I 20
 No, God forbid that I should wish them sever'd Whom God hath join'd together, ay, and twere pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together K Edw Setting your scorns and your muslike aside, 24

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey Should not become my wife and England's
 queen

And you too, Somerset and Montague,
 Speak freely what you think. 28

Clar Then this is mine opinion that King
 Lewis

Becomes your enemy for mocking him
 About the marriage of the Lady Bona Glo And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge, 32

Is now dishonoured by this new marriage K Edw What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd

By such invention as I can devise?
Mont Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance 36

Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
 'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage

Hast Why, knows not Montague, that of itself

England is safe, if true within itself? 40

Mont Yes, but the safer when 'tis back'd with France

Hast 'Tis better using France than trusting
 France

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
 Which he hath given for fence unpregnable 44
 And with their helps only defend ourselves
 In them and in ourselves our safety lies

Clar For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the hear of the Lord Hungerford 48 K Edw Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant,

And for this once my will shall stand for law Glo And yet methinks your Grace hath not done well, 51

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales
 Unto the brother of your loving bride

She better would have fitted me or Clarence
 But in your bride you bury brotherhood

Clar Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir 56

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
 And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere

K Edw Alas, poor Clarence is it for a wife
 That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee

Clar In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment, 61

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
 To play the broker on mine own behalf,

And to that end I shortly mind to leave you K Edw Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be
 king,

And not be tied unto his brother's will Q Eliz My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen, 68
 Do me but right, and you must all confess

That I was not ignoble of descent,
 And meaner than myself have had like fortune

But as this title honours me and mine, 72
 So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,

Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow K Edw My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns 75

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee,
 So long as Edward is thy constant friend,

And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
 Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee
 too,

Unless they seek for hatred at my hands, 80
 Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,

And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath Glo [Aside] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more

Enter a Messenger

K Edw Now, messenger, what letters or what news 84

From France?
Mess My sovereign liege, no letters, and few words,

But such as I, without your special pardon,
 Dare not relate 88

K Edw Go to, we pardon thee therefore,
 in brief,

Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
 them.

What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Mess At my depart these were his very words 92
 'Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
 That Lewis of France is sending over masquers,
 To revel it with him and his new bride K Edw Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry 96
 But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?
Mess These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain
 'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly, I'll wear the willow garland for his sake' 100
K Edw I blame not her, she could say little less,
 She had the wrong But what said Henry's
 queen?
 For I have heard that she was there in place Mess Tell him, 'quoth sae, 'my mourning weeds are done, 104
 And I am ready to put armour on'
K Edw Belike she munda to play the Amazon
 But what said Warwick to these injuries?
Mess He, more incens'd against your majesty Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these
 words 109
 'Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,
 And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long K Edw Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words? 112
 Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd
 They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption
 But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?
Mess Ay, gracious sovereign, they are so link'd in friendship, 116
 That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's
 daughter Clar Belike the elder, Clarence will have the younger
 Now brother king farewell, and sit you fast,
 For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter,
 That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
 I may not prove inferior to yourself
 You, that love me and Warwick, follow me [Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows]
Glo [Aside] Not I. 124
 My thoughts aim at a further matter, I Stay not for love of Edward, but the crown K Edw Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!
 Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen,
 And haste is needful in this desperate case
 Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf Go levy men, and make prepare for war
 They are already, or quickly will be landed 132 Myself in person will straight follow you, [Exeunt PEMBROKE and STAFFORD]
 But ere I go, Hastings and Montague, Resolve my doubt You twain, of all the rest,
 Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance
 Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?
 If it be so, then both depart to him 138
 I rather wish you foes than hollow friends
 But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
 Give me assurance with some friendly vow

That I may never have you in suspect.
Mont So God help Montague as he proves true!
Hast And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause! 144
K Edw Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?
Glo Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand
 you
K Edw Why, so! then am I sure of victory
 Now therefore let us hence, and lose no hour
 Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power
 [Exeunt]

SCENE II—A Plain in Warwickshire

Enter WARWICK, and OXFORD, with French and other Forces

War Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes
 well,
 The common people by numbers swarm to us

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET

But see where Somerset and Clarence come!
 Speak suddenly my lords, are we all friends?
Clar Fear not that, my lord 5 War Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto
 Warwick,
 And welcome, Somerset I hold it cowardice,
 To rest mistrustful where a noble heart 8
 Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love, Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's
 brother,
 Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings
 But welcome sweet Clarence, my daughter shall be thine 12
 And now what rests, but in night's coverture, Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
 His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
 And but attended by a simple guard, 16
 We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?
 Our scouts have found the adventure very easy
 That as Ulysses, and stout Diomedes,
 With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents, 20
 And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds,
 So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,
 At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,
 And seize himself, I say not, slaughter him,
 For I intend but only to surprise him. 25
 You, that will follow me to this attempt, Applaud the name of Henry with your leader
 [They all cry 'Henry!']
 Why then, let's on our way in silent sort. 28
 For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! [Exeunt]

SCENE III—EDWARD'S Camp near Warwick

Enter certain Watchmen to guard the KING'S tent

First Watch Come on, my masters, each man take his stand,
 The king, by this, is set him down to sleep.

Sec Watch What, will he not to bed?
First Watch Why, no for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest
 Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd

Sec Watch To-morrow then belike shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report

Thrd Watch But say, I pray, what nobleman is that

That with the king here resteth in his tent?

First Watch 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

Thrd Watch O! is it so? But why commands the king

That his chief followers lodge in towns about
 him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field?

Sec Watch 'Tis the more honour, because the more dangerous

Thrd Watch Ay, but give me worship and quietness,

I like it better than a dangerous honour
 If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.
First Watch Unless our halberds did shut up his passage

Sec Watch Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal tent,

But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET,
 and Forces

War This is his tent, and see where stand his guard

Courage my masters! honour now or never!
 But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

First Watch Who goes there?

Sec Watch Stay, or thou diest.

[WARWICK and the rest cry all, 'Warwick! Warwick!' and set upon the Guard who fly, crying, 'Arm! Arm!']

WARWICK and the rest following them

Drums beating, and Trumpets sounding, re-enter WARWICK and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair

GLOUCESTER and HASTINGS fly over the stage

Som What are they that fly there?

War Richard and Hastings let them go, here's the duke.

K Edw The duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted last,

Thou call'dst me king!

War Ay, but the case is alter'd
 When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,

Then I degraded you from being king.

And come now to create you Duke of York.

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,
 That know not how to use ambassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one wife,
 Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,

Nor how to study for the people's welfare,
 Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K Edw Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?

Nay, then, I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
 Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,

Edward will always bear himself as king

Though Fortune's malice overthrow my state,
 My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel

War Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,
 And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow

My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
 See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd

Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.

When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

I'll follow you, and tell what answer
 Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him

Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York

K Edw What fates impose, that men must needs abide,

It boots not to resist both wind and tide
 [Exit, led out SOMERSET with him]

Oxf What now remains, my lords, for us to do,

But march to London with our soldiers?

War Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do.

To free King Henry from imprisonment,
 And see him seated in the regal throne

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — London A Room in the Palace

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS

Riv Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q Eliz Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q Eliz No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv Then is my sovereign slain?

Q Eliz Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard

Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares

And as I further have to understand,
 Is now committed to the Bishop of York,

Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe

Riv These news, I must confess, are full of
 grief,

Yet gracious madam, bear it as you may Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day

Q Eliz Till then fair hope must hinder life's decay

And I the rather wean me from despair
 For love of Edward's offspring in my womb

This is it that makes me bridle passion,
 And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross,

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
 And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,

Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

24

Riv But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q Eliz I am inform'd that he comes towards London,
To set the crown once more on Henry's head
Guess thou the rest, King Edward's friends must down 28

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,—
For trust not him that hath once broken faith,— I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward's right 32
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud
Come, therefore let us fly while we may fly
If Warwick take us we are sure to die [Exeunt

SCENE V—A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and Others

Glo Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley, Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefeest thicket of the park
Thus stands the case You know, our king, my brother, 4

Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty,
And often but attended with weak guard
Comes hunting this way to disport himself 8
I have advertis'd him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game
He shall here find his friends, with horse and men 12

To set him free from his captivity

Enter KING EDWARD and a Huntsman

Hunt This way, my lord, for this way lies the game

K Edw Nay, this way, man see where the huntsmen stand Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest, 16

Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?
Glo Brother, the time and case requireth haste

Your horse stands ready at the park corner

K Edw But whither shall we then? 20

Hast To Lynn, my lord, and ship from thence to Flanders

Glo Well guess'd, believe me, for that was my meaning

K Edw Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness

Glo But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk 24

K Edw Huntsman, what sayst thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt Better do so than tarry and be hang'd

Glo Come then, away, let's ha' no more ado

K Edw Bishop, farewell shield thee from Warwick's frown, 28

And pray that I may repossess the crown.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI—A Room in the Tower

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMERSET, young RICHMOND OXFORD, MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants

K Hen Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys, 4
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieu Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns,

But if a humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty 8

K Hen For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure,
Ay, such a pleasure as encaged birds 12
Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty

But Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee

He was the author, thou the instrument 18
Therefore, that I may conquer Fortune's spite
By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee, 24
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds

War Your Grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous
And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying and avoiding Fortune's malice, 28
For few men rightly temper with the stars
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in place

Clar No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway, 32

To whom the heavens, in thy nativity,
Adjudg'd an olive branch and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace, and war,

And therefore I yield thee my free consent 36
War And I choose Clarence only for protector

K Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,

That no dissension hinder government 40
I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life,
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise. 44

War What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar That he consents, if Warwick yield consent.

For on thy fortune I repose myself

War Why then, though loath, yet must I be content 48

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place,
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his ease 52
And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate

Clar What else? and that succession be determin'd 56

War Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part

K Hen But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, for I command no more
That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward,
Be sent for, to return from France with speed
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar It shall be done my sov'reign, with all
speed 64

K Hen My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that

Of whom you seem to have so tender care?
Som My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond

K Hen Come hither England's hope [Lays his hand on his head] If secret powers 68

Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss

His looks are full of peaceful majesty,
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,

His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself 73
Likely in time to bless a regal throne

Make much of him, my lords, for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me

Enter a Post.

War What news, my friend? 77

Mess That Edward is escaped from your
brother,

And fled as he hears since, to Burgundy War Unsavoury news! but how made he escape? 80

Mess He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester,

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side,

And from the bishop's huntsmen rescu'd him
For hunting was his daily exercise 85

War My brother was too careless of his charge

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide A salve for any sore that may betide 88

[Exeunt KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, Lieutenant, and Attendants

Som My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more wars before 't be long

As Henry's late presaging prophecy 92
Did glad my heart with hope of this young

Richmond,

So do h my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
What may befall him to his harm and ours

Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst, Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,

Till storms be past of civil enmity

Oxf Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown
'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall
down. 100

Som It shall be so, he shall to Brittany Come, therefore, let's about it speedily [Exeunt

SCENE VII.—Before York

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS,
and Forces

K Edw Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Yet thus far Fortune maketh us amends,
And says, that once more I shall interchange

My waned state for Henry's regal crown 4
We'll have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas,

And brought desired help from Burgundy
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd

From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of
York, 8

But that we enter, as into our dukedom?
Glo The gates made fast! Brother, I like not
this,

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within 12

K Edw Tush, man! abodements must not now affright us

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us

Hast My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them 16

Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York and his Brethren

May My lords, we were forewarned of your coming

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves,
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry

K Edw But, Master Mayor, if Henry be your king, 20

Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of York May True, my good lord, I know you for no less

K Edw Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,

As being well content with that alone 24
Glo [Aside] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow

Hast Why Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt? 27

Open the gates, we are King Henry's friends May Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd [Exit, with Aldermen, above

Glo A wisestout captain, and soon persuaded Hast The good old man would fain that all were well 31

So 'twere not 'long of him but being enter'd,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade

Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor and two Aldermen

K Edw So, Master Mayor, these gates must not be shut

But in the night, or in the time of war 36

What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys, [Takes his keys
 For Edward will defend the town and thee,
 And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Enter MONTGOMERY and Forces

Glo Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
 Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd. 41

K Edw Welcome, Sir John! but why come you in arms?

Mont To help King Edward in his time of storm,

As every loyal subject ought to do 44

K Edw Thanks, good Montgomery, but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim
 Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont Then fare you well, for I will hence
 again 48

I came to serve a king and not a duke
 Drummer, strike up, and let us march away

[A march begun K Edw Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile, and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be re-cover'd. 52

Mont What talk you of debating? in few
 words,

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,
 I'll leave you to your fortune, and be gone

To keep them back that come to succour you Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title? 57

Glo Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K Edw When we grow stronger then we'll make our claim,

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning 60

Hast Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule

Glo And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand
 The brut thereof will bring you many friends

K Edw Then be it as you will, for 'tis my
 right, 65

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont Ay, now my sov reign speaketh like himself

And now will I be Edward's champion. 68

Hast Sound, trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim'd,

Come, fellow soldier, make thou proclamation [Gives him a paper Flourish

Sold Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c 73

Mont And whoso'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single fight.
 [Throws down his gauntlet

All Long live Edward the Fourth! 76

K Edw Thanks, brave Montgomery,—and thanks unto you all

If Fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.
 Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York

And when the morning sun shall raise his car
 Above the border of this horizon, 81
 We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates,
 For well I wot that Henry is no soldier
 Ah, froward Clarence, how evil it becometh thee
 To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother! 85 Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers doubt not of the day,
 And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay

[Exeunt

SCENE VIII.—London A Room in the Palace

Flourish Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD

War What counsel, lords? Edward from Belga,

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,
 Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,
 And with his troops doth march amain to London, 4

And many giddy people flock to him.

Oxf Let'slevymen, and beathum back again.

Clar A little fire is quickly trodden out,
 Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench 8

War In Warwickshire I have true-hearted
 friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war,
 Those will I muster up, and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent
 The knights and gentlemen to come with thee

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham, Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st 16

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well be-lov'd

In Oxfordshire, shalt muster up thy friends.
 My sov reign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girt in with the ocean, 20
 Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,
 Shall rest in London till we come to him.

Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply
 Farewell, my sovereign 24

K Hen Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope

Clar In sign of truth, I kiss your highness'
 hand.

K Hen Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont Comfort, my lord, and so, I take my
 leave. 28

Oxf [Kissing HENRY'S hand] And thus I seal
 my truth, and bid adieu.

K Hen Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War Farewell, sweet lords let's meet at Coventry 32

[Exeunt all but KING HENRY and EXETER.

K Hen Here at the palace will I rest awhile.
 Cousin of Exeter, what thanks your lordship?

Methinks the power that Edward hath in field
 Should not be able to encounter mine. 36

Exe The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

K Hen That's not my fear, my meed hath got me fame

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands, Nor posted off their suits with slow delays, 40
My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dried their water-flowing tears,
I have not been desirous of their wealth, 44
Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies, Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd

Then why should they love Edward more than me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace 48
And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.

(Shout within, 'A Lancaster! A Lancaster!')
Exe Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

K Edw Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry!
bear him hence 52

And once again proclaim us King of England.
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow

Now stops thy spring, my sea shall suck them dry,

And swell so much the higher by their ebb 56
Hence with him to the Tower! let him not speak.

(Exeunt some with KING HENRY) And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains
The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay, 60

Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay
Glo Away betimes, before his forces join,

And take the great-grown traitor unawares Brave warriors, march a main towards Coventry
(Exeunt)

ACT V

SCENE I.—Coventry

Enter, upon the Walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and Others

War Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?
First Mess By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward. 3

War How far off is our brother Montague?
Where is the post that came from Montague?

Sec Mess By this at Damtry, with a punsant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War Say, Somerville, what says my loving
son? 7

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?
Som At Southam I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence.
(Drum heard)

War Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.

Som It is not his, my lord, here Southam lies
The drum your honour hears marcheth from
Warwick. 13

War Who should that be? belike, unlook'd for friends

Som They are at hand, and you shall quickly
know

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and Forces

K Edw Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle 16

Glo See how the surly Warwick mans the wall.

War O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward
come?

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could hear no news of his repair? 20

K Edw Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,
Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee?—

Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy?
And he shall pardon thee these outrages 24

War Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces
hence,—

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee
down?—

Call Warwick patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York

Glo I thought, at least, he would have said
the king, 29

Or did he make the jest against his will?

War Is not a dukedom sir, a goodly gift?
Glo Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give

I'll do thee service for so good a gift 33

War 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy
brother

K Edw Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight
And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again,

And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject K Edw But Warwick's king is Edward's

prisoner,
And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this, 40

What is the body, when the head is off?
Glo Alas! that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was shily finger'd from the deck 44

You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,
And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower

K Edw 'Tis even so yet you are Warwick still.

Glo Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down, kneel down 48

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.
War I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other fling it at thy face,
Than bear so low a sail to strike to thee. 52

K Edw Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut off,

Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood
 'Wind-changing Warwick now can change no
 more' 57

Enter OXFORD, with Soldiers, drum, and colours War O cheerful colours! see where Oxford
 comes! 58

Oxf Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the city]

Glo The gates are open, let us enter too 60 K Edw So other foes may set upon our backs

Stand we in good array, for they no doubt Will issue out again and bid us battle
 If not the city being but of small defence, 64
 We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same War O! welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help

Enter MONTAGUE, with Soldiers, drum, and colours

Mont Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the city]

Glo Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason 68

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear K Edw The harder match'd, the greater victory

My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with Soldiers, drum, and
 colours

Som Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster! 72

[He and his Forces enter the city]

Glo Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somers-
 set,
 Have sold their lives unto the house of York,
 And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold

Enter CLARENCE, with Forces, drum, and
 colours

War And lo! where George of Clarence sweeps along, 76

Of force enough to bid his brother battle,
 With whom an upright zeal to right prevails
 More than the nature of a brother's love Come, Clarence, come, thou wilt, if Warwick call 80

Clar Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

[Taking the red rose out of his hat]

Look here, I throw my infancy at thee
 I will not ruin my father's house,
 Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
 And set up Lancaster Why, trow st thou,
 Warwick, 85

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
 To bend the fatal instruments of war Against his brother and his lawful king? 88

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath
 To keep that oath were more impiety
 Than Jephthah's, when he sacrific'd his daughter
 I am so sorry for my trespass made 92

That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,
 I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe,

With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee—
 As I will meet thee if thou stir abroad— 96
 To plague thee for thy foul misleading me
 And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
 And to my brother turn my blushing cheek.
 Pardon me, Edward I will make amends, 100
 And Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
 For I will henceforth be no more unconstant

K Edw Now welcome more, and ten times more below'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate 104

Glo Welcome, good Clarence, this is brother-like

War O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust?

K Edw What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight? 107

O! shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War Alas! I am not coop'd here for defence
 I will away towards Barnet presently,

And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st K Edw Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way 112

Lords, to the field Saint George and victory!
 [March Exeunt]

SCENE II — A Field of Battle near Barnet

Alarums and Excursions Enter KING EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK, wounded

K Edw So, lie thou there die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.
 Now Montague sit fast I seek for thee,

That Warwick's bones may keep thine company [Exit]

War Ah! who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe, 5

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?

Why ask I that? my mangled body shows, My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows, 8

That I must yield my body to the earth,
 And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe

Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, 11
 Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
 Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,

Whose top branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree,

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil, 16

Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,
 To search the secret treasons of the world

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
 Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres, 20

For who liv'd king but I could dig his grave?

And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?

Lo! now my glory smear'd in dust and blood,
 My parks, my walks, my manors that I had, 24

Even now forsake me, and, of all my lands
 Is nothing left me but my body's length.

Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we must. 28

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET

Som. Ah! Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again.

The queen from France hath brought a puissant power,

Even now we heard the news. Ah! couldst thou fly War Why, then, I would not fly Ah! Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,

And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile

Thou lov'st me not, for, brother, if thou didst,

Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood

That glues my lips and will not let me speak.

Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah! Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his last,

And to the latest gasp, cried out for Warwick;

And said, 'Commend me to my valiant brother'

And more he would have said, and more he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault,

That might not be distinguish'd but at last

I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,

O! farewell, Warwick!

War Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves,

For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oxf Away, away, to meet the queen's great power

[Exeunt, bearing off WARWICK'S body]

SCENE III — Another Part of the Field

Flourish Enter KING EDWARD, in triumph with CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and the rest

K Edw Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory

But in the midst of this bright-shining day,

I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud,

That will encounter with our glorious sun,

Ere he attain his easeful western bed

I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen

Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast,

And, as we hear, march on to fight with us

Clar A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,

And blow it to the source from whence it came

Thy very beams will dry those vapours up,

For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo The queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her

If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd

Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K Edw We are advertis'd by our loving friends

That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury

We, having now the best at Barnet field,

Will thither straight, for willingness bids way

And, as we march our strength will be augmented

In every county as we go along

Strike up the drum! cry 'Courage!' and away

[Flourish Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Plains near Tewksbury

March Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers

Q Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,

But cheerily seek how to redress their harms

What though the mast be now blown over-board,

The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,

And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?

Yet lives our pilot still is't meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad

With tearful eyes add water to the sea,

And give more strength to that which hath too much,

Whiles in his moan the ship splits on the rock,

Which industry and courage might have sav'd?

Ah! what a shame! ah, what a fault were this

Say Warwick was our anchor, what of that?

And Montague our top-mast, what of him?

Our slaughter'd friends the tackles, what of these?

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?

And Somerset another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?

And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I

For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?

We will not from the helm, to sit and weep,

But keep our course, though the rough wind say no,

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wrack

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair

And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?

What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?

And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?

All those the enemies to our poor bark

Say you can swim, alas! 'tis but a while

Tread on the sand, why, there you quickly sink

Bestride the rock the tide will wash you off,

Or else you famish, that's a threefold death.

This speak I, lords, to let you understand,

In case some one of you would fly from us,

That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers

More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks

Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided?

'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear

Prince Methinks a woman of this valiant spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,

Infuse his breast with magnanimity,

And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.

I speak not thus, as doubting any here,

For did I but suspect a fearful man,

He should have leave to go away betimes,

Lest in our need he might infect another,

And make him of like spirit to himself

If any such be here, as God forbid!

Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf Women and children of so high a courage
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame

O brave young prince! thy famous grandfather Doth live again in thee long mayst thou live
To bear his image and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,

Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day, 56
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder d at.

Q Mar Thanks, gentle Somerset sweet Oxford, thanks

Prince And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else

Enter a Messenger

Mess Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at
hand, 60

Ready to fight, therefore be resolute

Oxf I thought no less it is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided

Som But he's deceiv'd, we are in readiness

Q Mar This cheers my heart to see your
forwardness 65

Oxf Here pitch our battle, hence we will not budge

March *Enter, at a distance, KING EDWARD,
CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces*

K Edw Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood

Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your strength, 68

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night
I need not add more fuel to your fire,

For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out

Give signal to the fight and to it, lords 72

Q Mar Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say

My tears gainsay, for every word I speak, Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes

Therefore, no more but this Henry, your sovereign, 76

Is prisoner to the foe, his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter house his subjects slain,

His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent

And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoul 80

You fight in justice then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both armies]

SCENE V—Another Part of the Same

Alarums Excursions and afterwards a retreat

Then enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, and Forces with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET prisoners

K Edw Now, here a period of tumultuous
broils

Away with Oxford to Hames Castle straight

For Somerset, off with his guilty head

Go, bear them hence, I will not hear them
speak 4

Oxf For my part, I'll not trouble thee with
words

Som Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded]

Q Mar So part we sadly in this troublous
world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. 8

K Edw Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life?

Glo It is and lo, where youthful Edward
comes.

Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD

K Edw Bring forth the gallant let us hear him speak. 12

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to? 16

Prince Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth

Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,

Which, traitor thou wouldst have me answer to 21

Q Mar Ah! that thy father had been so
resolv'd

Glo That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster 24

Prince Let Æsop fable in a winter's night,

His curish riddles sort not with this place

Glo By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word

Q Mar Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men 28

Glo For God's sake take away this captive scold

Prince Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather

K Edw Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue

Clar Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert,

Prince I know my duty, you are all undutiful 33

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjurd George,

And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all,

I am your better traitors as ye are, 36

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K Edw Take that, the likeness of this railer
here

Glo Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony [Stabs him]

Clar And there's for twitting me with perjury [Stabs him]

Q Mar O, kill me too! 41

Glo Marry and shall [Offers to kill her]

K Edw Hold, Richard, hold! for we have done too much

Glo Why should she live, to fill the world with words? 44

K Edw What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery

Glo Clarence, excuse me to the king, my brother, I'll hence to London on a serious matter
 Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news
Clar What? what? 49
Glo The Tower! the Tower! [Exit
Q Mar O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers!
 They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,
 Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,
 If this foul deed were by, to equal it
 He was a man, thus, in respect, a child, 56
 And men ne'er spend their fury on a child
 What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?

No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak
 And I will speak, that so my heart may burst Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals! 61
 How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!
 You have no children, butchers! if you had,
 The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse 64

But if you ever chance to have a child
 Look in his youth to have him so cut off
 As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!

K Edw Away with her! go, bear her hence perforce 68

Q Mar Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here

Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death

What! wilt thou not? then, Clarence, do it thou

Clar By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease 72

Q Mar Good Clarence, do, sweet Clarence, do thou do it

Clar Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q Mar Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself

'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity 76
 What! wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher,

Hard favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here: murder is thy alms-deed,
 Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back. 80

K Edw Away, I say! I charge ye, bear her hence

Q Mar So come to you and yours, as to this prince! [Exit, led out forcibly K Edw Where's Richard gone?

Clar To London, all in post, and, as I guess, 84

To make a bloody supper in the Tower

K Edw He's sudden if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence: discharge the common sort 87

With pray and thanks, and let's away to London
 And see our gentle queen how well she fares,
 By this, I hope, she hath a son for me

[Exeunt

SCENE VI—London A Room in the Tower

KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo Good day, my lord! What! at your book so hard?

K Hen Ay, my good lord—my lord, I should say rather,

'Tis sin to flatter, 'good' was little better
 Good Gloucester and good devil were alike,
 And both preposterous, therefore, not good lord? 5

Glo Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer [Exit Lieutenant

K Hen So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
 And next his throat unto the butcher's knife

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?
Glo Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind,

The thief doth fear each bush an officer 12
K Hen The bird that hath been lured in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush,
 And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,

Have now the fatal object in my eye 16
 Where my poor young was lured in, was caught, and kill'd

Glo Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl!
 And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd

K Hen I Dædalus my poor boy, Icarus,
 Thy father, Minos, that denied our course,

The sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,
 Thy brother Edward and thyself the sea, 24

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life
 Ah! kill me with thy weapon, not with words

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point
 Than can my ears that tragic history 28

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

Glo Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K Hen A persecutor, I am sure, thou art
 If murder ring innocents be executing, 32

Why, then thou art an executioner
Glo Thy son I kill'd for his presumption

K Hen Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine 36
 And thus I prophesy that many a thousand,

Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,
 And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's, 39

And many an orphan's water-standing eye,
 Men for their sons', wives for their husbands',

And orphans for their parents' timeless death,
 Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born

The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign, 44
 The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time,

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees!

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
 And chattering pies in dismal discords sung 48

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's
hope,

To wit an indigest deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree 52 Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast born,

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou cam'st— 56

Glo I'll hear no more die, prophet, in thy speech [Stabs him]

For in this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd K Hen Ay, and for much more slaughter after this

O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies] Glo What! will the aspiring blood of Lancaster 61

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted

See how my sword weeps for the poor king's
death!

O! may such purple tears be always shed 64
From those that wish the downfall of our house
If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell, and say I sent thee thither,

[Stabs him again] 68

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of,
For I have often heard my mother say
I came into the world with my legs forward

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste, 72
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd, and the women cried
'O! Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth'

And so I was, which plainly signified 76
That I should snarl and bite and play the dog

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it

I have no brother, I am like no brother, 80
And this word 'love,' which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like one another
And not in me I am myself alone

Clarence, beware, thou keep'st me from the light 84

But I will sort a pitchy day for thee,
For I will buzz abroad such prophecies

That Edward shall be fearful of his life,
And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death 88

King Henry and the prince his son are gone
Clarence, thy turn is next and then the rest,

Counting myself but bad till I be best.
I'll throw thy body in another room, 92

And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom
[Exit with the body]

SCENE VII — The same A Room in the Palace

KING EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne — QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Others, near him.

K Edw Once more we sit in England's royal throne,

Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies
What valiant foemen like to autumn's corn, Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride!

Three Dukes of Somerset, threefo'd renown'd 4
For hardy and undoubted champions,

Two Cliffords, as the father and the son,
And two Northumberlands two braver men.

Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's
sound,

With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd 12

Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security

Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy Young Ned, for thee thine uncles and myself 16

Have in our armours watch'd the winter's nigh!

Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossess the crown in
peace,

And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain Glo [Aside] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid, 21

For yet I am not look'd on in the world
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave,
And heave it shall some weight, or break my
back 24

Work thou the way, and thou shalt execute K Edw Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen,

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both Clar The duty, that I owe unto your
majesty 28

I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe K Edw Thanks, noble Clarence, worthy brother, thanks

Glo And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit 32 [Aside] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,

And cried 'all hail!' when as he meant all
harm

K Edw Now am I seated as my soul delights,

Having my country's peace and brothers' loves Clar What will your Grace have done with Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the King of France Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,

And hither have they sent it for her ransom K Edw Away with her, and waft her hence to France. 41

And now what rests but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,

Such as befit the pleasure of the court? 44
Sound, drums and trumpets! farewell, sour annoy!

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.
[Exit.]

SCENE — England.

ACT I

SCENE I.—London. A Street

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York,
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried. 4
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths,
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments,
Our stern alarums changed to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front,
And now,—instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,—
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber 12
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass,
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
majesty 16
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph,
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time 20
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them,
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace, 24
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my shadow in the sun
And descant on mine own deformity
And therefore since I cannot prove a lover, 28
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determin'd to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous, 32
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate the one against the other
And if King Edward be as true and just 36
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says, that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be 40 Dive, thoughts, down to my soul here Clarence comes
Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY Brother, good day what means this armed guard
That waits upon your Grace?
Clar His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo Upon what cause?
Clar Because my name is George Glo Alack! my lord, that fault is none of
 yours, 47
 He should, for that, commit your godfathers.
 O' belike his majesty hath some intent
 That you should be new-christen'd in the Tower
 But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?
Clar Yea Richard, when I know, for I protest 52
 As yet I do not but, as I can learn,
 He hearkens after prophecies and dreams
 And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
 And says a wizard told him that by G 56
 His issue disinherited should be,
 And, for my name of George begins with G,
 It follows in his thought that I am he 59
 These, as I learn, and such like toys as these,
 Have mov'd his highness to commit me now Glo Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women
 'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower,
 My Lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she 64
 That tempts him to this extremity
 Was it not she and that good man of worship, Antony Woodville, her brother there,
 That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower, 68
 From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
 We are not safe, Clarence, we are not safe Clar By heaven, I think there is no man secure
 But the queen's kindred and night-walking heralds 72
 That trudge betwixt the king and Mistress
 Shore
 Heard you not what a humble suppliant
 Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?
Glo Humbly complaining to her deity 76
 Got my lord chamberlain his liberty
 I'll tell you what, I think it is our way,
 If we will keep in favour with the king,
 To be her men and wear her livery 80
 The jealous o'er-worn widow and herself, Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-
 women,
 Are mighty gossips in our monarchy Brak I beseech your Graces both to pardon
 me, 84
 His majesty hath straitly given in charge
 That no man shall have private conference,
 Of what degree soever, with your brother
Glo Even so, an please your worship,
 Brakenbury, 88
 You may partake of anything we say
 We speak no treason, man we say the king
 Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen
 Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous, 92
 We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
 A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing
 tongue,
 And that the queen's kindred are made gentle-folks.
 How say you, sir? can you deny all this? 96 Brak With this, my lord, myself have nought to do

Glo Naught to do with Mstress Shore! I tell thee, fellow,
 He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
 Were best to do it secretly, alone 100
Brak What one, my lord?
Glo Her husband, knave. Wouldst thou betray me?
Brak I beseech your Grace to pardon me,
 and withal
 Forbear your conference with the noble duke Clar We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey 105
Glo We are the queen's subjects, and must obey
 Brother, farewell I will unto the king,
 And whatsoever you will employ me in, 108
 Were it to call King Edward's widow sister,
 I will perform it to enfranchise you.
 Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood
 Touches me deeper than you can imagine 112
Clar I know it pleaseth neither of us well Glo Well, your imprisonment shall not be long,
 I will deliver you, or else lie for you.
 Meantime, have patience
Clar I must perforce farewell [Exeunt CLARENCE, BRAKENBURY, and Guard
Glo Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return, 117
 Simple, plain Clarence! I do love thee so That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
 If heaven will take the present at our hands
 But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings! 121

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast Good time of day unto my gracious
 lord!
Glo As much unto my good lord chamberlain!
 Well are you welcome to this open air 124
 How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?
Hast With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must
 But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks
 That were the cause of my imprisonment.
Glo No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Clarence too, 129
 For they that were your enemies are his,
 And have prevail'd as much on him as you.
Hast More pity that the eagles should be mew'd, 132
 While kites and buzzards prey at liberty
Glo What news abroad?
Hast No news so bad abroad as this at home,
 The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy, 136
 And his physicians fear him mightily Glo Now by Saint Paul, this news is bad
 indeed
 O! he hath kept an evil diet long,
 And over-much consum'd his royal person
 'Tis very grievous to be thought upon. 141
 What, is he in his bed?
Hast. He is.

Glo Go you before, and I will follow you
[Exit HASTINGS
He cannot live, I hope, and must not die 144 Till George be pack'd with post horse up to heaven

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With less well steel'd with weighty arguments
And, if I fail not in my deep intent, 148
Clarence hath not another day to live Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy

And leave the world for me to bustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter 152
What though I kill'd her husband and her
father,

The readiest way to make the wench amend
Is to become her husband and her father
The which will I, not all so much for love 156
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto

But yet I run before my horse to market Clarence still breathes, Edward still lives and reigns 160
When they are gone, then must I count my gains [Exit

SCENE II—London Another Street

Enter the corpse of KING HENRY THE SIXTH, borne in an open coffin Gentlemen bearing halberds to guard it and LADY ANNE, as mourner

Anne Set down, set down your honourable load,

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I a while obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster 4
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost, 8
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Stab'd by the self same hand that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life, 12
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes
O! cursed be the hand that made these holes, Cursed the heart that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood that let this blood from
hence! 16

More dreadful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives! 20
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view, 24
And that be heir to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made More miserable by the death of him
Than I am made by my young lord and thee!
Come, now toward Chertsey with your holy load, 29

Taken from Paul's to be interred there,
And still, as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whilst I lament King Henry's corpse [The Bearers take up the corpse and advance

Enter GLOUCESTER

Glo Stay, you that bear the corpse, and set it
down 33

Anne What black magician conjures up this fiend,

To stop devoted charitable deeds?
Glo Villains! set down the corpse, or, by Saint Paul, 36

I'll make a corpse of him that disobeys First Gent My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass

Glo Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command 39

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,

And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness
[The Bearers set down the coffin

Anne What! do you tremble? are you all afraid?

Alas! I blame you not for you are mortal, 44
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.

Avaunt! thou dreadful minister of hell,
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,

His soul thou canst not have therefore, begone
Glo Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst

Anne Foul devil, for God's sake hence, and trouble us not,

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims 52

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries

O! gentlemen, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open the congel'd mouths and bleed afresh

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity, 57
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood

From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, 60
Provokes this deluge most unnatural

O God! which this blood mad'st, revenge his
death

O earth! which this blood drink'st, revenge his
death,

Either heaven with lightning strike the mur-derer dead, 64

Or earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,

Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!
Glo Lady, you know no rules of charity, 68

Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses Anne Villain, thou know'st no law of God

nor man
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity

Glo But I know none, and therefore am no
beast 72

Anne O! wonderful, when devils tell the truth

Glo More wonderful when angels are so angry

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman

Of these supposed evils to give me leave, 76
 By circumstance but to acquit myself
Anne Vouchsafe, diffus d infection of a man,
 For these known evils, but to give me leave,
 By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self 80 Glo Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have
 Some patient leisure to excuse myself Anne Foulter than heart can think thee, thou canst make
 No excuse current, but to hang thyself 84
Glo By such despair I should accuse myself Anne And by despairing shouldst thou stand excus'd
 For doing worthy vengeance on thyself
 Which didst unworthy slaughter upon others Glo Say that I slew them not Anne Then say they were not slain
 But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee Glo I did not kill your husband.
Anne Why, then he is alive Glo Nay, he is dead, and slain by Edward's
 hand 92
Anne In thy foul throat thou liest Queen
 Margaret saw
 Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood,
 The which thou once didst bend against her
 breast,
 But that thy brothers beat aside the point 96
Glo I was provoked by hers and rous'd my tongue,
 That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders Anne Thou wast provoked by thy bloody
 mind, 99
 That never dreamt on aught but butcheries Didst thou not kill this king?
Glo I grant ye
Anne Dost grant me, hedge-hog? Then,
 God grant me too
 Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
 O! he was gentle mild and virtuous 105 Glo The fitter for the King of heaven, that hath him
Anne He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come Glo Let him thank me, that help'd to send him thither 108
 For he was fitter for that place than earth.
Anne And thou unfit for any place but hell Glo Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it
Anne Some dungeon
Glo Your bed-chamber Anne Ill rest betide the chamber where thou hast! 113
Glo So will it, madam, till I lie with you.
Anne I hope so
Glo I know so But, gentle Lady Anne,
 To leave this keen encounter of our wits, 116
 And fall somewhat into a slower method,
 Is not the cause of the timeless deaths
 Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
 As blameful as the executioner? 120 Anne Thou wast the cause, and most accurs'd effect.
Glo Your beauty was the cause of that effect,
 Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep

To undertake the death of all the world 124
 So might I live one hour in your sweet bosom
Anne If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide, These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks
Glo These eyes could not endure that beauty's wrack, 128
 You should not blemish it if I stood by
 As all the world is cheered by the sun,
 So I by that: 't is my day my life.
Anne Black night o'ershade thy day and death thy life! 132 Glo Curse not thyself, fair creature, thou art both
Anne I would I were to be reveng'd on thee
Glo It is a quarrel most unnatural,
 To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee 136
Anne It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
 To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband
Glo He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband, Did it to help thee to a better husband 140 Anne His better doth not breathe upon the earth
Glo He lives that loves thee better than he could Anne Name him
Glo Plantagenet
Anne Why, that was he Glo The self-same name, but one of better nature 144
Anne Where is he?
Glo Here [She spitteth at him] Why dost thou spit at me?
Anne Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!
Glo Never came poison from so sweet a
 place 147
Anne Never hung poison on a fouler toad
 Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glo Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected
 mine
Anne Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!
Glo I would they were, that I might die at once, 152
 For now they kill me with a living death
 Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt
 tears,
 Sham'd their aspects with store of childish
 drops, 155
 These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,
 No, when my father York and Edward wept
 To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at
 him,
 Nor when thy war-like father like a child, 160
 Told the sad story of my father's death,
 And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,
 That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
 Like trees bedash'd with rain in that sad time,
 My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear, 165
 And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
 Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping
 I never su'd to friend, nor enemy, 168

My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words,

But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.

[She looks scornfully at him.]

Teach not thy lip such scorn, for it was made

For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive

Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword,

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,

And let the soul forth that adoreth thee,

I lay it open to the deadly stroke,

And humbly beg the death upon my knee

[He lays his breast open she offers at it with his sword]

Nay, do not pause, for I did kill King Henry,

But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me

Nay, now dispatch, 'twas I that stabb'd young

Edward, [She again offers at his breast]

But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on

[She lets fall the sword]

Take up the sword again, or take up me.

Anne Anne, dissembler though I wish thy

death,

I will not be thy executioner

Glo Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.

Anne I have already

Glo That was in thy rage

Speak it again, and, even with the word,

This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love,

Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love

To both their deaths shalt thou be accessory

Anne I would I knew thy heart.

Glo 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne I fear me both are false

Glo Then never man was true.

Anne Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo Say, then, my peace is made

Anne That shalt thou know hereafter

Glo But shall I live in hope?

Anne All men, I hope, live so

Glo Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne To take is not to give.

[She puts on the ring]

Glo Look, now my ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart,

Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.

And if thy poor devoted servant may

But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,

Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever

Anne What is it?

Glo That it may please you leave these sad designs

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,

And presently repair to Crosby-place,

Where, after I have solemnly interr'd

At Chertsey monastery this noble king,

And wet his grave with my repentant tears,

I will with all expedient duty see you

For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,

Grant me this boon

Anne With all my heart, and much it joys me too

To see you are become so penitent

Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.

Glo Bid me farewell

Anne 'Tis more than you deserve,

But since you teach me how to flatter you,

Imagine I have said farewell already

[Exeunt LADY ANNE, TRESSSEL, and

BERKELEY

Glo Sirs, take up the corse

Gent Toward Chertsey, noble lord?

Glo No, to White-Friars, there attend my coming [Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.]

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?

Was ever woman in this humour won?

I'll have her, but I will not keep her long

What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father,

To take her in her heart's extremest hate,

With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,

The bleeding witness of her hatred by,

Having God, her conscience, and these bars against me,

And nothing I to back my suit withal

But the plain devil and dissembling looks

And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!

Hal!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince,

Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months

since,

Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?

A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,

Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,

Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,

The spacious world cannot again afford

And will she yet abase her eyes on me,

That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet

prince,

And made her widow to a woeful bed?

On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?

On me, that halt and am misshapen thus?

My dukedom to a beggarly demer

I do mistake my person all this while Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,

Myself to be a marvellous proper man.

I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,

And entertain a score or two of tailors,

To study fashions to adorn my body

Since I am crept in favour with myself,

I will maintain it with some little cost.

But first I'll turn yon fellow in his grave,

And then return lamenting to my love

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,

That I may see my shadow as I pass [Exit]

SCENE III—London A Room in the Palace

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and

LORD GREY

Riv Have patience, madam there's no doubt his majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health

Grey In that you brook it ill, it makes him

worse

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,

And cheer his Grace with quick and merry

words.

Q Eliz If he were dead, what would betide

on me?

Grey No other harm but loss of such a lord
Q Eliz The loss of such a lord includes all harms 8

Grey The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,

To be your comforter when he is gone

Q Eliz Ah! he is young, and his minority is put into the trust of Richard Gloucester, 12
 A man that loves not me, nor none of you

Riv Is it concluded he shall be protector?

Q Eliz It is determin'd, not concluded yet
 But so it must be if the king miscarry 16

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY

Gre, Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley

Buck Good time of day unto your royal Grace!

Stan God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q Eliz The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Stanley, 20

To your good prayer will scarcely say amen
 Yet Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
 And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd
 I hate not you for her proud arrogance 24

Stan I do beseech you, either not believe
 The envious slanders of her false accusers,
 Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
 Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds From wayward sickness, and no grounded
 malice 29

Q Eliz Saw you the king to-day, my Lord of Stanley?

Stan But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,

Are come from visiting his majesty 32

Q Eliz What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck Madam, good hope, his Grace speaks cheerfully

Q Eliz God grant him health! did you confer with him?

Buck Ay, madam he desires to make atonement 36

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,

And between them and my lord chamberlain,
 And sent to warn them to his royal presence

Q Eliz Would all were well! But that will never be 40

I fear our happiness is at the highest

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET

Glo They do me wrong, and I will not endure it

Who are they that complain unto the king,
 That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?
 By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly
 That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.
 Because I cannot flatter and speak fair,
 Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog, Duck with French nods and apish courtesy, 49
 I must be held a rancorous enemy
 Cannot a plain man live and think no harm,
 But thus his simple truth must be abus'd 52
 By sulken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey To whom in all this presence speaks your Grace?

Glo To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.
 When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong? 56

Or thee? or thee? or any of your faction?
 A plague upon you all! His royal person —
 Whom God preserve better than you would wish! —

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while, 60
 But you must trouble him with lewd complaints

Q Eliz Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter

The king, on his own royal disposition,
 And not provok'd by any sutor else, 64

AIMING, belike, at your interior hatred
 That in your outward action shows itself
 Against my children, brothers, and myself, Makes him to send, that thereby he may gather 68

The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it Glo I cannot tell, the world is grown so bad That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch

Since every Jack became a gentleman 72
 There's many a gentle person made a Jack

Q Eliz Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester,

You envy my advancement and my friends'
 God grant we never may have need of you! 76

Glo Meantime, God grants that we have need of you

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
 Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
 Held in contempt, while great promotions
 Are daily given to ennoble those 81

That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble

Q Eliz By him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, 84
 I never did incense his majesty Against the Duke of Clarence but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury, 88
 Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects

Glo You may deny that you were not the mean

Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv She may, my lord, for— 92

Glo She may, Lord Rivers! why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that She may help you to many fair preferments,
 And then deny her aiding hand therein, 96
 And lay those honours on your high deserts.

What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may she,—

Riv What, marry, may she?

Glo What, marry, may she! marry with a king, 100

A bachelor, a handsome stripling too
 I wis your grandam had a worser match

Q Eliz My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs,

By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty 105
Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd
I had rather be a country servantmaid
Than a great queen, with this condition, 108
To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind

Q Mar [Apart] And lessen'd be that small,
God, I beseech him!
Thy honour, state, and seat is due to me 112 Glo What! threat you me with telling of the
king?

Tell him, and spare not look what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower 116
'Tis time to speak, my pains are quite forgot

Q Mar [Apart] Out, devil! I remember them too well

Thou kull'st my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury 120

Glo Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband
king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs,
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends, 124
To royalize his blood I spilt mine own

Q Mar Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine

Glo In all which time you and your husband
Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster,
And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband 129

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?
Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere now and what you are,
Withal, what I have been, and what I am 133

Q Mar A murderous villain, and so still thou art

Glo Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Warwick,

Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!— 136

Q Mar Which God revenge!
Glo To fight on Edward's party for the
crown,

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up
I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's, 140

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine
I am too childish foolish for this world.

Q Mar Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is 144 Riv My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy
days

Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king,

So should we you if you should be our king Glo If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar

Far be it from my heart the thought thereof!
Q Eliz As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy, were you this country's king,
As little joy you may suppose in me 153

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof

Q Mar As little joy enjoys the queen thereof,
For I am she, and altogether joyless 156
I can no longer hold me patient [Advancing

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!
Which of you trembles not that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects, 161

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?
Ah! gentle villain do not turn away

Glo Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight? 164

Q Mar But repetition of what thou hast mar'd,

That will I make before I let thee go Glo Wert thou not banished on pain of
death?

Q Mar I was, but I do find more pain in banishment 168

Than death can yield me here by my abode
A husband and a son thou ow'st to me,

And thou, a kingdom, all of you, allegiance
This sorrow that I have by right is yours, 172

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine
Glo The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his war-like brows with paper,

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes, 176

And then, to dry them gav'st the duke a clout Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland,

His curses, then from bitterness of soul Denounc'd against thee, are all fall'n upon
thee, 180

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed
Q Eliz So just is God, to right the innocent Hast! O! 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless that e'er was heard of Riv Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported 185

Dors No man but prophesied revenge for it Buck Northumberland, then present, wept to see it

Q Mar What! were you snarling all before
I came, 188

Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much, with
heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,

Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?

Why then give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses! 196

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward, my son, which was Prince of Wales,

Die in his youth by like untimely violence!
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss, 204

And see another, as I see thee now,

Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death,
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief, 208
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,—
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings,—when my
son

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers God, I pray
him, 212

That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off

Glo Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag!

Q Mar And leave out thee? stay, dog for thou shalt hear me 216

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O! let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation 220

On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace
The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine, 225
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd abortive, rooting hog! 228
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell!

Thou slanderer of thy mother's heavy womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins! 232

Thou rag of honour! thou detested—Glo Margaret!

Q Mar Richard!
Glo Ha!

Q Mar I call thee not Glo I cry thee mercy then, for I did think That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names

Q Mar Why, so I did, but look'd for no reply 237

O! let me make the period to my curse Glo 'Tis done by me, and ends in 'Margaret'

Q Eliz Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself 240

Q Mar Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?

Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself!
The day will come that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back'd toad

Hast False-boding woman, end thy frantic
curse,

Lest to thy harm thou move our patience 248
Q Mar Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine

Riv Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty

Q Mar To serve me well, you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects 252

O! serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty
Dor Dispute not with her, she is lunatic.

Q Mar Peace! Master marquess, you are malapert

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current 256

O! that your young nobility could judge
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

They that stand high have many blasts to snake
them,

And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces Glo Good counsel marry learn it, learn it, marquess 261

Dor It touches you my lord as much as me Glo Ay, and much more, but I was born so high

Our airy buildeth in the cedar's top, 264
And dallies with the wind and scorns the sun

Q Mar And turns the sun to shade, alas!
alas!

Witness my son now in the shade of death
Whose bright out-shining beams tny cloudily wrath 268

Hath in eternal darkness folded up
Your airy buildeth in our airy's nest

O God! that seest it do not suffer it,
As it was won with blood lost be it so! 272

Buck Peace, peace! for shame, if not for charity

Q Mar Urge neither charity nor shame to
me

Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd

My charity is outrage 'life my shame, 277
And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck Have done have done
Q Mar O princely Buckingham! I'll kiss thy hand, 280

In sign of league and amity with thee
Now fair befall thee and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood
Nor thou within the compass of my curse 284

Buck Nor no one here, for curses never pass

The lips of those that breathe 'hem in the air Q Mar I will not think but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace
O Buckingham! take heed of yonder dog 289

Look, when he fawns, he bites, and when he bites

His venom tooth will rankle to the death
Have not to do with him beware of him 292

Sin, death and hell have set their marks on him,
And all their ministers attend on him

Glo What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck Nothing that I respect, my gracious
lord 296

Q Mar What! dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,

And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
O! but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow, 300

And say poor Margaret was a prophetess.
Live each of you the subject to his hate,

And he to yours, and all of you to God's! [Exit

Hast My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.

Riv And so doth mine. I muse why she's at liberty

Glo I cannot blame her by God's holy mother,

She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof that I have done to her

Q Eliz I never did her any, to my knowledge

Glo Yet you have all the vantage of her
wrong

I was too hot to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid,
He is frank'd up to fating for his pains

God pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done scath to us
Glo So do I ever [Aside], being well-advis'd, For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself

Enter CATESBY

Cates Madam, his majesty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and you, my noble lords

Q Eliz Catesby, I come. Lords, will you go
with me?

Riv We wait upon your Grace
[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER.]

Glo I do the wrong and first begin to brawl
The secret mischiefs that I set abroad

I lay unto the grievous charge of others
Clarence, whom I, indeed, have cast in dark-
ness,

I do beweepe to many simple gulls,
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham,

And tell them 'tis the queen and her allies
That stir the king against the duke my brother

Now they believe it, and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,

But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil

And thus I clothe my naked villany
With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ,

And seem a saint when most I play the devil Enter two Murderers.

But soft! here come my executioners
How now, my hardy, stout resolved mates!

Are you now going to dispatch this thing?
First Murd We are, my lord, and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is Glo Well thought upon, I have it here about
me

[Gives the warrant]
When you have done, repair to Crosby place

But surs be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate do not hear him plead

For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps May move your hearts to pity, if you mark
him.

First Murd Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate,

Talkers are no good doers be assur'd
We go to use our hands and not our tongues

Glo Your eyes drop millstones, when fools' eyes fall tears

I like you, lads, about your business straight, Go, go, dispatch

First Murd We will, my noble lord.
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — The Same The Tower

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY

Brak Why looks your Grace so heavily today?

Clar O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,

That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night

Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days,
So full of dismal terror was the time

Brak What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me

Clar Methought that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy,
And in my company my brother Gloucester,

Who from my cabin tempted me to walk Upon the hatches hence we look'd toward

England,
And cited up a thousand heavv times,

During the wars of York and Lancaster,
That had befall'n us As we pac'd along

Upon the giddy footing of the hatches, Methought that Gloucester stumbled, and, in falling,

Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main

Lord, Lord! methought what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!

Methought I saw a thousand fearful wracks,
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon,

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels,

All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea.
Somelay in dead men's skulls, and in those holes

Where eyes did once inhabit there were crept,
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems,

That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by Brak Had you such leisure in the time of

death

To gaze upon those secrets of the deep?
Clar Methought I had, and often did I strive

To yield the ghost, but still the envious flood

Stopt in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wandering air,

But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea

Brak Awak'd you not with this sore agony?
Clar No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after

life,
O! then began the tempest to my soul

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,

Unto the kingdom of perpetual night

The first that there did greet my stranger soul
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick
Who cried aloud 'What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?'
And so he vanish'd then came wanderer rightly
A shadow like an angel with a bright hair
Dabbled in blood and he stuck'd out aloud
Clarence is come,—false, needing perjur'd
Clarence

That's also dme in the field by Tewksbury — 56
Seize on him! Furies tell him an old torment
With that methought, a legion of foul fiends Furrow'd me and row'd in mine ears
Such hideous cries that with the very noise
I trembling wak'd, and for a season after Could not believe but that I was in bed
Such terrible impression made my dream

Brak No marvel, lord, though it affrighted
you 64

I can't say methinks to hear you tell it Car O Brakenbury! I have done these things

That now give evidence against my soul
For Edward's sake, and see how he equites
me 68

O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone

O spare my guiltless wife and my poor children 72

I pray thee gentle keeper stay by me
My soul is heavy and I fain would sleep

Brak I will my lord God give your Grace good rest! [CLARENCE sleeps

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours 76
Makes the night morning, and the noon day
night

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil,
And for unfuit imaginations, 80
They often feel a world of restless cares
So that, between their titles and low names
There's nothing differs but the outward name

Enter the two Murderers

First Murd Ho! who's here? 84 Brak What wouldst thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou thither?

First Murd I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs

Brak What! so brief? 88 Sec Murd 'Tis bet'er, sir, than to be tedious —

Let him see our commission, and talk no more [A paper is delivered to BRAKENBURY, who reads it

Brak I am, in this commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands

I will not reason what is meant hereby, 93
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning
There lies the duke asleep and there the keys
I'll to the king and signify to him 96

That thus I have resign'd to you my charge First Murd You may, sir, 'tis a point of wisdom fare you well. [Exit BRAKENBURY

First Murd What! shall we stab him as he sleeps? 101

First Murd No he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes! why fool he shall never wake till the judgment day 105

First Murd Why, then he'll say we stabbed him sleeping

Sec Murd The urging of that word
'judgment' hath bred a kind of remorse in
me 110

First Murd What! art thou afraid?
Sec Murd No, to kill him having a warrant for't but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me

First Murd I thought thou'ldst been resolute 116

Sec Murd So I am to let him live
First Murd I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester, and tell him so

Sec Murd Nay, I prithee stay a little
I hope my holy humour will change it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty

First Murd How dost thou feel thyself
now? 124

Sec Murd Some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me

First Murd Remember our reward when the deed's done 128

Sec Murd Zounds! he dies I had forgot the reward

First Murd Where's thy conscience now?
Sec Murd In the Duke of Gloucester's purse

First Murd So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out

Sec Murd 'Tis no matter let it go there's few or none will entertain it 136

First Murd What if it come to thee again?
Sec Murd I'll not meddle with it, it makes a man a coward, a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him a man cannot swear, but it checks him a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him 'tis a blushing shamefast spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom, it fills one full of obstacles, it made me once restore a purse of gold that I found, it beggars any man that keeps it it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it 149

First Murd Zounds! it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke

Sec Murd Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh

First Murd Tut, I am strong-framed he cannot prevail with me 156

Sec Murd Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we to this gear?

First Murd Take him over the costard with the hilts of thy sword and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room

Sec Murd O, excellent device! make a sop of him 164

First Murd Soft! he wakes.

Sec Murd Strike!
First Murd No, we'll reason with him Clar Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine 169
First Murd You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.
Clar In God's name, what art thou? 172
First Murd A man, as you are Clar But not, as I am, royal.
First Murd Nor you, as we are, loyal Clar Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble. 176
First Murd My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own Clar How darkly, and how deadly dost thou
speak!
Your eyes do menace me why look you pale?
Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?
Both Murd To, to to— 181
Clar To murder me?
Both Murd Ay, ay
Clar You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, 184
And therefore cannot have the hearts to do
it
Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?
First Murd Offended us you have not, but
the king
Clar I shall be reconcil'd to him again 188 Sec Murd Never, my lord, therefore prepare to die
Clar Are you call'd forth from out a world
of men
To slay the innocent? What is my offence?
Where is the evidence that doth accuse me?
What lawful quest have given their verdict up Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounce'd
The bitter sentence of poor Clarence death?
Before I be convict by course of law, 196
To threaten me with death is most unlawful I charge you, as you hope to have redemption
By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,
That you depart and lay no hands on me, 200
The deed you undertake is damnable First Murd What we will do, we do upon command.
Sec Murd And he that hath commanded is
our king
Clar Erroneous vassal! the great King of kings 204
Hath in the table of his law commanded
That thou shalt do no murder will you, then,
Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's? 207
Take heed, for he holds vengeance in his hand,
To hurl upon their heads that break his law Sec Murd And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,
For false forswearing and for murder too
Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight 212
In quarrel of the house of Lancaster First Murd And, like a traitor to the name of God,
Didst break that vow, and, with thy treacherous blade
Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son. 210

Sec Murd Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend
First Murd How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us
When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?
Clar Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed? 220
For Edward, for my brother, for his sake
He sends you not to murder me for this,
For in that sin he is as deep as I
If God will be avenged for the deed, 224
O' know you yet, he doth it publicly Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm,
He needs no indirect or lawless course
To cut off those that have offended him 228
First Murd Who made thee then a bloody minister,
When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet,
That princely novice was struck dead by thee?
Clar My brother's love, the devil, and my rage 232
First Murd Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault,
Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee Clar If you do love my brother, hate not
me,
I am his brother, and I love him well 236
If you are hir'd for meed, go back again,
And I will send you to my brother Gloucester,
Who shall reward you better for my life
Than Edward will for tidings of my death 240 Sec Murd You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloucester hates you Clar O, no! he loves me, and he holds me
dear
Go you to him from me
Both Murd Ay, so we will Clar Tell him, when that our princely father
York 244
Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,
He little thought of this divided friendship
Bid Gloucester think on this, and he will weep First Murd Ay, millstones, as he less'd on us to weep 249
Clar O! do not slander him, for he is kind
First Murd Right
As snow in harvest Thou deceiv'st thyself
'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here
Clar It cannot be for he bewept my fortune, And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,
That he would labour my delivery 256
First Murd Why, so he doth when he delivers you
From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven Sec Murd Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord Clar Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul, 260
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,
That thou wilt war with God by murdering me?
O! sirs, consider he that set you on 264
To do this deed, will hate you for the deed
Sec Murd What shall we do?

Clar Relent and save your souls
First Murd Relent! us cowardly, and womanish Clar Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
 Being pent from liberty, as I am now,
 If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life? 272

My friend I spy some pity in thy looks,
 O! if thine eye be not a flatterer,
 Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,
 As you would beg, were you in my distress 276
 A begging prince what beggar pities not?

Sec Murd Look behind you my lord

First Murd [Stabs him] Take that, and that if all this will not do,

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within 280
 [Exit with the body]

Sec Murd A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch d!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
 Of this most grievous murder

Re-enter first Murderer

First Murd How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not? 284

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

Sec Murd I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say
 For I repent me that the duke is slain [Exit]

First Murd So do not I go, coward as thou art 289

Well I'll go hide the body in some hole, Till that the duke give order for his burial
 And when I have my meed I will away, 292
 For this will out, and here I must not stay [Exit]

ACT II

SCENE I—London A Room in the Palace

Enter KING EDWARD sick, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and Others

K Edw Why, so now have I done a good day's work

You peers continue this united league
 I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence, 4
 And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth
 Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand,

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love 8
Riv By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate,

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love

Hast So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K Edw Take heed you daily not before your king, 12

Lest he that is the supreme King of kings
 Confound your hidden falsehood and award
 Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast So prosper I as I swear perfect love!

Riv And I as I love Hastings with my heart!

K Edw Madam, yourself are not exempt in this,

Nor you, son Dorset, Buckingham, nor you,
 You have been factious one against the other 20

Wife love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand,
 And what you do, do it unfeignedly

Q Eliz There, Hastings, I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine! 24

K Edw Dorset, embrace him, Hastings, love lord marquess

Dor This interchange of love I here protest, Upon my part shall be inviolable

Hast And so swear I [They embrace]

K Edw Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league 29

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
 And make me happy in your unity

Buck [To the QUEEN] Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate 32

Upon your Grace but with all dutious love
 Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me

With hate in those where I expect most love!
 When I have most need to employ a friend, 36

And most assured that he is a friend,
 Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,

Be he unto me! Thus do I beg of God,
 When I am cold in love to you or yours 40

[They embrace]
K Edw A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart
 There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here

To make the blessed period of this peace 44
Buck And in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen

And princely peers, a happy time of day!
K Edw Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day 48

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity,
 Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,

Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers
Glo A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord 52

Among this princely heap, if any here,
 By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,

Hold me a foe,
 If I unwittingly, or in my rage, 56

Have aught committed that is hardly borne
 By any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace
 'Tis death to me to be at enmity, 60

I hate it, and desire all good men's love.
 First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,

Which I will purchase with my dutious service,
 Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham, 64

If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us,
 Of you, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey, of you,

That all without desert have frown'd on me,
 Of you, Lord Woodville, and Lord Scales, of you

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen indeed, of all
I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is a 13 jot at odds
More than the infant that is born to-night 72
I thank my God for my humility

Q Eliz A holy day shall this be kept hereafter

I would to God all strifes were well compounded My sov'reign lord I do beseech your highness 75
To take our brother Clarence to your grace

Glo Why, madam have I offer'd love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead? 80

[They all start]

You do him injury to scorn his corse K Edw Who knows not he is dead? who knows he is?

Q Eliz All-seeing heaven, what a world is
this!

Buck Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the
rest? 84

Dor Ay, my good lord, and no man in the presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks K Edw Is Clarence dead? the order was revers'd

Glo But he, poor man, by your first order
died, 88

And that a winged Mercury did bear,
Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
That came too lag to see him buried 91
God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter STANLEY

Stan A boon, my sov'reign, for my service
done! 96

K Edw I prithee, peace my soul is full of
sorrow

Stan I will not rise, unless your highness hear me

K Edw Then say at once, what is it thou request'st

Stan The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's
life, 100

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk

K Edw Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death, 103

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death

Who su'd to me for him? who, in my wrath
Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd?

Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?
Who told me how the poor soul did forsake

The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury, 112

When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,
And said: 'Dear brother, live, and be a king?'

Who told me, when we both lay in the field
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me

Even in his garments and did give himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sorrowfully pluck'd, and not a man of you 120
Had so much grace to put it in my mind
But when your carters or your waiting-vassals
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon 125

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you,
But for my brother not a man would speak,

Nor I ungracious speak unto myself 128
For him, poor soul! The proudest of you all Have been beholding to him in his life,

Yet none of you would once beg for his life
O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold 132

On me and you and mine and yours for this Come Hastings, help me to my closet O! poor Clarence!

[Exeunt KING EDWARD, QUEEN HASTINGS, RIVERS DORSET, and GREY

Glo This is the fruit of rashness Mark'd you not

How that the guilty kindred of the queen 136 Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence's
death?

O! they did urge it still unto the king
God will revenge it Come, lords, will you go To comfort Edward with our company? 140

Buck We wait upon your Grace [Exeunt]

SCENE II—The Same A Room in the Palace

Enter the DUCHESS OF YORK, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE

Boy Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch No, boy Daugh Why do you wring your hands and beat your breast,

And cry—'O Clarence, my unhappy son?' 4 Boy Why do you look on us, and shake your head,

And call us orphans, wretches, castaways,
If that our noble father be alive?

Duch My pretty cousins, you mistake me
much, 8

I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father's death

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost Boy Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead 12

The king mine uncle is to blame for it
God will revenge it, whom I will importune

With earnest prayers all to that effect
Daugh And so will I 16

Duch Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well

Incapable and shallow innocents, You cannot guess who caus'd your father's
death

Boy Grandam, we can, for my good uncle
Gloucester 20

Told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen, Devis'd impeachments to imprison him

And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek, 24

Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
 And he would love me dearly as his child Duch Ah! that deceit should steal such gentle shape,
 And with a virtuous vizard hide deep vice 28
 He is my son, ay and therein my shame,
 Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit Boy Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?
Duch Ay boy 32
Boy I cannot think it Hark! what noise is
 this?

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH distractedly RIVERS and DORSET following her

Q Eliz Oh! who shall hinder me to wail and
 weep,
 To chide my fortune and torment myself?
 I'll join with black despair against my soul 36
 And to myself become an enemy Duch What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q Eliz To make an act of tragic violence
 Edward, my lord thy son, our king is dead! 40
 Why grow the branches now the root is wither'd?
 Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
 If you will live, lament if die, be brief,
 That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's, 44
 Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
 To his new kingdom of perpetual rest

Duch Ah! so much interest have I in thy
 sorrow

As I had title in thy noble husband 48
 I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
 And liv'd with looking on his images,
 But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
 Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death, 52
 And I for comfort have but one false glass
 That grieves me when I see my shame in him
 Thou art a widow yet thou art a mother,
 And hast the comfort of thy children left thee
 But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine
 arms, 57

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble limbs
 Clarence and Edward O! what cause have I—Thine being but a moiety of my grief— 60
 To overgo thy plaints and drown thy cries!

Boy Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's
 death

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?
Daugh Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd, 64

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept

Q Eliz Give me no help in lamentation
 I am not barren to bring forth complaints
 All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
 That I, being govern'd by the wat'ry moon, 69 May send forth plentiful tears to drown the world!

Ah! for my husband for my dear Lord Edward!
Chil Ah! for our father, for our dear Lord
 Clarence! 72

Duch Alas! for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q Eliz What stay had I but Edward? and
 he's gone

Chil What stay had we but Clarence? and
 he's gone

Duch What stays had I but they? and they are gone 76

Q Eliz Was never widow had so dear a loss
Chil Were never orphans had so dear a loss

Duch Was never mother had so dear a loss
 Alas! I am the mother of these griefs 80

Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general
 She for an Edward weeps and so do I, I for a Clarence weep so doth not she

These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I, 84
 I for an Edward weep, so do not they Alas! you three, on me threefold distress'd

Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse,
 And I will pamper it with lamentation 88

Dor Comfort, dear mother God is much displeas'd

That you take with unthankfulness his doing
 In common worldly things as call'd ungrateful

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt 92
 Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent,
 Much more to be his opposite with heaven,

For it requires the royal debt it lent you Riv Madam, bethink you, like a careful
 mother, 96

Of the young prince your son send straight for
 him,

Let him be crown'd, in him your comfort lives Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave, 99

And plant your joys in living Edward's throne

Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and Others

Glo Sister have comfort all of us have cause
 To wail the dimming of our shining star

But none can cure their harms by wailing them
 Madam my mother I do cry you mercy 104

I did not see your Grace humbly on my knee
 I crave your blessing

Duch God bless thee! and put meekness in thy mind,

Love, charity, obedience and true duty 108 Glo Amen, [Aside] and make me die a good old man!

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing,
 I marvel that her Grace did leave it out

Buck You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers 112

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan
 Now cheer each other in each other's love

Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
 We are to reap the harvest of his son 116

The broken rancour of your high-sworn hearts,
 But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,

Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd and kept Me seemeth good, that with some little train Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be
 fetch'd 121

Hither to London to be crown'd our king Riv Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck Marry, my lord lest by a multitude,
 The new-heal'd wound of malice should break
 out, 125

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green and yet un-govern'd,

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself 129
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented

Glo I hope the king made peace with all of us, 132

And the compact is firm and true in me
Ric And so in me, and so I think, in all Yet, since it is but green, it should be put To no apparent likelihood of breach, 136
Which haply by much company might be urg'd Therefore I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince

Hast And so say I 140
Glo Then be it so and go we to determine Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow

Madam and you my mother, will you go
To give your censures in this business? 144 [Exeunt all except BUCKINGHAM and
GLOUCESTER

Buck My lord, whoever journeys to the
prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home
For by the way I'll sort occasion,

As index to the story we late talk'd of, 148
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince

Glo My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet! My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction 152 Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind [

SCENE III —The Same A Street
Enter two Citizens, meeting First Cit Goodmorrow, neighbour whither away so fast?

Sec Cit I promise you, I scarcely know myself

Hear you the news abroad?

First Cit Ay, that the king is dead Sec Cit Ill news, by'r lady, seldom comes the better 4

I fear, I fear, twill prove a giddy world.

Enter a third Citizen Third Cit Neighbours, God speed!

First Cit Give you good morrow, sir

Third Cit Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?

Sec Cit Ay, sir, it is too true, God help the while! 8

Third Cit Then, masters, look to see a troubulous world

First Cit No no, by God's good grace, his son shall reign

Third Cit Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

Sec Cit In him there is a hope of government 12

That in his nonage council under him,

And in his full and ripen'd years himself,
No doubt, shall then and till then govern well

First Cit So stood the state when Henry the Sixth 16

Was crown'd at Paris but at nine months old Third Cit Stood the state so? no, no good friends, God wot,

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel then the king 20

Had virtuous uncles to protect his Grace First Cit Wot'st, so hath this, both by his father and mother

Third Cit Better it were they all came by his father

Or by his father there were none at all, 24
For emulation who shall now be nearest,
Will touch us all too near in God prevent not.

O' full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester!
And the queen's sons and brothers haught and
proud, 28

And were they to be rul'd and not to rule,
This sickly land might solace as before

First Cit Come, come, we fear the worst,
all will be well

Third Cit When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks, 32

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand,
When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

Untimely storms make men expect a dearth
All may be well, but, if God sort it so, 36

'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect Sec Cit Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear

You cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of dread 40

Third Cit Before the days of change, still is
it so

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust Ensuing danger as, by proof, we see

The waters swell before a boisterous storm 44
But leave it all to God Whither away?

Sec Cit Marry, we were sent for to the justices

Third Cit And so was I I'll bear you company [

SCENE IV —The Same A Room in the Palace

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK

Arch Last night, I hear, they lay at Northampton,

At Stony-Stratford they do rest to-night
To-morrow, or next day they will be here

Duch I long with all my heart to see the
prince 4

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him
Q. Eliz But I hear, no, they say my son of
York

Hath almost overta'en him in his growth
York Ay, mother, but I would not have it so

Duch Why, my young cousin, it is good to grow 9

York Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper
My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More than my brother 'Ay, quoth my uncle
Gloucester, 12
'Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace'

And since methinks I would not grow so fast Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste

Duch Good faith good faith, the saying did not hold 16

In him that did object the same to thee
He was the wretched stinging worm that was young So long a-growing and so surely,

Arch And so, no doubt, he is my gracious
madam 21

Duch I hope he is, but yet let mothers doubt York Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member'd,

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout 24
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd
mine

Duch How, my young York? I prithee, let me hear 1

York Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast
That he could grow a crust at two hours old 28
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth

Grandam this would have been a biding jest Duch I prithee, pretty York, who told thee
this?

York Grandam, his nurse 32

Duch His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born

York If twere not she, I cannot tell who told me

Q Eliz A parlous boy go to, you are too shrewd

Arch Good madam, be not angry with the child 36

Q Eliz Pitchers have ears

Enter a Messenger

Arch Here comes a messenger What news?

Mess Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report

Q Eliz How doth the prince?

Mess Well madam, and in health

Duch What is thy news? 42

Mess Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,

With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.
Duch Who hath committed them?

Mess The mighty dukes, 44
Gloucester and Buckingham

Arch For what offence?

Mess The sum of all I can I have disclosed
Why or for what the nobles were committed
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lord 48

Q Eliz Ah me! I see the ruin of my house!
The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind,
Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and aweless throne 52

Welcome, destruction, death and massacre!

Duch Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld! 56
My husband lost his life to get the crown,
And often up and down my sons were toss'd,
For me to joy and weep their gain and loss
And being seated, and domestic broils 60
Clean over-blown, themselves the conquerors
Make war upon themselves brother to brother Blood to blood, self against self O! preposterous

And fratricide outrage end thy damned spleen 64
Or let me die to look on death no more

Q Eliz Come, come, my boy, we will to sanctuary

Madam, farewell!

Duch Stay I will go with you
Q Eliz You have no cause

Arch [To the QUEEN] My gracious lady, go,
And thither bear your treasure and your goods
For my part I'll resign unto your Grace
The soul I keep and so betide me

As well I tender you and all of yours! 72
Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary

[Exeunt]

ACT III

SCENE I—The Same A Street

The Trumpets sound Enter the PRINCE OF WALES, GLOUCESTER BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, CARDI-NAL BOURCHIER, and Others

Buck Welcome, sweet prince, to London to your chamber

Glo Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts
so ereign,

The weary way hath made you melancholy Prince No, uncle, but our crosses on the
way 4

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy
I want more uncles here to welcome me

Glo Sweet prince the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet divid'd into the world's deceit 8
No more can you distinguish of a man

Than of his outward show which, God he knows,

Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart
Those uncles which you want were dangerous,
Your Grace attended to their sugar'd words 13

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts God keep you from them, and from such false
friends!

Prince God keep me from false friends! but they were none 16

Glo My lord, the Mayor of London comes to greet you

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train

May God bless your Grace with health and happy days!

Prince I thank you, good my lord, and thank you all

I thought my mother and my brother York 20
Would long ere this have met us on the way

Fie! what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not To tell us whether they will come or no

Enter HASTINGS

Buck And in good time here comes the sweating lord Prince Welcome my lord What, will our mother come?
Hast Or what occasion, God he knows, no, I

The queen your mother, and your brother York, Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince Would fain have come with me to meet your Grace,

But by his mother was perforce withheld
Buck Fie! what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers! Lord Cardinal will your Grace Peruse the oser to send the Duke of York Unto his privately bro her presently?

If she deny Lord Hastings, go with him And from her jealous arms ruck him per force Card My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the Duke of York, Anon expect him here: but if she be obdurate To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid

We should infringe the holy privilege Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land Would I be guilty of so great a sin

Buck You are too senseless obstinate my lord,

Too ceremonious and traditional Weigh it but with the grossness of this age, You break not sanctuary in seizing him

The benefit thereof is always granted To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place And those who have the wit to claim the place

This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it,
And therefore in mine opinion cannot have it Then, taking him from thence that is not there, You break no privilege nor charter there

Off have I heard of sanctuary men, But sanctuary children ne'er till now

Card My lord you shall o'er rule my mind for once Come on, Lord Hastings will you go with me?

Hast I go, my lord
Prince Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may

[Exeunt CARDINAL BOURCHIER and HASTINGS

Say, uncle Gloucester if our brother come, Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo Where it seems best unto your royal self
If I may counsel you, some day or two

Your highness shall repose you at the Tower Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit
For your best health and recreation

Prince I do not like the Tower, of any place Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord?

Buck He did, my gracious lord, begin that place,
Which, since succeeding ages have re-edified
Prince Is it upon record, or else reported

Successively from age to age he built it?
Buck Upon record, my gracious lord
Prince But say, my lord, it were not registered,

Yet thinks the truth should live from age to age, As were retain'd to all posterity
Even to the general ending day

Glo I see! So wise so young, they say, do never live long Prince Want say you uncle?

Glo I say, without characurs, fame lives long [Aside] Thus like the formal Vice, Iniquity

Immortalize two meanings in one word
Prince That Julius Caesar was a famous man

What his valour did enrich his wit, His wit set down to make his valour live Death makes no conquest of this conqueror,

For now he lives in fame, though not in life
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham,— Buck What, my gracious lord?

Prince An if I live until I be a man, I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or take a soldier, as I live d a king

Glo [Aside] Short summers lightly have a forward spring

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and CARDINAL BOURCHIER

Buck Now in good time, here comes the Duke of York Prince Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?

York Well, my dread lord, so must I call you now Prince Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is yours

Too late he died that might have kept that title, Which by his death hath lost much majesty Glo How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York I thank you gentle uncle, O, my lord, You see that idle weeds are fast in growth
The rest my brother hath outgrown me far

Glo He hath, my lord
York And therefore is he idle?

Glo O, my fair cousin, I must not say so York Then he is more beholding to you than I

Glo He may command me as my sovereign, But you have power in me as in a kinsman York I pray you, uncle give me this dagger

Glo My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart Prince A beggar, brother?

York Of my kind uncle that I know will give
And being but a toy which is no grief to give

Glo A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin York A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it

Glo Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough York O then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts,

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay
Glo It is too weighty for your Grace to wear York I weigh it lightly, were it heavier 121 Glo What! would you have my weapon, little lord?
York I would, that I might thank you, as you call me
Glo How? 122
York Little
Prince My Lord of York will still be cross in talk Uncle Your Grace knows how to bear with
 him
York You mean, to bear me, not to bear
 with me 123
Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me
 Because that I am little, like an ape, He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders
Buck With what a sharp provided wit he reasons! 132
 To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
 He prettily and aptly taunts himself
 So cunning and so young is wonderful Glo My lord will't please you pass along?
 Myself and my good cousin Buckingham 137
 Will to your mother, to entreat of her
 To meet you at the Tower and welcome you York What! will you go unto the Tower,
 my lord? 140
Prince My Lord Protector needs will have
 it so
York I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower
Glo Why, what would you fear?
York Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry
 ghost 144
 My grandam told me he was murder'd there.
Prince I fear no uncles dead
Glo Nor none that live, I hope Prince An if they live, I hope, I need not fear 148
 But come, my lord, and, with a heavy heart, Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower [Sennet. Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, and CATESBY]
Buck Think you, my lord, this little prating
 York
 Was not incensed by his subtle mother 152
 To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glo No doubt, no doubt O! 'tis a perilous
 boy,
 Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable
 He's all the mother's, from the top to toe 156
Buck Well, let them rest. Come hither, Catesby, thou art sworn As deeply to effect what we intend
 As closely to conceal what we impart Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the
 way 160
 What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter
 To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
 For the instalment of this noble duke
 In the seat royal of this famous isle? 164 Cate He for his father's sake so loves the
 prince
 That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck What think'st thou then of Stanley?
 what will he?
Cate He will do all in all as Hastings doth.
Buck Well then, no more but this go, gentle Catesby, 169
 And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings,
 How he doth stand affected to our purpose
 And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, 172
 To sit about the coronation
 If thou dost find him tractable to us,
 Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons
 If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling, 176
 Be thou so too, and so break off the talk,
 And give us notice of his inclination,
 For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
 Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd 180
Glo Commend me to Lord William tell him,
 Catesby,
 His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
 To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle,
 And bid my lord, for joy of this good news, 184 Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more Buck Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly
Cate My good lords both, with all the heed
 I can Glo Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep? 188
Cate You shall, my lord
Glo At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both [Exit CATESBY] Buck Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive
 Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glo Chop off his head, something we will determine 193
 And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
 The earldom of Hereford and all the moveables Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd Buck I'll claim that promise at your Grace's
 hand 197
Glo And look to have it yielded with all kindness
 Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
 We may digest our complots in some form 200
 [Exeunt]

SCENE II — The Same. Before LORD HASTINGS' House

Enter a Messenger

Mess [Knocking] My lord! my lord!
Hast [Within] Who knocks?
Mess One from the Lord Stanley
Hast [Within] What is't o'clock?
Mess Upon the stroke of four.

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?
Mess So it appears by that I have to say
 First, he commends him to your noble self Hast What then?
Mess Then certifies your lordship, that this
 night

He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm
Besides, he says there are two councils held, 12
And that may be determin'd at the one Which may make you and him to rue at the other

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure,

If you will presently take horse with him, 16
And with all speed post with him towards the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines
Hast Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord Bid him not fear the separated councils 20
His honour and myself are at the one,

And at the other is my good friend Catesby,
Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us
Whereof I shall not have intelligence 24

Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance
And for his dreams, I wonder he is so fond
To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers.

To fly the boar before the boar pursues, 28
Were to incense the boar to follow us
And make pursuit where he did mean no chase

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me,
And we will both together to the Tower, 32
Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly Mess I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say [Exit

Enter CATESBY

Cate Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast Good morrow, Catesby, you are early stirring 36
What news, what news, in this our tottering
state?

Cate It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord,
And I believe will never stand upright
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm 40

Hast How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?

Cate Ay, my good lord.
Hast I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd 44
But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate Ay, on my life, and hopes to find you forward

Upon his party for the gain thereof
And thereupon he sends you this good news, 48
That this same very day your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret

Hast Indeed, I am no mourner for that
news

Because they have been still my adversaries 52
But that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
To bar my master's heirs in true descent,

God know, I will not do it to the death Cate God keep your lordship in that gracious mirth! 56

Hast But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month's hence

That they which brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy 59
Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older, I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious
lord,

When men are unprepar'd and look not for it Hast O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls
it out 64

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey, and so 'twill do With some men else, who think themselves as safe

As thou and I, who, as thou know'st are dear
To princely Richard and to Buckingham 68

Cate The princes both make high account
of you,
[Aside] For they account his head upon the bridge

Hast I know they do and I have well de-serv'd it

Enter STANLEY

Come on, come on, where is your boar spear
man? 72

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?
Stan My lord, good morrow, good morrow
Catesby

You may jest on, but by the holy rood,
I do not like these several councils, I 76

Hast My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours,

And never, in my days, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me as 'tis now
Think you but that I know our state secure 80

I would be so triumphant as I am?
Stan The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,

Were joy'd and suppos'd their state was sure
And they indeed had no cause to mistrust, 84

But yet you see how soon the day o'ercast
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt, Pray God I say, I prove a needless coward!

What shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent 88

Hast Come, come have with you Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded Stan They, for their truth, might better wear their heads,

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats 92

But come, my lord, let's away

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast Go on before, I'll talk with this good fellow [Exit STANLEY and CATESBY] How now, surrah! how goes the world with
thee?

Purs The better that your lordship please
to ask 96

Ha. I tell thee man, 'tis better with me
now

Than when I met thee last where now we meet
Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the queen's allies, 100

But now, I tell thee,—keep it to thyself,—
This day those enemies are put to death,
And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs God hold it to your honour's good content! 104

Hast Gramercy, fellow, there drink that for me [Throws him his purse]
Purs God save your lordship [Exit]

Enter a Priest.

Pr Well met, my lord, I am glad to see your
honour
Hast I thank thee, good Sir John, with all
my heart 108
I am in your debt for your last exercise
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM

Buck What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?
Your friends at Pomfret they do need the priest
Your honour hath no shiving work in hand 113 Hast Good faith, and when I met this holy
man,
The men you talk of came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower? 116 Buck I do, my lord, but long I shall not
stay
I shall return before your lordship thence Hast Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner
there Buck [Aside] And supper too, although thou know'st it not 120
Come, will you go?
Hast I'll wait upon your lordship
[Exeunt]

SCENE III — Pomfret Before the Castle

Enter RATCLIFF, with halberds, carrying RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to death

Riv Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee
this
To-day shalt thou behold a subject die
For truth for duty, and for loyalty Grey God bless the prince from all the pack
of you! 4
A knot you are of damned blood-suckers Vaugh You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter
Rat Dispatch, the limit of your lives is out Riv O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison! 8
Fatal and ominous to noble peers!
Within the guilty closure of thy walls
Richard the Second here was hack'd to death,
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat, 12
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink Grey Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads
When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd ner-
son 16
Riv Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,
Then curs'd she Hastings O! remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us,
And for my sister and her princely sons, 20
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt
Rat Make haste, the hour of death is expiate

Riv Come, Grey, come Vaughan, let us here embrace 24
And take our leave until we meet in heaven [Leunt]

SCENE IV — London The Tower

BUCKINGHAM STANLEY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY RATCLIFF, LOVEL, and Others, sitting at a table Officers of the Council attending Hast My lords, at once the cause why we are met

Is to determine of the coronation
In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?
Buck Are all things ready for that royal
time? 4

Stan It is, and wants but nomination
Ely To-morrow then I judge a happy day Buck Who knows the Lord Protector's mind herein? 8

Who is most inward with the noble duke?
Ely Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his mind
Buck We know each other's faces, for our hearts,

He knows no more of mine than I of yours,
Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine 12
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love Hast I thank his Grace, I know he loves me
well,

But, for his purpose in the coronation
I have not sounded him nor he deliver'd 16
His gracious pleasure any way therein
But you my noble lords may name the time,
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part 20

Enter GLOUCESTER

Ely In happy time, here comes the duke
himself

Glo My noble lords and cousins all, good morning

I have been long a sleeper, but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design, 24
Which by my presence might have been concluded

Buck Had you not come upon your cue, my
lord,

William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your
part,

I mean, your voice for crowning of the king 28 Glo Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well
My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn
I saw good strawberries in your garden there, 32
I do beseech you send for some of them

Ely Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart [Exit]

Glo Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you [Takes him aside]
Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business, 36

And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his head ere give consent
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,

Shall lose the royalty of England's throne 40 Buck Withdraw yourself a while, I'll go
 with you
[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM] Stan We have not yet set down this day of triumph
 To-morrow in my judgment, is too sudden
 For I myself am not so well provided 44
 As else I would be, were the day prolong'd

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY

Ely Where is my lord, the Duke of Gloucester?
 I have sent for these strawberries Hast His Grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning 48
 There's some conceit or other likes him well, When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.
 I think there's never a man in Christendom
 Can lesser hide his hate or love than he, 52
 For by his face straight shall you know his heart Stan What of his heart perceiv'd you in his face
 By any livelihood he show'd to day?
Hast Marry, that with no man here he is offended 56
 For, were he, he had shown it in his looks

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo I pray you all, tell me what they deserve
 That do conspire my death with devilish plots
 Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd 60
 Upon my body with their hellish charms?
Hast The tender love I bear your Grace, my
 lord,
 Makes me most forward in this princely presence
 To doom th' offenders, whose'er they be 64
 I say, my lord, they have deserved death
Glo Then be your eyes the witness of their evil Look how I am bewitch'd! behold mine arm
 Is like a blasted sapling, wither'd up 68
 And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore,
 That by their witchcraft thus have marked me Hast If they have done this thing, my noble
 lord,— 72
Glo If! thou protector of this damned strumpet,

Talk'st thou to me of ifs? Thou art a traitor Off with his head! now, by Saint Paul, I swear,
 I will not dine until I see the same 76
Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done
 The rest, that love me, rise and follow me

[Exeunt all but HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and LOVEL.]

Hast Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for
 me
 For I too fond, might have prevented this 80
 Stanley did dream the boar did raze his helm,
 And I did scorn it and disdain'd to fly Three times to-day my foot cloth horse did stumble
 And startled when he looked upon the Tower, 84
 As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house
 O! now I need the priest that spake to me

I now repent I told the pursuivant,
 As too triumphing, how mine enemies 88
 To-day at Pomfret bloody were butcher'd
 And I myself secure in grace and favour O Margaret! Margaret! now thy heavy curse
 Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head 92 Rat Come come, dispatch, the duke would be at dinner
 Make a short shrift he longs to see your head Hast O momentary grace of mortal man, Which we more hunt for than the grace of God! 96
 Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,
 Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast
 Ready with every nod to tumble down Into the fatal bowels of the deep 100 Lov Come, come, dispatch, 'tis bootless to exclaim Hast O bloody Richard! miserable England!
 I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee
 That ever wretched age hath look'd upon 104
 Come, lead me to the block! bear him my head
 They smile at me who shortly shall be dead
Exeunt

SCENE V.—London The Tower Walls

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured

Glo Come cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour,
 Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
 And then again begin, and stop again,
 As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror?
Buck Tut! I can counterfeit the deep tragedian, 5
 Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
 Tremble and start at wagging of a straw, Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks 8
 Are at my service, like enforced smiles,
 And both are ready in their offices,
 At any time to grace my stratagems
 But what! is Catesby gone? 12
Glo He is, and, see, he brings the mayor along

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY

Buck Lord Mayor,—
Glo Look to the drawbridge there!
Buck Hark! a drum
Glo Catesby, o'erlook the walls 16 Buck Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent—Glo Look back, defend thee, here are enemies.
Buck God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS' head

Glo Be patient, they are friends, Ratcliff and Lovel 20
Lov Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
 The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings
Glo So dear I love the man that I must weep
 I took him for the plainest harmless creature 24

That breath'd upon the earth a Christian Made hum my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue,

That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
I mean his conversation with Shore's wife,
He liv'd from all attainer of suspect

Buck Well well, he was the covert'st shelter d traitor
That ever liv'd

Would you imagine, or almost believe,— Were't not that by great preservation
We live to tell it that the subtle traitor
This day had plotted, in the council-house
To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester?

May Had he done so?

Glo What! think you we are Turks or infidels?

Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death,
But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England and our person's safety,
Enforc'd us to this execution?

May Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death,
And your good Graces both have well proceeded,

To warn false traitors from the like attempts
I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistress Shore

Buck Yet had we not determin'd he should die Until your lordship came to see his end,
Which now the loving haste of these our friends, Somethurg against our meaning, hath prevented

Because, my lord, we would have had you heard
The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treason,
That you might well have signified the same Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconster us in him, and wail his death.

May But, my good lord, your Grace's word shall serve,

As well as I had seen and heard him speak
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this cause

Glo And to that end we wish'd your lordship
here

To avoid the censures of the carping world Buck But since you come too late of our intent,

Yet witness what you hear we did intend
And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell

[Exit Lord Mayor]

Glo Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children
Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying he would make his son
Heir to the crown, meaning indeed his house,
Which by the sign thereof was termed so

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury
And bestial appetite in change of lust,
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
wives,

Even where his raging eye or savage heart
Without control lusted to make a prey Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person

Tell them, when that my mother went with child
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York
My princely father then had wars in France,
And, by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot,
Which well appeared in his lineaments
Being, nothing like the noble duke my father Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off Because, my lord, you know my mother lives Buck Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator

As if the golden fee for which I plead
Were for myself and so, my lord, adieu

Glo If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle,

Where you shall find me well accompanied With reverend fathers and well-learned bishops

Buck I go, and towards three or four o'clock

Look for the news that the Guildhall affords
[Exit]

Glo Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor
Shaw,

[To CATESBY] Go thou to Friar Penker, bid them both

Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle [Exeunt LOVEL and CATESBY]

Now will I in to take some privy order,
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight,
And to give notice that no manner person
Have any time recourse unto the princes [Exit]

SCENE VI.—The Same A Street

Enter a Scrivener

Scriv Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings,

Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's
And mark how well the sequel hangs together
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me
The precedent was full as long a-doing,
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd, Untainted, unexamn'd, free, at liberty
Here's a good world the while! Who is so gross
That cannot see this palpable device?

Yet who so bold but says he sees it not?
Bad is the world, and all will come to naught,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.
[Exit]

SCENE VII.—The Same The Court of Baynard's Castle

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, meeting

Glo How now, how now! what say the citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord,

The citizens are mum say not a word

Glo Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck I did, with his contract with Lady Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France,
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives,
His tyranny for trifles, his own bastardy,
As being got, your father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the duke
Withal I did infer your lineaments, 12
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind,
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, 16
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility,
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse,
And when my oratory drew toward end, 20
I bade them that did love their country's good Cry 'God save Richard, England's royal king!'

Glo And did they so?

Buck No, so God help me, they spake not a word, 24

But, like dumb statues or breathing stones,
Star'd each on o'er, and look'd deadly pale
Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful
silence 28

His answer was, the people were not wont
To be spoke to but by the recorder
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again
'Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferred,' 32

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, God save King
Richard! 36

And thus I took the vantage of those few,
'Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth I,
'This general applause and cheerful shout Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard'
And even here brake off, and came away 41

Glo What tongueless blocks were they!
would they not speak?

Will not the mayor then and his brethren come?
Buck The mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear, 44

Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand, And stand between two churchmen, good my
lord

For on that ground I'll make a holy descant 48
And be not easily won to our requests, Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.

Glo I go and if you plead as well for them
As I can say nay to thee for myself, 52

No doubt we bring it to a happy issue
Buck Go, go, up to the leads! the Lord Mayor kneels [Exit GLOUCESTER.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens
Welcome, my lord I dance attendance here,
I think the duke will not be spoke withal 56

Enter, from the Castle, CATESBY

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cate He doth entreat your Grace, my noble
lord,

To visit him to-morrow or next day
8 He is within, with two right reverend fathers, 60 Divinely bent to meditation,
And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise

Buck Return, good Catesby, to the gracious
duke 64

Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his Grace 68

Cate I'll signify so much unto him straight
[Exit

Buck Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation, 72

Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines,
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul 76
Happy were England would this virtuous prince Take on his Grace the sovereignty thereof

But sore, I fear, we shall not win him to it May Marry, God defend his Grace should say us nay! 80

Buck I fear he will. Here Catesby comes
again.

Re-enter CATESBY

Now, Catesby, what says his Grace?

Cate He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him, 84
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before My lord, he fears you mean no good to him

Buck Sorry I am my noble cousin should suspect me that I mean no good to him. 88
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love,
And so once more return, and tell his Grace

[Exit CATESBY
When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence, 92

So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOUCESTER, in a gallery above, between two Bishops CATESBY returns

May See, where his Grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck Two props of virtue for a Christian
prince,

To stay him from the fall of vanity, 96
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand,
True ornament to know a holy man

Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests, 100

And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion, and right Christian zeal.

Glo My lord there needs no such apology,
I do beseech your Grace to pardon me 104
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Deferred the visitation of my friends
But leaving this what is your Grace's pleasure?

Buck E'en that, I hope, which pleaseth God above 108

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle

Glo I do suspect I have done some offence
That seems disgracious in the city's eye
And that you come to reprove my ignorance

Buck You have my lord would it might please your Grace 113

On our entreaties, to amend your fault!

Glo Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian
land? 117

Buck Know then it is your fault that you resign 116

The supreme seat, the throne majestical
The sceptred office of your ancestors

Your state of fortune and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house, 120

To the corruption of a blemish'd stock,
Whiles, in the midst of your sleepy thoughts —

Which here we taken to our country's good, —
This noble isle doth want her proper limbs, 124

Her face defac'd with scars of infamy
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,

And almost shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion 128

Which to rectify we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge

And kingly government of this your land,
Not as protector steward substitute, 132

Or lowly factor for another's gain,
But as successively from blood to blood

Your right of birth your empery, your own
For this, consorted with the citizens 136

Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation

In this just cause come I to move your Grace
Glo I cannot tell, if to depart in silence 140

Or bitterly to speak in your reproof
Best fitteth my degree or your condition

If not to answer you might haply think Tongue-tied ambition not replying, yielded 144

To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which roundly you would here impose on me,

If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me, 148

Then, on the other side I check'd my friends
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,

And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitively thus I answer you 152

Your love deserves my thanks, but my desert
Unmurmurable shuns your high request

First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown, 156

As the ripe revenue and due of birth,
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,

So mighty and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,

Being a bark to brook no mighty sea, 161
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.

But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me, 164

And much I need to help you, were there need,
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will will become the seat of majesty, 168
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars, Which God defend that I should wring from
him! 172

Buck My lord, this argues conscience in
your Grace,

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered

You say that Edward is your brother's son 176
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife,
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy

Your mother lives a witness to his vow
And afterwards by substitute betroth'd 180

To Bonar sister to the King of France
These both put by, a poor plutioner,

A care-craz'd mother to a many sons
A beauty-waning and distressed widow, 184

Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,

Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree
To base declension and loath'd bigamy 188

By her in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward whom our manners call the prince

More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that for reverence to some alive 192

I give a sparing limit to my tongue
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self

This proffer'd benefit of dignity,
It not to bless us and the land withal, 196

Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruptor of abusing times,

Unto a lineal true-derived course Alas Do good my lord your citizens

entreat you 200

Buck Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd
love

Cate O! make them joyful grant their lawful suit! 204

Glo Alas! why would you heap those cares
on me?

I am unfit for state and majesty 204
I do beseech you take it not amiss,
I cannot nor I will not yield to you

Buck If you refuse it, as, in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child your brother's son,

As well we know your tenderness of heart 209
And gentle, kind effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,

And equally, indeed, to all estates, 212
Yet whether you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king,

But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house 216

And in this resolution here we leave you.
Come, citizens, we will entreat no more

[Exit BUCKINGHAM and

Citizens.

Cate Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit

If you deny them, all the land will rue it. 220

Glo Will you enforce me to a world of cares?

Call them again I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreats,
[Exit CATESBY
Albeit against my conscience and my soul. 224

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men, Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, whe'r I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load 228
But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof,
For God doth know, and you may partly see, 233
How far I am from the desire of this May God bless your Grace! we see it, and will say it

Glo In saying so, you shall but say the truth

Buck Then I salute you with this royal title Long live King Richard, England's worthy king!
All Amen.

Buck To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd? 240

Glo Even when you please, for you will have
it so

Buck To-morrow then we will attend your
Grace

And so most joyfully we take our leave Glo [To the Bishops.] Come, let us to our holy work again. 244

Farewell, my cousin,—farewell, gentle friends
[Exeunt

ACT IV

SCENE I—London Before the Tower

Enter on one side, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUESS OF DORSET on the other, ANNE, DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE'S young daughter

Duch. Who meets us here? my niece Plantagenet,

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower,
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender princes Daughter, well met.

Anne God gave your Graces both 5
A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q Eliz As much to you, good sister!
whither away?

Anne No further than the Tower and, as I guess, 8

Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there

Q Eliz Kind sister, thanks we'll enter all together —

Enter BRAKENBURY

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes 12
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak Right well, dear madam. By your patience,

I may not suffer you to visit them 16
The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary

Q Eliz The king! who's that?

Brak I mean the Lord Protector

Q Eliz The Lord protect him from that kingly title! 19

Hath he set bounds between their love and me?
I am their mother, who shall bar me from them?

Duch I am their father's mother, I will see
them

Anne Their aunt I am in law, in love their
mother

Then bring me to their sights, I'll bear thy blame, 24

And take thy office from thee, on my peril.
Brak No, madam, no, I may not leave it so I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me
[Exit

Enter STANLEY

Stan Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour
hence, 28

And I'll salute your Grace of York as mother,
And reverend looker-on, of two fair queens

[To the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.] Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

There to be crown'd Richard's royal queen 32

Q Eliz Ah! cut my lace asunder,
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,

Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news Anne Despiteful tidings! O! unpleasing
news! 36

Dor Be of good cheer mother, how fares
your Grace?

Q Eliz O, Dorset! speak not to me, get thee
gone

Death and destruction dog thee at the heels
Thy mother's name is ominous to children 40

If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell

Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter-house, Lest thou increase the number of the dead, 44

And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse, Nor mother wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel,
madam.

[To DORSET.] Take all the swift advantage of the hours, 48

You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way

Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay
Duch O ill-dispersing wind of misery! 52

O! my accursed womb, the bed of death,
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,

Whose unavoided eye is murderous!

Stan Come, madam, come, I in all haste was sent. 56

Anne And I with all unwillingness will go
O! would to God that the inclusive verge

Of golden metal that must round my brow
Were red-hot steel to sear me to the brain. 60

Anointed let me be with deadly venom,
And die, ere men can say 'God save the queen!'

Q Eliz Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory,

To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. 64

Anne No! why? When he, that is my husband now Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse, When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands,
 Which issu'd from my other angel husband, 68
 And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd, O! when I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
 This was my wish, Be thou, 'quoth I, 'accurs'd,
 For making me so young, so old a widow! 72
 And, when thou wedd'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed,
 And be thy wife—if any be so mad—
 More miserable by the life of thee Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's
 death! 76
 Lo! ere I can repeat this curse again,
 Within so small a time, my woman's heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words, 79
 And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse
 Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest,
 For never yet one hour in his bed
 Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
 But with his tumorous dreams was still awak'd
 Besides he hates me for my father Warwick, 85
 And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me

Q Eliz Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining Anne No more than with my soul I mourn for yours 88
Q Eliz Farewell! thou woeful welcomer of
 glory!
Anne Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave
 of it!
Duch [To DORSET] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!
 [To ANNE] Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee! 92
 [To Q ELIZABETH] Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!
 I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!
 Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
 And each hour sjoy wrack'd with a week of teen Q Eliz Stay yet, look back with me unto the Tower 97
 Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes
 Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls,
 Rough cradle for such little pretty ones! 100
 Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
 For tender princes use my babies well
 So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same A Room of State in the Palace

Sennet RICHARD, in pomp, crowned BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and Others

K Rich Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham Buck My gracious sovereign!
K Rich Give me thy hand. [He ascends the throne] Thus high, by thy advice
 And thy assistance is King Richard seated 4
 But shall we wear these glories for a day?

Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K Rich Ah! Buckingham, now do I play the touch, 8

To try if thou be current gold indeed
 Young Edward lives think now what I would speak

Buck Say on, my loving lord.

K Rich Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king 12

Buck Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned liege

K Rich Ha! am I king? 'Tis so but Edward lives

Buck True, noble prince

K Rich O bitter consequence,
 That Edward still should live! 'True, noble prince! 16

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead,
 And I would have it suddenly perform'd
 What sayst thou now? speak suddenly, be brief 20

Buck Your Grace may do your pleasure

K Rich Tut, tut! thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord, 24

Before I positively speak in this

I will resolve you herein presently [Exit

Cate [Aside to another] The king is angry see he gnaws his lip

K Rich [Descends from his throne] I will converse with iron-witted fools 28

And unrespective boys none are for me
 That look into me with considerate eyes

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.
 Boy! 32

K Rich Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Will tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page I know a discontented gentleman, 36
 Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit

Gold were as good as twenty orators,
 And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.

K Rich What is his name?

Page His name, my lord, is Tyrrell

K Rich I partly know the man go, call him hither [Exit Page

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham

No more shall be the neighbour to my counsel Hath he so long held out with me untr'd, 44

And stops he now for breath? well, be it so

Enter STANLEY

How now, Lord Stanley! what's the news?

Stan Know, my loving lord,
 The Marquess Dorset, as I hear, is fled 48

To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K Rich Come hither, Catesby rumour it abroad,

That Anne my wife is very grievous sick;

I will take order for her keeping close
Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman, Whom I will marry straight to Clarence'
daughter
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him
Look, how thou dream'st! I say again, give out 56
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die
About it, for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage
me
[Exit CATESBY
I must be married to my brother's daughter, 60
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin 64
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye

Re-enter Page, with TYRRELL.

Is thy name Tyrrell?

Tyr James Tyrrell, and your most obedient subject.

K Rich Art thou, indeed?

Tyr Prove me, my gracious lord 68

K Rich Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr Please you, but I had rather kill two enemies

K Rich Why, then thou hast it two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon 73
Tyrrell, I mean those bastards in the Tower

Tyr Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them 76

K Rich Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrell

Go, by this token rise, and lend thine ear

There is no more but so say it is done, 80
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will dispatch it straight. [Exit

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in K Rich Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond 84

Buck I hear the news, my lord.

K Rich Stanley, he is your wife's son well, look to it.

Buck My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,

For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd; 88

The earldom of Hereford and the moveables
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K Rich Stanley, look to your wife if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it. 92

Buck What says your highness to my just request?

K Rich I do remember me, Henry the Sixth

Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy 96

A king! perhaps—
Buck My lord!

K Rich How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill
him? 100

Buck My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K Rich Richmond! When last I was at Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it Rougemont at which name I started, 104

Because a bard of Ireland told me once
I should not live long after I saw Richmond

Buck My lord!

K Rich Ay, what's o'clock? 108

Buck I am thus bold to put your Grace in mind

Of what you promis'd me
K Rich Well, but what is't o'clock?

Buck Upon the stroke of ten

K Rich Well, let it strike

Buck Why let it strike? 112

K Rich Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke

Between thy begging and my meditation
I am not in the giving vein to-day

Buck Why, then resolve me when you will,
or no 116

K Rich Thou troublest me I am not in the vein.

[Exit KING RICHARD and Train Buck And is it thus? repays he my deep service

With such contempt? made I him king for this?
O, let me think on Hastings and be gone 120

To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on [Exit

SCENE III.—The Same

Enter TYRRELL

Tyr The tyrannous and bloody act is done,
The most arch deed of piteous massacre

That ever yet this land was guilty of Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn 4

To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,

Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like to children in their death's sad story

'Oh! thus' quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes 9

'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girdling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk, 12

Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other
A book of prayers on their pillow lay,

Which once,' quoth Forrest, 'almost chang'd
my mind,

But, O, the devil!—there the villain stopp'd, 16
When Dighton thus told on 'We smothered

The most replenished sweet work of nature,
That from the prime creation e'er she fram'd.'

Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse, 20

They could not speak, and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king,
And here he comes

Enter KING RICHARD

All health my sovereign lord!
K Rich Kind Tyrrell, am I happy in thy news?
Tyr If to have done the thing you gave in charge Beget your happiness, be happy then,
For it is done

K Rich But didst thou see them dead?
Tyr I did, my lord
K Rich And buried, gentle Tyrrell?
Tyr The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them,

But how or in what place I do not know
K Rich Come to me, Tyrrell, soon at after-supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death
Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire Farewell till then

Tyr I humbly take my leave [Exit]
K Rich The son of Clarence have I pent up close,
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage,

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid the world good night.

Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer

Enter CATESBY

Cate My lord!
K Rich Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Cate Bad news, my lord Morton is fled to Richmond
And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth K Rich Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength Come I have learn'd that fearful commenting Is leaden servitor to dull delay

Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary
Then fiery expedition be my wing, Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king!

Go, muster men my counsel is my shield,
We must be brief when traitors brave the field.
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET

Q Mar So, now prosperity begins to mellow
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.
Here in these confines slyly have I lurk'd
To watch the waning of mine enemies.

A dire induction am I witness to,
And wail to France, hoping the consequence
Will prove as bitter black, and tragical Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret who comes here?

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS OF YORK

Q Eliz Ah! my poor princes! ah, my tender babes,
My unblown flowers, new appearing sweets,
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation

Q Mar Hover about her, say, that right for right Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night

Duch So many miseries have craz'd my voice,
That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?
Q Mar Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

Q Eliz Wilt thou, O God! fly from such gentle lambs,
And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?
When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done?

Q Mar When holy Harry died, and my sweet son Duch Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost, Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth, [Sitting down]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!
Q Eliz Ah! that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave
As thou canst yield a melancholy seat,

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.
Ah! who hath any cause to mourn but I?
[Sitting down by her]

Q Mar If ancient sorrow be most reverend,
Give mine the benefit of senecy,
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand,
If sorrow can admit society

[Sitting down with them.]
Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine
I had an Edward till a Richard kill'd him,
I had a Harry till a Richard kill'd him,
Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him,
Thou hadst a Richard till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him,
I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.

Q Mar Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.
From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood,
That foul defacer of God's handiwork,
That excellent grand-tyrant of the earth,

That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves
O! upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee that this carnal cur 56
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan.

Duch. O! Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes

God witness with me, I have wept for thine 60
Q Mar Bear with me, I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward,
Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward, 64 Young York he is but boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward,

And the beholders of this tragic play, 68
The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,
Grey,

Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves.
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer,
Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls 72
And send them thither, but at hand, at hand,
Ensues his piteous and unpitied end
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saunts pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd from hence 76
Cancel his bond of life, dear God! I pray,
That I may live to say, The dog is dead

Q Eliz. O! thou didst prophesy the time would come

That I should wish for thee to help me curse 80
That bottled spider, that foul bunchback'd
toad

Q Mar I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune,

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen,
The presentation of but what I was, 84

The flattering index of a direful pageant,
One heav'd a-high to be hurl'd down below,

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes,
A dream of what thou wert, a breath, a bubble,

A sign of dignity, a garish flag, 89
To be the aim of every dangerous shot,
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? 92

Where are thy children? wherein dost thou joy?

Who sues and kneels and cries God save the queen?

Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?
Where be the thronging troops that follow'd
thee? 96

Decline all this, and see what now thou art
For happy wife, a most distressed widow,

For joyful mother, one that wails the name,
For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues, 100

For queen, a very carthuff crown'd with care,
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me,

For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one,
For one commanding all, obey'd of none 104

Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time,

Having no more but thought of what thou wert,

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? 110
Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke,

From which even here, I slip my wearied head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee 113

Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mis-chance

These English woes shall make me smile in France

Q Eliz. O thou, well skill'd in curses, stay awhile, 116

And teach me how to curse mine enemies
Q Mar Forbear to sleep the night, and fast
the day,

Compare dead happiness with living woe,
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,

And he that slew them fouler than he is 121
Bettering thy loss makes the bad causer worse
Revolving this will teach thee how to curse

Q Eliz. My words are dull, O! quicken them with thine! 124

Q Mar Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine [Exit

Duch Why should calamity be full of words?
Q Eliz Windy attorneys to their client woes,

Auxy succeders of intestate joys, 128
Poor breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope though what they do impart

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.
Duch If so, then be not tongue tied go with
me, 132

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd. [A trumpet heard.

The trumpet sounds be copious in exclams

Enter KING RICHARD, and his Train, marching

K Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? 136

Duch O! she that might have intercepted
thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast
done!

Q Eliz Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown, 140

Where should be branded, if that right were
right,

The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children? 144

Duch Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q Eliz Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings? 148

K Rich A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women

Rail on the Lord s anointed Strike, I say!

[Flourish Alarums
 Either be patient, and entreat me fair, 152
 Or with the clamorous report of war Thus will I drown your exclamations

Duch Art thou my son?

K Rich Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself 156

Duch Then patiently hear my impatience

K Rich Madam, I have a touch of your condition

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch O, let me speak!

K Rich Do then but I'll not hear 160

Duch I will be mild and gentle in my words

K Rich And brief, good mother, for I am in haste

Duch Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for thee,

God knows, in torment and in agony 164

K Rich And came I not at last to comfort you?

Duch No, by the holy rood thou know'st it well,

Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell

A grievous burden was thy birth to me, 168

Itchy and wayward was thy infancy,

Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild and furious,

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venturous,

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, 172

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred

What comfortable hour canst thou name

That ever grac'd me in thy company?

K Rich Faith, none but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your Grace 176

To breakfast once forth of my company

If I be so disgracious in your eye,

Let me march on and not offend you, madam

Strike up the drum!

Duch I prithee, hear me speak 180

K Rich You speak too bitterly

Duch Hear me a word,

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K Rich So!

Duch Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance, 184

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror,

Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish

And never look upon thy face again

Therefore take with thee my most grievous curse, 188

Which, in the day of battle tire thee more

Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight,

And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies 193

And promise them success and victory

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end,

Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend.

[Exit

Q Eliz Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse 197

Abides in me I say amen to her

[Going
K Rich Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you

Q Eliz I have no more sons of the royal blood 200

For thee to slaughter for my daughters,

Richard,

They shall be praying nuns not weeping queens,

And therefore level not to hit their lives

K Rich You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth, 204

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious

Q Eliz And must she die for this? O! let her live,

And I'll corrupt her manners stain her beauty,

Slander myself as false to Edward's bed, 208

Throw over her the veil of infamy

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,

I will confess she was not Edward's daughter

K Rich Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood 212

Q Eliz To save her life I'll say she is not so

K Rich Her life is safest only in her birth

Q Eliz And only in that safety died her brothers

K Rich Lo! at their births good stars were opposite! 216

Q Eliz No, to their lives ill friends were contrary

K Rich All unavoids is the doom of destiny

Q Eliz True, when avoided grace makes destiny

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death, 220

If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life

K Rich You speak as if that I had slain my cousins

Q Eliz Cousins, indeed, and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life 224

Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart, 228

To revel in the entrails of my lambs

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,

My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes,

And I, in such a desperate bay of death, 233

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom

K Rich Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise 236

And dangerous success of bloody wars,

As I intend more good to you and yours

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd.

Q Eliz What good is cover'd with the face of heaven, 240

To be discover'd that can do me good?

K Rich The advancement of your children, gentle lady

Q Eliz Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?

K Rich No, to the dignity and height of fortune, 244

The high imperial type of this earth's glory

Q Eliz Flatter my sorrow with report of it Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour, Canst thou demise to any child of mine? 248

K Rich Even all I have, ay, and myself and
all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine,
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul Thou drown the sad remembrance of those
wrongs 252

Which thou supposest I have done to thee Q Eliz Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date K Rich Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter 256

Q Eliz My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul

K Rich What do you think?
Q Eliz That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul

So from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers, 260

And from my heart's love I do thank thee for
it

K Rich Be not too hasty to confound my meaning

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queen of England

Q Eliz Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king? 265

K Rich Even he that makes her queen who else should be?

Q Eliz What! thou?

K Rich Even so what think you of it? 268

Q Eliz How canst thou woo her?

K Rich That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour

Q Eliz And wilt thou learn of me?

K Rich Madam, with all my heart.

Q Eliz Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers 272

A pair of bleeding hearts, thereon engrave
Edward and York, then haply will she weep

Therefore present to her, as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood, 276

A handkerchief, which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal
If this inducement move her not to love, 280

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds,
Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,

Her uncle Rivers, ay, and for her sake,
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne 284

K Rich You mock me, madam, this is not
the way

To win your daughter
Q Eliz There is no other way

Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,
And not be Richard that hath done all this 288

K Rich Say, that I did all this for love of
her?

Q Eliz Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K Rich Look, what is done cannot be now amended 292

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours give leisure to repent

If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make amends I'll give it to your daughter

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb, 297

To quicken your increase, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter

A grandam's name is little less in love 300

Than is the doting title of a mother,
They are as children but one step below,

Even of your meitie, of your very blood,
Of all one pain, save for a night of groans 304

Endur'd of her for whom you bid like sorrow
Your children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your age
The loss you have is but a son being king, 308

And by that loss your daughter is made queen
I cannot make you what amends I would,

Therefore accept such kindness as I can Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul 312

Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home

To high promotions and great dignity
The king that calls your beauteous daughter
wife, 316

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother,
Again shall you be mother to a king,

And all the ruins of distressful times
Repair'd with double riches of content 320

What! we have many goodly days to see
The liquid drops of tears that you have shed

Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl, Advantaging their loan with interest 324

Of ten times double gain of happiness
Go then, my mother, to thy daughter go

Make bold her bashful years with your experience

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale, 328

Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame
Of golden sovereignty, acquaint the princess

With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys
And when this arm of mine hath chastised 332

The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I come,

And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed,
To whom I will retail my conquest won, 336

And she shall be sole victress Caesar's Caesar Q Eliz What were I best to say? her father's
brother

Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle?

Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncles?

Under what title shall I woo for thee, 341

That God, the law, my honour, and her love
Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K Rich Infer fair England's peace by this alliance 344

Q Eliz Which she shall purchase with still lasting war.

K Rich Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats

Q Eliz That at her hands which the king's King forbids.

K Rich Say, she shall be a high and mighty
queen. 348

Q Eliz To wail the title as her mother doth K Rich Say I will love her everlastingly
Q Eliz But how long shall that title ever last?
K Rich Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end 352
Q Eliz But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?
K Rich As long as heaven and nature lengthens it Q Eliz As long as hell and Richard likes of it K Rich Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low 356
Q Eliz But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty K Rich Be eloquent in my behalf to her Q Eliz An honest tale speeds best being plainly told K Rich Then plainly to her tell my loving tale 360
Q Eliz Plain and not honest is too harsh a style
K Rich Your reasons are too shallow and too quick Q Eliz O, no! my reasons are too deep and dead, Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves
K Rich Harp not on that string, madam, that is past 365
Q Eliz Harp on it still shall I till heart-strings break.
K Rich Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown —
Q Eliz Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd 368
K Rich I swear, —
Q Eliz By nothing, for this is no oath
 Thy George profan'd hath lost his holy honour, Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue, 371
 Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory
 If something thou wouldst swear to be believ'd, Swear, then, by something that thou hast not wrong'd 374
K Rich Now, by the world —
Q Eliz 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs
K Rich My father's oath —
Q Eliz Thy life hath that dishonour'd
K Rich Then, by myself, —
Q Eliz Thyself is self-misus'd.
K Rich Why, then, by God —
Q Eliz God's wrong is most of all
 If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 The unity the king my husband made 380
 Had not been broken nor my brothers died
 If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
 The imperial metal circling now thy head, 384
 Had grac'd the tender temples of my child,
 And both the princes had been breathing here,
 Which now, too tender bed-fellows for dust,
 Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms
 What canst thou swear by now?
K Rich The time to come 388
Q Eliz That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast,
 For I myself have many tears to wash
 Hereafter time for time past wrong'd by thee
 The children live, whose parents thou hast slaughter'd, 392
 Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age
 The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd Old barren plants to wail it with their age
 Swear not by time to come for that thou hast misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast 397
K Rich As I intend to prosper and repent,
 So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
 Of hostile arms' myself myself confound! 400
 Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours!
 Dav, yield me not thy light nor night, thy rest!
 Be opposite all planets of good luck
 To my proceeding, if with pure heart's love, 404
 Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
 I tender not thy lecherous princely daughter!
 In her consists my happiness and thine
 Without her follows to myself a curse 408
 Herself the land and many a Christian soul
 Death, desolation, ruin and decay
 It cannot be avoided but by this
 It will not be avoided but by his 412
 Therefore dear mother, — I must call you so, —
 Be the attorney of my love to her Plead what I will be not what I have been,
 Not my deserts but what I will deserve 416
 Urge the necessity and state of times,
 And be not peevish-fond in great designs
Q Eliz Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?
K Rich Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good 420
Q Eliz Shall I forget myself to be myself?
K Rich Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself
Q Eliz Yet thou didst kill my children
K Rich But in your daughter's womb I bury them 424
 Where, in that nest of snicery, they shall breed
 Selves of themselves to your recomforture Q Eliz Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
K Rich And be a happy mother by the deed
Q Eliz I go Write to me very shortly, 429
 And you shall understand from me her mind.
K Rich Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell [Kissing her Exit QUEEN ELIZABETH
 Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman!
 Enter RATCLIFF, CATESBY following
 How now! what news? 433
Rat Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast Rideth a puissant navy to the shores
 Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends, Unarm'd and unresolv'd to beat them back. 437
 'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral,
 And there they hulk, expecting but the aid
 Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore 440
K Rich Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby, where is he?

Cate Here, my good lord

K Rich Catesby, fly to the duke

Cate I will, my lord, with all convenient

haste 444

K Rich Ratcliff, come hither Post to Salisbury

bury

When thou com'st thither,—[To CATESBY]

Dull, unkind villain,

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?

Cate First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure 445

What from your Grace I shall deliver to him

K Rich O true, good Catesby bid him

levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,

And meet me suddenly at Salisbury 452

Cate I go [Exit]

Rat What may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?

K Rich Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go?

Rat Your highness told me I should post

before 456

Enter STANLEY

K Rich My round is chang'd Stanley, what news with you?

Stan None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing.

Nor none so bad but well may be reported

K Rich Hoyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad! 460

What need'st thou run so many miles about

When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way?

Once more, what news?

Stan Richmond is on the seas

K Rich There let him sink, and be the seas on him! 464

White liver'd runagate! what doth he there?

Stan I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess

K Rich Well as you guess?

Stan Sturr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton, 468

He makes for England here to claim the crown

K Rich Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive but we? 472

And who is England's king but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan Unless for that, my liege, I cannot

guess

K Rich Unless for that he comes to be your

liege 476

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman

comes

Thou wilt revolt and fly to him I fear

Stan No, my good lord, therefore mistrust me not

K Rich Where is thy power then to beat him back? 480

Where be thy tenants and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shores

Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan No, my good lord, my friends are in the north 484

K Rich Cold friends to me what do they

in the north

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan They have not been commanded,

mighty king

Please thy majesty to give me leave, 488

I'll muster up my friends, and meet your Grace,

Where and what time your majesty shall please

K Rich Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond

But I'll not trust thee

Stan Most mighty sovereign, 492

You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful

I never was nor never will be false

K Rich Go then and muster men but leave behind

Your son, George Stanley look your heart be firm, 496

Or else his head's assurance is but frail

Stan So deal with him as I prove true to you [Exit]

Enter a Messenger

Mess My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire

As I by friends am well advertised, 500

Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,

Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,

With many more confederates are in arms

Enter a second Messenger

Sec Mess In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms, 504

And every hour more competitors

Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong

Enter a third Messenger

Thrd Mess My lord, the army of great

Buckingham—

K Rich Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him

There, take thou that, till thou bring better

news 509

Thrd Mess The news I have to tell your

majesty

Is that thy sudden floods and fall of waters

Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd,

And he himself wander'd away alone, 513

No man knows whither

K Rich I cry thee mercy

There is my purse, to cure that blow of thine

Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd 516

Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

Thrd Mess Such proclamation hath been made, my liege

Enter a fourth Messenger

Fourth Mess Sir Thomas Lovell, and Lord

Marquess Dorset

Are said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms 520

But this good comfort bring I to your highness,

The Breton navy is dispers'd by tempest
 Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat Unto the shore to ask those on the banks 524
 If they were his assistants, yea or no,
 Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham
 Upon his party he, mistrusting them,
 Hous'd sail, and made away for Britany 528 A Rich March on, march on, since we are up in arms,
 If not to fight with foreign enemies,
 Yet to beat down these rebels here at home

Re-enter CATESBY

Cate My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken 532
 That is the best news that the Earl of Richmond
 Is with a mighty power landed at Milford
 Is colder news, but yet they must be told K Rich Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here, 536
 A royal battle might be won and lost
 Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury, the rest march on with me
 [Exeunt]

SCENE V — The Same A Room in LORD
STANLEY'S House

Enter STANLEY and SIR CHRISTOPHER URSWICK Stan Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this
 from me
 That in the sty of this most bloody boar
 My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold
 If I revolt, off goes young George's head, 4
 The fear of that holds off my present aid
 So, get thee gone commend me to thy lord Withal, say that the queen hath heartily consented
 He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter 8
 But tell me, where is princely Richmond now?
 Chris At Pembroke, or at Ha'rford-west, in Wales
 Stan What men of name resort to him?
 Chris Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier, 12
 Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
 Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
 And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew,
 And many other of great name and worth 16
 And towards London do they bend their power,
 If by the way they be not fought withal Stan Well, hie thee to thy lord, I kiss his
 hand
 My letter will resolve him of my mind 20
 Farewell. [Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I — Salisbury An open Place

Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution
 Buck Will not King Richard let me speak
 with him?

Sher No, my good lord, therefore be patient Buck Hastings, and Edward schildren, Grey and Rivers,
 Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward 4
 Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
 By underhand corrupted foul injustice,
 If that your moody discontented souls
 Do through the clouds behold this present hour, Even for revenge mock my destruction! 9
 This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?

Sher It is, my lord Buck Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday 12

This is the day that, in King Edward's time,
 I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found False to his children or his wife's allies,
 This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall 16
 By the false faith of him whom most I trusted,
 This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
 Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs
 That high All-Seer which I dallied with 20
 Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head,
 And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
 Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men To turn their own points on their masters' 24
 bosoms

Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck
 'When he,' quoth she, 'shall split thy heart with sorrow,
 Remember Margaret was a prophetess' 27
 Come lead me, officers, to the block of shame Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt]

SCENE II — A Plain near Tamworth

Enter with drum and colours, RICHMOND, OX-FORD, SIR JAMES BLUNT, SIR WALTER HERBERT, and Others, with Forces, marching Richm Fellows in arms, and my most loving
 friends,
 Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
 Thus far into the bowels of the land
 Have we march'd on without impediment 4
 And here receive we from our father Stanley Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
 The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
 That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines, 8
 Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough
 In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine
 Is now even in the centre of this isle,
 Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn 12
 From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.
 In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
 To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
 By this one bloody trial of sharp war 16
 Oxf Every man's conscience is a thousand
 men,
 To fight against this guilty homicide.
 Herb I doubt not but his friends will turn
 to us.
 Blunt He hath no friends but what are friends for fear, 20
 Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm All for our vantage then, in God's name, march True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings, King's it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings
[Exeunt]

SCENE III — Bosworth Field

Enter KING RICHARD and Forces the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, and Others

K Rich Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur My heart is ten times lighter than my looks

K Rich My Lord of Norfolk,—

Nor Here, most gracious hege

K Rich Norfolk, we must have knocas, ha! must we not?

Nor We must both give and take, my loving lord

K Rich Up with my tent! here will I lie to-night,

[Soldiers begin to set up the KING's tent
But where to-morrow? Well all son for that Who hath desied the number of the traitors?

Nor Six or seven thousand is their utmost power

K Rich Why, our battalia trebles that account,

Besides, the King's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want

Up with the tent! Come, noble gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground,

Call for some men of sound direction

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay,
For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day [Exeunt]

Enter on the other side of the field, RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and other Officers
Some of the Soldiers pitch RICHMOND's tent

Richm The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard

Give me some ink and paper in my tent
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,

Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part it in just proportion our small power

My Lord of Oxford, you Sir William Brandon,
And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me

The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,

And by the record hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me in my tent

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me,
Where is Lord Stanley's quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt Unless I have mistaken his colours —such,

Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done,—

His comment Let half a rule at least South from the mighty power of the king

Richm It without peril it be possible,

Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him,

And give him from me this most needful note

Blunt Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it,
And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm Good-night, good Captain Blunt
Come gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business,
In to my tent, the air is raw and cold

[They withdraw into the tent]

Enter, to his tent KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, and CATESBY

K Rich What is't o'clock?

Cate It's supper-time, my lord

It's nine o'clock

K Rich I will not sup to-night

Give me some ink and paper

What is my beaver easier than it was,

And all my armour 'mid my tent?

Cate It is my horse and all things are in readiness

K Rich Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge,

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels

Nor I go, my lord

K Rich Stay with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk

Nor I warrant you, my lord

K Rich Ratcliff!

Rat My lord?

K Rich Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment, bid him bring his power

Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall Into the blind cave of eternal night

Fill me a bowl of wine Give me a watch Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow

Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy Ratcliff!

Rat My lord!

K Rich Saw'st thou the melancholy Lord
Northumberland?

Rat Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself,
Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop

Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers

K Rich So, I am satisfied Give me a bowl of wine

I have not that alacrity of spirit, Nor cheer of mind that I was wont to have Set it down Is ink and paper ready?

Rat It is, my lord

K Rich Did my guard watch, leave me?

Ratcliff about the mid of night come to my tent
And help to arm me Leave me, I say

[KING RICHARD retires into his tent
Exeunt RATCLIFF and CATESBY]

RICHMOND's tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c

Enter STANLEY

Stan Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm All comfort that the dark night can afford

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
 Tell me, how fares our loving mother?
Stan I, by attorney, bless thee from thy
 mother, 84
 Who prays continually for Richmond's good
 So much for that The silent hours steal on And flaky darkness breaks within the east
 In brief, for so the season bids us be, 88
 Prepare thy battle early in the morning,
 And put thy fortune to the arbitrement
 Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war
 As I may,—that which I would I cannot.— 92
 With best advantage will deceive the time,
 And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms
 But on thy side I may not be too forward
 Lest, being seen, thy brother tender George, 96
 Be executed in his father's sight Farewell the leisure and the fearful time Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love
 And ample interchange of sweet discourse, 100 Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon

God give us leisure for these rites of love!
 Once more adieu be valiant, and speed well!
Richm Good lords, conduct him to his regiment 104

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap,
 Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,
 When I should mount with wings of victory Once more, good-night, kind lords and gentlemen [Exeunt all but RICHMOND]
 O thou, whose captain I account myself, 109
 Look on my forces with a gracious eye
 Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
 That they may crush down with a heavy fall 112
 The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
 Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
 That we may praise thee in thy victory!
 To thee I do commend my watchful soul, 116
 Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes Sleeping and waking, O! defend me still!
 [Sleeps]

The Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, Son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two tents

Ghost [To KING RICHARD] Let me sit heavy
 on thy soul to-morrow!
 Think how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth 120

At Tewksbury despair, therefore and die!
 Becheerful, Richmond, for the wronged souls
 Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf
 King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee

The Ghost of KING HENRY THE SIXTH rises

Ghost [To KING RICHARD] When I was mortal, my anointed body 125
 By thee was punched full of deadly holes
 Think on the Tower and me, despair and die!
 Henry the Sixth bids thee despair and die 128 [To RICHMOND] Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!
 Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be the
 king,
 Doth comfort thee in thy sleep live thou and flourish!

The Ghost of CLARENCE rises

Ghost [To KING RICHARD] Let me sit heavy
 on thy soul to-morrow! 132
 I that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine, Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!
 To-morrow in the battle think on me,
 And fall thy edgeless sword despair, and die!
 [To RICHMOND] Thou offspring of the house
 of Lancaster 137
 The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee
 Good angels guard thy battle! live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN rise

Ghost of RIVERS [To KING RICHARD] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! 140
 Rivers that died at Pomfret! despair, and die!
 • Ghost of GREY [To KING RICHARD] Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair Ghost of VAUGHAN [To KING RICHARD]
 Think upon Vaughan, and with guilty fear
 Let fall thy pointless lance despair, and die!
 All Three [To RICHMOND] Awake! and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom 145
 Will conquer him awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of HASTINGS rises

Ghost [To KING RICHARD] Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake,
 And in a bloody battle end thy days! 148
 Think on Lord Hastings, so despair and die!
 [To RICHMOND] Quiet, untroubled soul,
 awake, awake!
 Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young PRINCES rise

Ghosts [To KING RICHARD] Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower 152
 Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
 And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
 Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die!
 [To RICHMOND] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy, 156
 Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
 Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
 Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of LADY ANNE rises

Ghost [To KING RICHARD] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife, 160
 That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
 Now fills thy sleep with perturbations
 To-morrow in the battle think on me,
 And fall thy edgeless sword despair, and die!
 [To RICHMOND] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep, 165
 Dream of success and happy victory!
 Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee

The Ghost of BUCKINGHAM rises

Ghost [To KING RICHARD] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown, 168
 The last was I that felt thy tyranny
 O! in the battle think on Buckingham,
 And die in terror of thy guiltiness!

Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death
Fainting, despair, despairing, yield thy breath!
[To RICHMOND] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid 174
But cheer thy heart and be thou not dismay'd
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side,
And Richard falls in height of all his pride [The Ghosts vanish KING RICHARD starts out of his dream

K Rich Give me another horse! bind up my wounds! 178
Have mercy, Jesu! Soft! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
The lights burn blue It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh
What! do I fear myself? there's none else by Richard loves Richard, that is, I am I 184
Is there a murderer here? No Yes, I am Then fly what! from myself? Great reason why Lest I revenge What! myself upon myself?
Alack! I love myself Wherefore? for any good
That I myself have done unto myself? 189
O! no alas! I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself
I am a villain Yet I lie, I am not 192
Fool, of thyself speak well fool, do not flatter
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain 196
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree Murder, stern murder in the dur'st degree,
All several sins, all us'd in each degree, 199
Throng to the bar, crying all, 'Guilty! guilty!'
I shall despair There is no creature loves me,
And if I die, no soul will pity me
Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself Find in myself no pity to myself? 204
Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd Came to my tent, and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF

Rat My lord! 208
K Rich 'Zounds! who's there?
Rat Ratcliff, my lord, 'tis I. The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn, Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour 212
K Rich O Ratcliff! I have dream'd a fearful dream
What thinkest thou, will our friends prove all true?
Rat No doubt, my lord
K Rich O Ratcliff! I fear, I fear,— Rat Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows 216
K Rich By the apostle Paul, shadows to-might Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond
It is not yet near day Come, go with me, 221
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me
[Exeunt

RICHMOND wakes Enter OXFORD and Others
Lords Good morrow, Richmond! 224 Rich Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,
That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here
Lords How have you slept, my lord?
Rich The sweetest sleep, the fairest-boding dreams 228
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,
Came to my tent and cried on victory 232
I promise you, my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?
Lords Upon the stroke of four 236 Rich Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his Soldiers

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on yet remember this, 240
God and our good cause fight upon our side,
The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces, Richard except, those whom we fight against 244
Had rather have us win than him they follow
For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant and a homicide, 247
Oneras'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd,
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him,
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set, 252
One that hath ever been God's enemy
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will in justice, ward you as his soldiers,
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down, 256
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain,
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hure,
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives, 260
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors,
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age
Then, in the name of God and all these rights, Advance your standards, draw your willing
swords 265
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt Shall be this cold corse on the earth's cold face,
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt 268
The least of you shall share his part thereof Sound drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully,
God and Saint George! Richmond and victory!
[Exeunt

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants,
and Forces

K Rich What said Northumberland as touching Richmond? 272

Rat That he was never trained up in arms
K Rich He said the truth and what said Surrey then?

Rat He smil'd, and said, 'The better for our purpose

K Rich He was i' the right, and so, indeed, it is [Clock strikes]

Rat Give me a calendar 277
 Who saw the sun to day?

Rat Not I, my lord
K Rich Then he disdains to shine, for by the book

He should have brav'd the east an hour ago 280
 A black day will it be to somebody

Rat My lord?

K Rich The sun will not be seen to-day,
 The sky doth frown and lower upon our army
 I would these dewy tears were from the ground
 Not shine to day! Why, what is that to me More than to Richmond? for the self-same
 heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him 288

Enter NORFOLK

Nor Arm, arm, my lord! the foe vaunts in the field

K Rich Come, bustle, bustle, caparison my horse

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power
 I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain, 292

And thus my battle shall be ordered
 My foreward shall be drawn out all in length

Consisting equally of horse and foot,
 Our archers shall be placed in the midst 296

John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Ear' of Surrey, Shall have the leading of this foot and horse

Thev thus directed, we will follow
 In the main battle, whose puissance on either side 300

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse This, and Saint George to boot! What think st thou, Norfolk?

Nor A good direction, war-like sovereign
 This found I on my tent this morning 304

[Giving a scroll]
K Rich Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,
 For Dickon thy master is bought and sold

A thing devised by the enemy
 Go, gentlemen every man to his charge 308

Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls, Conscience is but a word that cowards use, Devis'd at first to keep the strong in a we

Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law 312

March on join bravely, let us to't pell-mell,
 If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His oration to his Army

What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?
 Remember whom you are to cope withal 316

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,
 A scum of Bretons and base lackey peasants,
 Whom their o'er-cloved country vomits forth To desperate adventures and assur'd destruction. 320

You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest,
 You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous
 wives,

They would restrain the one, disdain the other
 And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow 324

Long kept in Britaine at our mother's cost?
 A milksop one that never in his life

Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow? 327
 Let's whip these stragglers o'er the sea again,
 Lash hence these overweening rags of France,

These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives,
 Who but for dreaming on this fond exploit

For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd
 themselves 332

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,
 And not these bastard Bretons whom our fathers Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd

And on record left them the heirs of shame 336
 Shall these enjoy our lands? he with our wives?

Ravish our daughters? [Drum afar off]
 Hark! I hear their drum

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeo-
 men! 339

Draw archers draw your arrows to the head!
 Spur your proud horses hard and ride in blood,
 Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a Messenger

What says Lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess My lord he doth deny to come 344
K Rich Off with his son George's head!

Nor My lord the enemy is pass'd the marsh
 After the battle let George Stanley die

K Rich A thousand hearts are great within my bosom 348

Advance our standards! set upon our foes!
 Our ancient word of courage fair Saint George,
 Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!

Upon them! Victory sits upon our helms 352
 [Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Another Part of the Field

Alarum Excursions Enter NORFOLK and Forces to him CATESBY

Cate Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk! rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,
 Daring an opposite to every danger

His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights 4 Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death

Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum Enter KING RICHARD

K Rich A horse! a horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a horse 8

K Rich Slave! I have set my life upon a cast
 And I will stand the hazard of the die

I think there be six Richmonds in the field
 Five have I slain to day instead of him.— 12

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!
 [Exeunt]

Alarums Enter from opposite sides KING RICHARD and RICHMOND, and exeunt fighting Retreat and flourish Then re-enter RICHMOND, STANLEY, bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces

Richm God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends,

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead

Stan Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee! 16

Lo! here, this long usurped royalty

From the dead temples of this bloody wretch

Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal

Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it. 20

Richm Great God of heaven, say amen to all!

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town,

Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us 24

Richm What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon,

Richm Inter their bodies as becomes their births 28

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled

That in submission will return to us,
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red 32 Smile, heaven, upon this fair conjunction,
That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!
What traitor hears me, and says not amen?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself, 36

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,

The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire

All this divided York and Lancaster, 40

Divided in their dire division,

O! now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true succeeders of each royal house,

By God's fair ordinance conjoin together, 44

And let their heirs—God, if thy will be so,—

Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd
peace

With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, 48

That would reduce these bloody days again,

And make poor England weep in streams of
blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase,

That would with treason wound this fair land's
peace! 52

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again

That she may long live here, God say amen!
[Exeunt]

PROLOGUE

*I come no more to make you laugh things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,* 4
*We now present Those that can pity, here May, if they think it well, let fall a tear,
The subject will deserve it Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,* 8
*May here find truth too Those that come to see Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling* 12
*Richly in two short hours Only they That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,* 16
*Will be deceiv'd for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, besides forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,* 21
*Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness sake, and as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town,* 24
*Be sad, as we would make ye think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat* 28
Of thousand friends, then, in a moment see How soon this mightiness meets misery:

And if you can be merry then, I'll say A man may weep upon his wedding day 32

ACT I

SCENE I — London An Antechamber in the Palace

Enter at one door the DUKE OF NORFOLK, at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY

Buck Good morrow, and well met How have you done,

Since last we saw in France?

Nor I thank your Grace, Healthful, and ever since a fresh admirer Of what I saw there.

Buck An untimely ague 4 Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when Those suns of glory, those two lights of men, Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor Twixt Guynes and Arde 8 I was then present, saw them salute on horse-back, Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung In their embracement, as they grew together Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?

Buck All the whole time 12 I was my chamber's prisoner

Nor Then you lost The view of earthly glory men might say, Till this time, pomp was single, but now married

To one above itself Each following day 16 Became the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders its To-day the French
 All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English, and to-morrow they Made Britain India every man that stood 21 Show'd like a mine Their dwarfish pages were
 As cherubins, all gilt the madams, too,
 Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear 24
 The pride upon them, that their very labour
 Was to them as a painting Now this masque
 Was cried incomparable, and the ensuing night
 Made it a fool, and beggar The two kings 28
 Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
 As presence did present them, him in eye,
 Still him in praise, and, being present both,
 'Twas said they saw but one, and no discerners Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns— 33
 For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challeng'd
 The noble spirits to arms, they did perform Beyond thought's compass, that former fabulous story, 36
 Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
 That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck O! you go far Nor As I belong to worship, and affect In honour honesty, the tract of every thing 40
 Would by a good discourser lose some life, Which action's self was tongue to All was royal,

To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
 Order gave each thing view, the office did 44
 Distinctly his full function.

Buck Who did guide,
 I mean, who set the body and the limbs
 Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor One, certes, that promises no element 48
 In such a business.

Buck I pray you, who, my lord?
Nor All this was order'd by the good discretion

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York Buck The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed 52

From his ambitious finger What had he
 To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder That such a keech can with his very bulk Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun, 56
 And keep it from the earth.

Nor Surely, sir,
 There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends
 For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon 60
 For high feats done to the crown neither allied To eminent assistants, but, spider-like
 Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
 The force of his own merit makes his way, 64
 A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
 A place next to the king

Aber I cannot tell
 What heaven hath given him let some grave-eyer
 Pierce into that, but I can see his pride 68 Peep through each part of him whence has he
 that?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,
 Or has given all before, and he begins
 A new hell in himself

Buck Why the devil 72
 Upon this French going-out, took he upon him, Without the privy o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file

Of all the gentry, for the most part such 76
 To whom as great a charge as little honour
 He meant to lay upon and his own letter,—
 The honourable board of council out,— Must fetch him in he papers

Aber I do know 80
 Kinsmen of mine three at the least, that have
 By this so sicken'd their estates, that never They shall abound as formerly

Buck O! many Have broke their backs with laying manors 84 on em

For this great journey What did this vanity But minister communication of A most poor issue?

Nor Grievingly I think,
 The peace between the French and us not values 88

The cost that did conclude it.

Buck Every man,
 After the hideous storm that follow'd, was A thing inspir'd, and, not consulting, broke Into a general prophecy That this tempest 92
 Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
 The sudden breach on't

Nor Which is budded out,
 For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd

Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux
Aber Is it therefore 96

The ambassador is silenc'd?
Nor Marry, is't.

Aber A proper title of a peace, and purchas'd
 At a superfluous rate!

Buck Why, all this business
 Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor Like it your Grace, too
 The state takes notice of the private difference Betwixt you and the cardinal I advise you,— And take it from a heart that wishes towards
 you

Honour and plenteous safety,—that you read
 The cardinal's malice and his potency 105 Together, to consider further that

What his high hatred would effect wants not A minister in his power You know his nature,
 That he's revengeful, and I know his sword 109
 Hath a sharp edge it's long, and 't may be said,
 It reaches far, and where 'twill not extend,
 Thither he darts it Bosom up my counsel, 112 You'll find it wholesome Lo where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY,—the Purse borne before him,—certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers The CARDINAL in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain.

Wol The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, ha?

Where's his examination

First Secr Here, so please you. 116

Wol Is he in person ready?

First Secr Ay, please your Grace

Wol Well, we shall then know more, and

Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look

Buck This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I

Have not the power to muzzle him, therefore best

Not wake him in his slumber A beggar's book Outworths a noble's blood

Nor What! are you chaf'd?

Ask God for temperance, that's the appliance
only 124

Which your disease requires

Buck I read in's looks

Matter against me, and his eye revild

Me, as his abject object at this instant

He bores me with some trick he's gone to the
king, 128

I'll follow, and out-stare him

Nor Stay, my lord,

And let your reason with your choler question

What tis you go about To climb steep hills

Requires slow pace at first anger is like 132

A full-hot horse who being allow'd his way,

Self-mettle tires him Not a man in England

Can advise me like you be to yourself

As you would to your friend

Buck I'll to the king, 136

And from a mouth of honour quite cry down

This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim

There's difference in no persons

Nor Be advis'd,

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot 140

That it do singe yourself We may outrun

By violent swiftness that which we run at,

And lose by overrunning Know you not, 143

The fire that mounts the liquor till it run o'er,

In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd

I say again, there is no English soul

More stronger to direct you than yourself,

If with the sap of reason you would quench, 148

Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck Sir,

I am thankful to you, and I'll go along

By your prescription but this top-proud fellow

Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but 152

From sincere motions,—by intelligence,

And proofs as clear as founts in July, when

We see each grain of gravel,—I do know

To be corrupt and treasonous

Nor Say not, 'treasonous' 156

Buck To the king I'll say't, and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend This holy fox,

Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal ravenous

As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief 160

As able to perform't, his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview, 165
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass

Did break i' the rinsing

Nor

Faith, and so it did

Buck Pray give me favour, sir This cunning

cardinal 168

The articles o' the combination drew

As himself pleas'd, and they were ratified

As he cried, 'Thus let be, to as much end

As give a crutch to the dead But our count-
cardinal 172

Has done this, and 'tis well, for worthy Wolsey,

Who cannot err, he did it Now this follows,—

Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy

To the old dam, treason, Charles the emperor,

Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,— 177

For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came

To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation

His fears were, that the interview betwixt 180

England and France might, through their amity,

Breed him some prejudice, for from this league

Peep'd harms that menac'd him He privily

Deals with our cardinal, and, as I trow, 184

Which I do well, for I am sure the emperor

Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was ask'd, but when the way was made,

And pay'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd

That he would please to alter the king's course,

And break the foresaid peace Let the king
know—

As soon he shall by me—that thus the cardinal

Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, 192

And for his own advantage

Nor

I am sorry

To hear this of him, and could wish he were Something mistaken in't

Buck

No, not a syllable

I do pronounce him in that very shape 196

He shall appear in proof.

*Enter BRANDON, a Sergeant-at-Arms before
him*

Bran Your office, sergeant, execute it.

Serg

Sir,

My Lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl

Of Hereford Stafford, and Northampton, I 200

Arrest thee of high treason, in the name

Of our most sovereign king

Buck.

Lo you, my lord,

The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish

Under device and practice.

Bran

I am sorry 204

To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on

The business present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure

You shall to the Tower

Buck

It will help me nothing

To plead mine innocence, for that dye is on me

Which makes my whiter part black. The will of heaven 209

Be done in this and all things! I obey
O! my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!

Bran Nay, he must bear you company [To ABERGAVENNY] The king
Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know How he determines further

Aber As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd!

Bran Here is a warrant from The king to attach Lord Montacute, and the bodies

Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck So, so, 219
These are the limbs o' the plot no more, I hope Bran A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck O! Nicholas Hopkins?
Bran He

Buck My surveyor is false, the o'er-great
cardinal

Hath show'd him gold My life is spann'd already

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham, 224
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By dark'ning my clear sun. My lord, farewell
[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Council Chamber

*Enter the KING, leaning on the CARDINAL'S shoulder, the Lords of the Council, SIR THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, and Attendants
The CARDINAL places himself under the KING'S feet on the right side*

K Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care I stood i' the level
Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks To you that chok'd it Let be call'd before us 4
That gentleman of Buckingham's, in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify And point by point the treasons of his master 8
He shall again relate

A noise within, crying, 'Room for the Queen!'

Enter QUEEN KATHARINE, ushered by the DUKES of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK she kneels The KING riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him

Q Kath Nay, we must longer kneel I am a suitor

K Hen Arise, and take place by us half your suit

Never name to us, you have half our power
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given, 12
Repeat your will, and take it

Q Kath Thank your majesty
That you would love yourself, and in that love Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point 16
Of my petition

K Hen Lad'y mine, proceed
Q Kath I am solicited, not by a few,

And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance there have been commissions 20

Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the
heart

Of all their loyaltes wherein, although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on 24
Of these exactions, yet the king our master,— Whose honour heaven shield from soil—even he escapes not

Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears 28
In loud rebellion

Nor Not almost appears,
It doth appear for, upon these taxation's,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off 32
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner Daring the event to the teetn, are all in uproar, 36

And danger serves among them
K Hen Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord Cardinal,

You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol Please you, sir, 40
I know but of a single part in aught
Pertains to the state, and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me

Q Kath No, my lord,
You know no more than others, but you frame Things that are known alike, which are not wholesome 45
To those which would not know them, and yet
must

Perforce be their acquaintance These exactions,
Whereof my sov'reign would have note, they are 48
Most pestilent to the hearing, and to bear 'em,
The back is sacrifice to the load They say They are devis'd by you or else you suffer Too hard an exclamation

K Hen Still exaction! 52
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q Kath I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience, but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon The subjects'
grief 56

Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay, and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France This makes bold mouths 60

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze

Allegiance in them their curses now Live where their prayers did, and it's come to pass,

This tractable obedience is a slave 64
To each incens'd will I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for There is no primer business

K Hen By my life,
This is against our pleasure
Wol And for me, 68
I have no further gone in this than by A single voice, and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither
know 72
My faculties nor person, yet will be The chronicles of my doing, let me say
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake That virtue must go through. We must not stint 76

Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious censurers, which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further 80
Than vainly longing What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is Not ours, or not allow'd, what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up 84
For our best act If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit State-statutes only

K Hen Things done well, 88
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear, Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any 92
We must not read our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber, 96
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,

The air will drink the sap To every county Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied 100
The force of this commission Pray, look to't,
I put it to your care

Wol [To the Secretary] A word with you
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons 104
Hardly conceive of me, let it be nois'd
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary]

Enter Surveyor

Q Kath I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham 109
Is run in your displeasure.

K Hen It grieves many
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare
speaker,
To nature none more bound, his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt, 116
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair This man so complete,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute, he, my lady, 121
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell Sit by us, you shall
hear— 124

This was his gentleman in trust—of him
Things to strike honour sad Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much 128 Wol Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham

K Hen Speak freely
Surv First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the king 133 Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law, 136 Lord Abergavenny, to whom by oath he menac'd

Revenge upon the cardinal

Wol Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant, and it stretches 141
Beyond you, to your friends

Q Kath My learn'd Lord Cardinal, Deliver all with charity

K Hen Speak on How grounded he his title to the crown 144
Upon our fail? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins K Hen What was that Hopkins?

Surv Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor, who fed him every minute 149
With words of sovereignty

K Hen How know'st thou this?
Surv Not long before your highness sped to
France,

The duke being at the Rose, within the parish Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand 153
What was the speech among the Londoners Concerning the French journey I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger Presently the duke 157 Said, 'twas the fear, indeed, and that he doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk, 'that oft,' says he, 160
'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment
Whom after under the confession's seal 164
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence Thus pausingly ensu'd neither the king nor's hears— 168

Tell you the duke—shall prosper bid him strive

To gain the love o' the commonalty the duke Shall govern England.'

Q Kath If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office 172
On the complaint o' the tenants take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take heed, Yes, heartily beseech you.

K Hen Let him on. 176
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd, and that 'twas dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until 180
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do. He answer'd, 'Tush!
It can do me no damage,' adding further,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd, 184
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads Should have gone off

K Hen Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege

K Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprov'd the duke 189
About Sir William Blomer,—

K Hen. I remember
Of such a time being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him his. But on, what
hence? 192

Surv. 'If,' quoth he, 'I for this had been committed,

As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
The usurper Richard, who, being at Salisbury, Made suit to come in's presence, which if granted, 197

As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him.'

K Hen A giant traitor!
Wol Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom, 200

And this man out of prison?

Q Kath God mend all!
K Hen. There's something more would out of thee? what sayst?

Surv. After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger, 204

Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath, whose tenour

Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance 208

Does an irrelative purpose

K Hen There's his period,
To sheathe his knife in us. He is attach'd,

Call him to present trial if he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his, if none, 212

Let him not seek't of us by day and night!
He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

SCENE III — A Room in the Palace

Enter the Lord Chamberlain and LORD SANDS

Cham Is't possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?
Sands New customs,

Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd 4

Cham As far as I see, all the good our English

Have got by the late voyage is but merely A fit or two o' the face, but they are shrewd ones,

For when they hold 'em, you would swear
directly 8

Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so

Sands They have all new legs, and lame ones one would take it,

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin 12
Or sprighalt reign'd among 'em.

Cham Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now!

What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?
Lov Faith, my lord,

I hear of none, but the new proclamation 17
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate

Cham What is't for?
Lov The reformation of our travell'd gallants,

That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors 20

Cham I am glad 'tis there now I would pray our monseurs

To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov They must either—
For so run the conditions—leave those remnants 24

Of fool and feather that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance

Pertaining thereunto,—as fights and fireworks,
Abusing better men than they can be, 28

Out of a foreign wisdom,—renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings,

Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,

And understand again like honest men, 32
Or pack to their old playfellows there, I take it,

They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases 36

Are grown so catching.

Cham What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords the sly whore-
sons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies; 40

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow Sands The devil indle em' I am glad they're going
 For sure there's no converting of 'em now
 An honest country lord, as I am beaten 44
 A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song
 And have an hour of hearing, and, by'r lady, Held current music too
Cham Well said, Lord Sands,
 Your colt's tooth is not cast yet
Sands No my lord, 48
 Nor shall not, while I have a stump
Cham Sir Thomas,
 Whither were you a-going?
Lov To the cardinal's
 Your lordship is a guest too
Cham O' tis true
 This night he makes a supper, and a great one
 To many lords and ladies, there will be 53
 The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you Lov That churchman bears a bounteous hand indeed
 A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us, 56
 His dews fall everywhere
Cham No doubt he's noble,
 He had a black mouth that said other of him Sands He may, my lord, he has wherewithal in him Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine 60
 Men of his way should be most liberal,
 They are set here for examples
Cham True, they are so,
 But few now give so great ones My barge stays
 Your lordship shall along Come, good Sir
 Thomas 64
 We shall be late else which I would not be,
 For I was spoke 'o with Sir Henry Guildford,
 This night to be comptrollers
Sands I am your lordship's.
 [Exeunt

SCENE IV — The Presence-chamber in York-Place

Hautboys A small table under a state for CAR-DINAL WOLSEY a longer table for the guests
Enter, at one door, ANNE BULLEN, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as guests at another door, enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD Guild Ladies, a general welcome from his Grace
 Salutes ye all this night he dedicates
 To fair content and you None here, he hopes,
 In all this noble bevy, has brought with her 4
 One care abroad, he would have all as merry
 As first good company, good wine, good welcome
 Can make good people.
Enter Lord Chamberlain, LORD SANDS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.
 O, my lord! you're tardy
 The very thought of this fair company 8

Clapp'd wings to me
Cham You are young, Sir Harry Guildford
Sands Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
 But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
 I think would better please em by my life 13
 They are a sweet society of fair ones Lov O! that your lordship were but now confessor
 To one or two of these!
Sands I would I were, 16
 They should find easy penance
Lov Faith, how easy?
Sands As easy as a down-bed would afford it Cham Sweet ladies, will it please you sit?
Sir Harry,
 Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this,
 His Grace is ent ring Nay you must not freeze,
 Two women plac'd together makes cold weather
 My Lord Sands you are one will keep 'em waking,
 Pray, sit between these ladies
Sands By my faith, 24
 And thank your lordship By your leave, sweet ladies [Seats himself between ANNE BUL-LEN and another Lady
 If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me,
 I had it from my father
Anne Was he mad sir?
Sands O! very mad, exceeding mad, in love
 too 28
 But he would bite none just as I do now,
 He would kiss you twenty with a breath
Cham [Kisses her
 Well said, my lord.
 So, now you're fairly seated Gentlemen,
 The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies 32
 Pass away frowning
Sands For my little cure,
 Let me alone.
Hautboys Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended, and takes his state Wol You're welcome, my fair guests that noble lady,
 Or gentleman, that is not freely merry, 36
 Is not my friend this to confirm my welcome,
 And to you all, good health [Drinks
Sands Your Grace is noble
 Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
 And save me so much talking
Wol My Lord Sands, 40
 I am beholding to you cheer your neighbours.
 Ladies, you are not merry gentlemen,
 Whose fault is this?
Sands The red wine first must rise In their fair cheeks, my lord, then, we shall have 'em 44
 Talk us to silence.
Anne You are a merry gamester,
 My Lord Sands.
Sands Yes if I make my play
 Here's to your ladyship, and pledge it, madam,
 For tis to such a thing,—
Anne You cannot show me. 48
Sands I told your Grace they would talk

anon.

[Drum and trumpets within, chambers discharged]

Wol

What s that?

Cham Look out there, some of ye

[Exit a Servant]

Wol

What war-like voice,

And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear

not,

By all the laws of war you're privileg'd. 52

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now, what is't?

Serv

A noble troop of strangers

For so they seem they've left their barge and landed,

And hither make, as great ambassadors

From foreign princes

Wol

Good Lord Chamberlain, 56

Go, give 'em welcome, you can speak the French tongue,

And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em

Into our presence where this heaven of beauty

Shall shine at full upon them Some attend

hum

[Exit the Lord Chamberlain, attended Allarise, and tables removed]

You have now a broken banquet, but we'll mend it. 61

A good digestion to you all, and once more

I shower a welcome on ye, welcome all

Hautboys Enter the KING, and Others, as masquers, habited like shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully salute

him

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray d 65

To tell your Grace that, having heard by fame

Of this so noble and so fair assembly

This night to meet here, they could do no less,

Out of the great respect they bear to beauty 69

But leave their flocks, and, under your fair conduct,

Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat

An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol

Say, Lord Chamberlain,

They have done my poor house grace, for which

I pay 'em 73

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.

[They choose Ladies for the dance The KINGchooses ANNE BULLEN]

K Hen The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty

Till now I never knew thee! [Music Dance

Wol My lord

Cham

Your Grace?

Wol Pray tell them thus much from me

There should be one amongst 'em, by his person,

More worthy this place than myself, to whom,

If I but knew him, with my love and duty 80

I would surrender it.

Cham

I will, my lord

[Whispers the Masquers]

Wol What say they?

Cham

Such a one, they all confess,

There is, indeed, which they would have your

Grace

Find out, and he will take it

Wol

Let me see then 84

By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here I'll

make

My royal choice

K Hen [Unmasking] You have found him,

cardinal.

You hold a fair assembly, you do well, lord

You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,

I should judge now unhappily

Wol

I am glad 89

Your Grace is grown so pleasant.

K Hen My Lord Chamberlain,

Prithce, come hither What fair lady's that?

Cham An't please your Grace, Sir Thomas

Bullen's daughter, 92

The Viscount Rochford, one of her highness'

women

K Hen By heaven, she is a dainty one

Sweetheart,

I were unmannerly to take you out,

And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen! 96

Let it go round

Wol Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready

In the privy chamber?

Lov

Yes, my lord

Wol

Your Grace,

I fear, with dancing is a little heated. 100

K Hen I fear, too much

Wol

There's fresher air, my lord,

In the next chamber

K Hen Lead in your ladies, every one

Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you Let's be merry 104

Good my Lord Cardinal, I have half a dozen

healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure

To lead 'em once again, and then let's dream

Who's best in favour Let the music knock it [Exeunt with trumpets]

ACT II

SCENE I—Westminster A Street

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting

First Gent Whither away so fast?

Sec Gent

O! God save ye

E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become

Of the great Duke of Buckingham

First Gent

I'll save you

That labour, sir All's now done but the ceremony 4

Of bringing back the prisoner

Sec Gent

Were you there?

First Gent Yes, indeed, was I

Sec Gent Pray speak what has happen'd

First Gent You may guess quickly what

Sec Gent

Is he found guilty?

First Gent Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon't

Sec Gent I am sorry for't 8

First Gent So are a number more.

Sec Gent But, pray, how pass'd it?

First Gent I'll tell you in a little. The great duke Came to the bar, where, to his accusations 12
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law
The king's attorney on the contrary
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses, which the duke desur'd 17
To have brought vid voce, to his face
At which appear'd against him his surveyor, Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor, and John Car
Confessor to him with that devil-monk, 21
Hopkins, that made this mischief

Sec Gent That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?

First Gent The same
All these accus'd him strongly which he fain Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not 25

And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life, but all 28
Was either pitied in him or forgotten

Sec Gent After all this how did he bear himself?

First Gent When he was brought again to the bar, to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment, he was sturr'd
With such an agony, he sweat extremely 33
And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience 36

Sec Gent I do not think he fears death.

First Gent Sure, he does not,
He never was so womanish, the cause
He may a little grieve at.

Sec Gent Certainly
The cardinal is the end of this.

First Gent 'Tis likely 40
By all conjectures first, Kildare's attainer,
Then deputy of Ireland, who, remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too, Lest he should help his father

Sec Gent That trick of state 44
Was a deep envious one.

First Gent At his return,
No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally, whoever the king favours,
The cardinal instantly will find employment, 48
And far enough from court too

Sec Gent All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and o' my conscience, Wish him ten fathom deep this duke as much
They love and dote on, call him bounteous
Buckingham, 52

The mirror of all courtesy,—

First Gent Stay there, sir,
And see the noble rum'd man you speak of

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment Tipstaves before him the axe with the edge towards him halberds on each side with him
SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX, SER
WILLIAM SANDS, and common people

Sec Gent Let's stand close, and behold him.

Buck

All good people,
You that thus far have come to pity me, 56
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment
And by that name must die yet, heaven bear witness,

And if I have a conscience, let it sink me, 60
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I bear no malice for my death,
'T has done upon the premises but justice,
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians 64

Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men,
For then my guiltless blood must cry against
'em 68

For further life in this world I ne'er hope, Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,

And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham 72
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,

Go with me like good angels to my end,
And as the long divorce of steel falls on me, 76
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice, And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o God's
name

Lov I do beseech your Grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart 80

Were hid against me now to forgive me frankly Buck Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive

you

As I would be forgiven I forgive all
There cannot be those numberless offences 84
'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with no black envy

Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his Grace,

And, if he speak of Buckingham pray, tell him You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers 88

Yet are the king's, and, till my soul forsake, Shall cry for blessings on him may he live Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever belov'd and loving may his rule be! 92
And when old time shall lead him to his end, Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov To the water side I must conduct your
Grace,

Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux Prepare there! 97

The duke is coming see the barge be ready,
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100
Let it alone, my state now will but mock me
When I came hither, I was Lord High

Constable,

And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun

Yet I am richer than my base accusers, 104
That never knew what truth meant I now seal it,

And with that blood will make them one day groan for't

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister, 109
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell God's peace be with him!
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince, 113
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all 116
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one, which makes
me

A little happier than my wretched father 120
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes, both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most

A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all, yet, you that hear me,
Thus from a dying man receive as certain 125
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels Be sure you be not loose, for those you make
friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive 128

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye All good
people,

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye the last hour 132

Of my long weary life is come upon me

Farewell

And when you would say something that is sad, Speak how I fell. I have done, and God forgive me! [Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and TRAIN.

First Gent O! this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors

Sec Gent If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe yet I can give you inkling 140
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this

First Gent Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith,
sir?

Sec Gent This secret is so weighty, 'twill require 144

A strong faith to conceal it.

First Gent Let me have it,
I do not talk much.

Sec Gent I am confident
You shall sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation? 148
Between the king and Katharine?

First Gent Yes, but it held not,
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it

Sec Gent But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now for it grows again 154
Fresher than ever it was, and held for certain

The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal, Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple
That will undo her to confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately, 160
As all think, for this business

First Gent 'Tis the cardinal,
And merely to revenge him on the emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

Sec Gent I think you have hit the mark but it's not cruel 165
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal

Will have his will, and she must fall.
First Gent 'Tis woeful 168
We are too open here to argue this,
Let's think in private more [Exeunt

SCENE II—An Antechamber in the Palace

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter

Cham My lord, The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, raden, and furnished. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me with this reason. His master would be served before a subject, if not before the king, which stopped our mouths, sir

I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them
He will have all, I think 172

Enter the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK

Nor Well met my Lord Chamberlain

Cham Good day to both your Graces

Suf How is the king employ'd?

Cham I left him private,

Full of sad thoughts and troubles

Nor What's the cause?

Cham It seems the marriage with his brother's
wife 177

Has crept too near his conscience

Suf No, his conscience

Has crept too near another lady

Nor 'Tis so

This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal
That blind priest, like the eldest son of Fortune, Turns what he list. The king will know him one
day 22

Suf Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else

Nor How holily he works in all his business,
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd the league 25

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,

He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,

Fears, and despairs, and all these for his marriage 29

And out of all these, to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce, a loss of her,

That like a jewel has hung twenty years 32

About his neck, yet never lost her lustre,
Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with, even of her,
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king and is not this course pious?

Cham Heaven keep me from such counsel!
Tis most true 38

These news are every where, every tongue speaks em,

And every true heart weeps for t All that dare
Look into these affairs, see this main end, 41
The French king's sister Heaven will one day open

The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man

Suf And free us from his slavery
Nor We had need pray, 45

And heartily, for our deliverance,
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages All men's honours 48 Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please

Suf For me, my lords
I love him not, nor fear him, there's my creed
As I am made without him, so I'll stand, 52
If the king please his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope

Nor Let's in,
And with some other business put the king 57
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him

My Lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham Excuse me,
The king hath sent me elsewhere besides, 60
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him
Health to your lordships

Nor Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain]

NORFOLK opens a folding-door The KING is discovered sitting and reading pensively

Suf How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted

K Hen Who is there, ha?

Nor Pray God he be not angry

K Hen Who's there I say? How dare you thrust yourselves 65

Into my private meditations?

Who am I, ha?

Nor A gracious king that pardons all offences 68

Malice ne'er meant our breach of duty this way

Is business of estate, in which we come

To know your royal pleasure.

K Hen Ye are too bold.

Go to, I'll make ye know your times of business

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha? 73

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who's there? my good Lord Cardinal? O! my

Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience,

Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To CAMPEIUS]

You're welcome, 76

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom Use us, and it. [To WOLSEY] My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker

Wol Sir, you cannot

I would your Grace would give us but an hour

Of private conference

K Hen [To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.] We are busy go 81

Nor [Aside to SUFFOLK] This priest has no pride in him!

Suf [Aside to NORFOLK] Not to speak of,
I would not be so sick though for his place

But this cannot continue

Nor [Aside to SUFFOLK] If it do, 84

I'll venture one have-at-him

Suf [Aside to NORFOLK] I another

[Exit NORFOLK and SUFFOLK]

Wol Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes in committing freely

Your scruple to the voice of Christendom 88

Who can be angry now? what envy reach you?

The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,

Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble All the clerks, 92

I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms

Have their free voices Rome, the nurse of judgment

Invited by your noble self, hath sent

One general tongue unto us, this good man, 96

This just and learned priest, Cardinal Cam-peius,

Whom once more I present unto your highness

K Hen And once more in my arms I bid him welcome.

And thank the holy conclave for their loves

They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for 101

Cam Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves.

You are so noble To your highness' hand

I tender my commission, by whose virtue,—

The court of Rome commanding,—you, my Lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant,

In the impartial judging of this business

K Hen Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted 108

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gar-diner?

Wol I know your majesty has always lov'd
her

So dear in heart, not to deny her that

A woman of less place might ask by law, 112

Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her

K Hen Ay, and the best, she shall have, and my favour

To him that does best God forbid else. Cardinal, 115

Printhee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary

I find him a fit fellow [Exit WOLSEY]

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol [Aside to GARDINER.] Give me your hand, much joy and favour to you.

You are the king's now

Gard [Aside to WOLSEY] But to be commanded For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd ml 120

K Hen Come hither, Gardiner

Cam My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace [They converse apart]

In this man's place before him?

Wol Yes, he was

Cam Was he not held a learned man?

Wol Yes surely 124

Cam Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread
then

Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal

Wol How! of me?

Cam They will not stick to say, you envied
him,

And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, Kept him a foreign man still, which so griev'd

him 129
That he ran mad and died

Wol Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough for living mur-murers

There's places of rebuke He was a fool, 132
For he would needs be virtuous that good fellow,

If I command him, follows my appointment
I will have none so near else Learn this, brother, 135

We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons K Hen Deliver this with modesty to the queen [Exit GARDINER]

The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning, is Black-Friars,

There ye shall meet about this weighty business
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my lord! 141

Would it not grieve an able man to leave So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!

O! 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her 144
[Exeunt]

SCENE III.—An Antechamber in the QUEEN'S Apartments

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an Old Lady

Anne Not for that neither here's the pang that pinches

His highness having liv'd so long with her, and she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her, by my life, 4

She never knew harm-doing, O! now, after
So many courses of the sun enthron'd,

Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than 8

'Tis sweet at first to acquire after this process
To give her the avaunt! it is a pity

Would move a monster

Old Lady Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her

Anne O! God's will, much better 12
She ne'er had known pomp though't be temporal,

Yet, if that quarrel, Fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging

As soul and body's severing Old Lady Alas! poor lady, 16

She's a stranger now again
Anne So much the more

Must pity drop upon her Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,

And range with humble livers in content, 20
Than to be perk'd up in a glust'ring grief

And wear a golden sorrow Old Lady Our content

Is our best having Anne By my troth and maidenhead

I would not be a queen.
Old Lady Beshrew me, I would, 24

And venture maidenhead for 't, and so would
you,

For all this spice of your hypocrisy
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,

Have too a woman's heart, which ever yet 28
Affected emnence, wealth, sovereignty

Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which gifts—

Saving your mumping—the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it

Anne Nay, good troth, 33 Old Lady Yes, troth, and troth, you would not be a queen?

Anne No, not for all the riches under heaven Old Lady 'Tis strange a three-pence bow d would hire me, 36

Old as I am, to queen it But, I pray you,

What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?

Anne No, in truth
Old Lady Then you are weakly made Pluck off a little 40

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to if your back

Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak Ever to get a boy

Anne How you do talk! 44
I swear again, I would not be a queen

For all the world
Old Lady In faith, for little England

You d venture an emballing I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there

'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes
here? 49

Enter the Lord Chamberlain

Cham Good morrow, ladies What were't worth to know

The secret of your conference?
Anne My good lord,

Not your demand, it values not your asking. 52
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying

Cham It was a gentle business, and becoming The action of good women there is hope

All will be well.
Anne Now, I pray God, amen! 56

Cham You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures That you may, fair lady, Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty Commends his good opinion of you, and 61
Does purpose honour to you no less flowing Than Marchioness of Pembroke to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support, 64
Out of his grace he adds

Anne I do not know
What kind of my obedience I should tender,
More than my all is nothing, nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes 68
More worth than empty vanities, yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return Beseech your lordship, Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness, Whose health and royalty I pray for

Cham Lady, 73
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you [Aside] I have perus'd her well,
Beauty and honour in her are so mingled 76
That they have caught the king, and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle? [To her] I'll to the king,
And say, I spoke with you

Anne My honour'd lord 80
[Exit LORD CHAMBERLAIN]

Old Lady Why, this it is, see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court, Am yet a courtier beggarly, nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late, 84
For any suit of pounds, and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here,—fie, fie, upon Thus compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd
up

Before you open it
Anne This is strange to me 88 Old Lady How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no

There was a lady once,—'tis an old story,—
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt have you heard it?

Anne Come, you are pleasant Old Lady With your theme I could O'er mount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect!
No other obligation! By my life 96
That promises more thousands honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne Good lady, 100
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot it faints me,
To think what follows 104

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence Pray, do not deliver What here you've heard to her

Old Lady What do you think me?
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV —A Hall in Black-Friars

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets Enter two Ver-gers with short silver wands next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors after them, the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, alone after him, the BISHOPS OF LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH, next them, at some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal and a cardinal's hat then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms, bearing a silver mace, then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver pillars after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS, two Noblemen with the sword and mace Then enter the KING and QUEEN, and their Trains The KING takes place under the cloth of state the two CARDINALS sit under him as judges The QUEEN takes place at some distance from the KING The BISHOPS place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory below them, the Scribes The Lords sit next the BISHOPS The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the Stage

Wol Whilst our commission from Rome is
read,
Let silence be commanded

K Hen What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd, 4
You may then spare that time

Wol Be't so Proceed Scribe Say, Henry King of England, come into the court

Crier Henry King of England, come into the court.

K Hen Here
Scribe Say, Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

Crier Katharine Queen of England, come
into the court.

[The QUEEN makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the KING, and kneels at his feet, then speaks]

Q Kath Sir, I desire you do me right and
justice,

And to bestow your pity on me, for 12
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions, having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause 17
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off
And take your good grace from me? Heaven
witness, 20

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable,
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclin'd When was the hour 25
I ever contradicted your desire,

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends Have I not strove to love, although I knew He were mine enemy? what friend of mine
 That had to him deriv'd your anger, d'd I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to mind
 That I have been your wife, in this obedience Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
 With many children by you. If, in the course
 And process of this time you can report,
 And prove it too against mine honour aught,
 My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
 Against your sacred person in God's name
 Turn me away, and let the foul st contempt Shut door upon me, and so give me up To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir, The king, your father, was reputed for A prince most prudent, of an excellent And unmatched wit and judgment. Ferdinand,
 My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
 The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many
 A year before it is not to be question'd
 That they had gather'd a wise council to them
 Of every realm, that did debate this business Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
 Beseech you, sir, to spare me till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel
 I will implore if not, I' the name of God,
 Your pleasure be fulfill'd!
Vol. You have here, lady,—
 And of your choice,—these reverend fathers
 men
 Of singular integrity and learning,
 Yea, the elect of the land who are assembled To plead your cause. It shall be therefore boot-less
 That longer you desire the court, as well
 For your own quiet, as to rectify
 What is unsettled in the king
Cam. His Grace
 Hath spoken well and justly therefore, madam,
 It's fit this royal session do proceed,
 And that, without delay, their arguments
 Be now produc'd and heard
Q. Kath. Lord Cardinal,
 To you I speak
Vol. Your pleasure, madam?
Q. Kath. Sir,
 I am about to weep but, thinking that We are a queen,—or long have dream'd so,— certain
 The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
 I'll turn to sparks of fire
Vol. Be patient yet
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble, nay,
 before
 Or God will punish me I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy, and make my challenge
 You shall not be my judge, for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,

Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say
 again,
 I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
 Refuse you for my judge, whom, yet once more,
 I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
 At all a friend to truth.
Vol. I do profess
 You speak not like yourself who ever yet
 Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'er topping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong
 I have no spleen against you, nor injustice
 For you or any how far I have proceeded,
 Or how far further shall, is warranted
 By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge
 me
 That I have blown this coal I do deny it
 The king is present if 't be known to him
 That I gainsay my deed, how may be wound,
 And worthily, my falsehood, yea, as much
 As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows
 I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
 It lies to cure me, and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you the which
 before
 His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
 You, gracious madam, to unthunk your speaking,
 And to say so no more
Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
 I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd,
 You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,
 With meekness and humility, but your heart
 Is cramm'd with arrogance spleen, and pride
 You have, by fortune and his highness favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted
 Where powers are your retainers, and your
 words,
 Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
 you,
 You tender more your person's honour than Your high profession spiritual, that again
 I do refuse you for my judge, and here,
 Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
 To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness
 And to be judg'd by him [She curtsies to the KING, and offers to depart
Cam. The queen is obstinate, Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdamm'd to be tried by 't 'tis not well
 She's going away
K. Hen. Call her again
Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.
Griff. Madam, you are call'd back.
Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way
 When you are call'd, return. Now, the Lord help!

They vex me past my patience Pray you, pass
on 128
I will not tarry no nor ever more Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts

[Exeunt QUEEN, and her Attendants

K Hen Go thy ways Kate
That man 1 the world who shall report he has A better wife let him in nought be trusted, 133
For speaking false in that thou art alone,—
If thy rare qualities sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding and thy parts 137
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,—
The queen of earthly queens She noble born
And like her true nobility she has 140 Carried herself towards me

Vol Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing Of all these ears,—for where I am robb'd and bound 144

There must I be unloos'd although not there
At once, and fully satisfied,—whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on t' or ever 149
Have to you but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least word that might

Be to the prejudice of her present state, 152
Or touch of her good person?

K Hen My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you, yea, upon mine honour
I free you from't. You are not to be taught That you have many enemies, that know not Why they are so, but, like to village curs, 157 Bark when their fellows do by some of these
The queen is put in anger You're excus'd
But will you be more justified? you ever 160
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business, never Desir'd it to be stirr'd, but oft have hunder'd, oft,

The passages made toward it On my honour,
I speak my good Lord Cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him Now what mov'd me to't, 165
I will be bold with time and your attention Then mark the inducement. Thus it came, give heed to't

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, 168
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,

Who had been hither sent on the debating A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary I' the progress of this business 173

Ere a determinate resolution, he—
I mean, the bishop—did require a respite, Wherein he might the king his lord advise 176
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, 180

Yea, with a splitting power and made to tremble
The region of my breast which forc'd such way,
That many maz'd considerations did throng,
And press'd in with this caution. First, me-
thought 184

I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me should Do no more offices of life to't than 188
The grave does to the dead, for her male issue Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought

This was a judgment on me, that my kingdom Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should
not 193

Be gladdened in't by me Then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue's fail, and that gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in 197
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together, that's to say, 200

I meant to rectify my conscience which I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
By all the reverend fathers of the land
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private With you, my Lord of Lincoln you remember How under my oppression I did reek, 206
When I first mov'd you

Lin Very well, my hege K Hen I have spoke long be pleas'd yourself to say 208

How far you satisfied me.

Lin So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't,
And consequence of dread, that I committed 212
The daring counsel that I had to doubt,
And did entreat your highness to this course Which you are running here

K Hen Then I mov'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this present summons Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court,
But by particular consent proceeded 219
Under your hands and seals therefore go on,
For no dislike 1 the world against the person Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points

Of my alleged reasons drive this forward.
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented 225
To wear our mortal state to come with her, Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness, 228
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion 231
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

[They rise to depart
K Hen. [Aside] I may perceive
These cardinals trifle with me I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome. 235

My learn'd and well beloved servant Cranmer, Pruthee, return with thy approach, I know,
 My comfort comes along Break up the court
 I say, set on

[Exeunt, in manner as they entered]

ACT III

SCENE I.—The Palace at Bridewell A Room in the QUEEN'S Apartment

The QUEEN and her Women at work

Q Kath Take thy lute, wench my soul grows sad with troubles, Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working

SONG

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
 And the mountain tops that freeze
 Bow themselves, when he did sing
 To his music plants and flowers Ever sprung as sun and showers
 There had made a lasting spring.
 Every thing that heard him play,
 Even the billows of the sea, Hung their heads, and then lay by
 In sweet music is such art,
 Killing care and grief of heart
 Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q Kath How now!

Gent An't please your Grace, the two great cardinals

Wait in the presence

Q Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q Kath. Pray their Graces
 'o come near [Exit Gentleman.] What can be their business

Vith me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour?
 do not like their coming, now I think on't.
 'hey should be good men, their affairs as righteous,
 ut all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol Peace to your highness!

Q Kath. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife,
 would be all, again the worst may happen.
 'hat are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

ito your private chamber, we shall give you he full cause of our coming.

Q Kath Speak it here, here's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,

eserves a corner would all other women ould speak this with as free a soul as I do! 32 y lords, I care not—so much I am happy ove a number—if my actions ere tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em, ivy and base opinion set against 'em, 36 now my life so even. If your business ek me out, and that way I am wife in, it with it boldly truth loves open dealing

Wol Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—

Q Kath O, good my lord, no Latin,
 I am not such a truant since my coming As not to know the language I have liv'd in A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious,

Pray, speak in English here are some will thank
 you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake Believe me, she has had much wrong Lord

Cardinal,
 The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
 May be absolv'd in English.

Wol Noble lady,
 I am sorry my integrity should breed,—
 And service to his majesty and you,—

4 So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant
 We come not by the way of accusation,

To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,
 Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,

8 You have too much, good lady, but to know How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the king and you, and to deliver,
 Like free and honest men, our just opinions

12 And comforts to your cause

Cam Most honour'd madam, 60

My Lord of York, out of his noble nature, Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace,

Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
 Both of his truth and him,—which was too far,—

Offers, as I do, in sign of peace, 65
 His service and his counsel

Q Kath [Aside] To betray me
 My lords, I thank you both for your good wills, Ye speak like honest men,—pray God, ye prove

so!— 68
 But how to make ye suddenly an answer,

In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,—
 More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit,

And to such men of gravity and learning, 72
 In truth, I know not. I was set at work

Among my maids, full little, God knows, looking

Either for such men or such business
 For her sake that I have been,—for I feel 76

The last fit of my greatness,—good your Graces
 Let me have time and counsel for my cause

Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.
Wol Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears 80

 Your hopes and friends are infinite

Q Kath In England
 But little for my profit Can you think, lords,

That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
 Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,— 84

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,—
 And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,

They that must weigh out my afflictions, 87
 They that my trust must grow to, live not here

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
 In mine own country, lords

Cam I would your Grace
 Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q Kath. How, sir?

Cam Put your main cause into the king's protection He's loving and most gracious 'twill be much Both for your honour better and your cause,
 For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
 You'll part away disgrac'd

Wol He tells you rightly

Q Kath Ye tell me what ye wish for both, my ruin
 Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
 Heaven is above all yet, there sits a judge
 That no king can corrupt

Cam Your rage mistakes us

Q Kath The more shame for ye! holy men I thought ye,
 Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues,
 But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye Mend em, for shame, my lords Is this your comfort?

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
 A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
 I will not wish ye half my miseries,
 I have more charity, but say, I warn'd ye Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye

Wol Madam, this is a mere distraction,
 You turn the good we offer into envy

Q Kath Ye turn me into nothing woe upon ye,
 And all such false professors! Would ye have
 me,—

If ye have any justice, any pity,

If ye be anything but churchmen's habits,—

Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?

Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already,

His love, too long ago! I am old, my lords,

And all the fellowship I hold now with him

Is only my obedience What can happen

To me above this wretchedness? all your studies

Make me a curse like this.

Cam Your fears are worse

Q Kath Have I liv'd thus long—let me speak
 myself,

Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true one?

A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,

Never yet branded with suspicion?

Have I with all my full affections

Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven?

obey'd him?

Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?

Almost forgot my prayers to content him?

And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.

Bring me a constant woman to her husband,

One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure,

And to that woman, when she has done most,

Yet will I add an honour, a great patience

Wol Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q Kath My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,

To give up willingly that noble title

Your master wed me to nothing but death

Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Wol Pray hear me.

Q Kath Would I had never trod this English
 earth

Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!

Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts

What will become of me now, wretched lady?

I am the most unhappy woman living

[To her women] Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,
 No friends, no hope, no kindred weep for me,

Almost no grave allow'd me Like the lily,
 That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,

I'll hang my head and perish

Wol If your Grace

Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,

You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady,

Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
 The way of our profession is against it

We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them.

For goodness' sake, consider what you do,

How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly

Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
 So much they love it, but to stubborn spirits

They swell, and grow as terrible as storms

I know you have a gentle, noble temper,

A soul as even as a calm pray thank us

Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants

Cam Madam, you'll find it so You wrong your virtues

With these weak women's fears a noble spirit,
 As yours was put into you, ever casts

Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you,

Beware you lose it not for us, if you please

To trust us in your business, we are ready

To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q Kath Do what ye will, my lords and,
 pray, forgive me

If I have us'd myself unmannerly

You know I am a woman, lacking wit

To make a seemly answer to such persons.

Pray do my service to his majesty

He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers

While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,

Bestow your counsels on me she now begs

That little thought, when she set footing here,
 She should have bought her dignities so dear

[Exeunt

SCENE II.—Antechamber to the KING'S Apartment

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor If you will now unite in your complaints,

And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
 Cannot stand under them. if you omit

The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces
With these you bear already

Sur I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give me Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, 8
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf Which of the peers
Have uncontentm'd gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person, 12
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures
What he deserves of you and me, I know,
What we can do to him,—though now the time Gives way to us,—I much fear If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt 17
Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in's tongue.

Nor O! fear him not,
His spell in that is out the king hath found Matter against him that for ever mars 21
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this 24
Once every hour

Nor Believe it, this is true
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded, wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy

Sur. How came 28
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely
Sur O! how? how?

Suf The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,

And came to the eye o' the king, wherein was read,

That the cardinal did entreat his holiness 32
To stay the judgment o' the divorce, for if It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive

My king is tangled in affection to 35
A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.'

Sur Has the king this?

Suf Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?
Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts

And hedges his own way But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death the king already 41
Hath married the fair lady

Sur Would he had!
Suf May you be happy in your wish, my
lord!

For I profess, you have it.

Sur Now all my joy 44
Trace the conjunction!

Suf My amen to't!

Nor All men's

Suf There's order given for her coronation Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete 49
In mind and feature I persuade me, from her

Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall In it be memoriz'd.

Sur But will the king 52
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

Nor Marry, amen!

Suf No, no,
There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose
Will make this sting the sooner Cardinal Cam-peus 56

Is stol'n away to Rome, hath ta'en no leave, Has left the cause o' the king unhandled, and Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you 60
The king cried Ha! at this Cham Now, God incense him,

And let him cry Ha! louder

Nor But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer?

Suf He is return'd in his opinions, which Have satisfied the king for his divorce, 65

Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and

Her coronation. Katherine no more 69
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,

And widow to Prince Arthur

Nor This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business

Suf He has, and we shall see him
For it an archbishop

Nor So I hear

Suf 'Tis so
The cardinal!

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL

Nor Observe, observe, he's moody
Wol The packet, Cromwell, 76

Gave't you the king?

Crom To his own hand, in his bedchamber
Wol Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?

Crom Presently
He did unseal them, and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind, a heed 81
Was in his countenance You he bade

Attend him here this morning

Wol Is he ready
To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is 84
Wol Leave me awhile [Exit CROMWELL.]

[Aside] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,
The French King's sister, he shall marry her

Anne Bullen! No, I'll no Anne Bullens for him
There's more in't than fair visage Bullen! 89

No, we'll no Bullens Speedily I wish To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

Nor He's discontented.

Suf May be he hears the king
Does what his anger to him.

Sur Sharp enough, 93
Lord, for thy justice!

Wol The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!

This candle burns not clear 'tis I must snuff it Then out it goes What though I know her virtuous

And well deserving? yet I know her for 99
A spleeny Lutheran, and not who'some to Our cause that she should be i' the bosom of Our hard rul'd king Again, there is sprung up
A heretic, an arch one Cranmer one Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king, 104
And is his oracle

Nor He is vex'd at something

Sur I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The master-cord on's heart!

Enter the KING, reading a schedule, and LOVELL.

Suf The king the king!

K Hen What piles of wealth hath he accumulated 108
To his own portion! and what expense by the hour Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,
Does he rake this together? Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor My lord we have 112
Stood here observing him, some strange commotion

Is in his brain he bites his lip, and starts,
Stops on a sudden looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple, straight 116
Springs out into fast gait, then stops again, Strikes his breast hard, and anon he casts His eye against the moon in most strange postures

We have seen him set himself

K Hen It may well be 120
There is a mutiny in's mind This morning Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd, and wot you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly? 124
Forsooth, an inventory thus importing,
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs and ornaments of household, which I find at such a proud rate that 't out-speaks Possession of a subject

Nor It's heaven's will 129
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.

K Hen If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth, 132
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers
LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY

Wol Heaven forgive me! 136
Ever God bless your highness!

K Hen Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind, the which You were now running o'er you have scarce
time 140

To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
To keep your earthly audit sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad To have you therein my companion.

Wol

Sir, 144

For holy offices I have a time, a time To think upon the part of business which I bear i' the state and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce 148
I, her frail son amongst my brethren mortal, Must give my tendance to

K Hen

You have said well

Wol And ever may your highness yoke together

As I will lend you cause, my domg well 152
With my well saying!

K Hen

'Tis well said again,

And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well
And yet words are no deeds My father lov'd
you 155

He said he did and with his deed did crown
His word upon you Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart have not alone Employ'd you where high profits might come
home

But pardon my present havings, to bestow 160
My bounties upon you

Wol [Aside] What should this mean?

Sur [Aside] The Lord increase this business!

K Hen

Have I not made you

The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell
me

If what I now pronounce you have found true,
And if you may confess it, say withal, 165
If you are bound to us or no What say you?

Wol Mysovereign I confess your royal graces, Shower'd on me daily, have been more than
could 168

My studied purposes requite which went Beyond all man's endeavours my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires, 171
Yet fill'd with my abilities Mine own ends Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and The profit of the state. For your great graces Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I 176
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K Hen

Fairly answer'd, 180

A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated, the honour of it Does pay the act of it, as, i' the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
more 187

On you than any so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any

Wol

I do profess, 191

That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own, that am, have, and will be.

Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul, though perils did Abound as thick as thought could make em, and Appear in forms more horrid, yet my duty, 197
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours

K Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken. 200
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open 't Read o'er this,

[Giving him papers]
And after, thus and then to breakfast with What appetite you have

[Exit KING, frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY, the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering]

Wol What should this mean? 204
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes so looks the chafed lion Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him, Then makes him nothing I must read this paper, 209

I fear, the story of his anger 'Tis so,
This paper has undone me! 'Tis the account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
Forme own ends, indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by what cross devil 215
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly, yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune 220 Will bring me off again. What's this?—'To the Pope!

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to's holiness Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my great-
ness, 224
And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more 228

Re-enter the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal who commands you

To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands, and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchester's, 232
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol Stay,
Where's your commission, lord? words cannot carry

Authority so weighty
Suf Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

Wol Till I find more than will or words to do it, 237
I mean your malice, know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy

How eagerly ye follow my disgraces, 241
As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin
Follow your envious courses men of malice,
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no doubt, 245

In time will find their fit rewards That seal
You ask with such a violence, the king—Mine and your master—with his own hand gave
me, 248

Bade me enjoy it with the place and honours
During my life, and to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents now who'll take it?

Suf The king, that gave it Wol It must be himself then 252

Suf Thou art a proud traitor, priest
Wol Proud lord, thou heest

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so

Suf Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law 257

The heads of all thy brother cardinals—With thee and all thy best parts bound together—

Weigh'd not a hair of his Plague of your policy! 260

You sent me deputy for Ireland,
Far from his succour, from the king, from all That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st
him, 263

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity, Absolv'd him with an axe

Wol This and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false The duke by law

Found his deserts how innocent I was 268
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness

If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour, 272

That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,

Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies

Suf By my soul, 276
Your long coat, priest, protects you, thou shouldst feel

Mysword! the life-blood of thee else My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?

And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, 281

Farewell nobility, let his Grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks

Wol All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach

Suf Yes, that goodness 284
Of gleanings all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion,

The goodness of your intercepted packets, You writ to the pope against the king, your goodness, 288

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,

As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues, 292

Who if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles Collected from his life, I'll startle you Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench

Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal Wol How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it!
Nor Those articles, my lord, are in the king's
hand,

But thus much, they are foul ones
Wol So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise
When the king knows my truth

Sur This cannot save you
I thank my memory, I yet remember Some of these articles, and out they shall Now, if you can blush, and cry 'guilty,' cardinal, You'll show a little honesty

Wol Speak on, sir,
I dare your worst objections, if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners

Sur I had rather want those than my head
Have at you!

First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge,

You wrought to be a legate, by which power
You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops

Nor Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd, in which you brought the
king

To be your servant

Sur Then, that without the knowledge Either of king or council, when you went Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal

Sur Item, you sent a large commission To Gregory de Cassado to conclude Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara

Sur That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin Sur Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,—

By what means got I leave to your own conscience —

To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are,
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham O my lord!
Press not a falling man too far, 'tis virtue
His faults lie open to the laws, let them, Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
him

So little of his great self Sur I forgive him

Suf Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure is

Because all those things you have done of late,
By your power legatine, within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire,

That therefore such a writ be su'd against you,
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements, Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be Out of the king's protection. This is my charge Nor And so we'll leave you to your meditations

How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us, The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you.

So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal [Exeunt all except WOLSEY]

Wol So farewell to the little good you bear
me

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him,
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth. My high-blown pride
At length broke under me, and now has left me, Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye!
I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have,
And when he falls he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, and stands amazed

Why, how now, Cromwell!
Crom I have no power to speak, sir

Wol What! amaz'd
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep, I am fall'n indeed

Crom How does your Grace?
Wol Why, well

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell
I know myself now, and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd
me,

I humbly thank his Grace, and from these shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour
O! 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it.

Wol I hope I have I am able now, methinks —
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,—

To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer
What news abroad?

Crom The heaviest and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol.

Crom The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen

Lord Chancellor in your place

Wol. That's somewhat sudden

But he's a learned man. May he continue Long in his highness' favour, and do justice For truth's sake and his conscience, that his bones,

When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!

Wol What more?

Crom That Cranmer is return'd with wel-

come,
Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury

Wol That's news indeed

Crom Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen,
Going to chapel, and the voice is now
Only about her coronation

Wol There was the weight that pull'd me down O Cromwell!

The king has gone beyond me all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited

Upon my smiles Go, get thee from me, Crom-

well,
I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now

To be thy lord and master seek the king,—
That sun, I pray, may never set!—I have told

him
What, and how true thou art; he will advance

thee,
Some little memory of me will stir him—

I know his noble nature—not to let Thy hopeful service perish too Good Cromwell,

Neglect him not, make use now, and provide For thine own future safety

Crom O my lord!
Must I then, leave you? must I needs forego

So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron,

With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord
The king shall have my service, but my

prayers
For ever and for ever, shall be yours

Wol Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear

In all my miseries, but thou hast forc'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman

Let's dry our eyes and thus far hear me, Crom-

well,
And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,

And sleep in dull cold marble where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught

thee
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory, And sounded all the depths and shoals of

honour,
Found thee a way, out of his wrack, to rise in,
A sure and safe one though thy master miss'd it.

Mark But my fall, and that that ruin'd me.

God bless him! 393

Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition
By that sin fell the angels, how can man then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by't?
Love thyself last cherish those hearts that hate

thee, 444
Corruption wins not more than honesty.

Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear not.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's, then if thou fall'st, O

Cromwell! 449
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr Serve the king,

And,—prithce, lead me in There take an inventory of all I have, 452

To the last penny, 'tis the king's my robe,
And my integrity to heaven is all

I dare now call mine own O Cromwell, Crom-

well! 455
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age

Have left me naked to mine enemies
Crom Good sir, have patience

Wol So I have Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell [Exeunt

ACT IV

SCENE I—A Street in Westminster

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting

First Gen You're well met once again

Sec Gen So are you

First Gen You come to take your stand here, and behold

The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?
Sec Gen 'Tis all my business At our last encounter 4

The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial

First Gen 'Tis very true but that time offer'd
sorrow,

This, general joy
Sec Gen 'Tis well the citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds, As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward, 9

In celebration of this day with shows,

Pageants, and sights of honour
First Gen Never greater,

Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir 12 Sec Gen May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

First Gen Yes, 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day

By custom of the coronation 16
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims

To be high-steward, next, the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal you may read the rest.

Sec Gen I thank you, sir had I not known those customs, 20

I should have been beholding to your paper
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The princess dowager? how goes her business?
First Gen That I can tell you too The Archbishop 24

Of Canterbury accompanied with other

Learned and reverend fathers of his order, Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off From Amphthull, where the princess lay, to which 23

She was often cited by them, but appear'd not
And, to be short, for not appearance and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men she was divorc'd, 32
And the late marriage made of none effect Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick

Sec Gen Alas! good lady!

The trumpets sound stand close, the queen is coming [Trumpets [Hautboys

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION

A lively flourish of trumpets

- 1 Two Judges
- 2 Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him
- 3 Choristers, singing [Music
- 4 Mayor of London, bearing the mace Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown
- 5 MARQUESS DORSET, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold With him, the EARL OF SURREY, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet Collars of SS
- 6 DUKE OF SUFFOLK, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high steward With him, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head Collars of SS
- 7 A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports under it, the QUEEN in her robe in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned On each side of her, the BISHOPS OF LONDON and WINCHESTER
- 8 The old DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the QUEEN'S train
- 9 Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers

They pass over the stage in order and state

Sec Gen A royal train, believe me These I
know, 37

Who's that that bears the sceptre?

First Gen Marquess Dorset
And that the Earl of Surrey with the rod Sec Gen A bold brave gentleman. That should be 40

The Duke of Suffolk?

First Gen 'Tis the same, high-steward
Sec Gen And that my Lord of Norfolk?

First Gen Yes.

Sec Gen [Looking on the QUEEN] Heaven bless thee!

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel, 44

Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more and richer, when he strains that lady
I cannot blame his conscience

First Gen

They that bear

The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports

Sec Gen Those men are happy, and so are all are near her

I take it, she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk 52

First Gen It is, and all the rest are count-esses

Sec Gen Their coronets say so These are stars indeed,

And sometimes falling ones.

First Gen No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of trumpets

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir Where have you been broil-
ing? 56

Thrd Gen Among the crowd i' the Abbey, where a finger

Could not be wedg'd in more I am stifled

With the mere rankness of their joy

Sec Gen You saw

The ceremony?

Thrd Gen That I did

First Gen How was it? 60

Thrd Gen Well worth the seeing

Sec Gen Good sir, speak it to us

Thrd Gen As well as I am able The rich stream

Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off 64

A distance from her, while her Grace sat down
To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely

The beauty of her person to the people 68

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose

As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest, 72

As loud, and to as many tunes hats, cloaks,— Doublets, I think,—flew up, and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before Great-bellied women, 76

That had not half a week to go, like rams

In the old time of war, would shake the press,

And make 'em reel before them No man living

Could say, 'This is my wife,' there, all were woven 80

So strangely in one piece

Sec Gen But, what follow'd?

Thrd Gen At length her Grace rose, and with modest paces

Came to the altar, where she kneel'd, and,

saint-like,

Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly 84

Then rose again and bow'd her to the people.

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a queen,

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown, 88

The rod, and band of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her which perform'd, the choir,

With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung Te Deum So she parted, 92
And with the same full state pac'd back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.

First Gen Sir,
You must no more call it York-place, that's past,

For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost 96
'Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall

Third Gen I know it,
But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name
Is fresh about me

Sec Gen What two reverend bishops Were those that went on each side of the queen? 100

Third Gen Stokesly and Gardiner, the one of Winchester —

Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary, —
The other, London.

Sec Gen He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Cranmer

Third Gen All the land knows that However, yet there's no great breach, when it
comes, 106

Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from
him

Sec Gen Who may that be, I pray you?

Third Gen Thomas Cromwell
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly A worthy friend. The king
Has made him master o' the jewel house,
And one, already, of the privy-council. 112

Sec Gen He will deserve more

Third Gen Yes, without all doubt Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests Something I can command. As I walk thither, I'll tell ye more

Both. You may command us, sir 117
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE

Grif How does your Grace?

Kath O Griffith sick to death!
My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burden Reach a chair
So, now, methinks, I feel a little ease 4 Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou ledd'st
me,

That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey,

Was dead?

Grif Yes, madam but I think your Grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't. 8

Kath Prithce, good Griffith, tell me how he died

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,
For my example.

Grif Well the voice goes, madam.
For after the stout Earl Northumberland 12
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule

Kath Alas! poor man. 16

Grif At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester,

Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him
To whom he gave these words 'O! father abbot, 20

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye,
Give him a little earth for charity'

So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness 24
Pursu'd him still, and three nights after this,

About the hour of eight,—which he himself
Foretold should be his last,—full of repentance, Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows, 28

He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace

Kath So may he rest, his faults lie gently on
him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
him, 32

And yet with charity He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking

Himself with princes, one, that by suggestion
Tied all the kingdom, simony was fair-play, 36

His own opinion was his law, the presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double

Both in his words and meaning He was never,
But where he meant to run, pitiful, 40

His promises were, as he then was, mighty,
But his performance, as he is now, nothing

Of his own body he was ill, and gave The clergy ill example

Grif Noble madam, 44
Men's evil manners live in brass, their virtues
We write in water May it please your highness

To hear me speak his good now?

Kath Yes, good Griffith,
I were malicious else

Grif This cardinal, 48
Though from a humble stock, undoubtedly

Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one,

Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading,
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not,

But, to those men that sought him sweet as summer 54

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,—
Which was a sin,—yet in bestowing, madam,

He was most princely Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you,

Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it, 60

The other, though unfinished, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,

That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him,

For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little 66

And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God

Kath After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,

To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith 72
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour Peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still, and set me lower 76
I have not long to trouble thee Good Griffith, Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to 80

[Sad and solemn music Grif She is asleep good wench, let s sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her softly, gentle Patience

The Vision Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces branches of bays or palm in their hands They first congee unto her, then dance and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head at which, the other four make reverend curtsies then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order, at which,—as it were by inspiration,—she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them The music continues

Kath Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,
And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif Madam, we are here
Kath It is not you I call for 85
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif None, madam,
Kath No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet, whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness, 90
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel

I am not worthy yet to wear I shall assuredly Grif I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams 93

Possess your fancy
Kath Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me [Music ceases
Pat Do you note

How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks, 97

And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes!
Grif She is going, wench Pray, pray
Pat Heaven comfort her! 100

Enter a Messenger

Mess An't like your Grace,— Kath You are a saucy fellow

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wonted great-
ness

To use so rude behaviour go to, kneel 104 Mess I humbly do entreat your highness
pardon,

My haste made me unmannerly There is staying

A gentleman, sent from the king to see you Kath Admit him entrance, Griffith but this fellow 108

Let me ne'er see again.

[Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor

My royal nephew, and your name Capucius
Cap Madam, the same, your servant

Kath O my lord! 112
The times and titles now are alter'd strangely With me since first you knew me But, I pray
you,

What is your pleasure with me?
Cap Noble lady,

First, mine own service to your Grace, the next, 116

The king's request that I would visit you,
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me Sends you his princely commendations, 119
And heartily entreats you take good comfort

Kath O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late

'Tis like a pardon after execution
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd
me,

But now I am past all comforts here but prayers
How does his highness?

Cap Madam, in good health 125
Kath So may he ever do! and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor
name

Banish'd the kingdom Patience, is that letter
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?
Pat No, madam 129

[Giving it to KATHARINE.

Kath Sir I most humbly pray you to deliver this to my lord the king

Cap Most willing, madam Kath In which I have commended to his goodness 132

The model of our chaste loves, his young
daughter

The dew of heaven fall thick in blessings on
her!

Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding,—
She is young and of a noble modest nature, 136
I hope she will deserve well—and a little

To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd
him,

Heaven knows how dearly My next poor petition

Is, that his noble Grace would have some pity Upon my wretched women, that so long 141

Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully.
Of which there is not one, I dare avow,—
And now I should not lie,—but will deserve, 144
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble,
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have
'em. 148

The last is, for my men they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw 'em from me,
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by 152
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer
life

And able means, we had not parted thus These are the whole contents and, good my
lord,

By that you love the dearest in this world, 156
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the
king

To do me this last right.

Cap By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man! 160

Kath I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness

Say his long trouble now is passing Out of this world, tell him, in death I bless'd
him. 164

For so I will Mine eyes grow dim Farewell,
My lord Griffith, farewell Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet I must to bed,
Call in more women When I am dead, good
wench, 168

Let me be us'd with honour strew me over With maiden flowers, that all the world may
know

I was a chaste wife to my grave embalm me, Then lay me forth, although unqueen'd, yet like 172

A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me
I can no more [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE]

ACT V

SCENE I—London A Gallery in the Palace

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR THOMAS LOVELL

Gar It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy It has struck

Gar These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights, times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us 4

To waste these times Good hour of night, Sir Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar I did, Sir Thomas, and left him at pr. mero

With the Duke of Suffolk

Lov I must to him too, 8

Before he go to bed I'll take my leave

Gar Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell What's
the matter?

It seems you are in haste an if there be

No great offence belongs to't, give your friend Some touch of your late business affairs, that walk— 13

As they say spirits do—at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks dispatch by day

Lov My lord, I love you, 16
And durst commend a secret to your ear

Much weightier than this work The queen's in labour,

They say, in great extremity, and fear'd
She'll with the labour end 19

Gar The fruit she goes with I pray for heartily, that it may find

Good time, and live but for the stock, Sir
Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now

Lov Methinks I could

Cry the amen, and yet my conscience says 24
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does

Deserve our better wishes
Gar But, sir, sir,

Hear me, Sir Thomas you're a gentleman
Of mine own way, I know you wise, religious,

And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well, 26
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me,

Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves

Lov Now sir, you speak of two 32
The most remark'd i' the kingdom As for

Cromwell
Beside that of the jewel-house, is made master

O' the rolls and the king's secretary, further, sir, Stands in the gap and trade of his preferments,

With which the time will load him The archbishop 37

Is the king's hand and tongue, and who dare
speak

One syllable against him?

Gar Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare, and I myself have ventur'd

To speak my mind of him and indeed this day, Sir,—I may tell it you,—I think I have

Incens'd the lords o' the council that he is— 44
For so I know he is, they know he is—

A most arch heretic, a pestilence That does infect the land with which they

mov'd
Have broken with the king, who hath so far

Given ear to our complaint,—of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs

Our reasons laid before him,—hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board 51

Hebeconvented He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out From your affairs

I under you too long, good-night, Sir Thomas!

Lov Many good-nights, my lord I rest your servant. [Exeunt GARDINER and Page.]

Enter the KING and SUFFOLK

K Hen Charles, I will play no more to-
night, 56

My mind's not on't, you are too hard for me
Suf Sir, I did never win of you before.

K Hen But little, Charles,
Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play. 60

Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message who return'd her thanks In the great st humbleness, and desir'd your highness

Most heartily to pray for her

K Hen What sayst thou, ha?
To pray for her? what! is she crying out?

Lov So said her woman, and that her sufferance made

Almost each pang a death.

K Hen Alas! good lady Suf God safely quit her of her burden, and With gentle travail, to the gladdening of Your highness with an heir!

K Hen 'Tis midnight Charles Prithee, to bed, and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen Leave me alone,
For I must tunk of that which company
Would not be friendly to

Suf I wish your highness
A quiet night and my good mistress will Rememoe in my prayers

K Hen Charles good-night
[Exit SUFFOLK]

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY

Well, Sir, what follows?

Den Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,

As you commanded me.

K Hen Ha! Canterbury?
Den Ay, my good lord.

K Hen 'Tis true where is he, Denny?
Den He attends your highness pleasure.

K Hen Bring him to us
[Exit DENNY]

Lov [Aside] This is about that which the bishop spake

I am happily come hither

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER

K Hen Avoid the gallery
[LOVELL seems to stay]

Ha! I have said. Begone
What!—

Cran I am fearful. Wherefore frowns he
thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror all's not well K Hen How now, my lord! You do desire to
know

Wherefore I sent for you.
Cran [Kneeling] It is my duty
To attend your highness pleasure

K Hen Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury

Come, you and I must walk a turn together, I have news to tell you come, come, give me your hand

Ah! my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
I have, and most unwillingly, of late Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you, which, being con-sider'd,

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us, where, I know
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower you a brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed or else no witness
Would come against you

Cran [Kneeling] I humbly thank your high-
ness,

And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder for I know There's none stands under more calumnious tongues

Than I myself, poor man
K Hen Stand up, good Canterbury
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted In us, thy friend give me thy hand stand up Prithee, let's walk Now, by thy holdname,
What manner of man are you? My lord I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that I should have in some pains to bring together

Yourself and your accusers, and to have heard
you,
Without indurance, further

Cran Most dread hege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies, Will triumph o'er my person, which I weigh
not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

K Hen Know you not How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small, their practices
Must bear the same proportion, and not ever
The justice and the truth o' the question carries
The due o' the verdict with it. At what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt To swear against you? such things have been
done

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
Of as great size. Ween you of better luck,
I mean in perjurd witness, than your master,
Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to go to,
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

Cran God and your majesty Protect mine innocence! or I fall into The trap is laid for me!

K Hen Be of good cheer,
They shall no more prevail than we give way
to

Keep comfort to you, and this morning see You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary

Fail not to use, and with what vehemency

The occasion shall instruct you if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. Look! the good man 152 weeps,
He's honest, on mine honour God's blest
mother
I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul 155 None better in my kingdom. Get you gone, And do as I have bid you. [Exit CRANMER.] He has strangled
His language in his tears

Enter an Old Lady

Gent [Within] Come back what mean you?
Old L I'll not come back, the tidings that I bring 160 Will make my boldness manners Now, good angels
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person Under their blessed wings!
K Hen Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay, and of a boy
Old L Ay, ay, my hege, 165
And of a lovely boy the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl, Promises boys hereafter Sir, your queen 168 Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.
K Hen. Lovell!

Re-enter LOVELL

Lov Sir!
K Hen Give her a hundred marks I'll to the queen. [Exit Old L. A hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more. 173
An ordinary groom is for such payment
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for thus the girl was like to him? 176
I will have more, or else unsay 't, and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt

SCENE II — The Lobby before the Council-Chamber

Enter CRANMER, Pursuivants, Pages, &c, attending

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd
me
To make great haste. All fast? what means this?
Ho!
Who waits there?

Enter KEEPER

Sure, you know me?
Yes, my lord, 4
But yet I cannot help you. Why?
Cran Your Grace must wait till you be call'd for

Enter DOCTOR BUTTS

Cran. So
Butts [Aside] This is a piece of malice I am glad
I came this way so happily the king 8
Shall understand it presently Cran [Aside] 'Tis Butts,
The king's physician. As he past along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me Pray heaven he sound not my disgrace! For certain, 12
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,— God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,—
To quench mine honour they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor 16
'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys But their
pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience

Enter, at a window above, the KING and BUTTS

Butts I'll show your Grace the strangest sight,—

K Hen What's that, Butts?

Butts I think your highness saw this many a day 20

K Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts There, my lord,
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,

Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,

Pages, and footboys

K Hen Ha! 'Tis he, indeed 24

Is this the honour they do one another?

'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty among 'em,—

At least, good manners,—as not thus to suffer

A man of his place, and so near our favour,

To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,

And at the door too, like a post with packets

By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery 32

Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close,

We shall hear more anon [Exeunt above

SCENE III — The Council-Chamber

*Enter the Lord Chancellor, the DUKE OFSUFFOLK, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, Lord Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROMWELL.
The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand, a seat being left void above him, as for the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY. The rest seat themselves in order on each side CROMWELL at the lower end as secretary Keeper at the door*

Chan Speak to the business, Master secretary

Why are we met in council?

Crom Please your honours,

The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury

Gar Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor Who waits there? 4
 Keep Without, my noble lords?
 Gar Yes

Keep My lord archbishop
 And has done half-an hour, to know your pleasures

Chan Let him come in Keep Your Grace may enter now
 [CRANMER enters and approaches the council-table]

Chan My good lord archbishop, I'm very sorry 8

To sit here at this present and behold
 That chair stand empty but we all are men,
 In our own natures frail, and capable
 Of our flesh few are angels out of which frailty
 And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us, 13

Have misdeemean'd yourself, and not a little Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
 The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,— 16

For so we are inform'd,—with new opinions,
 Divers and dangerous, which are heresies,
 And, not reform'd may prove pernicious 19

Gar Which reformation must be sudden too,
 My noble lords, for those that tame wild horses Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle
 But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em,

Till they obey the manage If we suffer— 24
 Out of our easiness and childish pity
 To one man's honour—this contagious sickness, Farewell all physic and what follows then?
 Commotions, uproars, with a general taunt 28
 Of the whole state as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
 Yet freshly pitied in our memories

Cran My good lords, hitherto in all the progress 32

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,
 And with no little study, that my teaching
 And the strong course of my authority
 Might go one way, and safely and the end 36
 Was ever, to do well nor is there living,—

I speak it with a single heart, my lords,—
 A man that more detests, more stirs against,
 Both in his private conscience and his place,
 Defacers of a public peace, than I do 41
 Pray heaven the king may never find a heart

With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment 44
 Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships

That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
 Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
 And freely urge against me.

Suf Nay, my lord, 48
 That cannot be you are a counsellor,

And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar My lord, because we have business of more moment,
 We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure, 52

And our consent, for better trial of you,
 From hence you be committed to the Tower,

Where, being but a private man again,
 You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
 More than, I fear, you are provided for 57
 Cran Ah! my good Lord of Winchester, I thank you,

You are always my good friend if your will pass,
 I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
 You are so merciful I see your end, 61

'Tis my undoing love and meekness lord,
 Become a churchman better than ambition
 Win straying souls with modesty again, 64
 Cast none away That I shall clear myself,

Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
 I make as little doubt, as you do conscience,
 In doing daily wrongs I could say more, 68
 But reverence to your calling makes me modest

Gar My lord, my lord, you are a sectary,
 That's the plain truth your painted gloss discovers,

To men that understand you, words and weakness 72

Crom My Lord of Winchester, you are a little,
 By your good favour, too sharp men so noble,
 However faulty, yet should find respect

For what they have been tis a cruelty 76
 To load a falling man.

Gar Good Master secretary,
 I cry your honour mercy, you may, worst

Of all this table, say so

Crom Why, my lord?
 Gar Do not I know you for a favourer 80
 Of this new sect? ye are not sound

Crom Not sound?
 Gar Not sound I say

Crom Would you were half so honest!
 Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears

Gar I shall remember this bold language.
 Crom Do, 84

Remember your bold life too

Chan This is too much,
 Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar I have done.
 Crom And I.

Chan Then thus for you, my lord it stands agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith 88
 You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner,

There to remain till the king's further pleasure
 Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?

All We are
 Cran Is there no other way of mercy,
 But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar What other? 93
 Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?
 Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar Receive him, 96
 And see him safe i' the Tower

Cran. Stay, good my lords,
 I have a little yet to say Look there, my lords;

By virtue of that ring I take my cause 99

Out of the grips of cruel men and give it To a most noble judge the king my master

Chan. This is the king's ring,

Sur 'Tis no counterfeit

Suf 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye
all,

When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,
'Twould fall upon ourselves

Nor Do you think my lords, 105

The king will suffer but the little finger

Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too certain

How much more is his life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on't

Crom My mind gave me,

In seeking tales and informations

Against this man—whose honesty the devil

And his disciples only envy at— 112

Ye blew the fire that burns ye now have at ye!

Enter the KING, frowning on them he takes his seat

Gar Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince,

Not only good and wise, but most religious 116

One that in all obedience makes the Church

The chief aim of his honour, and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,

His royal self in judgment comes to hear 120

The cause betwixt her and this great offender

K Hen You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester but know, I come not

To hear such flattery now, and in my presence,

They are too thin and bare to hide offences 125

To me you cannot reach, you play the spangle,

And think with wagging of your tongue to win

me,

But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure

Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody 129

[To CRANMER] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest

He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee

By all that's holy, he had better starve 132

Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur May it please your Grace,—

K Hen. No, sir, it does not please me.

I had thought I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my council, but I find none

Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, 137

This good man,—few of you deserve that title,—

This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy

At chamber-door? and one as great as you are?

Why, what a shame was this! Did my com- 141

mission

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye

Power as he was a counsellor to try him,

Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see,

More out of malice than integrity, 145

Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean,

Which ye shall never have while I live

Chan Thus far,

My most dread sov'reign, may it like your

Grace 148

To let my tongue excuse all What was pur-pos'd

Concerning his imprisonment was rather—

If there be faith in men—meant for his trial

And fair purgation to the world, than malice, 152

I'm sure, in me

K Hen Well, well, my lords, respect him

Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it

I will say thus much for him, if a prince

May be beholding to a subject, I 156

Am, for his love and service so to him

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him

Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me,

That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism, 161

You must be godfather, and answer for her

Cran The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honour how may I deserve it, 164

That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons you shall have two noble partners with you, the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady

Marquess Dorset will these please you? 169

Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge

you,

Embrace and love this man

Gar With a true heart

And brother-love I do it

Cran And let heaven

Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation

K Hen Good man! those joyful tears show thy true heart

The common voice I see, is verified

Of thee, which says thus, Do my Lord of Canterbury 176

A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever?

Come, lords, we trifle time away, I long

To have this young one made a Christian.

As I have made ye one, lords, one remain, 180

So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV—The Palace-Yard

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals.

Do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping

[Within] Good Master porter, I belong to the larder 5

Port Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones these are but switches to 'em I'll scratch your heads you must be seeing christenings! Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? 12

Man. Pray, sir, be patient 'tis as much impossible—

Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons—

To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep

On May-day morning, which will never be 16
 We may as well push against Paul's as sur em
Port How got they in, and be hang'd?
Man Alas, I know not, how gets the tide in?
 As much as one sound cudgel of four foot—20
 You see the poor remainder—could distribute,
 I made no spare, sir

Port You did nothing sir Man I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand

To mow em down before me but if I spar d any
 That had a head to hit, either young or old,
 He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, 26
 Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again

And that I would not for a cow God save her!
 [Within] Do you hear, Master porter? 29

Port I shall be with you presently, good Master puppy Keep the door close, surrah

Man What would you have me do? 32
Port What should you do but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience this one christening will beget a thousand here will be father godfather, and all together 40

Man Thespoons will be the bigger sir There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience twenty of the dog days now reign in 's nose all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head and three times was his nose discharged against me he stands there like a mortar-piece to blow us There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him that railed upon me till her pinked porringer fell off her head for kindling such a combustion in the state I mussed the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, Clubs! when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered They fell on, I made good my place, at length they came to the broomstaff to me, I defied em still, when suddenly a file of boys behind em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work The devil was amongst em, I think, surely 64

Port These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse and fight for bitten apples, that no audience but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers are able to endure I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days, besides the running banquet of two beadles, that is to come 72

Enter the Lord Chamberlain

Cham Mercy o' me, what a multitude are
 here!

They grow still too, from all parts they are coming,
 As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,

These lazy knaves? Ye have made a fine hand, fellows 76

There s a trum rabble let in Are all these Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have

Great store of room, no doubt left for the ladies,
 When they pass back from the christening

Port An t please your honour, 80
 We are but men and what so many may do Not being torn a-pieces we have done
 An army cannot rule em.

Cham As I live,
 If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all 84
 By the heels and suddenly, and on your heads
 Clap round fines for neglect ye're lazy knaves, And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets
 sound, 88

They re come already from the christening
 Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find

A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months 92

Port Make way there for the princess Man You great fellow,

Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache
Port You i the camlet, get up o' the rail

I'll pick you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—The Palace

Enter trumpets, sounding, then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts then, four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child, richly habited in a mantle, &c train borne by a Lady, then follows the MAR-CHIONESS OF DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks

Gart Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life long and ever happy to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth! 4

Flourish. Enter KING and Train

Cran [Kneeling] And to your royal Grace, and the good queen

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray
 All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy, 8
 May hourly fall upon ye!

K Hen Thank you, good lord archbishop What is her name?

Cran Elizabeth.
K Hen. Stand up, lord.

[The KING kisses the Child With this kiss take my blessing, God protect
 thee!]

Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran Amen. 12
K Hen My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal

I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me, and the words I utter Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.

This royal infant,—heaven still move about
her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises 19
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings, Which time shall bring to ripeness she shall be—

But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed Saba was never 24
More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue

Than this pure soul shall be all princely graces, That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good, 28 Shall still be doubled on her, truth shall nurse
her,

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her,
She shall be lov'd and fear'd, her own shall bless her

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, 32
And hang their heads with sorrow, good grows with her

In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants, and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours
God shall be truly known, and those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour, And by those claim their greatness, not by
blood 39

Nor shall this peace sleep with her, but as when The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,
Her ashes new-create another heir
As great in admiration as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one,— 44 When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,—

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour, Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror, 48

That were the servants to this chosen infant, Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name 52

Shall be, and make new nations, he shall flourish,
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
To all the plains about him, our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders
Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, 57

An aged princess, many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her, yet a virgin,
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn
her

K. Hen. O lord archbishop! 64

Thou hast made me now a man never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
That when I am in heaven, I shall desire 68
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker

I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,
And your good brethren, I am much beholding,
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, 73
lords

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye,

She will be sick else This day no man think
He has business at his house, for all shall stay
This little one shall make it holiday [Exeunt

EPILOGUE

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please
All that are here some come to take their ease
And sleep an act or two, but those, we fear,
We've frighted with our trumpets, so, 'tis clear They'll say 'tis naught others, to hear the city Abus'd extremely, and to cry, 'That's witty!
Which we have not done neither that, I fear, 8
All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play at this time, is only in The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em if they smile, 12
And say 'twill do, I know, within a while
All the best men are ours, for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap

PROLOGUE

*In Troy there lies the scene From isles of Greece
The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships, Fraught with the munsters and instruments 4
Of cruel war sixty and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made To ransack Troy, within whose strong unmures 8
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps, and that's the quarrel
To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their war-like freightage now on Dardan 13 plans
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions Priam's six-gated city, Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilius, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples 17
And responsive and fulfilling bolts, Sperr up the sons of Troy
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard And hither am I come
A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited 24
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils, Beginning in the middle, starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play 29
Like or find fault, do as your pleasures are Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war*

ACT I

SCENE I.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro Call here my varlet, I'll unarm again
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,

That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field, Troilus, alas! has none.
Pan Will this gear ne'er be mended?
Tro The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength, Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant, 8
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skilless as unpractis'd infancy 12 Pan Well, I have told you enough of this for my part I'll not meddle nor make no further He that will have a cake out of the wheat must tarry the grinding 16
Tro Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the grinding, but you must tarry the bolting.
Tro Have I not tarried? 20
Pan. Ay, the bolting, but you must tarry the leavening
Tro Still have I tarried.
Pan. Ay, to the leavening, but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking, nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips 28 Tro Patience herself, what goddess e'er she
be,
Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.
At Priam's royal table do I sit,
And when far Cressid comes unto my thoughts,— So, traitor! 'when she comes'!—When is she thence? 33
Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.
Tro I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain, 37
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have—as when the sun doth light a storm—

Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile, 40
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming glad-
ness,

Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness Pan An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's,—well, go to,—there were no more comparison between the women but, for my part, she is my kinswoman, I would not, as they term it, praise her, but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but— 49

Tro O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd, Reply not in how many fathoms deep 52
They lie indrench'd I tell thee I am mad
In Cressid's love thou answer'st, she is fair, Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice, Handlest in thy discourse, O! that her hand, 57
In whose comparison all whites are ink, Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense Hard as the palm of ploughman thus thou tell'st me, 61
As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her,
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given
me 64

The knife that made it

Pan I speak no more than truth.

Tro Thou dost not speak so much

Pan Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is if she be fair, 'tis the better for her, an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands. 71

Tro Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus!

Pan I have had my labour for my travail, ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you gone between, and between, but small thanks for my labour 76

Tro What! art thou angry, Pandarus? what!
with me?

Pan Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday But what care I? I care not an she were a black-a-moor, 'tis all one to me

Tro Say I she is not fair? 83

Pan I do not care whether you do or no She's a fool to stay behind her father let her to the Greeks, and so I'll tell her the next time I see her For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter. 88

Tro Pandarus,—

Pan Not I

Tro Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan Pray you, speak no more to me! I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. 93

[Exit PANDARUS. An alarum.

Tro Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus
I cannot fight upon this argument, 97
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus,—O gods! how do you plague me
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar, 100
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we? 104
Her bed is India, there she lies, a pearl Between our Ilum and where she resides
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood,
Ourself the merchant, and thus sailing Pandar
Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark 109

Alarum Enter ÆNEAS

Æne How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro Because not there this woman's answer sorts

For womanish it is to be from thence 112

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro By whom, Æneas?

Æne Troilus, by Menelaus

Tro Let Paris bleed 'tis but a scar to scorn,

Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum]

Æne Hark, what good sport is out of town
to-day! 118

Tro Better at home, if 'would I might' were
'may'

But to the sport abroad are you bound thither?

Æne In all swift haste

Tro Come, go we then together
[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same A Street

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres Who were those went by?

Alex Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cres And whither go they?

Alex Up to the eastern tower,

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,

To see the battle Hector, whose patience 4

Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd

He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer,

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, 8

And to the field goes he, where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath

Cres What was his cause of anger?

Alex The noise goes, thus there is among 12

the Greeks

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector,

They call him Ajax

Cres Good, and what of him?

Alex They say he is a very man per se 16

And stands alone

Cres So do all men, unless they are drunk,

sick, or have no legs

Alex This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attainment but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing, but every thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus all eyes and no sight. 31

Cres But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry? 32

Alex They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle and struck him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking. 37

Cres Who comes here?

Enter PANDARUS

Alex Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres Hector's a gallant man. 40

Alex As may be in the world, lady.

Pan What's that? what's that?

Cres Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of? Good morrow, Alexander. How do you cousin? When were you at Ilion?

Cres This morning, uncle. 47

Pan What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilion? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan E'en so. Hector was stirring early. 52

Cres That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan Was he angry?

Cres So he says here.

Pan True, he was so. I know the cause too. He'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that; and there's Troilus will not come far behind him, let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too. 60

Cres What! is he angry too?

Pan Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres O Jupiter! there's no comparison. 64

Pan What! not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him. 68

Pan Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cres Then you say as I say, for I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees. 73

Cres 'Tis just to each of them: he is himself.

Pan Himself! Alas, poor Troilus, I would he were. 76

Cres So he is.

Pan Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cres He is not Hector.

Pan Himself! no, he's not himself. Would a' were himself well, the gods are above, time must friend or end well, Troilus, well, I would my heart were in her body. No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus. 84

Cres Excuse me.

Pan He is elder.

Cres Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan Th' other's not come to't: you shall tell me another tale when the other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres He shall not need it if he have his own. 92

Pan Nor his qualities.

Cres No matter.

Pan Nor his beauty.

Cres 'Twould not become him his own's better. 96

Pan You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour,—for so 'tis I must confess,—not brown neither. 100

Cres No, but brown.

Pan Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres To say the truth, true and not true. 104

Pan She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan So he has.

Cres Then Troilus should have too much, if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his: he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose. 113

Pan I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres Then she's a merry Greek indeed. 116

Pan Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compassed window, and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,— 120

Cres Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan Why, he is very young, and yet will he, within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector. 125

Cres Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan But to prove to you that Helen loves him, she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,— 130

Cres Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?

Pan Why, you know, 'tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres O! he smiles valiantly.

Pan Does he not? 136

Cres O! yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan Why, go to, then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,— Cres Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so. 141

Pan Troilus! why he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens in the shell. 146

Pan I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin: indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess,—

Cres Without the rack. 150

Pan And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres Alas! poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan But there was such laughing Queen Hecuba laughed that her eyes ran o'er

Cres With millstones 156
Pan And Cassandra laughed.

Cres But therewasmoretemperatefireunder
the pot of her eyes did her eyes run o'er too

Pan And Hector laughed. 160

Cres At what was all this laughing?

Pan Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too 165

Pan They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer

Cres What was his answer? 168

Pan Quoth she, 'Here's but one-and-fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white'

Cres This is her question

Pan That's true make no question of that 'One-and-fifty hairs,' quoth he, 'and one white that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he, 'pluck't out, and give it him' But there was such laughing and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed 180

Cres So let it now, for it has been a great while going by

Pan Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday, think on't. 184

Cres So I do

Pan I'll be sworn 'tis true he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres And I'll spring up in his tears, an
'twere a nettle against May [A retreat sounded

Pan Hark! they are coming from the field.
Shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilum? good niece, do, sweet niece, Cressida.

Cres At your pleasure 193

Pan Here, here, here's an excellent place here we may see most bravely I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest. 197

Cres Speak not so loud.

ENEAS passes over the stage.

Pan That's Æneas is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you but mark Troilus, you shall see anon. 201

ANTENOR passes over

Cres Who's that?

Pan That's Antenor he has a shrewd wit,
I can tell you, and he's a man good enough
he's one of the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon if he see me you shall see him nod at me. 208

Cres Will he give you the nod?

Pan You shall see

Cres If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan That's Hector, that, that, look you, that, there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece O brave Hector! Look how he looks! there's a countenance! Is't not a brave man? 216

Cres O! a brave man.

Pan Is a' not? It does a man's heart good.
Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there there's no jesting, there's laying on, take't off who will, as they say there be hacks! 222

Cres Be those with swords?

Pan Swords? any thing, he cares not, an the devil come to him, it's all one by God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris 227

PARIS crosses over

Look ye yonder, niece is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha!
Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon 233

Cres Who's that?

HELENUS passes over

Pan That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus I think he went not forth to-day That's Helenus 237

Cres Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan Helenus? no, yes, he'll fight indifferent well I marvel where Troilus is Hark! do you not hear the people cry, 'Troilus?' Helenus is a priest 242

Cres What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROIUS passes over

Pan Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus
'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece! Hem! Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry! 246

Cres Peace! for shame, peace!

Pan Mark him, note him O brave Troilus!
look well upon him, niece look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helmet more hacked than Hector's, and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three-and-twenty Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way!
Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess he should take his choice O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him, and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Cres Here come more. 259

Soldiers pass over

Pan Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die! the eyes of Troilus Ne'er look, ne'er look, the eagles are gone crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece 265

Cres There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel. 269

Cres Well, well.

Pan 'Well, well!' Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and so forth, the spice and salt that season a man? 276

Cres Ay, a minced man and then to be baked with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out

Pan You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie 281

Cres Upon my back, to defend my belly, upon my wit, to defend my wiles, upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty, my mask, to defend my beauty, and you, to defend all these and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches

Pan Say one of your watches 288

Cres Nay, I'll watch you for that and that's one of the chiefest of them too if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching 293

Pan You are such another!

Enter TROILUS' Boy

Boy Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you 296

Pan Where?

Boy At your own house, there he unarm'd him.

Pan Good boy, tell him I come [Exit Boy] I doubt he be hurt Fare ye well, good niece

Cres Adieu, uncle

Pan I'll be with you, niece, by and by Cres To bring, uncle?

Pan Ay, a token from Troilus 304

Cres By the same token, you are a bawd.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice
He offers in another's enterprise,
But more in Troilus thousand-fold I see 308
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be.
Yet hold I off Women are angels, wooing
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing

That she belov'd knows nought that knows not this 312

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is That she was never yet, that ever knew Love got so sweet as when desire did sue
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach 316
Achievement is command, ungain'd, beseech
Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear
[Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp Before AGAMEMNON'S Tent

Sennet Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and Others

Agam. Princes,
What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition that hope makes

In all designs begun on earth below 4 Falls in the promis'd largeness checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd,
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound pine and divert his grain 8
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us
That we come short of our suppose so far That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand, 10

Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought 16
That gave t surmised shape Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works,
And call them shames? which are indeed nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove, 20
To find persisive constancy in men

The fineness of which metal is not found
In Fortune's love, for then, the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread, 24
The hard and soft, seem all affi'd and kin

But, in the wind and tempest of her frown, Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away, 28
And what hath mass or matter, by itself

Lies rich in virtue and unmingled Nest With due observance of thy god-like
seat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply 32
Thy latest words In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men the sea being smooth,

How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way 36
With those of nobler bulk!

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetus, and anon behold
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, 40

Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse where's then the saucy boat Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rivall'd greatness? either to harbour fled, 44
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so

Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide
In storms of fortune, for in her ray and bright-
ness

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze 48
Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why then the thing of courage,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in self-same key, 52
Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulysses Agamemnon, Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit, 56
In whom the tempers and the minds of all Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation

The which [To AGAMEMNON] most mighty for thy place and sway, 60 [To NESTOR] And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,
I give to both your speeches, which were such As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass, and such again
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver, 65 Should with a bond of air, strong as the axle-
tree
On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish
ears
To his experienc'd tongue, yet let it please both, 68
Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca, and be t of less expect
That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips, than we are confident, 72
When rank Theristes opes his mastick jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master, 76
But for these instances
The specialty of rule hath been neglected
And look, how many Grecian tents do stand Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions 80
When that the general is not like the hive
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What have we expected? Degree being vizarded,
The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask
The heavens themselves, the planets, and thus centre 85
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order 88
And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other, whose medicinal eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil, 92
And posts, like the commandment of a king, Sans check, to good and bad but when the planets
In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents, what mutiny,
What raging of the sea, shaking of earth, 97
Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states 100 Quite from their fixture! O! when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores, 105
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Precedence of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place? 108
Take but degree away, untune that string And, hark! what discord follows, each thing meets
In mere oppugnancy the bounded waters

Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe 113
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead Force should be right, or rather, right and
wrong— 116
Between whose endless jar justice resides—Should lose their names, and so should justice
too
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite, 120
And appetite, a universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce a universal prey,
And last eat up himself Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125
Follows the choking
And this neglect of degree it is That by a pace goes backward with a purpose
It hath to climb The general's disdain'd 129
By him one step below, he by the next,
That next by him beneath, so every step,
Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick 132
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own snaws To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here dis-cover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick
Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses, 140
What is the remedy?
Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion
crowns
The sinew and the forehead of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame, 144
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs With him Patroclus Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests, 148
And with ridiculous and awkward action—
Which, slanderer, he imitation calls—
He pageants us Sometime, great Agamemnon, Thy topless deputation he puts on 152
And, like a strutting player, whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffold-
age,— 156
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in—and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a mending, with terms un-squar'd,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd, 160
Would seem hyperboles At this fusty stuff
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause,
Cries, 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just. 164
Now play me Nestor, hem, and stroke thy beard,
As he being drest to some oration'
That's done—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels, like as Vulcan and his wife—
Yet good Achilles still cries, 'Excellent! 166

'Tis Nestor right Now play him me Patroclus, Arming to answer in a night alarm
 And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age 172
 Must be the scene of mirth, to cough and spit,
 And with a palsy fumbling on his gorger,
 Shake in and out the rivet and at this sport
 Sir Valour dies, cries, 'O' enough Patroclus
 Or give me ribs of steel, I shall split all 177
 In pleasure of my spleen' And in this fashion,
 All our abilities, gifts, natures shapes, Severals and generals of grace exact 180
 Achievements plots orders, preventions, Excitements to the field, or speech for truce, Success or loss what is or is not, serves
 As stuff for these two to make paradoxes 84
Nes And in the imitation of these twain—
 Whom as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
 With an imperial voice—many are infect
 Ajax is grown self will'd, and bears his head 188
 In such a rein, in full as proud a place
 As broad Achilles, keeps his tent like him,
 Makes factious feasts rails on our state of war,
 Bold as an oracle and sets Thersites— 192
 A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint—
 To match us in comparison with dirt,
 To weaken and discredit our exposure,
 How rank soever rounded in with danger 196 Ulys They tax our policy, and call it
 cowardice

COUNT wisdom as no member of the war,
 Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
 But that of hand the skill and mental parts, 200
 That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
 When fitness calls them on, and know by measure
 Of their observant toil the enemies weight,—
 Why, thus hath not a finger's dignity 204
 They call this bed work, mappery, closet-war,
 So that the ram that batters down the wall,
 For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
 They place before his hand that made the engine
 Or those that with the fineness of their souls
 By reason guide his execution. 210
Nes Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse Makes many Thetis' sons [A tucket Agam What trumpet? look, Menelaus Men From Troy

Enter ENEAS.

Agam What would you 'fore our tent?
Ene Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you? 216
Agam Even this
Ene May one, that is a herald and a prince,
 Do a fair message to his kingly ears?
Agam With surety stronger than Achilles' arm 220
 'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
 Call Agamemnon head and general.
Ene Fair leave and large security. How may
 A stranger to those most imperial looks 224
 Know them from eyes of other mortals?
Agam How!
Ene Ay,
 I ask, that I might waken reverence

And bid the cheek be ready with a blush 228
 Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
 The youthful Phœbus
 Which is that god in office guiding men?
 Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon? 232 Agam This Trojan scorns us, or the men of Troy
 Are ceremonious courtiers
Ene Courtiers as free as debonair, unarm'd,
 As bending angels, that s their fame in peace But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls, 237
 Good arms strong joints, true swords, and,
 Jove's accord
 Nothing so full of heart But peace, Eneas!
 Peace, Trojan! lay thy finger on thy lips! 240
 The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
 If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth,
 But what the repining enemy commends,
 That breath fame blows, that praise, sole pure, transcends 244
Agam Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Eneas?
Ene Ay, Greek that is my name
Agam What's your affair I pray you?
Ene Sir pardon us for Agamemnon sears Agam He hears nought privately that comes from Troy 249
Ene Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
 him
 I bring a trumpet to awake his ear,
 To set his sense on the attentive bent, 252
 And then to speak.
Agam Speak frankly as the wind
 It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour,
 That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
 He tells thee so himself
Ene Trumpet, blow aloud 256
 Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents,
 And every Greek o' mettle let him know,
 What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.
 [Trumpet sounds
 We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy, 260
 A prince called Hector,—Priam is his father,—
 Who in this dull and long continu'd truce
 Is rusty grown he bade me take a trumpet,
 And to this purpose speak king's, princes, lords!
 If there be one among the fair st of Greece 265
 That holds his honour higher than his ease, That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril, 269
 That knows his valour, and knows not his fear,
 That loves his mistress more than in confession,
 With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
 And dare avow her beauty and her worth
 In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
 Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, 273
 Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
 He hath a lady wiser, fairer, truer,
 Than ever Greek did compass in his arms, 276
 And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
 Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
 To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.
 If any come, Hector shall honour him, 280
 If none, he'll say in Troy when he returns,

The Grecian dames are sunburnt, and not worth
The splinter of a lance Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord Æneas,

If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home but we are soldiers,
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love! 288
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector, if none else, I am he Nest Tell him of Nestor, one that was a
man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd he is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecian host 293
One noble man that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, tell him from me,
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver, 296
And in my vanbrace put this wither'd brawn,
And, meeting him, will tell him that my lady
Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world his youth in flood 300 I'll prove this truth with my three drops of
blood

Æne Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen
Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch your
hand,

To our pavilion shall I lead you first.
Achilles shall have word of this intent,
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent Yourself shall feast with us before you go, 308
And find the welcome of a noble foe

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.]

Ulyss. Nestor!
Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my bram,

Be you my time to bring it to some shape

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis
Blunt wedges rive hard knots the seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up 317
In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how? 320

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance 324

Whose grossness little characters sum up
And, in the publication, make no stram,
But that Achilles, were his bram as barren
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows, 328
'Tis dry enough,—will with great speed of judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think
you? 332

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet: whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring those honours off,

If not Achilles? Though 't be a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells, 336
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate and trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd

In this wild action, for the success, 340
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general,

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen 344
The baby figure of the giant mass

Of things to come at large It is suppos'd
He that meets Hector issues from our choice,

And choice, being mutual act of all our souls, 348
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd

Out of our virtues, who miscarrying, What heart receives from hence the conquering
part, 352

To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working than are swords and bows

Directive by the limbs 356
Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech

Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector
Let us like merchants show our foulest wares,
And think perchance they'll sell, if not, 360

The lustre of the better yet to show
Shall show the better Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet,

For both our honour and our shame in this 364
Are dogg'd with two strange followers

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

Were he not proud, we all should share with
him 368

But he already is too insolent,
And we were better parch in Afric sun

Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair if he were foul, 372

Why then we did our main opinion crush
In tant of our best man. No, make a lottery,
And by device let blockish Ajax draw

The sort to fight with Hector among ourselves 376

Give him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon

Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall

His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends 380
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices if he fail,

Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men But, but or miss, 384

Our project's life thus shape of sense assumes Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice, 388

And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon go we to him straight.

Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

[Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Part of the Grecian Camp

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax Thersites!
Ther Agamemnon, how if he had boils? full,
 all over, generally?
Ajax Thersites!
Ther And those boils did run? Say so, did not the general run then? were not that a botchy core?

Ajax Dog!
Ther Then would come some matter from him I see none now Ajax Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not
 hear?
Feel then [Strikes him]

Ther The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax Speak then, thou vine-wedst leaven, speak I will beat thee into handsomeness

Ther I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book Thou canst strike canst thou? a red murrain o thy jade's tricks!

Ajax Toadstool, learn me the proclamation Ther Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strik'st me thus?

Ajax The proclamation!
Ther Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think Ajax Do not, porpentine, do not my fingers itch

Ther I would thou didst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee, I would make thee the loathsomest scab of Greece When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another

Ajax I say, the proclamation!
Ther Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay that thou barkest at him.

Ajax Mistress Thersites!
Ther Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax Cobloaf!
Ther He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax You whoreson cur [Beating him]
Ther Do, do

Ajax Thou stool for a witch!
Ther Ay, do, do thou sodden-witted lord!
 thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows, an assinego may tutor thee thou scurvyvaliant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax You dog!
Ther You scurvy lord!

Ajax You cur! [Beating him]
Ther Mars his idiot! do, rudeness, do, camel, do, do

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS

Achil Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this?

How now Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther You see him there do you?

Achil Ay what's the matter?

Ther Nay, look upon him.

Achil So I do what's the matter?

Ther Nay, but regard him well

Achil 'Well! why so I do

Ther But yet you look not well upon him, for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax

Achil I know that, fool

Ther Ay, but that fool knows not himself

Ajax Therefore I beat thee

Ther Lo, lo, lo, lo what modicums of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil What?

Ther I say, this Ajax,— [Ajax offers to strike him]

Achil Nay, good Ajax

Ther Has not so much wit—

Achil Nay, I must hold you

Ther As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil Peace, fool!

Ther I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not he there, that he, look you

there

Ajax O thou damned cur! I shall—

Achil Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther No, I warrant you, for a fool's will shame it.

Patr Good words, Thersites.

Achil What's the quarrel?

Ajax I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon

me.

Ther I serve thee not.

Ajax Well, go to, go to Ther I serve here voluntary

Achil Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary

Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther Even so, a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains a' were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther There's Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draught-oxen, and make you plough up the wars.

Achil What, what?

Ther Yes, good sooth to, Achilles! to,

Ajax! to!

Ajax I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther 'Tis no matter, I shall speak as much as thou afterwards

Patr No more words, Thersites, peace! 124

Ther I will hold my peace when Achilles brach bids me, shall I?

Achl There's for you, Patroclus

Ther I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents I will keep where there is wit stirring and leave the faction of fools. [Exit 132

Patr A good riddance

Achl Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy To-morrow morning call some knight to arms That hath a stomach, and such a one that dares 137 Maintain—I know not what 'tis trash Farewell.

Ajax Farewell Who shall answer him?

Achl I know not it is put to lottery, otherwise, 140

He knew his man.

Ajax O, meaning you I will go learn more of it. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Troy A Room in PRIAM'S Palace

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROIUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks 'Deliver Helen, and all damage else, As honour loss of time, travail, expense, 4 Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd

In hot digestion of this cormorant war, Shall be struck off? Hector, what say you to't?

Hect Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I, 8

As far as toucheth my particular,

Yet, dread Friam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels,

More spongy to suck in the sense of fear, 12 More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?'

Than Hector is The wound of peace is surety, Surety secure, but modest doubt is call'd The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches 16 To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithesoul, 'mongst many thousand dimes, Hath been as dear as Helen, I mean, of ours If we have lost so many tenths of ours, 21 To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us, Had it our name, the value of one ten, What merit's in that reason which denies 24 The yielding of her up?

Tro Fie, fie! my brother,

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king So great as our dread father in a scale Of common ounces? will you with counters sum The past proportion of his infinite? 29 And buckle in a waist most fathomless

With spans and inches so diminutive

As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame! 32

Hel No marvel though you bite so sharp at reasons,

You are so empty of them Should not our father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, Because your speech hath none that tells him so? 36

Tro You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest,

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons

You know an enemy intends you harm, You know a sword employ'd is perilous, 40

And reason flies the object of all harm Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set The very wings of reason to his heels, 44

And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates and sleep manhood and honour

Should have hare-hearts, would they but fat their thoughts 48

With this cram'd reason reason and respect Make livers pale, and lusthood deject.

Hect Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding

Tro What is aught but as 'tis valu'd?

Hect But value dwells not in particular will, It holds his estimate and dignity

As well wherein 'tis precious of itself As in the prize This mad idolatry 56

To make the service greater than the god, And the will dotes that is inclinable

To what infectiously itself affects, Without some image of the affected merit 60

Tro I take to-day a wife, and my election Is led on in the conduct of my will,

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears, Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores 64

Of will and judgment How may I avoid, Although my will distaste what it elected,

The wife I chose? there can be no evasion To blench from this and to stand firm by

honour 68

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant When we have sold them, nor the remainder vands We do not throw in unrespective sink Because we now are full. It was thought meet

Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks Your breath of full consent bellied his sails,

The seas and winds—old wranglers—took a truce

And did him service he touch'd the ports desir'd, 76

And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning

Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt.

Is she worth keeping? why she is a pearl 81
 Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships
 And ruin'd crown'd kings to merchants
 If you'll avouch twas wisdom Paris went — 84
 As you must needs, for you all cried Go go —
 If you'll confess he brought home nob's prize —
 As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands

And cry'd Inestimable! — why do you now 88
 The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
 And do a deed that Fortune never did,
 Beggar the estimation which you prize Richer than sea and land? O! theft most base,
 That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep! 93
 But thieves unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
 That in their country did them that disgrace
 We fear to warrant in our native place 96

Cas [Within] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri What noise? what shriek?

Tro 'Tis our mad sister I do know her voice

Cas [Within] Cry Trojans!

Hect It is Cassandra 100

Enter CASSANDRA raving

Cas Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand
 eyes

And I will fill them with prophetic tears

Hect Peace, sister, peace!

Cas Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled eids, 104

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
 Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
 A moiety of that mass of moan to come
 Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
 Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand, 109
 Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all Cry Trojans, cry! a Helen and a woe!
 Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go [Exit Hect Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains 113

Of divination in our sister work
 Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
 So madly hot that no discourse of reason, 116
 Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
 Can qualify the same?

Tro Why, brother Hector,
 We may not think the justness of each act
 Such and no other than event doth form it, 120
 Nor once deject the courage of our minds, Because Cassandra's mad her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
 Which hath our several honours all engag'd 124
 To make it gracious. For my private part,
 I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons,
 And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
 To fight for and maintain. 129

Par Else might the world convince of levity
 As well my undertakings as your counsels,
 But I attest the gods, your full consent 132
 Gave wings to my propension and cut off
 All fears attending on so dire a project
 For what, alas! can these my single arms?

What propugnation is in one man's valour, 136
 To stand the push and enmity of those This quarrel would excite? Yet I protest,
 Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
 And had as ample power as I have will, 140
 Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done
 Nor faint in the pursuit

Pri Paris, you speak
 Like one besotted on your sweet delights
 You have the honey still but these the gall, 144
 So to be valiant is no praise at all

Par Sir I propose not merely to myself
 The pleasure such a beauty brings with it,
 But I would have the soil of her fair rape 148
 Wip'd off in honourable keeping her
 What treason were it to the ransom'd queen,
 Disgrace to your great worths and shame to me,
 Now to deliver her possession up, 152
 On terms of base compulsion! Can it be That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?

There's not the meanest spirit on our party 156
 Without a heart to dare or sword to draw
 When Helen is defended nor none so noble
 Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd
 Where Helen is the subject then I say, 160
 Well may we fight for her whom we know well,
 The world's large spaces cannot parallel

Hect Paris and Troilus, you have both said
 well,

And on the cause and question now in hand 164
 Have glaz'd but superficially, not much Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought Unfit to hear moral philosophy
 The reasons you allege do more conduce 168
 To the hot passion of distemper'd blood
 Than to make up a free determination
 'Twixt right and wrong, for pleasure and revenge

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
 Of any true decision Nature craves 173
 All dues be render'd to their owners now,
 What nearer debt in all humanity
 Than wife is to the husband? if this law 176
 Of nature be corrupted through affection,
 And that great minds, of partial indulgence
 To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
 There is a law in each well-order'd nation 180
 To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory
 If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
 As it is known she is, these moral laws 184
 Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
 To have her back return'd thus to persist
 In doing wrong extenuates not wrong
 But makes it much more heavy Hector's opinion 188

Is this, in way of truth, yet, nevertheless,
 My spritely brethren, I propend to you In resolution to keep Helen still,
 For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
 Upon our joint and several dignities. 193

Tro Why, there you touch'd the life of our design

Were it not glory that we more affected

Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood 197
Spent more in her defence But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown,
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, 200 Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize us,
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promiss'd glory 204
As smiles upon the forehead of this action
For the wide world's revenue

Hect I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Pnamus
I have a rousing challenge sent amongst 208
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits
I was advertis'd their great general slept Whilst emulation in the army crept 212
Thus, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—*The Grecian Camp Before
ACHILLES' Tent*

Enter THERSITES.

Ther How now, Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him O worthy satisfaction! Would it were otherwise, that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me
'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves O! thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods, and, Mercury lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have, which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers, and devil Envy say Amen.
What, ho! my Lord Achilles! 24

Enter PATROCLUS

Patr Who's there? Thersites! Good Ther-sites, come in and rail.

Ther If I could have remembered a gilt counterset, thou wouldst not have shipped out of my contemplation but it is no matter, thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then, if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen Where's Achilles? 37

Patr What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther Ay, the heavens hear me!

40

Enter ACHILLES

Achil Who's there?

Patr Thersites, my lord

Achil Where, where? Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals?
Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther Thy commander, Achilles Then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles? 48

Patr Thy lord, Thersites Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther Thy knower, Patroclus Then tell me,
Patroclus, what art thou? 52

Patr Thou mayst tell that knowest.

Achil O! tell tell

Ther I'll decline the whole question. Aga-memnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my lord, I am Patroclus' knower, and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr You rascal!

Ther Peace, fool! I have not done 60

Achil He is a privileged man. Proceed,
Thersites

Ther Agamemnon is a fool, Achilles is a fool, Thersites is a fool, and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool. 65

Achil Derive this, come

Ther Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles, Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon, Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool, and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr Why am I a fool? 72

Ther Make that demand to the Creator It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes
here?

Achil Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit

Ther Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore, a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry serpigo on the subject! and war and lechery confound all! [Exit

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIO-MEDES, and AJAX.

Agam. Where is Achilles? 84

Patr Within his tent, but ill-dispos'd, my
lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are
here.

He shent our messengers, and we lay by Our appertunments, visiting of him 88
Let him be told so, lest perchance he think We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are

Patr I shall say so to him.
[Exit

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent 92
He is not sick.

Ajax Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart you may call it melancholy if you will favour the man, but by my head, 'tis pride but why, why? let him show us a cause A word, my lord

[Takes AGAMEMNON aside]
Nest What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him

Nest Who, Thersites?

Ulyss He

Nest Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss No, you see, he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles

Nest All the better, their faction is more our wish than their faction but it was a strong composure a fool could disunite

Ulyss The amity that wisdom knits not folly may easily untie Here comes Patroclus

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Nest No Achilles with him.

Ulyss The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure

Patr Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry if any thing more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness and this noble state To call upon him, he hopes it is no other But, for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath.

Agam Hear you, Patroclus We are too well acquainted with these answers But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions Much attribute he hath, and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him, yet all his virtues, Not virtuously on his own part beheld, Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss, Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, We come to speak with him, and you shall not sin If you do say we think him over-proud And under-honest, in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgment, and worthier than himself

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on,

Disguise the holy strength of their command, And underwrite in an observing kind

His humorous predomance, yea, watch His pettish luncs, his ebbs, his flows, as if

The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add,

That if he overhold his price so much, We'll none of him, but let him, like an engine

Not portable, be under this report

'Bring action hither, this cannot go to war' A stirring dwarf we do allowance give

Before a sleeping giant tell him so

Patr I shall, and bring his answer presently.

Agam In second voice we'll not be satisfied, We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter you.

Ulyss What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam No question

Ajax Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam No, noble Ajax, you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable

Ajax Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is

Agam Your mind is the clearer, Ajax and your virtues the fairer He that is proud eats up himself pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise

Ajax I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads

Nest [Aside] Yet he loves himself is t not strange?

Re-enter ULYSSES

Ulyss Achilles will not to the field to-morrow

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss He doth rely on none, But carries on the stream of his dispose Without observance or respect of any, In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam Why will he not upon our fair request

Untent his person and share the air with us?

Ulyss Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,

He makes important possess'd he is with greatness,

And speaks not to himself but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath imagin'd worth

Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse,

That 'twixt his mental and his active parts Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages

And batters down himself what should I say? He is so plaguy proud, that the death-tokens of it Cry 'No recovery'

Agam. Let Ajax go to him. Dear lord, go you and meet him in his tent

'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led At your request a little from himself

Ulyss O Agamemnon! let it not be so We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes

When they go from Achilles shall the proud lord

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam, And never suffers matter of the world

Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve And ruminate himself shall he be worshipp'd

Of that we hold an idol more than he?

No, this thrice-worthy and right valiant lord Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd,

Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit, As amply titled as Achilles is,

By going to Achilles That were to enlard his fat-already pride,

And add more coals to Cancer when he burns.

With entertaining great Hyperion. 209
 This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,
 And say in thunder 'Achilles go to him' Nest [Aside] O! this is well, he rubs the vein of him 213
Dio [Aside] And how his silence drinks up this applause!
Ajax If I go to him, with my armed fist 216
 I'll pash him o'er the face
Agam O, no! you shall not go Ajax An a' be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride
 Let me go to him 220
Ulyss Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel
Ajax A paltry, insolent fellow!
Nest [Aside] How he describes himself!
Ajax Can he not be sociable? 224
Ulyss [Aside] The raven chides blackness
Ajax I'll let his humours blood Agam [Aside] He will be the physician that should be the patient 228
Ajax An all men were o' my mind,— Ulyss [Aside] Wit would be out of fashion Ajax A' should not bear it so, a' should eat swords first shall pride carry it? 232 Nest [Aside] An't would, you'd carry half Ulyss [Aside] A' would have ten shares Ajax I will knead him, I will make him supple
Nest [Aside] He's not yet through warm force hun with praises pour in, pour in, his ambition is dry 238 Ulyss [To AGAMEMNON] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike Nest Our noble general, do not do so 240 Dio You must prepare to fight without Achilles
Ulyss Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm
 Here is a man—but 'tis before his face,
 I will be silent.
Nest Wherefore should you so? 244
 He is not emulous, as Achilles is Ulyss Know the whole world, he is as valiant
Ajax A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us! Would he were a Trojan! 248 Nest What a vice were it in Ajax now,— Ulyss If he were proud,— Dio Or covetous of praise,— Ulyss Ay, or surly borne,— 252
Dio Or strange, or self-affected!
Ulyss Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure,
 Praise him that got thee, her that gave thee
 suck
 Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature 256
 Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition
 But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,
 Let Mars divide eternity in twain,
 And give him half and, for thy vigour, 260
 Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
 To sinewy Ajax I will not praise thy wisdom,
 Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines
 Thy spacious and dilated parts here's Nestor

Instructed by the antiquary times, 265
 He must, he is, he cannot but be wise,
 But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
 As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,
 You should not have the eminence of him, 269
 But be as Ajax
Ajax Shall I call you father?
Ulyss Ay, my good son
Dio Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax
Ulyss There is no tarrying here, the hart
 Achilles 272
 Keeps thicket Please it our great general
 To call together all his state of war,
 Fresh kings are come to Troy to-morrow,
 We must with all our main of power stand fast And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west, 277
 And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.
Agam Go we to council Let Achilles sleep Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep [Exeunt]

ACT III

SCENE I—Troy PRIAM'S Palace

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan Friend! you! pray you, a word do not you follow the young Lord Paris?
Serv Ay, sir, when he goes before me
Pan You depend upon him, I mean? 4
Serv Sir, I do depend upon the Lord
Pan You depend upon a noble gentleman,
 I must needs praise him
Serv The Lord be praised! 6
Pan You know me, do you not?
Serv Faith, sir, superficially Pan Friend, know me better I am the Lord Pandarus 12
Serv I hope I shall know your honour
 better
Pan I do desire it
Serv You are in the state of grace 16 Pan Grace! not so, friend, honour and lordship are my titles. [Music within.] What music is this?
Serv I do but partly know, sir it is music in parts 21
Pan Know you the musicians?
Serv Wholly, sir
Pan Who play they to? 24
Serv To the hearers, sir
Pan At whose pleasure, friend?
Serv At mine, sir, and theirs that love music Pan Command, I mean, friend. 28
Serv Who shall I command, sir?
Pan Friend, we understand not one another I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning At whose request do these men play? 32 Serv That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person, with him the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul. 36 Pan Who, my cousin Cressida?
Serv No, sir, Helen could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pan It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seethes 44

Serv Sudden business there's a stewed phrase, indeed

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended

Pan Fair be to you my lord and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measures fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow! 50

Helen Dear lord you are full of fair words

Pan You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par You have broke it cousin and, by my life, you shall make it whole again you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance Nell, he is full of harmony 57

Pan Truly, lady, no

Helen O, sir!

Pan Rude, in sooth, in good sooth, very rude 61

Pan Well said, my lord! Well, you say so in fits

Pan I have business to my lord, dear queen My lord will you vouchsafe me a word? 65

Helen Nay, this shall not hedge us out we'll hear you sing certainly

Pan Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me But marry, thus, my lord My dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen My Lord Pandarus, honey-sweet lord,— 73

Pan Go to, sweet queen, go to commend himself most affectionately to you

Helen You shall not bob us out of our melody if you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan Sweet queen, sweet queen! that's a sweet queen, I' faith 80

Helen And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence

Pan Nay, that shall not serve your turn that shall it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words no, no And, my lord, he desires you, that if the kung call for him at supper, you will make his excuse

Helen My Lord Pandarus,— 88

Pan What says my sweet queen, my very sweet queen?

Par What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night? 92

Helen Nay, but my lord,—

Pan What says my sweet queen! My cousin will fall out with you. You must know where he sups. 96

Par I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan No, no, no such matter, you are wide. Come, your disposer is sick. 100

Par Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par I spy 104

Pan You spy! what do you spy? Come, give me an instrument Now, sweet queen

Helen Why, this is kindly done

Pan My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have sweet queen 109

Helen She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris

Pan He! no, she'll none of him, they two are twain. 113

Helen Falling in, after falling out, may make them three

Pan Come come, I'll hear no more of this I'll sing you a song now 117

Helen Ay ay, prithee now By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead

Pan Ay, you may, you may 120

Helen Let thy song be love this love will undo us all O Cupid Cupid Cupid!

Pan Love! ay that it shall I' faith

Par Ay, good now, love, love nothing but love 125

Pan In good troth, it begins so [Sings]

Love love nothing but love still more!

For oh! love's bow 128

Shoots buck and doe

The shaft confounds,

Not that it wounds

But tickles still the sore 132

These lovers cry O! O! they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to kill

Doth turn O! O! to ha! ha! ha! 136

So dying love lives still

O! O! a while but ha! ha! ha!

O! O! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!

Helen In love, I' faith, to the very tip of the nose 141

Par He eats nothing but doves love and that breeds hot blood and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love 145

Pan Is this the generation of love? hot blood? hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why they are vipers is love a generation of vipers? 149

Par Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so

How chance my nephew Troilus went not? 153

Helen He has he lip at something you know all Lord Pandarus.

Pan Not I, honey-sweet queen I long to hear how they sped to-day You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par To a hair

Pan Farewell, sweet queen. 160

Helen Commend me to your niece.

Pan I will, sweet queen.

[Exit A retreat sounded]

Par They're come from field let us to Priam's hall

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you 164

To help unarmour Hector his stubborn buckles, With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel Or force of Greekish sinews, you shall do
 more 168
 Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector
Helen 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris, Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
 Gives us more palm in beauty than we have, 172
 Yea, overshines ourself
Par Sweet, above thought I love thee
 [Exeunt

SCENE II — The Same PANDARUS' Orchard

Enter PANDARUS and TROILUS' Boy, meeting

Pan How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Boy No, sir, he stays for you to conduct him thither 4

Enter TROILUS

Pan O! here he comes How now, how now!

Tro Sirrah, walk off [Exit Boy

Pan Have you seen my cousin?

Tro No, Pandarus I stalk about her door,
 Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks 9
 Staying for waftage O! be thou my Charon,
 And give me swift transference to those fields
 Where I may wallow in the hly-beds 12
 Propos'd for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus!
 From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,

And fly with me to Cressid

Pan. Walk here i' the orchard. I'll bring her straight [Exit

Tro I am giddy, expectation whirls me round
 The imaginary relish is so sweet

That it enchants my sense What will it be
 When that the watery palate tastes indeed 20
 Love's thrice-repured nectar? death, I fear me, Swounding destruction, or some joy too fine,
 Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness

For the capacity of my ruder powers 24

I fear it much, and I do fear besides

That I shall lose distinction in my joys,

As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps

The enemy flying 28

Re-enter PANDARUS

Pan She's making her ready she'll come straight you must be witty now She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite I'll fetch her It is the prettiest villian she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow [Exit

Tro Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom,

My heart beats thicker than a fev'rous pulse, 36

And all my powers do their bestowing lose,

Like vassalage at unawares encountering

The eye of majesty

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush?

shame's a baby Here he is now swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me
 What! are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways, an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills Why do you not speak to her? Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture Alas the day, how loath you are to offend day-light! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner So, so, rub on, and kiss the mistress How now! a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter, the air is sweet Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river go to, go to

Tro You have bereft me of all words, lady

Pan Words pay no debts, give her deeds, but she'll bereave you of the deeds too if she call your activity in question. What! billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'—Come in, come in I'll go get a fire [Exit

Cres Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro O Cressida! how often have I wished me thus! 64

Cres Wished, my lord! The gods grant,—O my lord!

Tro What should they grant? what makes thus pretty abrupton? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro Fears make devils of cherubins, they never see truly 73

Cres Blind fear, that seeming reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear to fear the worst oft cures the worse 77

Tro O! let my lady apprehend no fear in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster

Cres Nor nothing monstrous neither? 80

Tro Nothing but our undertakings, when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers, thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed This is the monstrosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confined, that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit 88

Cres They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform, vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters? 95

Tro Are there such? such are not we Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove, our head shall go bare, till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present we will not name desert before his birth, and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth, and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus. 105

Cres Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS

Pan What! blushing still? have you not done talking yet? 108

Cres Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you

Pan I thank you for that if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me Be true to my lord, if he finch, chide me for it 113

Tro You know now your hostages, your uncle's word, and my firm faith 113

Pan Nay, I'll give my word for her too Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won they are burrs, I can tell you, they'll stick where they are thrown 120

Cres Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months

Tro Why was my Cressid then so hard to win? 124

Cres Hard to seem won, but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever—pardon me— If I confess much you will play the tyrant.

I love you now, but till now, not so much 128

But I might master it in faith, I lie, My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too headstrong for their mother See, we fools!

Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us? 132

When we are so unsecret to ourselves? But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not, And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man, Or that we women had men's privilege 136

Of speaking first Sweet, bid me hold my tongue, For in this rapture I shall surely speak

The thing I shall repent See see! your silence, Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws My very soul of counsel Stop my mouth. 141

Tro And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence

Pan Pretty, 't' faith

Cres My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me, 'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss 145

I am ashamed O heavens! what have I done? For this time will I take my leave, my lord

Tro Your leave, sweet Cressid? 148

Pan Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning—

Cres Pray you, content you

Tro What offends you, lady?

Cres Sir, mine own company 152

Tro You cannot shun yourself

Cres Let me go and try

I have a kind of self resides with you, But an unkind self, that itself will leave, 156

To be another's fool I would be gone

Where is my wit? I speak I know not what.

Tro Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely

Cres Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love, 160

And fell so roundly to a large confession, To angle for your thoughts but you are wise, Or else you love not, for to be wise, and love.

Exceeds man's might, that dwells with gods above 164

Tro O! that I thought it could be in a woman—

As if it can I will presume in you— To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love

To keep her constancy in plight and youth, 168

Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind That doth renew swifter than blood decays

Or that persuasion could but thus convince me, That my integrity and truth to you 172

Might be affronted with the match and weight Of such a winnow'd purity in love,

How were I then uplifted! but, alas! I am as true as truth's simplicity, 176

And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres In that I'll war with you

Tro O virtuous fight! When right with right wars who shall be most right.

True swans in love shall in the world to come Approve their truths by Troilus when their times, 181

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare, Want smiles, truth tir'd with iteration,

As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, 184

As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,

Yet, after all comparisons of truth, As truth's authentic author to be cited, 188

'As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse And sanctify the numbers

Cres Prophet may you be! If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,

When time is old and hath forgot itself, 192

When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy, And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,

And mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing, yet let memory, 196

From false to false, among false maids in love Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said 'as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, 200

Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son, Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

'As false as Cressid'

Pan Go to, a bargain made, seal it, seal it I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all Pandars, let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, Amen. 212

Tro Amen.

Cres Amen.

Pan Amen Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed, which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death away!

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! 220

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—The Grecian Camp

Enter AGAMEMNON ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS

Cal Now, princes, for the service I have done you,

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That through the sight I bear in things to come,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, 5
Incurr'd a traitor's name expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes, sequestering from me all
That time acquaintance, custom, and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature,
And here to do you service, have become
As new into the world, strange unacquainted
I do beseech you, as in way of taste, 13
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf 16

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?
make demand

Cal You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,

Yesterday took Troy holds him very dear Oft have you—often have you thanks therefore— 20

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still denied, but this Antenor
I know is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack, 24 Wanting his manage, and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter, and her presence 28
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither. Calchas shall have What he requests of us. Good Diomed, 32
Furnish you fairly for this interchange Withal bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready

Dio This shall I undertake, and 'tis a burden 36

Which I am proud to bear

[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their tent

Ulyss. Achilles stands in the entrance of his tent

Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot, and, princes all, 40

Lay negligent and loose regard upon him
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me

Why such unplausible eyes are bent on him
If so, I have derision med'cinable 44

To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink.

It may do good. pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride, for supple knees 48

Feed arrogance and are the poor man's fees.
Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on

A form of strangeness as we pass along
So do each lord and either greet him not, 52
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way

Achul. What! comes the general to speak with me?

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst
Troy 56

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught
with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achul. No

Nest. Nothing my lord 60

Agam. The better

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR]

Achul. Good day, good day

Men. How do you? how do you? [Exit]

Achul. What! does the cuckold scorn me? 64

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achul. Good morrow, Ajax

Ajax. Ha?

Achul. Good morrow 68

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too [Exit]

Achul. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely they were us'd to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles, 72
To come as humbly as they us'd to creep
To holy altars

Achul. What! am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune,

Must fall out with men too what the declin'd is He shall as soon read in the eyes of others 77

As feel in his own fall, for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer,

And not a man, for being simply man, 80
Hath any honour, but honour for those honours That are without him, as places, riches, and favour,

Prizes of accident as oft as merit

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers, 84
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together

Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me
Fortune and I are friends I do enjoy 88

At ample point all that I did possess, Save these men's looks, who do, methinks, find

out
Something not worth in me such rich beholding

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses 92
I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!

Achul. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me, That man, how dearly ever parted,

How much in having, or without or in, 97

Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,

Nor feels not what he owes but by reflection 100

As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver

Achil This is not strange, Ulysses!
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself 104
To others' eyes nor doth the eye itself—
That most pure spirit of sense—behold itself,
Not going from itself, but eye to eye oppos'd Salutes each other with each other's form, 108
For speculation turns not to itself
Till it hath travell'd and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself This is not strange at all.

Ulyss I do not stram at the position, 112
It is familiar, but at the author's drift,
Who in his circumstance expressly proves That no man is the lord of any thing—Though in and of him there be much consisting— 116

Till he communicate his parts to others
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause Where they're extended, who, like an arch, reverberates 120

The voice again, or, like a gate of steel Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in
this,

And apprehended here immediately 124
The unknown Ajax

Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse,
That has he knows not what Nature, what things there are,

Most abject in regard, and dear in use! 128
What things again most dear in the esteem And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow,

An act that very chance doth throw upon him, Ajax renown'd. O heavens! what some men do, 132

While some men leave to do
How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall, Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!

How one man eats into another's pride, 136
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords! why even already They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast, 140
And great Troy shrinking

Achil I do believe it, for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me
Good word or look, what! are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his
back, 145

Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-siz'd monster of ingratitude, Those scraps are good deeds past, which are devour'd 148

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done perseverance, dear my lord, Keeps honour bright to have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail 152
In monumental mockery. Take the instant
way,

For honour travels in a strait so narrow Where one but goes abreast keep, then, the path, 156

For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue if you give way,

Or hedge aside from the direct forthright, Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by
And leave you hindmost, 160
Or like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank, Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O'errun and trampled on then what they do in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top
yours, 164
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,

And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly, Grasps in the corner welcome ever smiles, 168
And farewell goes out sighing O! let not virtue seek

Remuneration for the thing it was,
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service, 172
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,
That all with one consent praise new-born gawds, 176

Though they are made and moulded of things
past,

And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted

The present eye praises the present object 180
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax,
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye Than what not stirs The cry went once on
thee, 184

And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent,
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods
themselves, 189

And drave great Mars to faction.
Achil Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons

Ulyss But 'gainst your privacy 192
The reasons are more potent and heroic.
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil Ha! known!
Ulyss Is that a wonder? 196

The providence that's in a watchful state Knows almost every gram of Pluto's gold,
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps, Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods, 200

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery—with whom relation Durst never meddle—in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine 204
Than breath or pen can give expression to.

All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord,
And better would it fit Achilles' march 208
To throw down Hector than Polyxena,
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump,

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,
 'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,' 213
 But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.
 Farewell, my lord. I as your lover speak,
 The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break Patr To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd

 you. 217

A woman impudent and mannish grown
 Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
 In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this They think my little stomach to the war 221
 And your great love to me restrains you thus Sweet, rouse yourself, and the weak wanton Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous
 fold, 224

And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
 Be shook to air

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay, and perhaps receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake, 228
 My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O! then, beware,
 Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves

Omission to do what is necessary
 Seals a commission to a blank of danger, 232
 And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
 Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patro-clus

I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him 236
 To invite the Trojan lords after the combat To see us here unarmed. I have a woman's longing,

An appetite that I am sick withal,
 To see great Hector in his weeds of peace, 240
 To talk with him and to behold his visage, Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself. 244

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an herolical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be? 252

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, a stride and a stand, rummates like a hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning, bates his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out,' and so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever, for if Hector break not his neck in the combat, he'll break 't himself in van-glory. He knows not me: I said, 'Good morrow, Ajax,' and he replies, 'Thanks, Agamemnon.' What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. 269

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him,
 Thersites

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody, he professes not answering, speaking is for beggars, he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. 276

Achil. To him, Patroclus tell him, I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious, six-or-sevententimes-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cetera. Do this

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax! 284

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,— 289

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon 292

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't? 296

Ther. God be w' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other, howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me 301

Patr. Your answer, sir

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not, but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his cnews to make catlings on 309

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horse, for that's the more capable creature 313

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stir'd,

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it!
 I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, on one side, AENEAS, and Servant with a torch, on the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTI-NOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Del.

It is the Lord Aeneas.

Aene Is the prince there in person?
Had I so good occasion to lie long As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly
business

Should rob my bed-mate of my company
Dio That's my mind too Good morrow,
Lord Aeneas

Par A valiant Greek, Aeneas, take his hand Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field

Aene Health to you, valiant sir,
During all question of the gentle truce,
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
As heart can think or courage execute

Dio The one and other Diomed embraces Our bloods are now in calm, and, so long,
health!

But when contention and occasion meet, 16
By Jove, I'll say the hunter for thy life
With all my force, pursuit, and policy

Aene And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly
With his face backward. In humane gentleness, Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, 21
Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love in such a sort
The thing he means to kill more excellently 24

Dio We sympathize Jove, let Aeneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun!
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die, 28
With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Aene We know each other well Dio We do, and long to know each other worse

Par This is the most despitelful gentle greeting, 32
The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of What business, lord, so early?

Aene I was sent for to the king, but why,
I know not

Par His purpose meets you 'twas to bring this Greek 36

To Calchas' house, and there to render him,
For the enfréed Antenor, the fair Cressid
Let's have your company, or, if you please,
Haste there before us I constantly do think—40
Or rather, call my thought a certain knowledge—

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night
Rouse him and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore I fear 44
We shall be much unwelcome

Aene That I assure you
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece
Than Cressid borne from Troy

Par There is no help
The bitter disposition of the time 48
Will have it so On, lord, we'll follow you.

Aene Good morrow, all [Exit Par And tell me, noble Diomed, faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship, 52
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best—Myself or Menelaus?

Dio Both alike

He merits well to have her that doth seek her—
Not making any scruple of her soileure— 56
With such a hell of pain and world of charge,
And you as well to keep her that defend her—
Not palating the taste of her dishonour—
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends 60
He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece,
You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors 64 Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor
more,

But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par You are too bitter to your country-
woman.

Dio She's bitter to her country Hear me,
Paris 68

For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk for every scruple
Of her contaminated carnion weight A Trojan hath been slain Since she could
speak, 72

She hath not given so many good words breath
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death

Par Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy, 76
But we in silence hold this virtue well,
We'll not commend what we intend to sell
Here lies our way [Exeunt

SCENE II —The Same A Court before
PANDARUS' House

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro Dear, trouble not yourself the morn is cold

Cres Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down
He shall unbolt the gates

Tro Trouble him not,
To bed, to bed sleep kill those pretty eyes, 4
And give as soft attachment to thy senses
As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres Good morrow then Tro I prithee now, to bed.

Cres Are you weary of me?
Tro O Cressida! but that the busy day, 8 Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,

And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,

I would not from thee

Cres Night hath been too brief Tro Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays 12

As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love With wings more momentary-swift than
thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres Prithee, tarry
You men will never tarry 16

O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off
And then you would have tarried. Hark!
there's one up

Pan. [Within] What! are all the doors open
here?

Tro It is your uncle Cres A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking I shall have such a life!

Enter PANDARUS

Pan How now, how now! how go maiden-
 heads?
Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid? 24 Cres Go hang yourself; you naughty mocking uncle!
You bring me to do—and then you flout me too Pan To do what? to do what? let her say what what have I brought you to do? 28 Cres Come, come, beshrew your heart!
 you'll ne'er be good,
 Nor suffer others

Pan Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take
 him!

Cres Did not I tell you? 'would he were knock'd o' the head! [Knocking within] Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see 36
My lord, come you again into my chamber
You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily Tro Ha, ha!

Cres Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing [Knocking within] How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in I would not for half Troy have you seen here

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA]

Pan [Going to the door] Who's there?
 what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now! what's the matter? 45

Enter AENEAS.

Aene Good morrow, lord, good morrow

Pan Who's there? my Lord Aeneas! By my troth,

I know you not what news with you so early?

Aene Is not Prince Troilus here? 49

Pan Here! what should he do here?

Aene Come, he is here, my lord do not deny him it doth import him much to speak
 with me 53

Pan Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn for my own part, I came in late. What should he do here? 56

Aene Who! nay, then come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you're 'ware You'll be so true to him, to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither, go 60

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro How now! what's the matter?

Aene My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute
 you,

My matter is so rash there is at hand
 Pans your brother, and Deiphobus, 64
 The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us, and for him forthwith,
 Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
 We must give up to Diomedes' hand 68
 The Lady Cressida.

Tro Is it so concluded?

Aene By Priam, and the general state of
 Troy

They are at hand and ready to effect it

Tro How my achievements mock me! 72

I will go meet them and, my Lord Aeneas,

We met by chance, you did not find me here Aene Good, good, my lord, the secrets of nature

Have not more gift in taciturnity 76

[Exeunt TROILUS and AENEAS.]

Pan Is't possible? no sooner got but lost?
 The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad a plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke 's neck! 80

Enter CRESSIDA

Cres How now! What is the matter? Who was here?

Pan Ah! ah!

Cres Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above! 88

Cres O the gods! what's the matter?

Pan Prithce, get thee in Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death O poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor! 93

Cres Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan Thou must be gone wench, thou must be gone, thou art changed for Antenor Thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus
 'twill be his death, 'twill be his bane, he cannot bear it 100

Cres O you immortal gods! I will not go

Pan Thou must

Cres I will not, uncle I have forgot my father,

I know no touch of consanguinity, 104

No kin, no love, no blood no soul so near me

As the sweet Troilus O you gods divine!

Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can, 109

But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very centre of the earth,

Drawing all things to it I'll go in and weep,—

Pan Do, do 113

Cres Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks,

Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my
 heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same Before PANDARUS'
House

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, AENEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par It is great morning, and the hour pre-fix'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek

Comes fast upon Good my brother Troilus, Tell you the lady what she is to do,
 And haste her to the purpose
Tro Walk into her house,
 I'll bring her to the Grecian presently
 And to his hand when I deliver her,
 Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus
 A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit
Par I know what 'tis to love,
 And would, as I shall pity, I could help!
 Please you walk in, my lords [Exeunt]

SCENE IV—The Same A Room in
PANDARUS' House

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA

Pan Be moderate, be moderate
Cres Why tell you me of moderation?
 The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
 And violenteth in a sense as strong
 As that which causeth it how can I moderate it?
 If I could temporize with my affection
 Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
 The like allayment could I give my grief
 My love admits no qualifying dross,
 No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS

Pan Here, here, here he comes Ah! sweet ducks
Cres [Embracing him] O Troilus! Troilus!
Pan What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too 'O heart,' as the goodly saying is,—

O heart heavy heart,
 Why sighst thou without breaking?

when he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart
 By friendship nor by speaking.

There was never a truer time Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse we see it we see it. How now, lambs!

Tro Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity,
 That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
 More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from
 me

Cres Have the gods envy?

Pan Ay, ay, ay, ay, 'tis too plain a case

Cres And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro A hateful truth.

Cres What! and from Troilus too?

Tro From Troy and Troilus

Cres Is it possible?

Tro And suddenly, where injury of chance

Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by

All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips

Of all rejoinder, forcibly prevents

Our lock'd embraces, strangles our dear vows

Even in the birth of our own labouring breath

We two, that with so many thousand sighs

Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves

With the rude brevity and discharge of one.

Injurious time now with a robber's haste

Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how
 As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
 With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to
 them,

He fumbles up into a loose adieu,
 And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
 Distasted with the salt of broken tears

Aene [Within] My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro Hark! you are call'd some say the Genius so

Cries 'Come!' to him that instantly must die.

Bid them have patience, she shall come anon

Pan Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by root!

[Exit]

Cres I must then to the Grecians?

Tro No remedy

Cres A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry

Greeks!

When shall we see again?

Tro Hear me, my love Be thou but true of

heart,—

Cres I true! how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,

For it is parting from us

I speak not 'be thou true,' as fearing thee,

For I will throw my glove to Death himself,

That there's no maculation in thy heart,

But, 'be thou true' say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation, be thou true,

And I will see thee

Cres O! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers

As infinite as imminent, but I'll be true

Tro And I'll grow friend with danger Wear

this sleeve

Cres And you this glove When shall I see

you?

Tro I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels, to give thee nightly visitation.

But yet, be true.

Cres O heavens! 'be true' again!

Tro Hear why I speak it, love

The Grecian youths are full of quality,

They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of

nature,

Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise

How novelty may move, and parts with person,

Alas! a kind of godly jealousy,—

Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,—

Makes me afraid

Cres O heavens! you love me not.

Tro Dye I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith in question

So mainly as my merit I cannot sing,

Nor heal the high lavoit, nor sweeten talk,

Nor play at subtle games, fair virtues all,

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant

But I can tell that in each grace of these

There lurks a still and dumb-discouraging devil

That tempts most cunningly But be not tempted.

Cres Do you think I will?

Tro No
But something may be done that we will not
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers, Presuming on their changeable potency 97

Ene [Within] Nay, good my lord,—

Tro Come, kiss, and let us part

Par [Within] Brother Troilus!

Tro Good brother, come you hither,
And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you. 100

Cres My lord, will you be true?

Tro Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault
While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity, 104
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper
crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare Fear not my truth, the moral of my wit
Is plain, and true, there's all the reach of it.

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTEOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the lady 109
Which for Antenor we deliver you
At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is 112
Entreat her fair, and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio Fair Lady Cressid, 116
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, Pleads your fair usage, and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly

Tro Grecian, thou dost not use me court-teously, 121

To shame the zeal of my petition to thee
In praising her I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises 124
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge,
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio O! be not mov'd, Prince Troilus
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message
To be a speaker free, when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust, and know you, lord, 132
I'll nothing do on charge to her own worth
She shall be priz'd, but that you say 'be't so,' I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, 'no'

Tro Come, to the port, I'll tell thee, Diomed, This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy
head. 137

Lady, give me your hand, and, as you walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk

[Exeunt TROILUS, CRESSIDA, and DIOMEDES. Trumpet sounded.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Ene How have we spent this morning!
The prince must thank me tardy and remiss, 141
That swore to ride before him to the field

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with him.

Dei Let us make ready straight 144

Ene Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,

Let us address to tend on Hector's heels
The glory of our Troy doth thus day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry [Exeunt]

SCENE V — The Grecian Camp Lists set out

Enter AJAX, armed AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and Others

Agam Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with starting courage
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy, Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appalled air 4
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither

Ajax Thou, trumpet, there's my purse
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe

Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek 8

Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout
blood,

Thou blow'st for Hector [Trumpet sounds]

Ulyss No trumpet answers

Achil 'Tis but early days 12

Agam Is not yond Diomed with Calchas'
daughter?

Ulyss 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait,
He rises on the toe that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth. 16

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA

Agam Is this the Lady Cressid?

Dio Even she

Agam Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady

Nest Our general doth salute you with a kiss

Ulyss Yet is the kindness but particular, 20

'Twere better she were kiss'd in general

Nest And very courtly counsel I'll begin

So much for Nestor

Achil I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady 24

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men I had good argument for kissing once

Patr But that's no argument for kissing
now,

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment, 28
And parted thus you and your argument

Ulyss O, deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns

Patr The first was Menelaus' kiss, this,
mine 32

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O! this is true.

Patr Paris and I, kiss evermore for him.

Men I'll have my kiss, sir Lady, by your leave.

Cres In kissing, do you render or receive? 36

Patr Both take and give.

Cres I'll make my match to live,

The kiss you take is better than you give,
Therefore no kiss
Men I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one 40
Cres You're an odd man, give even, or give none
Men An odd man, lady! every man is odd Cres No, Paris is not, for, you know tis
true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you. 44
Men You fillip me o' the head Cres No, I'll be sworn.
Ulyss It were no match, your nail against his horn
May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Cres You may
Ulyss I do desire it.
Cres Why, beg, then 48
Ulyss Why, then, 'for Venus sake, give me a
kiss
When Helen is a maid again, and his Cres I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due Ulyss Never's my day, and then a kiss of
you 52
Dio Lady, a word I'll bring you to your father [DIOMEDES leads out CRESSIDA] Nest A woman of quick sense
Ulyss Fie, fie upon her!
There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip Nay, her foot speaks, her wanton spirits look
out 56
At every joint and motive of her body
O! these encounterers, so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome ere it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
To every tickling reader, set them down 61
For sluttish spoils of opportunity And daughters of the game [Trumpet within]
All The Trojans trumpet
Agam Yonder comes the troop 64 Enter HECTOR armed ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants Æne Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done
To him that victory commands? or do you purpose
A victor shall be known? will you the knights Shall to the edge of all extremity 68
Pursue each other, or shall be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask
Agam Which way would Hector have it?
Æne He cares not, he'll obey conditions 72 Achil 'Tis done like Hector, but securely
done,
A little proudly, and great deal misprising
The knight oppos'd
Æne If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?
Achil If not Achilles, nothing 76
Æne Therefore Achilles, but, whate'er, know this
In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector,

The one almost as infinite as all, 80
The other blank as nothing Weigh him well,
And that which looks like pride is courtesy
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood
In love whereof half Hector stays at home, 84 Half heart half hand, half Hector comes to seek This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek
Achil A maiden battle, then? O! I perceive
you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES

Agam Here is Sir Diomed Go, gentle
knight, 88
Stand by our Ajax as you and Lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it, either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath the combatants being kin 92
Half stunts their strife before their strokes begin [AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists]
Ulyss They are oppos'd already Agam What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?
Ulyss The youngest son of Priam, a true
knight 96
Not yet mature, yet matchless, firm of word,
Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue,
Not soon provoked, nor being provoked soon calm'd
His heart and hand both open and both free 100
For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows, Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impure thought with breath
Manly as Hector but more dangerous, 104
For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes
To tender objects, but he in heat of action
Is more vindictive than jealous love
They call him Troilus, and on him erect 108
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector
Thus says Æneas, one that knows the youth
Even to his inches, and with private soul
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me 112 [Alarum HECTOR and AJAX fight]
Agam They are in action
Nest Now, Ajax, hold thine own!
Tro Hector thou sleep'st awake thee!
Agam His blows are well dispos'd there, Ajax!
Dio You must no more [Trumpets cease]
Æne Princes enough so please you 116
Ajax I am not warm yet, let us fight again.
Dio As Hector pleases Hect Why, then will I no more
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
A cousin-german to great Priam's seed, 120
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation twixt us twain
Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so That thou couldst say, 'This hand is Grecian all,
And this is Trojan the sinews of this leg 125
All Greek and this all Troy, my mother's blood Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister Bounds in my father's, by Jove omnipotent, 128 Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member
Wherein my sword had not impressure made

Of our rank feud But the just gods gainsay
That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword 133
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax,
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms, Hector would have them fall upon him thus Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax I thank thee, Hector
Thou art too gentle and too free a man
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death 140

Hect Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest Fame with her loud st oyes

Cries, 'This is he!' could promise to himself
A thought of added honour torn from Hector Ene There is expectance here from both the sides, 145

What further you will do

Hect We'll answer it,
The issue is embracement Ajax, farewell
Ajax If I might in entreaties find success,—
As seld I have the chance,—I would desire 149

My famous cousin to our Grecian tents Dio 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great
Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector Hect Aeneas, call my brother Troilus to me,
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part.

Desire them home Give me thy hand, my cousin, 156

I will go eat with thee and see your knights Ajax Great Agamemnon comes to meet us
here.

Hect The worthiest of them tell me name
by name,
But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes 160
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy,
But that's no welcome, understand more clear, What's past and what's to come is strew'd with hunks 165

And formless ruin of oblivion,
But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, 168
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect I thank thee, most imperious Aga-memnon.

Agam. [To TROILUS.] My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no less to you. 172

Men Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting

You brace of war-like brothers, welcome hither Hect. Whom must we answer?

Ene. The noble Menelaus.
Hect. O! you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks! 176

Mock not that I affect the untraded oath;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove She's well, but bade me not commend her to
you.

Men Name her not now, sir, she's a deadly theme 180

Hect O! pardon, I offend Nest I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee
oft,

Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth and I have seen thee, 184

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed, Despising many forfeits and subdements,
When thou hast hung thy advanc'd sword i' th'
air,

Not letting it decline on the declin'd, 188
That I have said to some my standers-by,
'Lo! Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!'

And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath, When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee
in, 192

Like an Olympian wrestling this have I seen,
But thus thy countenance, sull lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him he was a soldier
good, 196

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee Let an old man embrace thee,
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents

Ene 'Tis the old Nestor 200
Hect Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,

That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with
time

Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee Nest I would my arms could match thee in contention, 204

As they contend with thee in courtesy Hect I would they could

Nest Ha!
By this white beard, I'd fight with thee tomorrow 208

Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time—

Ulyss I wonder row how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect I know your favour, Lord Ulysses well
Ah! sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead, Since first I saw yourself and Diomed

In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy Ulyss Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue 216

My prophecy is but half his journey yet
For yonder walls, that pertain to your town, Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,

Must kiss their own feet
Hect I must not believe you 220

There they stand yet, and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood the end crowns all,
And that old common arbitrator, Time, 224

Will one day end it.

Ulyss So to him we leave it.

Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome.
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent, 228

Achil I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou!

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee,
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.

Hect Is this Achilles? 232

Achil I am Achilles
Hect Stand fair, I pray thee let me look on thee

Achil Behold thy fill Hect Nay, I have done already

Achil Thou art too brief I will the second time, 236

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb Hect O! like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er,

But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body 241

Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, or there?

That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach whereout 244

Hector's great spirit flew Answer me, heavens!
Hect It would discredit the bless'd gods,

proud man,
To answer such a question Stand again

Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly 248
As to prenominate in nice conjecture

Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil I tell thee, yea.
Hect Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,

I'd not believe thee Henceforth guard thee well,
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there,

But, by the forge that studded Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er

You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag, 256
His insolence draws folly from my lips,

But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ajax Do not chafe thee, cousin
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone, 260

Till accident or purpose bring you to't
You may have every day enough of Hector,

If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him 264

Hect I pray you, let us see you in the field,
We have had peeing wars since you refus'd

The Grecians' cause.

Achil Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death, 268

To-night all friends.

Hect Thy hand upon that match.
Agam First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent,

There in the full convive we afterwards,

As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall 272
Concur together, severally entreat him.

Bear loud the tabournes, let the trumpets blow,
That this great soldier may his welcome know

[Exeunt all except TROILUS and ULYSSES.] Tro My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?
Ulyss At Menelaus' tent, most princely

Troilus.
There Diomed doth feast with him to-night,

Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth,

But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view 281
On the fair Cressid.

Tro Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to thee so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent, 284
To bring me thither?

Ulyss You shall command me, sir
As gentle tell me, of what honour was

This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there That waits her absence? 288

Tro O, sir! to such as boasting show their scars

A mock is due Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd, she is and doth

But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth
[Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp Before
ACHILLES' Tent

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS

Achil I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,

Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil How now, thou core of envy! 4
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee 8

Achil From whence, fragment?
Ther Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy

Patr Who keeps the tent now?
Ther The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound. 13

Patr Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther Prithce, be silent, boy I profit not by thy talk thou art thought to be Achilles'

male varlet. 18
Patr Male varlet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther Why, his masculine whore Now, the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, lime-kilns i the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries! 28

Patr Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther Do I curse thee?

Patr Why, no, you rancous butt, you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no 33

Ther No! why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleeve silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah! how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, dimmities of nature.

Patr Out, gall! 40

Ther Finch egg!

Achil My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle
Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba, 44
A token from her daughter, my fair love, Both taxing me and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it Fall Greeks fail fame, honour or go or stay,
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey 49
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent,
This night in banquetting must all be spent Away, Patroclus! 52

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS

Ther With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad but if with too much brain, and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds, a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg, to what form but that he is should wit larded with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing he is both ass and ox, to an ox, were nothing he is both ox and ass To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care, but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites, for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day!
spirits and fires! 74

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong

Ajax No, yonder 'tis,

There, where we see the lights

Hect I trouble you. 76

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss Here comes himself to guide you.

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Achil Welcome, brave Hector, welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good-night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you. 80
Hect Thanks and good-night to the Greeks'
general.

Men. Good-night, my lord.

Hect Good-night, sweet Lord Menelaus

Ther Sweet draught 'sweet, 'quotha'! sweet sink, sweet sewer 85

Achil. Good-night and welcome both at once, to those

That go or tarry

Agam. Good-night. 88

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and MENELAUS.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries, and you too,
Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two Dio I cannot, lord, I have important business,

The tide whereof is now Good-night, great 92

Hector

Hect Give me your hand

Ulyss [Aside to TROILUS] Follow his torch, he goes to Calchas' tent

I'll keep you company

Tro Sweet sir, you honour me

Hect And so, good-night 96

[Exit DIOMEDES, ULYSSES and

TROILUS following

Achil Come, come, enter my tent

[Exeunt ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.

Ther That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave, I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses He will spend his mouth, and prommise, like Brabblers the hound, but when he performs, astronomers foretell it it is prodigious, there will come some change the sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him they say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent I'll after Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets [Exit

SCENE II.—The Same Before CALCHAS' Tent

Enter DIOMEDES

Dio What, are you up here, ho! speak.

Cal [Within] Who calls?

Dio Diomed Calchas, I think Where's your daughter?

Cal [Within] She comes to you. 4

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance
after them THERSITES

Ulyss Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio How now, my charge!

Cres Now, my sweet guardian! Hark! a word with you [Whispers 8

Tro Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss She will sing any man at first sight

Ther And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff, she's noted.

Dio Will you remember? 12

Cres Remember! yes

Dio Nay, but do, then,

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro What should she remember? 16

Ulyss Last!

Cres Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly

Ther Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres I'll tell you what,— 20

Dio Foh, foh! come, tell a pin you are forsworn.

Cres In faith, I cannot What would you have me do?
Ther A juggling trick,—to be secretly open Dio What did you swear you would bestow on me?
Cres I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath,
 Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek Dio Good-night
Tro Hold patience!
Ulyss How now, Trojan?
Cres Diomed,— Dio No, no, good-night, I'll be your fool no more Tro Thy better must Cres Hark! one word in your ear
Tro O plague and madness!
Ulyss You are mov'd, prince, let us depart, I pray you,
 Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
 To wrathful terms This place is dangerous, 36
 The time right deadly I beseech you, go Tro Behold, I pray you!
Ulyss Nay, good my lord, go off
 You flow to great distraction, come, my lord
Tro I pray thee, stay
Ulyss You have not patience, come 40
Tro I pray you, stay By hell, and all hell's torments,
 I will not speak a word!
Dio And so, good night
Cres Nay, but you part in anger
Tro Doth that grieve thee?
 O wither'd truth!
Ulyss Why, how now, lord!
Tro By Jove, 44
 I will be patient.
Cres Guardian!—why, Greek!
Dio Foh, foh! adieu, you palter
Cres In faith, I do not come hither once again.
Ulyss You shake, my lord, at something will you go? 48
 You will break out
Tro She strokes his cheek!
Ulyss Come, come
Tro Nay, stay, by Jove, I will not speak a word
 There is between my will and all offences
 A guard of patience stay a little while 52
Ther How the devil Luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together!
 Fry, lechery, fry!
Dio But will you, then? 56
Cres In faith, I will, la, never trust me else
Dio Give me some token for the surety of it Cres I'll fetch you one [Exit
Ulyss You have sworn patience
Tro Fear me not, sweet lord, 60
 I will not be myself, nor have cognition
 Of what I feel I am all patience
 Re-enter CRESSIDA.
Ther Now the pledge! now, now, now!
Cres Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. 64
Tro O beauty! where is thy faith?

Ulyss My lord,— Tro I will be patient, outwardly I will Cres You look upon that sleeve, behold it well
 He lov'd me—O false wench!—Give't to me again. 68 Dio Whose was't?
Cres It is no matter, now I have't again.
 I will not meet with you to-morrow night.
I prithee Diomed, visit me no more Ther Now she sharpens well said, whetstone! 72
Dio I shall have it Cres What, thus?
Dio Ay, that.
Cres O! all you gods O pretty, pretty pledge!
 Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
 Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, 77
 As I kiss thee Nay, do not snatch it from me,
 He that takes that doth take my heart withal
Dio I had your heart before, thus follows it.
Tro I did swear patience 81
Cres You shall not have it, Diomed, faith you shall not,
 I'll give you something else
Dio I will have this Whose was it?
Cres 'Tis no matter
Dio Come, tell me whose it was 85 Cres 'Twas one s that loved me better than you will
 But, now you have it, take it.
Dio Whose was it?
Cres By all Diana's waiting-women yond, 88
 And by herself, I will not tell you whose Dio To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
 And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Tro Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn, 92
 It should be challeng'd.
Cres Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past and yet it is not
 I will not keep my word.
Dio Why then, farewell,
 Thou never shalt mock Diomed again. 96
Cres You shall not go one cannot speak a word,
 But it straight starts you.
Dio I do not like this fooling.
Ther Nor I, by Pluto but that that likes not me Pleases me best. 100
Dio What, shall I come? the hour?
Cres Ay, come —O Jove!—
 Do come —I shall be plagu'd.
Dio Farewell till then.
Cres Good-night I prithee, come.— [Exit DIOMEDS.
 Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee, 104
 But with my heart the other eye doth see.
 Ah! poor our sex, this fault in us I find,
 The error of our eye directs our mind.
 What error leads must err O! then conclude Minds away'd by eyes are full of turpitude. 109 [Exit.

Ther A proof of strength she could not publish more,

Unless she said, 'My mind is now turn'd whore'

Ulyss All's done, my lord.

Tro It is

Ulyss Why stay we, then?

Tro To make a recordation to my soul

Of every syllable that here was spoke

But if I tell how these two did co-act,

Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?

Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,

An asperance so obstinately strong,

That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears,

As if those organs had deceptive functions,

Created only to calumniate

Was Cressid here?

Ulyss I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro She was not, sure

Ulyss Most sure she was Tro Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss Nor mine, my lord Cressid was here but now.

Tro Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!

Think we had mothers, do not give advantage

To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme, 128

For depravation, to square the general sex

By Cressid's rule rather think this not Cressid

Ulyss What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro Nothing at all, unless that thus were she Ther Will he swagger himself out on's own

eyes?

Tro This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida.

If beauty have a soul, this is not she,

If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony, 136

If sanctimony be the gods' delight,

If there be rule in unity itself,

This is not she. O madness of discourse,

That cause sets up with and against itself, 140

By-fold authority! where reason can revolt

Without perdition, and loss assume all reason

Without revolt this is, and is not, Cressid.

Within my soul there doth conduce a fight 144

Of this strange nature that a thing inseparate

Divides more wider than the sky and earth.

And yet the spacious breadth of this division

Admits no orifice for a point as subtle 148

As Ariadne's broken woof to enter

Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates,

Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven

Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself,

The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and

loos'd, 152

And with another knot, five-finger-tied,

The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,

The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy

reliques 156

Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss May worthy Troilus be half attach'd

With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro Ay, Greek, and that shall be divulged

well 160

In characters as red as Mars his heart

Inflam'd with Venus never did young man fancy

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul

Hark, Greek as much as I do Cressid love, 164

So much by weight hate I her Diomed,

That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm,

Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,

Mysword should bite it Not the dreadful spout

Which shipmen do the hurricano call, 169

Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear

In his descent than shall my prompted sword

Falling on Diomed. 173

Ther He'll tinkle it for his concupy

Tro O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, 176

And they'll seem glorious

Ulyss O! contain yourself,

Your passion draws ears hither

Enter AENEAS

Aene I have been seeking you this hour, my

lord

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy 180

Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home

Tro Have with you, prince My courteous

lord, adieu

Farewell, revolted fair! and Diomed,

Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head! 184

Ulyss I'll bring you to the gates

Tro Accept distracted thanks

[Exeunt TROILUS, AENEAS and ULYSSES]

Ther Would I could meet that rogue Dio-med! I would croak like a raven, I would bode,

I would bode Patroclus would give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab Lechery lechery, still, wars and lechery nothing else holds fashion A burning devil take them! [Exit]

SCENE III — Troy Before PRIAM'S Palace

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE

And When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?

Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day

Hect You train me to offend you, get you in 4

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go

And My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day

Hect No more, I say

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas Where is my brother Hector?

And Here, sister, arm'd, and bloody in

intent. 8

Consort with me in loud and dear petition,

Pursue we him on knees, for I have dream'd

Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night

Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of

slaughter 12

Cas O! 'tis true.

Hect Ho! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet

brother,

Hect Be gone, I say the gods have heard me swear

Cas The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows

They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd Than spotted livers in the sacrifice

And O! be persuaded do not count it holy To hurt by being just it is as lawful, 20 For we would give much, to use violent thefts, And rob in the behalf of charity

Cas It is the purpose that makes strong the vow,

But vows to every purpose must not hold. 24 Unarm, sweet Hector

Hect Hold you still, I say, Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate Life every man holds dear, but the dear man Holds honour far more precious-dear than life

Enter TROILUS

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight to-day? 29

And Cassandra, call my father to persuade [Exit CASSANDRA]

Hect No, faith, young Troilus, doff thy harness, youth,

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry 32 Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong, And tempt not yet the brushes of the war Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave boy, I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy 36

Tro Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro When many times the captive Grecian falls, 40

Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword, You bid them rise, and live.

Hect O! 'tis fair play

Tro Fool's play, by heaven, Hector

Hect How now! how now!

Tro For the love of all the gods, 44

Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers, And when we have our armours buckled on, The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords, Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth. 48

Hect Fie, savage, fie!

Tro Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hect Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day

Tro Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars 52 Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire,

Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees, Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears,

Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn, 56

Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way, But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast.

He is thy crutch, now if thou lose thy stay, 60 Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee, Fall all together

Pri Come, Hector, come, go back The wife hath dream'd, thy mother hath had visions, Cassandra doth foresee, and I myself 64 Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt, To tell thee that this day is ominous Therefore, come back.

Hect Aeneas is a-field, And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks, 68 Even in the faith of valour, to appear This morning to them.

Pri Ay, but thou shalt not go

Hect I must not break my faith You know me dutiful, therefore, dear sir, 72

Let me not shame respect, but give me leave To take that course by your consent and voice,

Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas O Priam! yield not to him.

And Do not, dear father 76

Hect Andromache, I am offended with you Upon the love you bear me, get you in. [Exit ANDROMACHE]

Tro This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements

Cas O farewell! dear Hector 80 Look! how thou diest, look! how thy eye turns pale, Look! how thy wounds do bleed at many vents

Hark! how Troy roars how Hecuba cries out! How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth! 84

Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement, Like witless antics, one another meet,

And all cry Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector! 88

Tro Away! Away!

Cas Farewell. Yet, soft! Hector, I take my leave

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive [Exit

Hect You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.

Go in and cheer the town we'll forth and fight, Do deeds worth praise and tell you them at night. 93

Pri Farewell the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR. Alarums]

Tro They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe,

I come to lose my aim, or win my sleeve. 96

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.

Tro. Let me read. 100

Pan. A whoreson trick, a whoreson rascally trick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there? 108

Tro Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart,
The effect doth operate another way

[Tearing the letter
Go, wind to wind, there turn and change together

My love with words and errors still she feeds,
But edifies another with her deeds 113
[Exeunt severally

SCENE IV — Between Troy and the Grecian Camp

Alarums Excursions Enter THERSITES.

Ther Now they are clapper-clawing one another, I'll go look on That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy dotting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm I would fain see them meet, that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand O' the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry they set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles, and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day, whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t' other 20

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following

Tro Fly not, for shouldst thou take the river Styx, I would swim after

Dio Thou dost miscall retire
I do not fly, but advantageous care Withdrew me from the odds of multitude 24
Have at thee!

Ther Hold thy whore, Grecian! now for thy whore, Trojan! now the sleeve, now the sleeve!
[Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting

Enter HECTOR.

Hect What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match? 28
Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther No, no, I am a rascal, a scurvy railing knave, a very filthy rogue.

Hect I do believe thee five. [Exit

Ther God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me, but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another I would laugh at that miracle, yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit

SCENE V — Another Part of the Plains

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant

Dio Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse,

Present the fair steed to my Lady Cressid Fellow, commend my service to her beauty
Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, 4
And am her knight by proof

Serv I go, my lord. [Exit

Enter AGAMEMNON

Agam Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas
Hath beat down Menon, bastard Margarelon Hath Doreus prisoner, 8
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,
Upon the pashed corpses of the kings Epistrophus and Cediis, Polixenes is slam, Amphimachus, and Thoas, deadly hurt, 12
Patroclus ta'en, or slam, and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruis'd, the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all 16

Enter NESTOR

Nest Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles,
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame
There is a thousand Hectors in the field
Now here he fights on Galathea his horse, 20
And there lacks work, anon he's there afoot,
And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls
Before the belching whale, then is he yonder,
And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him, like the mower's swath Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and takes, Dexterity so obeying appetite
That what he will he does, and does so much That proof is called impossibility 29

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss O! courage, courage, princes, great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance Patroclus' wounds haversous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangled Myrmidons, 33
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him,

Crying on Hector Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it, 36

Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution,
Engaging and redeeming of himself
With such a careless force and forceless care 40
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit

Dio Ay, there, there.

Nest So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES

Achil Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face, 45

Know what it is to meet Achilles angry Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Plains

Enter AJAX

Ajax Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES

Dio Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax What wouldst thou?

Dio I would correct him

Ajax Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office

Ere that correction. Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter TROILUS

Tro O traitor Diomed! Turn thy false face, thou traitor!

And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!

Dio Ha! art thou there?

Ajax I'll fight with him alone stand,
Diomed

Dio He is my prize, I will not look upon.

Tro Come, both you coggng Greeks, have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting]

Enter HECTOR

Hect Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter ACHILLES

Achil Now I do see thee Ha! have at thee, Hector!

Hect Pause, if thou wilt

Achil I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan

Be happy that my arms are out of use

My rest and negligence befrend thee now,

But thou anon shalt hear of me again,

Till when, go seek thy fortune [Exit]

Hect Fare thee well —

I would have been much more a fresher man,

Had I expected thee How now, my brother!

Re-enter TROILUS

Tro Ajax hath ta'en Æneas shall it be?

No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,

He shall not carry him I'll be ta'en too,

Or bring him off Fate, hear me what I say!

I reck not though I end my life to-day [Exit]

Enter One in sumptuous armour

Hect Stand, stand, thou Greek, thou art a goodly mark.

No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well,

I'll crush it, and unlock the rivets all,

But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide?

Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons

Achil Come here about me, you my Myr-midons,

Mark what I say Attend me where I wheel Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in
breath

And when I have the bloody Hector found, 4
Empale him with your weapons round about,
In fellest manner execute your aims Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye
It is decreed, Hector the great must die 8
[Exeunt]

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting then
THERSITES

Ther The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris,
'loo! now, my double-henned sparrow! 'loo, Paris, loo! The bull has the game 'ware horns, ho! [Exeunt PARIS and MENELAUS]

Enter MARGARELON

Mar Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther What art thou?

Mar A bastard son of Priam's. 16

Ther I am a bastard too, I love bastards I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment.
Farewell, bastard [Exit]

Mar The devil take thee, coward! [Exit]

SCENE VIII.—Another Part of the Plains

Enter HECTOR.

Hect Most putrefied core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.

Now is my day's work done, I'll take good
breath

Rest, sword, thou hast thy fill of blood and death. [Puts off his helmet, and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set, 5

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels
Even with the vail and darking of the sun,

To close the day up, Hector's life is done. 8

Hect I am unarm'd, forego this vantage,
Greek

Achil Strike, fellows, strike! this is the man
I seek [HECTOR falls]

So, Ilion, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down!

Here lies thy heart, thy smews, and thy bone. 12

On! Myrmidons, and cry you all amain,

'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.'—

[A retreat sounded.]

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Myr The Trojan trumpets sound the like,
my lord. 16

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads
the earth,

And, stickler-like, the armes separates.

My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,

Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed.—
 Come, tie his body to my horse's tail, 21
 Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt]

SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and Others marching Shouts within.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest Peace, drums!
 [Within] Achilles!

Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles

Ajax If it be so, yet bragless let it be, 4 Great Hector was a man as good as he Agam March patiently along Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent

If in his death the gods have us befriended, 8 Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. [Exeunt marching]

SCENE X.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter ENEAS and Trojans.

Ene Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field
 Never go home, here starve we out the night

Enter TROILUS.

Tro Hector is slain.

All Hector! the gods forbid!

Tro He's dead, and at the murderer's horse's tail, 4
 In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field.

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!
 I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy, 8
 And linger not our sure destructions on!

Ene My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not that tell me so I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death, 12
 But dare all imminence that gods and men
 Address their dangers in. Hector is gone.

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd 16
 Go in to Troy, and say there Hector's dead

There is a word will Priam turn to stone,
 Make wells and Niobes of the maids and waves,

Cold statues of the youth and, in a word, 20
 Scare Troy out of itself But march away

Hector is dead, there is no more to say Stay yet. You vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
 Let Titan rise as early as he dare, 25

I'll through and through you! And, thou greatsiz'd coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates
 I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still 28

That mouldeth goblin's swift as frenzy's thoughts
 Strike a free march to Troy! with comfort go

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe [Exeunt ENEAS and Trojan Forces]

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS

Pan But hear you, hear you! 32

Tro Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and
 shame

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!
 [Exit]

Pan A goodly medicine for my aching bones!
 O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me see!— 41

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing
 Till he hath lost his honey and his sting
 And being once subdu'd in armed tail 44
 Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pander's hall, 48
 Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall

Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
 Though not for me yet for your aching bones.

Brethren and sisters of the hold door trade, 52
 Some two months hence my will shall here be made,

It should be now but that my fear is this,
 Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss.

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for eases 56
 And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit.]

SCENE — Rome and the Neighbourhood Corioli and the Neighbourhood Antium

ACT I

SCENE I.—Rome A Street

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons

First Cit Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All Speak, speak

First Cit You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

All Resolved, resolved.

First Cit First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All We know't, we know't.

First Cit Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price Is't a verdict?

All No more talking on't, let it be done Away, away!

Sec Cit One word, good citizens.

First Cit We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good What authority surfeits on would relieve us If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely, but they think we are too dear the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularise their abundance our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge

Sec Cit Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

First Cit Against him first he's a very dog to the commonalty

Sec Cit Consider you what services he has done for his country?

First Cit Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

Sec Cit Nay, but speak not maliciously

First Cit I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

Sec Cit What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

First Cit If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All Come, come

First Cit Soft! who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA

Sec Cit Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath always loved the people

First Cit He's one honest enough would all the rest were so!

Men What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

First Cit Our business is not unknown to the senate, they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor sutors have strong breaths they shall know we have strong arms too

Men Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,

Will you undo yourselves?

First Cit We cannot, sir, we are undone already

Men I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them

Against the Roman state, whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder than can ever

Appear in your impediment. For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it, and

Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack!

You are transported by calamity Thither where more attends you, and you slander
The helms o' the state, who care for you like fathers,

When you curse them as enemies

First Cit Care for us! True, indeed! They ne'er cared for us yet suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain, make edicts for usury, to support usurers, repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor If the wars eat us not up, they will, and there's all the love they bear us

Men Either you must Confess yourselves v'ndrous malicious,
Or be accus'd of folly I shall tell you
A pretty tale it may be you have heard it,
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale t a little more

First Cit Well, I'll hear it, sir, yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale, but, an't please you, deliver

Men There was a time when all the body's members

Rebell'd against the belly, thus accus'd it
That only like a gulf it did remain
I the midst o' the body, idle and unactive, Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing Like labour with the rest, where the other instruments

Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body The belly answer'd,—

First Cit Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even
thus—

For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak—it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts

That envied his receipt, even so most fitly
As you malign our senators for that They are not such as you.

First Cit Your belly's answer? What!
The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps In this our fabric, if that they—

Men What then?—
'Fore me, this fellow speaks! what then? what
then?

First Cit Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink o' the body.—

Men Well, what then?
First Cit The former agents, if they did complain,

What could the belly answer?

Men I will tell you,

If you'll bestow a small, of what you have little,
Patience a while, you'll hear the belly's answer
First Cit You're long about it.

Men Note me thus, good friend,
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd
'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,
'That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon, and fit it is,
Because I am the store-house and the shop
Of the whole body but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court, the heart, to the seat o' the brain,

And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live And though that all at once,
You, my good friends,—thus says the belly, mark me,—

First Cit Ay, sir, well, well Men 'Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran.' What say you to't?

First Cit It was an answer how apply you
this?

Men The senators of Rome are this good
belly,
And you the mutinous members, for, examine Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find

No public benefit which you receive
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And no way from yourselves What do you think,

You, the great toe of this assembly?
First Cit I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest,
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost

Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, Lead'st first to win some vantage
But make you ready your stuff bats and clubs
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle,
The one side must have bale.

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Hail, noble Marcus!
Mar Thanks —What's the matter, you dissentionous rogues,
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?

First Cit We have ever your good word.
Mar He that will give good words to thee will flatter

Beneath abhorring What would you have, you
curs,
That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights
you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to
you,

Where he should find you lions, finds you hares,
Where foxes, geese you are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun Your virtue is, 180
To make him worthy whose offence subdues
him,

And curse that justice did it Who deserves greatness

Deserves your hate, and your affections are A sick man's appetite, who desires most that 184
Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead
And hews down oaks with rushes Hang ye!
Trust ye?

With every minute you do change a mind, 188
And call him noble that was now your hate, Hum vile that was your garland. What's the matter,

That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who, 192
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feed on one another? What's their seeking?

Men For corn at their own rates, whereof
they say

The city is well stor'd

Mar Hang 'em! They say! 196
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know What's done i' the Capitol, who's like to rise, Who thrives, and who declines, side factions, and give out

Conjectural marriages, making parties strong,
And feeling such as stand not in their liking, Below their cobbled shoes They say there's gram enough! 202

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high 205

As I could pick my lance

Men Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded,

For though abundantly they lack discretion, 208 Yet are they passing cowardly But, I beseech
you,

What says the other troop?

Mar They are dissolv'd hang 'em!
They said they were an-hungry, sigh'd forth proverbs

That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat, 212

That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich men only With these shreds They vented their complainings, which being answer'd,

And a petition granted them, a strange one,—

To break the heart of generosity, 217

And make bold power look pale,—they threw their caps

As they would hang them on the horns o' the moon,

Shouting their emulation.

Men What is granted them?

Mar Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms, 221

Of their own choice one's Junius Brutus, Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—Sdeath!
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me, it will in time 225 Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes

For insurrection's arguing

Men This is strange

Mar Go, get you home, you fragments! 228

Enter a Messenger, hastily

Mess Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar Here what's the matter?

Mess The news is, sir, the Volscies are in arms

Mar I am glad on't, then we shall ha' means to vent

Our musty superfluity See, our best elders 232

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators, JUNIUS BRUTUS and SICINIUS VELUTUS

First Sen Marcius, 'tis true that you have lately told us,

The Volscies are in arms

Mar They have a leader,

Tullius Aufidius, that will put you to't. 236

I sin in envying his nobility,

And were I anything but what I am,

I would wish me only he

Com You have fought together

Mar Were half to half the world by the ears, and he

Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make 240

Only my wars with him he is a lion

That I am proud to hunt.

First Sen Then, worthy Marcius,

Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com It is your former promise.

Mar Sir, it is, 244

And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou

Shalt see me once more strike at Tullius' face

What! art thou stuff? stand'st out?

Tit No, Caius Marcius,

I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with 248

t'other,

Ere stay behind this business.

Men O! true-bred

First Sen Your company to the Capitol,

where I know

Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. [To COMINIUS.] Lead you on

[To MARCIUS.] Follow Cominius, we must fol- 252

low you,

Right worthy you priority

Com. Noble Marcius!

First Sen. [To the Citizens.] Hence! to your homes! be gone.

Mar Nay, let them follow

The Volscies have much corn, take these rats

thither

To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutiners,

Your valour puts well forth, pray, follow 257

[Exit SENATORS, COMINIUS, MARCIUS, TITUS, and MENENIUS. Citizens steal away.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?

Bru He has no equal
Sic When we were chosen tribunes for the people,— 260 Bru Mark'd you his lip and eyes?
Sic Nay, but his taunts
Bru Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods Sic Bemock the modest moon.
Bru The present wars devour him, as is grown 264

Too proud to be so valiant.
Sic Such a nature, Ticked with good success, disdains the shadow Which he treads on at noon But I do wonder His insolence can brook to be commanded 268 Under Cominius

Bru Fame, at the which he aims, In whom already he is well grac'd, cannot Better be held nor more attain'd than by A place below the first, for what miscarnes 272 Shall be the general's fault, though he perform To the utmost of a man, and giddy censure Will then cry out of Marcus 'O! if he Had borne the business'

Sic Besides, if things go well, 276 Opinion, that so sticks on Marcus, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius

Bru Come Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcus, Though Marcus earn'd them not, and all his faults 280 To Marcus shall be honours, though indeed In aught he merit not

Sic Let's hence and hear How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion, More than his singularity, he goes 284 Upon this present action

Bru. Let's along [Exeunt]

SCENE II — Corioli. The Senate-house

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS and Senators

First Sen So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels, And know how we proceed.

Auf Is it not yours? What ever have been thought on in this state, 4 That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone Since I heard thence, these are the words I think

I have the letter here, yes, here it is 8 They have press'd a power, but it is not known Whether for east, or west the dearth is great The people mutinous and it is rumour'd, Cominius, Marcus, your old enemy,— 12 Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,— And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman, These three lead on this preparation Whether 'tis bent most likely 'tis for you 16 Consider of it

First Sen Our army's in the field We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready To answer us.

Auf Nor did you think it folly To keep your great pretences veil'd till when 20

They needs must show themselves, which in the hatching, It seem'd, appear'd to Rome By the discovery We shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was To take in many towns ere almost Rome 24 Should know we were afoot.

Sec Sen Noble Aufidius, Take your commission hie you to your bands, Let us alone to guard Corioli If they set down before's, for the remove 28 Bring up your army, but, I think you'll find They've not prepared for us

Auf O! doubt not that, I speak from certainties Nay, more, Some parcels of their power are forth already, 32 And only hitherward I leave your honours If we and Caius Marcus chance to meet, 'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike Till one can do no more

All The gods assist you! 36

Auf And keep your honours safe!

First Sen Farewell

Sec Sen Farewell

All Farewell [Exeunt]

SCENE III — Rome A Room in MARCIUS'S House

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA they set them down on two low stools and sew

Vol I pray you, daughter, sing, or express yourself in a more comfortable sort If my son were my husband, I would freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entreaties a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame To a cruel war I sent him, from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man 19

Vir But had he died in the business, madam, how then?

Vol Then, his good report should have been my son I therein would have found issue Hear me profess sincerely had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcus, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action. 28

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gen Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself

Vol Indeed, you shall not. 32 Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum,

See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair,
As children from a bear, the Volscies shunning
him

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus
'Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear, Though you were born in Rome.' His bloody
brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvestman that s task'd to mow 40
Or all or lose his hire

Vir His bloody brow! O Jupiter! no blood.

Vol Away, you fool! it more becomes a man Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba, 44
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords, contemning. Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome 48

[Exit Gentlewoman.]

Vir Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and an Usher

Val My ladies both, good day to you 52

Vol Sweet madam

Vir I am glad to see your ladyship

Val How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son? 58

Vir I thank your ladyship, well, good
madam

Vol He had rather see the swords and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster 61

Val O my word, the father's son, I'll swear
'tis a very pretty boy. O my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly, and when he caught it, he let it go again, and after it again, and over and over he comes, and up again, caught it again, or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it, O! I warrant, how he mammocked it! 72

Vol One on 's father's moods

Val Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir A crack, madam

Val Come, lay aside your stitchery, I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon. 77

Vir No, good madam, I will not out of doors

Val Not out of doors!

Vol She shall, she shall 80

Vir Indeed, no, by your patience, I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars

Vol Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in 86

Vir I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers, but I cannot go thither

Vol Why, I pray you?

Vir 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want
love. 91

Val You would be another Penelope, yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come, I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity.
Come, you shall go with us 97

Vir No, good madam, pardon me, indeed, I will not forth.

Val In truth, la, go with me, and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband. 101

Vir O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night. 104

Vir Indeed, madam?

Val In earnest, it's true, I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is. The Volscies have an army forth, against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli, they nothing doubt prevailing and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour, and so, I pray, go with us. 113

Vir Give me excuse, good madam, I will obey you in every thing hereafter

Vol Let her alone, lady, as she is now she will but disease our better mirth. 117

Val In troth I think she would. Fare you well then. Come, good sweet lady, Prithce, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us. 121

Vir No, at a word, madam, indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val Well then, farewell.

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Before Corioli

Enter, with drum and colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. To them a Messenger

Mar Yonder comes news a wager they have met.

Lart My horse to yours, no

'Tis done.

Mar

Agreed

Lart Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess They lie in view, but have not spoke
as yet 4

Lart So the good horse is mine.

Mar I'll buy him of you.

Lart No, I'll nor sell nor give him, lend you him I will

For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar How far off lie these armies?

Mess Within this mile and half. 8

Mar Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work,
That we with smoking swords may march from
hence,

To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast. 12

A Parley sounded. Enter, on the Walls, two Senators, and Others

Tullius Aufidius, is he within your walls?

First Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he,

That's lesser than a little Hark, our drums [Drums afar off] we'll break our Are bringing forth our youth walls, 16
 Rather than they shall pound us up our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes
 They'll open of themselves Hark you, far off!
 [Alarum afar off]
 There is Aufidius list, what work he makes 20
 Amongst your cloven army

Mar O! they are at it!
 Lart Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

The Volsces enter, and pass over the stage Mar They fear us not, but issue forth their city

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight 24

With hearts more proof than shields Advance, brave Titus
 They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath Come on,
 my fellows

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volscie, 28
 And he shall feel mine edge

Alarum The Romans are beaten back to their trenches Re-enter MARCIUS

Mar All the contagion of the south light on
 you,
 You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd 32
 Further than seen, and one infect another Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese,
 That bear the shapes of men, how have you run From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell! 36

All hurt behind, backs red, and faces pale With flight and ag'd fear! Mend and charge
 home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe
 And make my wars on you, look to't come on,
 If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives, 41

As they us to our trenches follow'd

Another alarum The Volsces and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed The Volsces retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates

So, now the gates are ope now prove good seconds

'Tis for the followers Fortune widens them, 44
 Not for the fliers mark me, and do the like.

[He enters the gates]
 First Sol Foolhardiness! not I.

Sec Sol Nor I.

[MARCUS is shut in.]

Third Sol See, they have shut him in.

All To the pot, I warrant him

[Alarum continues]

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All Slain, sir, doubtless 48 First Sol Following the fliers at the very heels,
 With them he enters, who, upon the sudden,
 Clapp'd to their gates, he is himself alone,
 To answer all the city

Lart O noble fellow! 52
 Who, sensibly, outdares his senseless sword,
 And, when it bows, stands up Thou art left,

Marcus
 A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
 Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
 Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible 57 Only in strokes, but, with thy grim looks and The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the
 world 60

Were feverous and did tremble Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy
 First Sol Look, sir!
 Lart O! 'tis Marcius!
 Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike
 [They fight, and all enter the city]

SCENE V—Corioli A Street

Enter certain Romans, with spoils

First Rom. This will I carry to Rome

Sec Rom And I this

Third Rom A murrain on't! I took this for silver [Alarum continues still afar off]

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS, with a trumpet

Mar See here these movers that do prize their hours 4

At crack'd drachme! Cushions, leadenspoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up Down with
 them! 8

And hark, what noise the general makes! To
 him!

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city, 12 Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste

To help Cominius

Lart Worthy sir, thou bleed'st, Thy exercise hath been too violent
 For a second course of fight.

Mar Sir, praise me not, 16
 My work hath yet not warm'd me fare you
 well

The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me to Aufidius thus
 I will appear, and fight.

Lart Now the fair goddess, Fortune, 20
 Fall deep in love with thee, and her great charms Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentle-
 man,

Prosperity be thy page!

Mar Thy friend no less Than those she places highest! So, farewell 24
Lart Thou worthiest Marcius!—
[Exit MARCIUS
Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place,
Call thither all the officers of the town.
Where they shall know our mind Away! 28
[Exeunt

Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning the
other, 36
Holding Coriol in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.
Com Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? 40
Where is he? Call him hither

SCENE VI—Near the Camp of COMINIUS.

Enter COMINIUS and Forces, retreating
Com Breathe you, my friends well fought, we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire believe me, sirs, We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck, 4
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends Ye Roman gods!
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering, 8
May give you thankful sacrifice

Enter a Messenger

Thy news?
Mess The citizens of Corioli have issu'd,
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle
I saw our party to their trenches driven, 12
And then I came away

Com Though thou speak'st truth, Methinks thou speak'st not well How long is't since? 16

Mess Above an hour, my lord Com 'Tis not a mile, briefly we heard their drums 16
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess Spies of the Volscies Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about, else had I, sir, 20 Half an hour since brought my report.

Com Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcius, and I have Before-time seen him thus

Mar [Within] Come I too late? 24 Com The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man.

Enter MARCIUS.

Mar Come I too late?
Com Ay, if you come not in the blood of
others 28
But mantled in your own.

Mar O! let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors. 32
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar As with a man busied about decrees Condemning some to death, and some to exile;

Let him alone,
He did inform the truth but for our gentlemen,
The common file—a plague! tribunes for
them!— The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge 44
From rascals worse than they

Com But how prevail'd you?
Mar Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so? 48

Com Marcius, we have at disadvantage
fought,
And did retire to win our purpose

Mar How lies their battle? Know you on which side

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com As I guess, Marcius, 52
Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust, o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope

Mar I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought 56
By the blood we have shed together by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates,
And that you not delay the present but, 60
Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts,
We prove this very hour

Com Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never 64 Deny your asking take your choice of those That best can aid your action.

Mar Those are they
That most are willing If any such be here—
As it were sun to doubt—that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd, if any fear 69
Lesser his person than an ill report,

If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself, 72
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

[They all shout, and wave their swords take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps

O! me alone? Make you a sword of me? 76
If these shows be not outward, which of you But is four Volscies? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, 80 Though thanks to all, must I select from all the rest

Shall bear the business in some other fight,

As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march,
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com March on, my fellows 85
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt]

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon CORIOLI, going with drum and trumpet towards COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart So, let the ports be guarded keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch
Those centuries to our aid, the rest will serve For a short holding if we lose the field, 4
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu Fear not our care, sir
Lart Hence, and shut your gates upon us
Our guider, come, to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt]

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps

Alarum. Enter from opposite sides MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS.

Mar I'll fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker

Auf We hate alike
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy Fix thy foot 4

Mar Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf If I fly, Marcus,
Hailoo me like a hare

Mar Within these three hours, Tullus, 8
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd, 'tis not my
blood

Wherein thou seest me mask'd, for thy revenge Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf Wert thou the Hector 12
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny, Thou shouldst not 'scape me here —

[They fight, and certain Volscies come to the aid of AUFIDIUS
Officious, and not valiant, you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds. 16

[Exeunt fighting, all driven in by MARCIUS]

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp

Alarum A retreat sounded Flourish Enter from one side, COMINIUS and Romans, from the other side, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou'lt not believe thy deeds but I'll report it Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Where great patricians shall attend and shrug,
I' the end, admire, where ladies shall be frighted,

And, gladly quak'd, hear more, where the dull
Tribunes,
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine
honours,
Shall say, against their hearts, 8
'We thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!
Yet can'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully din'd before

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his power, from the pursuit

Lart O general, 12
Here is the steed, we the caparison
Hadst thou beheld —

Mar Pray now, no more my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood, When she does praise me grieves me I have
done

As you have done, that's what I can, induc'd
As you have been, that's for my country 17
He that has but effected his good will Hath overta'en mine act.

Com You shall not be
The grave of your deserving, Rome must know
The value of her own 'twere a concealment 21
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings, and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd, Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech
you, — 25

In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, — before our army hear
me

Mar I have some wounds upon me, and they smart 28
To hear themselves remember'd

Com Should they not.
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude, And tent themselves with death Of all the horses,
Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store, of
all 32

The treasure, in this field achiev'd and city,
We render you the tenth, to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choice

Mar I thank you, general, 36
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword I do refuse it,
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing 40

[A long flourish They all cry 'Marcus! Marcus!' cast up their caps and lances COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare

Mar May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall

I' the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities
be

Made all of false-fac'd soothing! 44
When steel grows soft as is the parasite's silk, Let him be made a coverture for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bled, or soil'd some debile wretch,

Which, without note, here's many else have
done,
You shout me forth
In exclamations hyperbolical,
As if I lov'd my little should be dieted
In praises sauc'd with lies

Com. Too modest are you
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly By your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you, Like one that means his proper harm, in manacles,
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius Wears this war's garland, in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging, and from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear
The addition nobly ever!

All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!
[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums]
Cor. I will go wash,
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive Whether I blush, or no howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition To the farness of my power

Com. So, to our tent,
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.
Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general

Com. Take it, 'tis yours. What is't?
Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house, he us'd me kindly
He cried to me, I saw him prisoner,
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O! well begg'd!
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?
Cor. By Jupiter! forgot.
I am weary, yea, my memory is tir'd.
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent
The blood upon your visage dries, 'tis time
It should be look'd to come.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.
A Flourish. Cornets Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!
First Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.
Auf. Condition!

I would I were a Roman, for I cannot,
Being a Volsc, be that I am. Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I' the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius, I have fought with thee, so often hast thou beat
me,
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his mine emulation Hath not that honour in't it had, for where I thought to crush him in an equal force—True sword to sword—I'll potch at him some way

Or wrath or craft may get him
First Sol. He's the devil Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd
With only suffering stain by him, for him
Shall fly out of itself Nor sleep nor sanctuary, Being naked, sick nor fane nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in 's heart. Go you to the city,

Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must
Be hostages for Rome

First Sol. Will not you go?
Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove I
pray you—

'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey
First Sol. I shall, sir [Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I.—Rome A Public Place

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Bru. Good or bad?
Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their
friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?
Sic. The lamb

Men. Ay, to devour him, as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that bays like a bear

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Sic. Well, sir
Bru. Well, sir

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sic Especially in pride

Bru And topping all others in boasting

Men This is strange now do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you? 26

Both Why, how are we censured?

Men Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both Well, well, sir, well. 30

Men Why, 'tis no great matter, for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures, at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru We do it not alone, sir 37

Men I know you can do very little alone, for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride O! that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves. O! that you could 45

Bru What then, sir?

Men Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates—alias fools—as any in Rome 49

Sic Menenius, you are known well enough too

Men I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in 't, said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint, hasty and tender-like upon too trivial motion, one that converses more with the buttock of the might than with the forehead of the morning What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such weasmen as you are,—I cannot call you Lycurguses,—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worship have delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables, and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they be deadly that tell you have good faces If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your busson conspectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too? 73

Bru Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men You know neither me, yourselves, nor anything. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejoin the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mugglers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing all the peace you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves You are a pair of strange ones 90

Bru Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary benchman in the Capitol 93

Men Our very priests must become mockers if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are When you speak best unto the purpose it is not worth the wagging of your beards, and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass pack-saddle Yet you must be saying Marcius is proud, who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen Good den to your worships more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians I will be bold to take my leave of you [BRUTUS and SICINIUS go aside

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA

How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—whither do you follow your eyes so fast? 111

Vol Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches, for the love of Juno, let's go Men Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol Ay, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation 116

Men Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee Hoo! Marcius coming home!

Vol } Nay, 'tis true

Vir }

Vol Look, here's a letter from him the state hath another, his wife another, and, I think, there's one at home for you

Men I will make my very house reel to-night A letter for me! 124

Vir Yes, certain, there's a letter for you, I saw it.

Men A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health, in which time I will make a lip at the physician the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiric, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded 133

Vir O! no, no, no

Vol O! he is wounded, I thank the gods for't

Men So do I too, if it be not too much Brings a' victory in his pocket? The wounds become him

Vol On 's brows, Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland 140

Men Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol Titus Lartius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off. 143

Men And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that an he had stayed by him I would not have been so fidused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this? 148

Vol Good ladies, let's go Yes, yes, yes, the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war He hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubtly 153

Vol In troth there's wondrous things spoke
of him.
Men Wondrous! ay I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing 157
Vir The gods grant them true!
Vol True! pow wow
Men True! I'll be sworn they are true Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes] God save your good worships! Marcus is coming home he has more cause to be proud. [To VOLUMNIA] Where is he wounded? 164
Vol I the shoulder, and i' the left arm there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body 168 Men One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh, there's none that I know Vol He had before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him. 172 Men Now, it's twenty-seven every gash was an enemy's grave [A shout and flourish]
Hark! the trumpets
Vol These are the ushers of Marcius before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves
tears 178
Death, that dark spirit, in 's nervy arm doth lie, Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men
die
A Sennet Trumpets sound Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS, between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oakengarland, with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald
Her Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight
Within Corioli gates where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Carus Marcius, these In honour follows Coriolanus 184
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
[Flourish]
All Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
Cor No more of this, it does offend my heart Pray now, no more
Com Look, sir, your mother!
Cor O!
You have, I know, petition'd all the gods 189
For my prosperity [Kneels]
Vol Nay, my good soldier, up, My gentle Marcius, worthy Carus, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,— 192
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call thee?
But O! thy wife!—
Cor My gracious silence, hail!
Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd
home,
That weep'd to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, 197
And mothers that lack sons.
Men Now, the gods crown thee!
Cor And live you yet? [To VALERIA.] O my sweet lady, pardon.
Vol I know not where to turn. O! welcome
home, 200

And welcome, general, and ye're welcome all.
Men A hundred thousand welcomes I could
weep,
And I could laugh, I am light, and heavy Welcome
A curse begnaw at very root on 's heart 204
That is not glad to see thee! You are three That Rome should dote on, yet, by the faith of
men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not Be grafted to your relish. Yet, welcome, warriors! 208
We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly
Com Ever right.
Cor Menenius, ever, ever
Her Give way there, and go on!
Cor [To VOLUMNIA and VALERIA] Your hand, and yours 212
Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited,
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours
Vol I have liv'd 216
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy only There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but
Our Rome will cast upon thee
Cor Know, good mother, 220
I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.
Com On to the Capitol!
[Flourish Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before The Tribunes remain Bru All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights 224
Are spectacl'd to see him your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry
While she chats him the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck, 228 Clambering the walls to eye him stalls, bulks, windows,
Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd
With variable complexions, all agreeing 231
In earnestness to see him seld-shown flames
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask in Their nicely-gawdied cheeks to the wanton spoil
Of Phoebus burning kisses such a pothor 237
As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were slyly crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.
Sic On the sudden 240
Cor I warrant him consul.
Bru Then our office may,
During his power go sleep Sic He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won.
Bru In that there's comfort. 245 Sic Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,

But they upon their ancient malice will Forget with the least cause these his new honours, 248
Which that he'll give them, make I as little question
As he is proud to do't.

Bru I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put 252
The napless vesture of humility,
Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths

Sec 'Tis right

Bru It was his word. O! he would miss it rather 256
Than carry it but by the suit o' the gentry to him
And the desire of the nobles

Sec I wish no better Than have him hold that purpose and to put it In execution

Bru 'Tis most like he will. 260

Sec It shall be to him then, as our good wills,
A sure destruction.

Bru So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred 264
He still hath held them, that to his power he would

Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, and Disproportioned their freedoms, holding them,
In human action and capacity, 268
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in the war, who have their provand
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sec This, as you say, suggested 272
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall teach the people—which time shall not want,
If he be put upon 't, and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire 276
To kindle their dry stubble, and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever

Enter a Messenger

Bru What's the matter?

Mess You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis
thought
That Marcius shall be consul. 280
I have seen the dumb men throng to see him, and The blind to hear him speak. matrons flung gloves,

Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers
Upon him as he pass'd, the nobles bended, 284
As to Jove's statue, and the commons made A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts
I never saw the like.

Bru Let's to the Capitol,
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time, 288
But hearts for the event.

Sec Have with you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same The Capitol.

Enter two Officers to lay cushions

First Off Come, come, they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?

Sec Off Three, they say, but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it 4

First Off That's a brave fellow, but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common
people 7

Sec Off Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them, and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore so that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see't 17

First Off If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waded indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm, but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love 26

Sec Off He hath deserved worthily of his country, and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report, but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of in-grateful injury, to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard
it.

First Off No more of him, he is a worthy man make way, they are coming 41

A Sennet Enter, with Lictors before them, COM-NIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, many other Senators, SICINIUS and BRUTUS The Senators take their places, the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves

Men. Having determin'd of the Volscies, and To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting, 44
To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country therefore,
please you,

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general 48
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus, whom We meet here both to thank and to remember
With honours like himself.

First Sen. Speak, good Cominius 53
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. [To the Tribunes]

Masters o' the people, 56
We do request your kindest ears, and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sen We are convented
Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts 60
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly

Bru Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than 64
He hath hereto priz'd them at

Men That's off, that's off
I would you rather had been silent. Please you To hear Cominius speak?

Bru Most willingly,
But yet my caution was more pertinent 68
Than the rebuke you give it

Men He loves your people,
But tie him not to be their bedfellow
Worthy Cominius, speak

[CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away
Nay keep your place

First Sen Sit, Coriolanus, never shame to hear 72
What you have nobly done

Cor Your honours' pardon
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them

Bru Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not 76
Cor No, sir yet oft

When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But your people

I love them as they weigh Men Pray now, sit down

Cor I had rather have one scratch my head
i' the sun 80

When the alarm were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd [Exit

Men Masters of the people
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter — That's thousand to one good one,—when you now see 84

He had rather venture all his limbs for honour
Than one on 's ears to hear it Proceed, Cominius

Com I shall lack voice the deeds of Coriolanus

Should not be utter'd feebly It is held 88
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifies the haver if it be,

The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd At sixteen years, 92

When Tarquim made a head for Rome, he fought Beyond the mark of others our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,

When with his Amazonian chun he drove 96
The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
An o'er-press'd Roman, and i' the consul's view

Slew three opposers Tarquim's self he met,
And struck him on his knee in that day's feats, 100

When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age

Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea, 104
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since

He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last,

Before and in Coriol, let me say
I cannot speak him home he stopp'd the fliers,
And by his rare example made the coward 109
Turn terror into sport as weeds before

A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem his sword, death's stamp, 112

Where it did mark, it took, from face to foot
He was a thing of blood whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying cries alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted

With shunless destiny, address came off 117
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck Coriol like a planet. Now all s his

When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce 120
His ready sense, then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quickened what in flesh was fatigate,

And to the battle came he, where he did
Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if 124
'Twere a perpetual spoil, and till we call'd

Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting

Men Worthy man!
First Sen He cannot but with measure fit the honours 128

Which we devise him
Com Our spoils he kick'd at,
And look'd upon things precious as they were

The common muck o' the world he covets less Than misery itself would give rewards 132
His deeds with doing them and is content

To spend the time to end it Men He's right noble
Let him be call'd for

First Sen Call Coriolanus.
Off He doth appear 136

Re-enter CORIOLANUS

Men The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul

Cor I do owe them stil
My life and services.

Men It then remains
That you do speak to the people

Cor I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot 141
Put on the gown stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage.

please you,
That I may pass this doing

Sic Sir, the people 144
Must have their voices, neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony

Men Put them not to't Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have, 148
Your honour with your form.

Cor It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru [Aside to SICINUS.] Mark you that?
Cor To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus, Show them the unaching scars which I should hide, 153

As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only!

Men Do not stand upon't
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them, and to our noble consul Wish we all joy and honour

Sen To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!
[Flourish. Exeunt all but SICNIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru You see how he intends to use the
people 160

Sic May they perceive 's intent! He will require them,

As if he did condemn what he requested Should be in them to give.

Bru Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here on the market-place
I know they do attend us [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Same The Forum.

Enter several Citizens

First Cit Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

Sec Cit We may, sir, if we will 3

Thud Cit We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do, for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them, so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude, of the which, we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members 14

First Cit And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve, for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude. 18

Thud Cit We have been called so of many,
not that our heads are some brown, some black, some abram, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south, and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass

Sec Cit Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly? 28

Thud Cit Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will, 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head, but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward. 32

Sec Cit Why that way?

Thud Cit To lose itself in a fog, where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife. 37

Sec Cit You are never without your tricks you may, you may

Thud Cit Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man. 43

Re-enter CORIOLANUS, in a gown of humility, and MENENIUS

Here he comes, and in a gown of humility mark his behaviour We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes He's to make his requests by particulars, wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him
All Content, content [Exeunt Citizens

Men O, sir, you are not right have you not known 53

The worstest men have done't?

Cor What must I say?
'I pray, sir,'—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace 'Look, sir, my wounds! 56

I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roar'd and ran
From the noise of our own drums'

Men O me! the gods!
You must not speak of that you must desire
them 60

To think upon you
Cor Think upon me! Hang 'em!
I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men You'll mar all I'll leave you Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray
you, 64

In wholesome manner
Cor Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean [Exit MENENIUS
So, here comes a brace

Re-enter two Citizens

You know the cause, sir, of my standing here?
First Cit We do, sir, tell us what hath brought you to't. 69

Cor Mine own desert.

Sec Cit Your own desert!

Cor Ay, not mine own desire 72

First Cit How! not your own desire?

Cor No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging

First Cit You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you 77

Cor Well, then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?

First Cit The price is, to ask it kindly 80

Cor Kindly! sir, I pray, let me ha't I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. Your good voice, sir, what say you?

Sec Cit You shall ha't, worthy sir 84

Cor A match, sir. There is in all two worthy voices begged I have your aims: adieu.

First Cit But this is something odd

Sec Cit An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter [Exeunt the two Citizens

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul. I have here the customary gown. 92

Thurd Cit You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly

Cor Your emgma? 95

Thurd Cit You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends, you have not indeed loved the common people

Cor You should account me the more virtuous that I have not been common in my love I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly, that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul 110

Fourth Cit We hope to find you our friend, and therefore give you our voices heartily

Thurd Cit You have received many wounds for your country 114

Cor I will not seal your knowledge with showing them I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further 117

Both Cit The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt]

Cor Most sweet voices! Better it is to die, better to starve, 120 Than crave the hire which first we do deserve Why in this woolvish toge should I stand here, To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear, Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to't, What custom wills, in all things should we do't, The dust on antique time would lie unswept, And mountainous error be too highly heap'd For truth to o'er-peer Rather than fool it so, Let the high office and the honour go 129 To one that would do thus I am half through, The one part suffer'd, the other will I do Here come more voices 132

Re-enter three other Citizens

Your voices for your voices I have fought, Watch'd for your voices, for your voices bear Of wounds two dozen odd, battles thrice six I have seen and heard of for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more, your voices 137

Indeed, I would be consul
Fifth Cit He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice 140

Sixth Cit Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All Amen, amen 144
God save thee, noble consul! [Exeunt Citizens.]
Cor Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SCORNUS.

Men You have stood your limitation, and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice remains That, in the official marks invested, you 148 Anon do meet the senate.

Cor Is this done?

Sic The custom of request you have discharged

The people do admit you, and are summon'd To meet anon, upon your approbation. 152

Cor Where? at the senate-house?

Sic There, Coriolanus

Cor May I change these garments?

Sic You may, sir

Cor That I'll straight do, and, knowing myself again, 156

Repair to the senate-house.

Men I'll keep you company Will you along?

Bru We stay here for the people

Sic Fare you well

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS.]

He has it now, and by his looks, methinks, 160

'Tis warm at's heart

Bru With a proud heart he wore

His humble weeds Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens

Sic How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

First Cit He has our voices, sir 164

Bru We pray the gods he may deserve your love

Sec Cit Amen, sir To my poor unworthy notice,

He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices

Thurd Cit Certainly,

He flouted us downright 168

First Cit No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us

Sec Cit Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says

He used us scornfully he should have show'd us His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for's country 172

Sic Why, so he did, I am sure.

All No, no, no man saw 'em.

Thurd Cit He said he had wounds, which he could show in private,

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,

'I would be consul,' says he 'aged custom, 176

But by your voices, will not so permit me,

Your voices therefore 'when we granted that,

Here was, 'I thank you for your voices, thank you,

Your most sweet voices now you have left your voices 180

I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic Why, either were you ignorant to see't,

Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness

To yield your voices?

Bru Could you not have told him

As you were lesson'd, when he had no power, 185

But was a petty servant to the state,

He was your enemy, ever spake against

Your liberties and the charters that you bear

I' the body of the weal, and now, arriving 189

A place of potency and sway o' the state,

If he should still malignantly remain

Fast foe to the plebeian, your voices might 192

Be curses to yourselves? You should have said

That as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and 196
Translate his malice towards you into love, Standing your friendly lord.

Sic Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit
And tried his inclination, from him pluck'd 200 Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to,
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article 204
Tying him to aught, so, putting him to rage, You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelected.

Bru Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt 208
When he did need your loves, and do you think That his contempt shall not be bruising to you When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies

No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic Have you 213
Ere now denied the asker? and now again
Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your su'd-for tongues? 216

Third Cit He s not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

Sec Cit And will deny him

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound First Cit Ay, twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em 220

Bru Get you hence instantly, and tell those
friends,

They have chose a consul that will from them take

Their liberties, make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking 224
As therefore kept to do so

Sic Let them assemble,
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you, besides, forget
not 228

With what contempt he wore the humble weed,
How in his suit he scorn'd you, but your loves, Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance, 232
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes, that we labour'd — No impediment between,—but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic Say, you chose him 237
More after our commandment than as guided By your own true affections, and that, your minds,

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do 240
That what you should, made you against the gram

To voice him consul, lay the fault on us.

Bru Ay, spare us not, Say we read lectures to you.

How youngly he began to serve his country, 244
How long continu'd, and what stock he springs of,
The noble house o' the Marcians, from whence came

That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king, 248
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither,
And Censorinus, that was so surnam'd,—
And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,— 252
Was his great ancestor

Sic One thus descended,
That hath, beside, well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances but you have found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past, 257
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation

Bru Say you ne'er had done 't—
Harp on that still—but by our putting on, 260 And presently, when you have drawn your number,

Repair to the Capitol

All We will so, almost all Repent in their election [Exeunt Citizens]

Bru Let them go on,
This mutiny were better put in hazard 264
Than stay, past doubt, for greater

If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger

Sic To the Capitol, come 268
We will be there before the stream o' the people,
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt]

ACT III

SCENE I—Rome A Street

Cornets Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COM-NIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Senators, and Patricians

Cor Tullus Aufidius then had made new
head?

Lart He had, my lord, and that it was which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor So then the Volscies stand but as at first, Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road 5
Upon 's again.

Com They are worn, lord consul, so That we shall hardly in our ages see Their banners wave again.

Cor Saw you Aufidius? 8
Lart On safe-guard he came to me, and did
curse

Against the Volscies, for they had so vilely Yielded the town—he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor Spoke he of me?

Lart He did, my lord

Cor How? what? 12

Lart How often he had met you, sword to
sword;

That of all things upon the earth he hated

Your person most, that he would pawn his fortunes
 To hopeless restitution, so he might 16
 Be call'd your vanquisher Cor At Antium lives he?
Lart At Antium
Cor I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
 To oppose his hatred fully Welcome home 20

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
 The tongues o' the common mouth I do despise
 them,

For they do prank them in authority
 Against all noble sufferance

Sic Pass no further 24

Cor Ha! what is that?

Bru It will be dangerous to go on no further

Cor What makes this change?

Men The matter?

Com Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common? 28

Bru Commus no

Cor Have I had children's voices?

First Sen Tribunes, give way, he shall to the market-place

Bru The people are incens'd against him

Sic Stop,

Or all will fall in broil

Cor Are these your herd? 32

Must these have voices, that can yield them now,

And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Men Be calm, be calm 36

Cor It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,

To curb the will of the nobility

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule

Nor ever will be rul'd

Bru Call t not a plot 40

The people cry you mock'd them, and of late,

When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd,

Scandal'd the suppliants for the people, call'd

them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness 44

Cor Why, this was known before

Bru Not to them all

Cor Have you inform'd them sithence?

Bru How! I inform them!

Cor You are like to do such business.

Bru Not unlike,

Each way, to better yours. 48

Cor Why then should I be consul? By yond

clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me

Your fellow tribune

Sic You show too much of that

For which the people stir, if you will pass 52

To where you are bound, you must inquire your

way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,

Or never be so noble as a consul,

Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm. 56

Com The people are abus'd, set on. This paltering
 Becomes not Rome, nor has Coriolanus
 Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
 I' the plain way of his merit

Cor Tell me of corn! 60

This was my speech, and I will speak t again —

Men Not now, not now

First Sen Not in this heat, sir, now

Cor Now, as I live, I will Mynobler friends,

I crave their pardons 64

For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them

Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves I say again,

In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate

The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, 69

Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number,

Who lack'd not virtue no, nor power, but that

Which they have given to beggars

Men Well, no more. 73

First Sen No more words, we beseech you

Cor How! no more!

As for my country I have shed my blood,

Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs 76

Com words till they decay against those measles,

Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought

The very way to catch them

Bru You speak o' the people,

As if you were a god to punish, not 80

A man of their infirmity

Sic 'Twere well

We let the people know't.

Men What, what? his choler?

Cor Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, 84

By Jove, 'twould be my mind!

Sic It is a mind

That shall remain a poison where it is,

Not poison any further

Cor Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark 88

you

His absolute 'shall?'

Com. 'Twas from the canon

Cor 'Shall!'

O good but most unwise patricians! why,

You grave but reckless senators, have you thus

Given Hydra here to choose an officer, 92

That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but

The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants not spirit

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,

And make your channel his? If he have power,

Then vail your ignorance, if none, awake 97

Your dangerous lenity If you are learned,

Be not as common fools, if you are not,

Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians 100

If they be senators, and they are no less,

When, both your voices blended, the great'st

taste

Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate,

And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,' 104
 His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench
 Than ever frown'd in Greece By Jove himself!
 It makes the consuls base, and my soul aches
 To know, when two authorities are up, 108
 Neither supreme, how soon confusion
 May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
 The one by the other

Com Well, on to the market-place
Cor Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
 The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd Sometime in Greece,—

Men Well, well, no more of that.
Cor Though there the people had more absolute power,

I say, they nourish d disobedience, fed 116
 The rum of the state

Bru Why, shall the people give
 One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor I'll give my reasons,
 More worthier than their voices. They know the corn 119

Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd They ne'er did service for't Being press'd to the war,

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
 They would not thread the gates this kind of
 service 123

Did not deserve corn gratis Being i' the war,
 Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd Most valour, spoke not for them. The accusation

Which they have often made against the senate,
 All cause unborn, could never be the motive 128
 Of our so frank donation Well, what then?
 How shall this bisson multitude digest

The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words 'We did request
 it, 132

We are the greater poll, and in true fear
 They gave us our demands.' Thus we debase
 The nature of our seats, and make the rabble Call our cares, fears, which will in time break ope 136

The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
 To peck the eagles.

Men Come, enough.

Bru Enough, with over-measure.

Cor No, take more
 What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
 Seal what I end withal! Thus double worship, 141 Where one part does disdain with cause, the other

Insult without all reason, where gentry, title,
 wisdom,

Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no 144
 Of general ignorance,—it must omit

Real necessities, and give way the while To unstable slightness purpose so barr'd, it follows

Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
 you, 148

You that will be less fearful than discreet,
 That love the fundamental part of state
 More than you doubt the change on't, that prefer

A noble life before a long, and wish 152
 To jump a body with a dangerous physic
 That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
 The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
 The sweet which is their poison Your dis-
 honour 156

Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
 Of that integrity which should become it,
 Not having the power to do the good it would,
 For the ill which doth control it

Bru He has said enough 160
Sic He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer

 As traitors do

Cor Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!
 What should the people do with these bald
 tribunes? 164

On whom depending, their obedience fails
 To the greater bench In a rebellion, When what's not meet, but what must be, was
 law,

Then were they chosen in a better hour, 168
 Let what is meet be said it must be meet,
 And throw their power i' the dust

Bru Manifest treason!
Sic Thus a consul? no

Bru The ædiles, ho! Let him be apprehended. 172

Enter an Ædile

Sic Go, call the people, [Exit Ædile] in whose name, myself

Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
 A foe to the public weal obey, I charge thee,
 And follow to thine answer

Cor Hence, old goat! 176
Sen We'll surety him.

Com Aged sir, hands off
Cor Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones

Out of thy garments
Sic Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter Ædiles, with Others, and a rabble of Citizens

Men On both sides more respect 180
Sic Here's he that would take from you all your power

Bru Seize him, ædiles!
Citizens Down with him!—down with him!—

Sen Weapons!—weapons!—weapons!—184
 [They all bustle about CORIOLANUS, crying

Tribunes!—patricians!—citizens!—What ho!—
Sicinius!—Brutus!—Coriolanus!—Citizens!

Peace!—Peace!—Peace!—Stay!—Hold!—Peace!
Men What is about to be?—I am out of
 breath, 188

Confusion's near, I cannot speak. You, tribunes

To the people! Coriolanus, patience!
 Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic Hear me, people peace!
Citizens Let's hear our tribune—Peace!—

Speak, speak, speak. 192
Sic You are at point to lose your liberties

Marcus would have all from you Marcus, Whom late you have nam'd for consul

Men Fie, fie, fie!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench
First Sen To unbuild the city and to lay all flat.

Sic What is the city but the people?
Citizens True,

The people are the city
Bru By the consent of all, we were establish'd

The people's magistrates Citizens You so remain. 201

Men And so are like to do
Com That is the way to lay the city flat,

To bring the roof to the foundation, 204
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin

Sic This deserves death
Bru Or let us stand to our authority,

Or let us lose it We do here pronounce, 208
Upon the part of the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcus is worthy

Of present death
Sic Therefore lay hold of him

Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him

Bru Ediles, seize him! 213 Citizens Yield, Marcus, yield!

Men Hear me one word,
Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word

Ed Peace peace! 216 Men Be that you seem, truly your country's

friends,
And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru Sir, those cold ways

That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon

him 221
And bear him to the rock

Cor No, I'll die here
[Drawing his sword]

There's some among you have beheld me fighting

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen
me 224

Men Down with that word! Tribunes, withdraw awhile

Bru Lay hands upon him.
Men Help Marcus, help,

You that be noble, help him, young and old!
Citizens Down with him!—down with him!

[In this mutiny the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the People are beat in Men Go, get you to your house, be gone, 229

away!

All will be naught else.
Sec Sen Get you gone.

Cor Stand fast,
We have as many friends as enemies.

Men Shall it be put to that?
First Sen The gods forbid!

I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house, 233
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men For 'tis a sore upon us,
You cannot tent yourself, be gone, beseech you

Com Come, sir, along with us. 236 Cor I would they were barbarians,—as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd,—not Romans,—as they are not,

Though cal'd i' the porch o' the Capitol,—

Men Be gone
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue, 240

One time will owe another Cor On fair ground

I could beat forty of them
Men I could myself

Take up a brace of the best of them, yea, the two tribunes

Com But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic,
And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands 245

Against a falling fabric. Will you hence,
Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend

Like interrupted waters and o'erbear 248
What they are us'd to bear

Men Pray you be gone.
I'll try whether my old wit be in request

With those that have but little this must be patch'd

With cloth of any colour
Com Nay, come away 252

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, and Others
First Pat This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men His nature is too noble for the world
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,

Or Jove for s power to thunder His heart's his mouth 256

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent,

And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. [A noise within]

Here's goodly work!
Sec Pat I would they were a-bed!

Men I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance! 261

Could he not speak 'em fair?
Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the rabble

Sic Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city and

Be every man himself?
Men You worthy tribunes,—

Sic He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian
rock 265

With rigorous hands he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial

Than the severity of the public power, 268
Which he so sets at nought.

First Cit He shall well know
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,

And we their hands.
Citizens He shall, sure on't.

Men Sir, sir,— 272

Sic Peace!
Men Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic Sir, how comes 't that you Have help to make this rescue?

Men Hear me speak
As I do know the consul's worthiness, 276

So can I name his faults.

Sic Consul! what consul?

Men The Consul Coriolanus.

Bru He consul!

Citizens No, no, no, no, no

Men If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people,

I may be heard, I would crave a word or two,
The which shall turn you to no further harm
Than so much loss of time

Sic Speak briefly then,
For we are peremptory to dispatch

This viperous traitor To eject him hence

Were but one danger, and to keep him here

Our certain death, therefore it is decreed

He dies to-night.

Men Now the good gods forbid

That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude

Towards her deserved children is enroll'd

In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam Should now eat up her own!

Sic He's a disease that must be cut away

Men O! he's a limb that has but a disease,

Mortal to cut it off, to cure it easy

What has he done to Rome that's worthy
death?

Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost,—

Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath

By many an ounce,—he dropp'd it for his country.

And what is left, to lose it by his country

Were to us all, that do't and suffer it,

A brand to th' end o' the world

Sic This is clean kam

Bru Merely awry. when he did love his country

It honour'd him.

Men The service of the foot

Being once gangren'd, is not then respected

For what before it was.

Bru We'll hear no more.

Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence,

Lest his infection, being of catching nature,

Spread further

Men One word more, one word.

This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find

The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late,

Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by process,

Lest parties—as he is belov'd—break out,

And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru If 'twere so,—

Sic What do ye talk?

Have we not had a taste of his obedience?

Our ædiles smote? ourselves resisted? Come!

Men Consider this he has been bred i' the

wars

Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd

In bolted language, meal and bran together

He throws without distinction. Give me leave,

I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him

Where he shall answer by a lawful form,—

In peace,—to his utmost peril.

First Sen. Noble tribunes,

It is the humane way the other course

Will prove too bloody, and the end of it

Unknown to the beginning

Sic Noble Menenius,

Be you then as the people's officer

Masters, lay down your weapons

Bru Go not home

Sic Meet on the market-place We'll attend

you there

Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed

In our first way

Men I'll bring him to you.

[To the Senators] Let me desire your company

He must come,

Or what is worst will follow

First Sen Pray you, let's to him

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same A Room in CORIO-LANUS'S House

Enter CORIOLANUS and PATRICIANS

Cor Let them pull all about mine ears, present me

Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels,

Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,

That the precipitation might down stretch

Below the beam of sight, yet will I still

Be thus to them

First Pat You do the nobler

Cor I muse my mother

Does not approve me further, who was wont

To call them woollen vassals, things created

To buy and sell with groats, to show bare heads

In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,

When one but of my ordinance stood up

To speak of peace or war

Enter VOLUMNIA

I talk of you

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have

me

False to my nature? Rather say I play

The man I am.

Vol O! sir, sir, sir,

I would have had you put your power well on

Before you had worn it out

Cor Let go

Vol You might have been enough the man you are

With striving less to be so lesser had been so

The thwarting of your dispositions if You had not show'd them how you were dis-

pos'd,

Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor Let them hang

Vol Ay, and burn too

24

Enter MENENIUS and Senators.

Men Come, come, you have been too rough,

something too rough,

You must return and mend it.

First Sen. There's no remedy,

Unless, by not so doing, our good city

Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsel'd.

I have a heart of mettle apt as yours,

But yet a brain that leads my use of anger

To better vantage

Men Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but
that

The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear

Cor What must I do?

Men Return to the tribunes

Cor Well, what then? what then? 36

Men Repeat what you have spoke

Cor For them! I cannot do it to the gods,

Must I then do it to them?

Vol You are too absolute,

Though therein you can never be too noble, 40

But when extremities speak I have heard you

say,

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,

I the war do grow together grant that, and tell me

In peace what each of them by th' other lose, 44

That they combine not there

Cor Tush, tush!

Men A good demand

Vol If it be honour in your wars to seem

The same you are not—which for your best

ends,

You adopt your policy,—how is it less or worse

That it shall hold companionship in peace 49

With honour as in war since that to both

It stands in like request?

Cor Why force you this?

Vol Because that now it lies you on to

speak 52

To the people, not by your own instruction

Nor by the matter which your heart prompts

you

But with such words that are but rooted in

Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables

Of no allowance to your bosom's truth 57

Now, this no more dishonours you at all

Than to take in a town with gentle words,

Which else would put you to your fortune and

The hazard of much blood 61

I would dissemble with my nature where

My fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd

I should do so in honour I am in this, 64

Your wife your son, these senators, the nobles,

And you will rather show our general louts

How you can frown than spend a fawn upon

'em,

For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard 68

Of what that want might ruin.

Men Noble lady!

Come, go with us, speak fair, you may save so,

Not what is dangerous present, but the loss

Of what is past.

Vol I prithee now, my son, 72

Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand,

And thus far having stretch'd it,—here be with

them,

Thy knee bussing the stones,—for in such business

Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant 76

More learned than the ears,—waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling or say to them, Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess Were fit for thee to use as they to claim,
In asking their good loves, but thou wilt frame Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far 85
As thou hast power and person

Men This but done, Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were
yours,

For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free 88
As words to little purpose

Vol Prithee now,

Go and be rul'd, although I know thou hadst

rather

Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf

Than flatter him in a bower Here is Cominius

Enter COMINIUS

Com I have been i the market-place, and,
sir, 'tis fit 93

You make strong party, or defend yourself

By calmness or by absence all's in anger

Men Only fair speech

Com I think 'twill serve if he 96

Can thereto frame his spirit

Vol He must and will

Prithee now, say you will and go about it

Cor Must I go show them my unbarbed sconce?

Must I with my base tongue give to my noble

heart 100

A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't

Yet, were there but this single plot to lose,

This mould of Marcus, they to dust should grind it, 104

And throw't against the wind To the market-

place! 104

You have put me now to such a part which never

I shall discharge to the life

Com Come, come, we'll prompt you

Vol I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast

said

My praises made thee first a soldier, so, 108

To have my praise for this, perform a part

Thou hast not done before

Cor Well, I must do't

Away, my disposition, and possess me

Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd, 113

Which quired with my drum, into a pipe

Small as a eunuch, or the virgin voice

That babies lull asleep! The smiles of knaves

Tent in my cheeks, and school-boys' tears take

up 116

The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue

Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees,

Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his

That hath receiv'd an aim! I will not do't, 120

Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,

And by my body's action teach my mind

A most inherent baseness

Vol At thy choice then
To beg of thee it is my more dishonour 124 Than thou of them Come all to run, let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness, for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list, 128 Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it
from me,
But owe thy pride thyself

Cor Pray, be content
Mother, I am going to the market-place, Chide me no more I'll mountebank their loves, 132
Cog their hearts from them, and come home below d
Of all the trades in Rome Look, I am going Commend me to my wife I'll return consul,
Or never trust to what my tongue can do 136
I' the way of flattery further

Vol Do your will. [Exit arm yourself

To answer mildly, for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong 140
Than are upon you yet.

Men The word is 'mildly'

Cor Pray you, let us go
Let them accuse me by invention, I Will answer in mine honour

Men Ay, but mildly 144
Cor Well, mildly be it then. Mildly!

[Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The Same The Forum

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannical power if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antiates 4
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come?

Æd He's coming.

Bru How accompanied?

Æd With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic Have you a catalogue 8
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?

Æd I have, 'tis ready

Sic Have you collected them by tribes?

Æd I have.

Sic Assemble presently the people hither, 12
And when they hear me say, 'It shall be so,
I' the right and strength o' the commons,' be it either

For death, for fine, or banishment, then let
them,

If I say, fine, cry 'fine,'—if death, cry 'death,' 16
Insisting on the old prerogative

And power i' the truth o' the cause.

Æd I shall inform them.

Bru And when such time they have begun to cry,

Let them not cease, but with a dim confus'd 20
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence

Æd Very well

Sic Make them be strong and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give t them.

Bru Go about it 24

[Exit Ædile]

Put him to choler straight. He hath been us d
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth Of contradiction being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein d again to temperance, then he speaks What's in his heart, and that is there which looks 29

With us to break his neck.

Sic Well, here he comes

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, Senators, and Patricians

Men Calmly, I do beseech you

Cor Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece 32

Will bear the knave by the volume. The honour'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice Supplied with worthymen! plant love among us!

Throng our large temples with the shows of
peace, 36

And not our streets with war!

First Sen

Amen, amen.

Men A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic Draw near, ye people

Æd List to your tribunes, audience, peace!

I say

Cor First, hear me speak.

Both Tri Well, say Peace, ho! 40

Cor Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?

Must all determine here?

Sic I do demand,

If you submit you to the people's voices,

Allow their officers, and are content 44

To suffer lawful censure for such faults

As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor I am content.

Men Lo! citizens, he says he is content
The war-like service he has done, consider, 48

Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.

Cor Scratches with briers,

Scars to move laughter only

Men Consider further,

That when he speaks not like a citizen, 52

You find him like a soldier do not take

His rougher accents for malicious sounds,

But, as I say, such as become a soldier,

Rather than envy you.

Com.

Well, well, no more. 56

Cor What is the matter,

That being pass'd for consul with full voice

I am so dishonour'd that the very hour
You take it off again?

Sic Answer to us 60
Cor Say, then 'tis true, I ought so Sic We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind Yourself into a power tyrannical, 64
For which you are a traitor to the people

Cor How! Traitor!

Men Nay, temperately, your promise

Cor The fires! the lowest hell fold-in the people!

Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say

'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free 72
As I do pray the gods

Sic Mark you this, people?

Citizens To the rock!—to the rock with him!

Sic Peace!

We need not put new matter to his charge

What you have seen him do, and heard him

speak, 76

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,

Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying

Those whose great power must try him, even

this, 80

So criminal and in such capital kind,

Deserves the extremest death

Bru But since he hath

Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor What do you prate of service?

Bru I talk of that, that know it.

Cor You!

Men Is this the promise that you made your

mother? 84

Cor Know, I pray you —

Cor I'll know no further

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,

Vagabond exile flaying pent to linger

But with a grain a day, I would not buy 88

Their mercy at the price of one fair word,

Nor check my courage for what they can give,

To have 't with saying Good morrow!

Sic For that he has,—

As much as in him lies,—from time to time 92

Envied against the people, seeking means

To pluck away their power as now at last

Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers 96

That do distribute it in the name of the people,

And in the power of us the tribunes, we,

Even from this instant, banish him our city,

In peril of precipitation 100

From off the rock Tarpeian, never more

To enter our Rome gates! the people's name,

I say, it shall be so Citizens It shall be so,—It shall be so,—Let him away — 104

He's banish'd, and it shall be so

Com Hear me, my masters, and my common friends,—

Sic He's sentenc'd, no more hearing.

Com

I have been consul, and can show for Rome 108

Her enemies' marks upon me I do love

My country's good with a respect more tender,

More holy, and profound, than mine own life,

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,

And treasure of my loins, then if I would 113

Speak that—

Sic We know your drift speak what?

Bru There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people and his country 116

It shall be so

Citizens It shall be so,—it shall be so

Cor You common cry of curs! whose breath

I hate

As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcasses of unburied men 120

That do corrupt my air, I banish you

And here remain with your uncertainty!

Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!

Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes, 124

Fan you into despair! Have the power still

To banish your defenders, till at length

Your ignorance,—which finds not, till it feels,—

Making but reservation of yourselves — 128

Still your own foes,—deliver you as most

Abated captives to some nation

That won you without blows! Despising,

For you, the city, thus I turn my back 132

There's a world elsewhere

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS,

Senators, and Patricians]

Ed The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Citizens Our enemy is banish'd—he is gone!—Hoo! hoo!

[They all shout and throw up their caps]

Sic Go, see him out at gates and follow him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite, 137

Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard

Attend us through the city

Citizens Come, come,—let us see him out at gates! come! 140

The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come!

[Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Rome Before a Gate of the City

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENE-

NIUS, COMINIUS, and several young Patricians.

Cor Come, leave your tears a brief farewell

the beast

With many heads butts me away Nay, mother,

Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd,

To say extremity was the trier of spirits 4

That common chances common men could bear,

That when the sea was calm all boats alike

Show'd mastership in floating, fortune's blows,

When most struck home, being gentle wounded

craves 8

A noble cunning you were us'd to load me

With precepts that would make invincible

The heart that could not them.

Vir O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—!

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,

And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother, Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat. Commius, Droop not, adieu. Farewell, my wife! my mother!

I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius, Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime
general,

I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hardening spectacles, tell these sad
women

'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes
As 'tis to laugh at them. My mother, you wot
well

My hazards still have been your solace, and Believe 't not lightly,—though I go alone
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen,—
your son

Will or exceed the common or be caught
With cautious baits and practice

Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Commius
With thee awhile, determine on some course,
More than a wild exposure to each chance
That starts i' the way before thee

Cor. O the gods!
Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with
thee

Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of us,
And we of thee. So, if the time thrust forth A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needier

Cor. Fare ye well
Thou hast years upon thee, and thou art too full Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one That's yet unbruised. Bring me but out at gate Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and My friends of noble touch, when I am forth, Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground you shall Hear from me still, and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods, I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand
Com. IExeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINUS, BRUTUS, and an Ædile

Sic. Bid them all home, he's gone, and we'll no further

The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided
In his behalf

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done

Than when it was a-doing Sic. Bid them home, Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength

Bru. Dismiss them home
[Exit Ædile]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS

Here comes his mother

Sic. Let's not meet her
Bru. Why?

Sic. They say she's mad Bru. They have taken note of us. Keep on your way

Vol. O! you're well met. The hoarded plague o' the gods
Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace! be not so loud Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—

Nay, and you shall hear some [To BRUTUS]
Will you be gone?

Vir. [To SICINUS] You shall stay too. I would I had the power
To say so to my husband

Sic. Are you mankind?
Vol. Ay, fool, is that a shame? Note but this fool

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!
Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise
words,

And for Rome's good I'll tell thee what, yet go

Nay, but thou shalt stay too. I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand

Sic. What then?
Vir. What then!

He'd make an end of thy posterity
Vol. Bastards and all

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for
Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace!
Sic. I would be had continu'd to his country
As he began, and not unknot himself

The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had
Vol. 'I would he had!' 'Twas you incens'd the rabble

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know

Bru. Pray, let us go
Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear
this

As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome so far my son,—

This lady's husband here, this, do you see,—

Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru Well, well, we'll leave you

Sic Why stay we to be baited

With one that wants her wits?

Vol Take my prayers with you

[Exeunt Tribunes]

I would the gods had nothing else to do

But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em

But once a day, it would unclog my heart

Of what lies heavy to t.

Men You have told them home,

And by my troth, you have cause You'll sup

with me?

Vol Anger's my meat I sup upon myself,

And so shall starve with feeding Come let s

go

Leave this faint puling and lament as I do, 52

In anger Juno-like Come, come, come

Men Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt]

SCENE III — A Highway between Rome and Antium

Enter a Roman and a Volscian, meeting

Rom I know you well, sir, and you know me your name I think is Adrian

Vol It is so, sir truly I have forgot you

Rom I am a Roman, and my services are, as you are against 'em know you me yet? 5

Vol Nicanor? No

Rom The same, sir

Vol You had more beard, when I last saw you, but your favour as well approved by your tongue What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state to find you out there you have well saved me a day's journey

Rom There hath been in Rome strange insurrections the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles 15

Vol Hath been? Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so, they are in a most war-like preparation and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division 19

Rom The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe apt-ness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol Coriolanus banished? 28

Rom Banished, sir

Vol You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor 31

Rom The day serves well for them now I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer,

Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country 38

Vol He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home. 42

Rom I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome, all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you? 46

Vol A most royal one the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning 50

Rom I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action So sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company

Vol You take my part from me sir, I have the most cause to be glad of yours 56

Rom Well, let us go together [Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Antium Before AUFIDIUS' House

Enter CORIOLANUS in mean apparel, disguised and muffled

Cor A goodly city is this Antium City, 'Tis I that made thy widows many an heir Of these fair edifices fore my wars

Have I heard groan and drop then, know me not, 4

Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones

In puny battle slay me

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir

Cit And you

Cor Direct me if it be your will Where great Aufidius lies Is he in Antium? 8

Cit He is, and feasts the nobles of the state At his house this night

Cor Which is his house, beseech you?

Cit This, here before you

Cor Thank you, sir Farewell.

[Exit Citizen]

O world! thy slippery turns. Friends now fast sworn, 12

Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart,

Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,

Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love

Unseparable, shall within this hour, 16

On a dissension of a doit, break out

To bitterest enmity so, fellest foes,

Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep

To take the one the other, by some chance, 20

Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear

friends

And interjoin their issues. So with me

My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon

This enemy town I'll enter if he slay me, 24

He does fair justice, if he give me way,

I'll do his country service. [Exit]

SCENE V — The Same A Hall in AUFIDIUS' House

Music within. Enter a Servingman.

First Serv Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit]

Enter a Second Servingman.

Sec Serv Where's Cotus? my master calls for him. Cotus! [Exit]

Enter CORIOLANUS

Cor A goodly house the feast smells well, but I Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the First Servingman.

First Serv What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you pray, go to the door [Exit]

Cor I have deserv'd no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus

Re-enter Second Servingman.

Sec Serv Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out

Cor Away!

Sec Serv 'Away!' Get you away

Cor Now, thou art troublesome

Sec Serv Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a Third Servingman Re-enter the First

Third Serv What fellow's this?

First Serv A strange one as ever I looked on I cannot get him out o' the house prithee, call my master to him

Third Serv What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house

Cor Let me but stand, I will not hurt your hearth

Third Serv What are you?

Cor A gentleman

Third Serv A marvellous poor one

Cor True, so I am

Third Serv Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station, here's no place for you, pray you, avoid come

Cor Follow your function, go, and batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away]

Third Serv What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here

Sec Serv And I shall. [Exit]

Third Serv Where dwell'st thou?

Cor Under the canopy

Third Serv 'Under the canopy!'

Cor Ay

Third Serv Where's that?

Cor 'I' the city of kites and crows

Third Serv 'I' the city of kites and crows! What an ass it is! Then thou dwell'st with daws too?

Cor No, I serve not thy master

Third Serv How sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor Ay, 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress.

Thou pratt'st, and pratt'st serve with thy trencher Hence. [Beats him away.]

Enter AUFIDIUS and First Servingman.

Auf Where is this fellow?

Sec Serv Here, sir I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within Auf Whence com'st thou? what wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man what's thy name?

Cor [Unmuffling] If, Tullus, Not yett thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am necessity

Commands me name myself

Auf

What is thy name?

[Servants retire]

Cor A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears, And harsh in sound to thine

Auf

Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face Bears a command in't, though thy tackle's torn,

Thou show'st a noble vessel What's thy name?

Cor Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet?

Auf

I know thee not Thy name?

Cor My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces, Great hurt and mischief, thereto witness may

My surname, Coriolanus the painful service, The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood Shed for my thankless country, are requested But with that surname, a good memory,

And witness of the malice and displeasure Which thou shouldst bear me only that name remains,

The cruelty and envy of the people,

Permitted by our dastard nobles, who Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest,

And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome Now this extremity

Hath brought me to thy hearth, not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life, for if I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world I would have voided thee, but in mere spite,

To be full quit of those my banishers, Stand I before thee here Then if thou hast

A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims

Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn so use it, That my revengful services may prove

As benefits to thee, for I will fight Agamst my canker'd country with the spleen

Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more

fortunes

Thou art tir'd, then, in a word I also am Longer to live most weary, and present

My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice, Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,

Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast;

And cannot live but to thy shame, unless It be to do thee service

Auf O Marcius, Marcius!
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from
my heart 108

A root of ancient envy If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say, 'Tis true' I did not believe them more Than thee, all noble Marcius Let me twine Mine arms about that body, where against 113
My grained ash a hundred times hath broke,
And scarr'd the moon with splinters here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest 116
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitious strength I did

Contend against thy valour Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married never man 120
Sigh'd truer breath, but that I see thee here
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold Why, thou Mars! I tell
thee 124

We have a power on foot and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,
Or lose mine arm for't Thou hast beat me out 127
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters twixt thyself and me,
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms fisting each other's throat
And wak'd half dead with nothing Worthy Marcius, 132

Had we no quarrel else to Rome but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy, and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, 136
Like a bold flood o'er-bear O! come, go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands,
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories, 140
Though not for Rome itself

Cor You bless me gods!
Auf Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges take
The one half of my commission, and set down,
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st Thy country's strength and weakness, thine own ways,

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote, 148
To fright them ere destroy But come in Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy, 152 Yet, Marcius, that was much Your hand
most welcome!

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS]

First Serv [Advancing] Here's a strange alteration!

Sec Serv By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a cudgel, and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of
him 159

First Serv What an arm he has! He turn'd me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

Sec Serv Nay I knew by his face that there was something in him he had, sir a kind of face me-hought—I cannot tell how to term it 165

First Serv He had so, looking as it were—would I were hanged but I thought there was more in him than I could think 168

Sec Serv So did I! I besworn he is simply the rarest man in the world

First Serv I think he is, but a greater soldier than he you wot on 172

Sec Serv Who? my master?

First Serv Nay it's no matter for that

Sec Serv Worth six on him

First Serv Nay not so neither, but I take him to be the greater soldier 177

Sec Serv Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that for the defence of a town our general is excellent 180

First Serv Ay, and for an assault too

Re-enter Third Servingman.

Third Serv O slaves! I can tell you news news, you rascals

First Serv } What, what, what? let's partake
Sec Serv }

Third Serv I would not be a Roman, of all nations, I had as lief be a condemned man 186

First Serv } Wherefore? wherefore?
Sec Serv }

Third Serv Why here's he that was wont to thwack our general, Caius Marcius

First Serv Why do you say 'thwack our
general?' 191

Third Serv I do not say thwack our general but he was always good enough for him

Sec Serv Come, we are fellows and friends he was ever too hard for him, I have heard him say so himself 196

First Serv He was too hard for him—directly to say the truth on't before Coriolanus scotched him and notched him like a carbonado

Sec Serv An he had been cannibally given, he might have broil'd and eaten him too 201

First Serv But, more of thy news

Third Serv Why he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars set at upper end o' the table no question asked him by any of the senators but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him, sanctifies himself with a hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse But the bottom of the news is our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table He'll go, he says, and sowle the porter of Rome gates by the ears he will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled 216

Sec Serv And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine

Third Serv Do it! he will do't, for—look you, sir—he has as many friends as enemies which friends, sir—as it were—durst not—look you, sir—show themselves—as we term it—his friends, whilst he is in directitude.

First Serv Directitude! what's that? 224

Sec Serv But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and reveal all with him 228

First Serv But when goes this forward?

Thurd Serv To-morrow, to-day, presently You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon, 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips. 233

Sec Serv Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers

First Serv Let me have war, say I, it exceeds peace as far as day does night, it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy, muffled, deaf, sleepy, insensible, a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men. 242

Sec Serv 'Tis so and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds

First Serv Ay, and it makes men hate one another 247

Thurd Serv Reason because they then less need one another The wars for my money I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians They are rising, they are rising 251

All In, in, in, in! [Exeunt

SCENE VI — Rome A Public Place

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS

Sic We hear not of him, neither need we fear him,

His remedies are tame i' the present peace And quietness o' the people, which before Were in wild hurry Here do we make his friends 4

Blush that the world goes well, who rather had Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see Our tradesmen singing in their shops and going About their functions friendly 9

Enter MENENIUS.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he O! he is grown most kind Of late. Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both! 12

Sic Your Coriolanus is not much muss'd But with his friends the commonwealth doth stand,

And so would do, were he more angry at it. Men. All's well, and might have been much better, if 16

He could have temporiz'd.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing his mother and his wife Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good den, our neighbours. 20

Bru. Good den to you all, good den to you all.

First Cit Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both

Sic Live, and thrive! Bru Farewell, kind neighbours we wish'd Coriolanus 24

Had lov'd you as we did

Citizens Now the gods keep you!

Sic Farewell, farewell [Exeunt Citizens.

Bru This is a happier and more comely time Than when these fellows ran about the streets Crying confusion.

Bru Caus Marcius was 29 A worthy officer i' the war, but insolent, O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking, Self-loving,—

Sic And affecting one sole throne, 32 Without assistance

Men. I think not so

Sic We should by this, to all our lamentation, If he had gone forth consul, found it so Bru The gods have well prevented it, and Rome 36 Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Ædile

Æd Worthy tribunes, There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, Reports, the Volscs with two several powers Are enter'd in the Roman territories, 40 And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before them

Men 'Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world, 44 Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome,

And durst not once peep out

Sic Come, what talk you of Marcius?

Bru Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be 48 The Volscs dare break with us

Men. Cannot be!

We have record that very well it can, And three examples of the like have been Within my age But reason with the fellow, 52 Before you punish him, where he heard this, Lest you shall chance to whip your information, And beat the messenger who bids beware Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic Tell not me: 56 I know this cannot be

Bru. Not possible

Enter a Messenger

Mess The nobles in great earnestness are going All to the senate-house some news is come, That turns their countenances

Sic 'Tis this slave — 60 Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes his raising, Nothing but his report.

Mess Yes, worthy sir, The slave's report is seconded, and more,

More fearful, is deliver'd

Sic What more fearful? 64

Mess It spoke freely out of many mouths—
How probable I do not know—that Marcus, Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst
Rome,

And vows revenge as spacious as between 68
The young'st and oldest thing

Sic This is most likely

Bru Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish

Good Marcus home again

Sic The very trick on't.

Men This is unlikely 72
He and Aufidius can no more atone,
Than violentest contrariety

Enter another Messenger

Sec Mess You are sent for to the senate
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius, 76
Associated with Aufidius rages
Upon our territories, and have already O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them 80

Enter COMINIUS

Com O! you have made good work!

Men What news? what news?

Com You have help to ravish your own daughters and

To melt the city leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses —

Men What's the news? what's the news? 85

Com Your temples burned in their cement,
and

Your franchises whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore

Men Pray now, your news?—88

You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news?

If Marcus should be join'd with Volscians,— Com If!

He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity in Nature, 92

That shapes man better, and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence

Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies

Men You have made good work 96

You, and your apron-men, you that stood so
much

Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com He will shake

Your Rome about your ears

Men As Hercules 100

Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!

Bru But is this true, sir?

Com Ay, and you'll look pale Before you find it other. All the regions

Do smilingly revolt and who resist 104
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance, And perish constant fools. Who's it can blame
him?

Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men We are all undone unless 108

The noble man have mercy

Com Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do't for shame: the people Deserve such pity of him as the wolf

Does of the shepherds for his best friends, if they 112

Should say, 'Be good to Rome, they charg'd him even

As those should do that had deserv'd his hate
And therein show'd like enemies

Men 'Tis true

If he were putting to my house the brand 116
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease'—You have made fair hands,

You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com You have brought A trembling upon Rome, such as was never 120
So incapable of help

Sic Say not we brought it

Bru How! Was it we? We lov'd him, but, like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,

Who did hoot him out o' the city

Com But I fear 124

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points

As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence, 128

That Rome can make against them

Enter a troop of Citizens

Men Here come the citizens And is Aufidius with him? You are they

That made the air unwholesome, when you cast

Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at 132 Coriolanus: exile! Now he's coming,
And not a hair upon a soldier's head

Which will not prove a whip as many coxcombs

As you threw caps up will he tumble down 136
And pay you for your voices: 'Tis no matter,
If he could burn us all into one coal,

We have deserv'd it

Citizens Faith, we hear fearful news

First Cit For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity 141

Sec Cit And so did I

Third Cit And so did I, and to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did we did for the best, and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our

will

Com You're goodly things: you voices!

Men You have made Good work: you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol? 145

Com O! ay, what else?

[Exeunt COMINIUS and MENENIUS.]

Sic Go, masters, get you home, be not dis-may'd.

These are a side that would be glad to have 152
This true which they so seem to fear Go home,
And show no sign of fear

First Cit The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home I ever said we were 1 the wrong when we banished him 157

Sec Cit So did we all But come, let's home [Exeunt Citizens]

Bru I do not like this news

Sic Nor I 160

Bru Let s to the Capitol Would half my wealth

Would buy this for a he!

Sic Pray let us go [Exeunt]

SCENE VII — A Camp at a small distance from Rome

Enter AUFIDIUS and his Lieutenant.

Auf Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieu I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but

Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end, 4
And you are darken'd in this action, sir, Even by your own

Auf I cannot help it now,
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design He bears himself more proudlier,
Even to my person, than I thought he would 9
When first I did embrace him, yet his nature
In that's no changeling and I must excuse
What cannot be amended

Lieu Yet, I wish sir,— 12
I mean for your particular,—you had not Join'd in commission with him but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely 16

Auf I understand thee well, and be thou
sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows
not

What I can urge against him Although it seems,

And so he thinks, and is no less apparent 20
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian
state,

Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword, yet he hath left undone 24
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine, Whene'er we come to our account

Lieu Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry
Rome?

Auf All places yield to him ere he sits down,
And the nobility of Rome are his 29
The senators and patricians love him too
The tribunes are no soldiers, and their people Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty 32
To expel him thence I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish who takes it By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them, but he could not 36
Carry his honours even, whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man, whether defect of judgment,

To fail in the disposing of those chances 40
Which he was lord of, or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace

Even with the same austerity and garb 44
As he controll'd the war, but one of these,
As he hath spices of them all, not all,

For I dare so far free him, made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd but he has a merit 48
To choke it in the utterance So our virtues Lie in the interpretation of the time,

And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair 52
To extol what it hath done

One fire drives out one fire one nail, one nail, Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail

Come, let's away When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all, then shortly art thou mine [Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I — Rome A Public Place

*Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRUTUS,
and Others*

Men No, I'll not go you hear what he hath said

Which was sometime his general, who lov'd
him

In a most dear particular He call'd me father
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him, 4
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy Nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home

Com He would not seem to know me

Men Do you hear? 8
Com Yet one time he did call me by my
name

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together Coriolanus
He would not answer to, forbad all names, 12
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire
Of burning Rome

Men Why, so you have made good work!
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome, 16
To make coals cheap a noble memory!

Com I munded him how royal 'twas to
pardon

When it was less expected he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state 20
To one whom they had punish'd

Men Very well
Could he say less?

Com I offer'd to awaken his regard
For's private friends his answer to me was, 24
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff he said 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence

Men For one poor grain or two! 28
I am one of those his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grains
'You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt

Above the moon We must be burnt for you 32 Sic Nay, pray, be patient if you refuse your aid

In this so-never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good
 tongue, 36

More than the instant army we can make,
 Might stop our countervail

Men No, I'll not meddle Sic Pray you, go to him

Men What should I do? 40
Bru Only make trial what your love can do
 For Rome, towards Marcius

Men Well, and say that Marcius Return me, as Cominius is returned,

Unheard, what then? 44
 But as a discontented friend, grief shot
 With his unkindness? say 't be so?

Sic Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure

As you intended well

Men I'll undertake it 48
 I think he'll hear me Yet, to bite his lip
 And hum at good Cominius much unhearts me

He was not taken well, he had not dim'd
 The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then 52

We pout upon the morning, are unapt
 To give or to forgive, but when we have stuff'd

These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
 With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls 56

Than in our priest-like fasts therefore, I'll watch him

Till he be dieted to my request,
 And then I'll set upon him

Bru You know the very road into his kind-
 ness, 60

And cannot lose your way

Men Good faith I'll prove him, Speed how it will I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success [Exit
Com. He'll never hear him

Sic Not? 64
Com. I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye

Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury
 The gaoler to his pity I kneel'd before him,

'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise, dismiss'd me Thus, with his speechless hand what he would do 68

He sent in writing after me what he would not,
 Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions

So that all hope is vain

Unless his noble mother and his wife, 72
 Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him

For mercy to his country Therefore let's hence,
 And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

[Exit.]

SCENE II — The Volscian Camp before Rome
 The Guards at their stations.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

First Guard Stay! whence are you?

Sec Guard. Stand! and go back.

Men You guard like men, 'tis well, but, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come

To speak with Coriolanus

First Guard From whence?

Men From Rome

First Guard You may not pass, you must return our general 5

Will no more hear from thence

Sec Guard You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before

You'll speak with Coriolanus

Men Good my friends,
 If you have heard your general talk of Rome, 9

And of his friends there it is lots to blanks
 My name hath touch'd your ears it is Menenius

First Guard Be it so, go back the virtue of your name 12

Is not here passable

Men I tell thee fellow

Thy general is my lover I have been

The book of his good acts, whence men have read

His fame unparallel'd haply amplified, 16
 For I have ever glorified my friends—

Of whom he's chief—with all the size that verity
 Would without lapsing suffer nay, sometimes

Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground 20
 I have tumbled past the throw and in his praise

Have almost stamp'd the leasing Therefore,
 fellow,

I must have leave to pass

First Guard Faith sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here, no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live

chastely Therefore go back 28

Men Prithce fellow remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general

Sec Guard Howsoever you have been his liar—as you say you have—I am one that, telling true under him, must say you cannot pass Therefore go back. 35

Men Has he dined canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner

First Guard You are a Roman, are you?

Men I am as thy general is. 39

First Guard Then you should hate Rome, as he does Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotage as you seem to be?

Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon. 53

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here he would use me with estimation.

Sec Guard Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general

57

First Guard My general cares not for you.
Back, I say go, lest I let forth your half-pint of blood, back, that's the utmost of your having back.

61

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS

Cor What's the matter?

Men Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you you shall know now that I am in estimation, you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou standest not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering, behold now presently, and swound for what's to come upon thee [To CORIOLANUS] The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us, look thee, here's water to quench it.
I was hardly moved to come to thee, but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs, and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here, this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee

85

Cor Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs

88

Are servanted to others though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volscian breasts That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much Therefore, be gone Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I love
thee,

Take this along, I writ it for thy sake, 96

[Gives a paper]

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak This man, Aufidius,
Was my belov'd in Rome yet thou behold'st!

Auf You keep a constant temper

100

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS]

First Guard Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

Sec Guard 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power You know the way home again.

First Guard Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back?

105

Sec Guard What cause, do you think, I have to swound?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another.
Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long, and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away!

[Exit.

First Guard A noble fellow, I warrant him.

Sec Guard The worthy fellow is our general he is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken.
[Exeunt]

SCENE III —The Tent of CORIOLANUS

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and Others

Cor We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow

Set down our host My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly

I have borne this business

Auf Only their ends

You have respected, stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome, never admitted
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you

Cor This last old man,

Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Lov'd me above the measure of a father,
Nay, godded me indeed Their latest refuge Was to send him, for whose old love I have Though I show'd sourly to him, once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only
That thought he could do more A very little
I have yielded to, fresh embassies and suits, Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter

Will I lend ear to [Shout within] Ha! what shout is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants

My wife comes foremost, then the honour'd
mould

Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grandchild to her blood But out, affection!

All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous to be obstinate
What is that curtsy worth? or those doves' eyes, Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not

Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows,

As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod, and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries, 'Deny not' Let the Volscies Plough Rome, and harrow Italy, I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand
As if a man were author of himself

And knew no other kin

Vir My lord and husband!

Cor These eyes are not the same I wore in
Rome

Vir The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so.

Cor Like a dull actor now, 40
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny, but do not say
For that, 'Forgive our Romans' O! a kiss 44
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip Hath virgin'd it e'er since You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world 49
Leave unsaluted Sink, my knee, i' the earth,

[Kneels]
Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons

Vol O! stand up bless'd, 52
Whilst with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee, and unproperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while Between the child and parent [Kneels]

Cor What is this? 56
Your knees to me! to your corrected son!
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars, then let the mutinous winds Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun, 60 Murdering impossibility, to make What cannot be, slight work

Vol Thou art my warrior,
I help to frame thee Do you know this lady?

Cor The noble sister of Publicola, 64
The moon of Rome, chaste as the icicle
That's curdled by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple dear Valeria!

Vol This is a poor epitome of yours, 68
[Pointing to the Child]
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself

Cor The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness, that thou mayst prove 72
To shame invulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol Your knee, sirrah 76
Cor That's my brave boy!

Vol Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,

Are suitors to you
Cor I beseech you, peace—
Or, if you'd ask, remember thus before The things I have forsworn to grant may never Be held by you demands Do not bid me 81
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate Again with Rome's mechanics tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural desire not 84
To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons

Vol O! no more, no more,
You have said you will not grant us any thing,
For we have nothing else to ask but that 88
Which you deny already yet we will ask,
That, if you fail in our request, the blame May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear us

Cor Aufidius, and you Volscies, mark; for 92
we'll

Hear nought from Rome in private Your request?

Vol Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment

And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile Think with thyself
How more unfortunate than all living women Are we come hither since that thy sight, which should 98

Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and
sorrow, 100

Making the mother, wife, and child to see
The son, the husband, and the father tearing

His country's bowels out And to poor we Thine enmity's most capital thou barr'st us 104

Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort That all but we enjoy, for how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,

Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory, 108

Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse or else thy person,

Our comfort in the country We must find An evident calamity, though we had 112

Our wish, which side should win, for either thou Must, as a foreign recreant, be led

With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin, 116

And bear the palm for having bravely shed Thy wife and children's blood For myself, son,

I purpose not to wait on Fortune till These wars determine if I cannot persuade
thee 120

Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one thou shalt no sooner

March to assault thy country than to tread—Trust to t, thou shalt not—on thy mother's

womb 124

That brought thee to this world
Vir Ay, and mine,

That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name

Living to time
Boy A' shall not tread on me

I'll run away till I am bigger but then I'll fight 128

Cor Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see

I have sat too long [Rising]
Vol Nay, go not from us thus

If it were so, that our request did tend 132
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy

The Volscies whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour no, our suit
Is, that you reconcile them while the Volscies

May say, 'This mercy we have show'd,' the Romans, 137

'Thus we receiv'd,' and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee and cry, 'Be bless'd'

For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great son, 140

The end of war's uncertain, but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit

Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name

Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses, 144
 Whose chronicle thus writ The man was noble,
 But with his last attempt he wip'd it out, Destroy'd his country, and his name remains To the ensuing age abhorr'd. Speak to me,
 son! 148

Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
 To imitate the graces of the gods,
 To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
 And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt 152 That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak
 you

He cares not for your weeping Speak, thou,
 boy 156

Perhaps thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons There is no man in the world

More bound to's mother, yet here he lets me prate

Like one i' the stocks Thou hast never in thy
 life 160

Show'd thy dear mother any courtesv,
 When she—poor hen! fond of no second brood—

Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
 Loaden with honour Say my request's unjust,
 And spurn me back, but it it be not so, 165
 Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague
 thee,

That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
 To a mother's part belongs He turns away Down, ladies 'let us shame him with our knees
 To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride Than pity to our prayers Down an end
 This is the last so we will home to Rome, 172
 And die among our neighbours Nay, behold us
 This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
 But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
 Does reason our petition with more strength 176
 Than thou hast to deny't Come, let us go
 This fellow had a Volscian to his mother,
 His wife is in Corioli, and his child Like him by chance Yet give us our dispatch
 I am hush'd until our city be a-fire, 182
 And then I'll speak a little

Cor [Holding VOLUMNIA by the hand, silent] O mother, mother

What have you done? Behold! the heavens do
 ope,

The gods look down, and thus unnatural scene
 They laugh at. O my mother! mother! O! 185
 You have won a happy victory to Rome,
 But, for your son, believe it, O! believe it, Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd, 188

If not most mortal to him But let it come Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars, I'll frame convenient peace Now, good Aufidius

Were you in my stead would you have heard A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius? 193 Auf I was mov'd withal.

Cor I dare be sworn you were

And, sir, it is no little thing to make Mine eyes to sweat compassion But, good sir, What peace you'll make, advise me for my
 part, 197
 I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you, and pray
 you,

Stand to me in this cause O mother! wife!
 Auf [Aside] I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour 200

At difference in thee out of that I'll work Myself a former fortune

[The ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS

Cor Ay, by and by,
 But we will drink together, and you shall bear
 A better witness back than words, which we, 204
 On like conditions, would have counter-seal'd Come, enter with us Ladies, you deserve
 To have a temple built you all the swords
 In Italy, and her confederate arms, 208
 Could not have made this peace [Exeunt

SCENE IV—Rome A Public Place

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS

Men See you yond coign o' the Capitol, yond corner-stone?

Sic Why, what of that? 3

Men If it be possible for you to d'splace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him But I say, there is no hope in't Our throats are sentenced and stay upon execution. 9

Sic Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men There is differency between a grub and a butterfly, yet your butterfly was a grub This Marcus is grown from man to dragon he has wings, he's more than a creeping thing

Sic He loved his mother dearly 16

Men So did he me and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight year-old horse The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes when he walks he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading he is able to pierce a corslet with his eye, talks like a knell and his hum is a battery He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander What he bids be done is finished with his bidding He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in

Sic Yes, mercy, if you report him truly 28

Men I paint him in the character Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger that shall our poor city find and all this is 'long of you 33

Sic The gods be good unto us!

Men No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us When we banished him, we respected not them, and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us

Enter a Messenger

Mess Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house 4

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, 40
And hale him up and down, all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They'll e'en kill him death by inches

Enter a second Messenger

Sic What's the news?
Sec Mess Good news, good news the ladies have prevail'd, 44

The Volscians are clogg'd and Marcius gone
A merry day did never greet Rome,
No not the expiation of the Tarquins

Sic Fr end
Art thou certain this is true? 48

Sec Mess As certain as I know the sun is sure

Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt
of it?

Near through an arrow so ruin'd the blow
tude,

As the recomfited through the gates. Why,
I ask you! 52

[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beating all together. Shouting also within]

The trumpets sackbutts psalteries, and fife's Tabors and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sundance. Hark, you! [A shout within]
This is good news 56

I will go meet the ladies. This Volturnia is north of consuls senators, 56

A city full of tongues such as you A sea and land full. You have pray'd well today 59

This morning for ten thousand of your throats
I did not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!
[Music still and shouting]

Sic First, the gods bless you for your tidings, next,

Accept my thankfulness

Sec Mess Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks

Sic They are near the city? 64

Sec Mess Almost at point to enter

Sic We will meet them,
And help the joy [Going]

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators Patricians, and People. They pass over the stage

First Sen Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods 68
And make triumphant fires strew flowers before
them

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius
Repeal him with the welcome of his mother, Cry, 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'

All Welcome, ladies, 72

Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt]

SCENE V—Corioli A Public Place

Enter TOLLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf Go tell the lords of the city I am here Deliver them this paper having read it,

Bid them repair to the market-place, where I Even in theirs and in the commons ears, 4
Will vouch the truth of it. Hi! I accuse
The city ports by this hath enter'd and Intends to appear before the people hoping To purge himself with words disparch 8
[Enter Aufidius]

Enter three or four Companions of Aufidius Factor

Most welcome!
1st Con How is it with our general? 12

Auf I live so
As with a man by his own arms empow'r'd
And with his own arm's sin

Sic Con Most noble sir 14
If you do hold the same merit which You wish us now, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger

Auf Sir I cannot tell
We must proceed as we do find the people 6 Third Con The people will remain uncertain will it

'Twixt you there's difference but the fall of the her

Makes the survivor heir of all

Auf I know it
And my pretext to strike at him admit 20
A good construction I read him and I pawn'd Mine for our father's truth who being so heighten'd,

He water'd his new plants with dew of flattery
Seducing so my friends, and to his end 24
He bow'd his nature never known before
But to be rough unswayable and free

Third Con Sir his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost 28
By lack of tooping—

Auf That I would have spoke of Being banish'd for that he came unto my hearth, Presented to my knife his throat I took him,
Made him joint-servant with me gave him a way
In all his own desires, nay let him choose 33
Out of my files his projects to a compass,

My best and freshest men, serv'd his design-ments

In mine own person hop'd to reap the fame 36
Which he did end all his and took some pride
To do myself this wrong till at the last I seem'd his follower, not partner, and He wag'd me with his countenance, as if 40
I had been mercenary

First Con So he did, my lord
The army marvell'd at it, and, in the last
When we had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory,—

Auf There was it 44
For which my sinew shall bestretch'd upon him
At a few drops of women's rheum which are As cheap as lies he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action therefore shall he die, 48
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and trumpets sound with great shouts of the People]

First Con Your native town you enter'd like a post,

And had no welcomes home, but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise

Sec Con And patient fools, 52 Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
tear

With giving him glory

Third Con Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people With what he would say, let him feel your sword, 56

Which we will second. When he lies along, After your way his tale pronounce'd shall bury His reasons with his body

Auf Say no more
Here come the lords 60

Enter the Lords of the city

Lords You are most welcome home

Auf I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords We have

First Lord And grieve to hear 't
What faults he made before the last, I think 64
Might have found easy fines, but there to end
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty where 68
There was a yielding, this admits no excuse
Auf He approaches you shall hear him

Enter CORIOLANUS, with drums and colours, a crowd of Citizens with him

Cor Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier,
No more infected with my country's love 72
Than when I parted hence but still subsisting Under your great command You are to know, That prosperously I have attempted and With bloody passage led your wars even to 76
The gates of Rome Our spoils we have brought
home

Do more than counterpoise a full third part
The charges of the action. We have made peace
With no less honour to the Antiates 80 Than shame to the Romans, and we here deliver,

Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians, Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf Read it not, noble lords, 84
But tell the traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers

Cor Traitor! How now?

Auf Ay, traitor, Marcus
Cor Marcus!

Auf Ay, Marcus, Caius Marcus. Dost thou
think 88

I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name Coriolanus in Corioli?

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up, 92
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,
I say 'your city,' to his wife and mother,
Breaking his oath and resolution like
A twist of rotten silk, never admitting 96

Counsel o' the war but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart Look'd wondering each at other

Cor Hear st thou, Mars? 100

Auf Name not the god, thou boy of tears

Cor Ha!

Auf No more

Cor Measureless liar, thou hast made my
heart

Too great for what contains it Boy! O slave!
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever 105
I was forc'd to scold Your judgments, my grave lords,

Must give this cur the lie and his own notion—
Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him,
that 108

Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join
To thrust the lie unto him.

First Lord Peace, both, and hear me speak

Cor Cut me to pieces, Volscies, men and lads, 112

Stain all your edges on me Boy! False hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,

That, like an eagle in a dove cote, I

Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli 116

Alone I did it Boy!

Auf Why, noble lords,

Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,

'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Conspirators Let him die for't 120

All the People Tear him to pieces—Do it presently—He killed my son—My daughter

—He killed my cousin Marcus—He killed my father 124

Sec Lord Peace, ho! no outrage peace!

The man is noble and his fame folds in

This orb o' the earth His last offences to us

Shall have judicious hearing Stand, Aufidius,

And trouble not the peace

Cor O! that I had him, 129

With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,

To use my lawful sword!

Auf Insolent villain!

Conspirators Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

[AUFIDIUS and the Conspirators draw, and kill CORIOLANUS, who falls AU-

FIDIUS stands on his body

Lords Hold, hold, hold, hold! 132

Auf My noble masters, hear me speak

First Lord O Tullius!

Sec Lord Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep

Third Lord Tread not upon him. Masters

all, be quiet

Put up your swords 136

Auf My lords, when you shall know,—as in this rage,

Provok'd by him, you cannot,—the great danger

Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice

That he is thus cut off Please it your honours

To call me to your senate, I'll deliver 141

Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.

First Lord Bear from hence his body Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers, I'll be one,
And mourn you for him Let him be regarded Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully, As the most noble corse that ever herald 145 Trail your steel pikes Though in this city he Did follow to his urn. Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one, 153
Sec Lord His own impatience Which to this hour bewail the injury, Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame Yet he shall have a noble memory Let's make the best of it Assist Auf My rage is gone, 148
And I am struck with sorrow Take him up [Exeunt, bearing the body of CORIOLANUS
A dead march sound.

SCENE —Rome, and the Country near it

ACT I

SCENE I.—Rome

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing The Tribunes and Senators aloft and then enter SATURNINUS and his Followers at one door, and BASSIANUS and his Followers at the other, with drum and colours

Sat Noble patricians, patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my cause with arms,
 And, countrymen, my loving followers,
 Plead my successive title with your swords 4
 I am his first-born son that was the last
 That wore the imperial diadem of Rome,
 Then let my father's honours live in me,
 Nor wrong mine age with this indignity 8

Bas Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
 Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
 Keep then this passage to the Capitol,
 And suffer not dishonour to approach
 The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
 To justice, continence, and nobility,
 But let desert in pure election shine, 16
 And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the crown

Mar Princes, that strive by factions and by
 friends
 Ambitiously for rule and empery, Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand 20

A special party, have, by common voice,
 In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,
 For many good and great deserts to Rome 24
 A nobler man, a braver warrior,
 Lives not this day within the city walls
 He by the senate is accited home

From weary wars against the barbarous Goths,
 That, with his sons, a terror to our foes, 29
 Hath yok'd a nation, strong, train'd up in arms
 Ten years are spent since first he undertook
 This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms 32
 Our enemies' pride five times he hath return'd Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
 In coffins from the field,

And now at last, laden with honour's spous, 36
 Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms

Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
 Whom worthily you would have now succeed, 40
 And in the Capitol and senate's right

Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
 That you withdraw you and abate your strength,

Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
 Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness 45

Sat How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy 48
 In thy uprightness and integrity,

And so I love and honour thee and thine,
 Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,

And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
 Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament, 52
 That I will here dismiss my loving friends,

And to my fortunes and the people's favour Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd

[Exeunt the Followers of BASSIANUS.] Sat Friends, that have been thus forward in
 my right, 56

I thank you all and here dismiss you all,
 And to the love and favour of my country

Commit myself, my person, and the cause 60
[Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me
 As I am confident and kind to thee.

Bas Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.
[Flourish. They go up into the Senate-house.]

Enter a Captain

Cap Romans, make way! the good Andronicus, Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd
From where he circumscribed with his sword, 68
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome

Drums and trumpets sounded, and then enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS, after them two Men bearing a coffin covered with black then LUCIUS and QUINTUS After them TITUS ANDRONICUS, and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners Soldiers and people following The bearers set down the coffin, and TITUS speaks

Tit Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!

Lo! as the bark, that hath discharg'd her freight,
Returns with precious lading to the bay, 72
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage, Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome 76
Thou great defender of this Capitol
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons
Half of the number that King Priam had, 80
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love,
These that I bring unto their latest home
With burial among their ancestors 84
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword

Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
Why sufferst thou thy sons, unbred yet
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx? 88
Make way to lay them by their brethren

[The tomb is opened]
There greet in silence as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace slain in your country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys, 92
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more!

Luc Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths, 96

That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthy prison of their bones,
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth

Tit I give him you, the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror, 104

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O! think my son to be as dear to me, 108
Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke,
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets! 112

For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and commonweal Were piety in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood 116
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful,
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge
Thrice-noble Titus spare my first-born son 120
Tit Patient yourself madam, and pardon me

These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld
Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice 124
To this your son is mark'd and due he must
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone

Luc Away with him! and make a fire straight
And with our swords upon a pile of wood, 128
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consumed
[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS and MUTIUS with ALARBUS]

Tam O cruel, irreligious piety!
Chu Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?
Dem Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome
Alarbus goes to rest and we survive 133
To tremble under Titus threatening look Then madam stand resolv'd but have withal
The self-same gods, that arm'd the Queen of Troy 136

With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora the Queen of Goths—When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was
queen— 140
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody

Luc See, lord and father, how we have performed
Our Roman rites Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, 144
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky

Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome

Tit Let it be so and let Andronicus 148
Make this his latest farewell to their souls

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! 152
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned drugs, here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons! 156

Enter LAVINIA

Lav In peace and honour live Lord Titus
long
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears
I render for my brethren's obsequies, 160

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome
O! bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud

Tit Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd 165

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live, outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise! 168

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS and Tribunes, re-enter SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Others

Mar Long live Lord Titus, my beloved
brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome,
Tit Thanks, gentle Tribune, noble brother
Marcus

Mar And welcome, nephews, from successful wars, 172

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your
swords,

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp, 176
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, 180

Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This pallament of white and spotless hue,
And name thee in election for the empire

With these our late-deceased emperor's sons 184
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness. 188

What should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day.

To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all? 192

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,

Knighted in field, slam manfully in arms, 196
In right and service of their noble country
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to control the world
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. 200

Mar Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empire

Sat Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit Patience, Prince Saturninus.
Sat Romans, do me right

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not 204

THU Saturninus be Rome's emperor
Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the
good 208

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!
Tit Content thee, prince; I will restore to
thee

The people's hearts, and wear them from themselves.

Bas Andronicus, I do not flatter thee, 212
But honour thee, and will do till I die
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be, and thanks to men

Of noble minds is honourable meed 216 Tit People of Rome, and people's tribunes
here,

I ask your voices and your suffrages
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?
Tribunes To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome, 221

The people will accept whom he admits Tit Tribunes, I thank you, and this suit I
make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son, 224
Lord Saturnine, whose virtues will, I hope, Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal

Then, if you will elect by my advice, 228
Crown him, and say, 'Long live our emperor!'

Mar With voices and applause of every sort, Patricians and plebeians, we create Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor, 232

And say, 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!'
[A long flourish]

Sat Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts, 236
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my empress, 240
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please
thee?

Tit It doth, my worthy lord, and in this match 244

I hold me highly honour'd of your Grace
And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate 248

My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners,
Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet 252

Sat Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and, when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts, 256

Romans, forget your fealty to me Tit [To TAMORA] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor,

To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers 260

Sat A goodly lady, trust me, of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer, 264

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome.
Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent 268
Daunt all your hopes. madam, he comforts you Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav Not I, my lord, with true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy 272 Sat Thanks, sweet Lavinia Romans, let us
go

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free Proclaim our honours, lords with trumpet and drum [Flourish SATURNINUS courts

Bas Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine [Seizing LAVINIA

Tit How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my
lord? 277

Bas Ay, noble Titus, and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right

Mar Suum cuique is our Roman justice 280
This prince in justice seizeth but his own

Luc And that he will, and shall, if Lucius
live

Tit Traitors avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard? 284

Treason my lord! Lavinia is surpris'd Sat Surpris'd! By whom?

Bas By him that justly may Bear his betroth'd from all the world away

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS with LAVINIA

Mu Brothers, help to convey her hence
away

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe 288
[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS and MARTIUS

Tit Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her
back

Mu My lord, you pass not here
Tit What! villain boy

Barst me my way in Rome? [Stabs MUTIUS Mu Help, Lucius, help! [Dies

Re-enter LUCIUS

Luc My lord, you are unjust, and, more than so 292

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son
Tit Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine,

My sons would never so dishonour me
Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor 296

Luc Dead, if you will but not to be his wife
That is another lawful promise of love [Exit

Sat No, Titus no, the emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock 300

I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once, Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,

Confederates all thus to dishonour me
Was none in Rome to make a stale 304

But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus, Agreed these deeds with that proud brag of
thine,

That saidst I begg'd the empire at thy hands Tit O monstrous! what reproachful words are these! 308

Sat But go thy ways, go, give that changing

Sat And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,

That like the stately Ptolemy amongst her nymphs, 316
Dost overshadow the gallant dames of Rome,

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Behold I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,

And will create thee Empress of Rome 320 Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods, Sith priest and holy water are so near

And tapers burn so bright and every thing 324
In readiness for Hymeneus stand

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome
Or climb my palace till from forth this place

I lead espous'd my bride along with me 328
Tam And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome

I swear,
If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths,

She will a handmaid be to his desires
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth 332

Sat Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered 336
There shall we consummate our spousal rights

[Exeunt all but TITUS
Tit I am not bid to wait upon this bride

Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone, 339
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS

Mar O! Titus see, O! see what thou hast
done,

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son
Tit No foolish tribune no no son of mine

Nor thou nor these, confederates in the deed 344
That hath dishonour'd all our family

Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!
Luc But let us give him burial, as becomes

Give Mutius burial with our brethren 348
Tit Traitors away! he rests not in this tomb

This monument five hundred years hath stood
Which I have sumptuously re-edified

Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors 352 Repose in fame, none basely slain in brawls

Bury him where you can he comes not here
Mar My lord, this is impiety in you

My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him, 356
He must be buried with his brethren.

My foes I do repute you every one

So, trouble me no more, but get you gone

Mart He is not with himself, let us withdraw 368

Quin Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried

[MARCUS and the sons of TITUS kneel

Mar Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,—

Quin Father, and in that name doth nature speak,—

Tit Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed 372

Mar Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—

Mar Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, 376

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax

That slew himself, and wise Laertes' son 380

Did graciously plead for his funerals

Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,

Be barr'd his entrance here

Tit Rise, Marcus, rise

The dismall'st day is this that e'er I saw, 384

To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!

Well, bury him, and bury me the next

[MUTIUS is put into the tomb

Luc There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb 388

All [Kneeling] No man shed tears for noble Mutius,

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause

Mar My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths 392

Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit I know not, Marcus, but I know it is,

Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell

Is she not, then, beholding to the man 396

That brought her for this high good turn so far?

Mar Yes, and will nobly him remunerate

Flourish Re-enter, on one side, SATURNINUS, attended, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and

AARON on the other side, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA,

and Others

Sat So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride 400

Bas And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,

Nor wish no less, and so I take my leave

Sat Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape 404

Bas Rape call you it, my lord, to seize my own,

My true-betrothed love and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all,

Megacchius I am possess'd of that is mine 408

Sat 'Tis good, sir, you are very short with

My word and promise to the emperor,

But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you

Bas My lord, what I have done, as best I may,

Answer I must and shall do with my life 412

Only thus much I give your Grace to know

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,

Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd 416

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son

In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave 420

Receive him then to favour, Saturnine,

That hath express'd himself in all his deeds

A father and a friend to thee and Rome

Tit Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds 424

'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam My worthy lord, if ever Tamora 428

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all,

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past

Sat What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,

And basely put it up without revenge? 433

Tam Not so, my lord, the gods of Rome

forfend

I should be author to dishonour you!

But on mine honour dare I undertake 436

For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him,

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose, 440

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart

[Aside to SATURNINUS] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last,

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents

You are but newly planted in your throne, 444

Lest then, the people, and patricians too,

Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant you for ingratitude,

Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin, 448

Yield at entreats, and then let me alone

I'll find a day to massacre them all,

And raze their faction and their family,

The cruel father, and his traitorous sons, 452

To whom I sued for my dear son's life,

And make them know what 'tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.

[Aloud] Come, come, sweet emperor, come, 456

Andronicus,

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown

Sat Rise, Titus, rise, my empress hath pre- 459

vail'd

Tit I thank your majesty and her, my lord

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me

Tam Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the emperor for his good 464

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus,

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you

For you Prince Bassianus I have pass'd 468

My word and promise to the emperor,

That you will be more mild and tractable
And fear not, lorus, and you, Lavinia
By my advice, all humbled on your knees, 472
You shall ask pardon of his majesty

Luc We do, and vow to heaven and to his highness,

That what we did was mildly, as we might,
Tendering our sister's honour and our own 476

Mar That on mine honour here I do protest
Sat Away, and talk not trouble us no more

Tam Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all
be friends

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace, 480
I will not be denied sweet heart look back

Sat Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother s
here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults 484

Stand up
Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend, and sure as death I swore
I would not part a bachelor from the priest 488

Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora
Tit To-morrow, an it please your majesty 492

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your Grace

bon jour
Sat Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too

[Trumpets Lament]

ACT II

SCENE I—Rome Before the Palace

Enter AARON

Aar Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of Fortune's shot and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash,
Advanc'd above pale envy's threatning reach 4
As when the golden sun salutes the morn
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams, Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills, 8
So Tamora

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress, 13
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph
long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes 16
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress 20
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's 24
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, braving

Dem Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd,
And may for aught thou know'st, affected be 28

Chi Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all
And so in this to bear me down with braves.

'Tis not the difference of a year or two Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate

I am as able and as fit as thou 33

To serve, and to deserve my mistress grace,
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,

And plead my passions for Lavinia's love 36 Aar Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep
the peace

Dem Why, boy, although our mother, unadvic'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your
friends? 40

Go to, have your lath glu'd within your sheath
Till you know better how to handle it

Chi Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I
have,

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare Dem Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? [They draw]

Aar Why, how now, lords! 45
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge 48
I would not for a million of gold
The cause were known to them it most concerns,

Nor would you your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome 52

For shame, put up Dem Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withal

Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat 55

That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here
Chi For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,

Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy
tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!
Aar Away, I say! 60

Now, by the gods that war-like Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all

Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet upon a prince's right? 64

What! is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,

That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd Without controlment, justice, or revenge? 68

Young lords, beware! an should the empress
know

This discord's ground, the music would not please

Chi I care not, I, knew she and all the world
I love Lavinia more than all the world 72

Dem Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.
Aar Why, are ye mad? or know ye not in
Rome

How furious and impatient they be, 76
And cannot brook competitors in love?

I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device

Ch Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love 80 Aar To achieve her! how?

Dem Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd,
She is a woman, therefore may be won,
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd 84
What, man! more water gldeth by the mill Than wots the miller of, and easy it is Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother, 88
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge

Aar [Aside] Ay, and as good as Saturninus
may

Dem Then why should he despair that know to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality? 92
What! hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar Why, then, it seems, some certain snail or so

Would serve your turns

Ch Ay, so the turn were serv'd 96

Dem Aaron, thou hast hit it

Aar Would you had hit it too!

Then should not we be tir'd with this ado
Why, hark ye! hark ye! and are you such fools
To square for this? Would it offend you then too That both should speed?

Ch Faith, not me

Dem Nor me, so I were one

Aar For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar

'Tis policy and stratagem must do 104
That you affect, and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must performe accomplish as you may Take this of me: I weree was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love 109
A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand 112

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop

The forest walks are wide and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are

Fitted by kind for rape and villany 116

Single you thither then this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force if not by words

This way or not at all stand you in hope
Come come, out! oppress with her sacred wit

To villany and vengeance consecrate 121

Will we acquit with all that we intend
And she shall file our engines with advice

That will not suffer you to square yourselves 124

But to your wishes height advance you both
The emperor's court is like the house of Fame

The palace full of tongues, of eyes and ears
The woods are ruthless dreadful deaf, and dull,

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns 129

There serve your lusts, shadow'd from heaven's
eye,

And revel in Lavinia's treasury

Ch Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice

Dem Sir, 'tis aut nefas, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,

Per Styga, per manes vehor

[Exeunt]

SCENE II — A Forest

Horns and cry of hounds heard Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, &c. MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS

Tit The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey

The fields are fragrant and the woods are green

Uncouple here and let us make a bay,

And wake the emperor and his lovely bride, 4

And rouse the prince and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise

Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours
To attend the emperor's person carefully 8

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd

[4 cry of hounds, and horns winded in a peal]

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LA-VINIA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and Attendants

Many good morrows to your majesty,
Madam, to you as many and as good 12

I promised your Grace a hunter's peal

Sat And you have rung it lustily, my lord, Somewhat too early for new-married ladies

Bas Lavinia, how say you?

Lav I say, no, 16

I have been broad awake two hours and more

Sat Come on, then, horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport — [To TAMORA] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting

Mar I have dogs, my lord, 20

Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top

Tit And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain

Dem [Aside] Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound, 25

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground

[Exeunt]

SCENE III — A lonely Part of the Forest

Enter AARON, with a bag of gold

Aar He that had wit would think that I had
none,

To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it

Let him that thinks of me so abjectly 4

Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget

A very excellent piece of villany

And so repose, sweet gold for their unrest 8

That have their aims out of the empress' chest

[Hides the gold]

Enter TAMORA

Tam My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,

When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?

The birds chant melody on every bush, 12
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer d shadow on the ground
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit, 16
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replaying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise, 20
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave, 24
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber Whilst hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds

Be unto us as is a nurse's song 28
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep Aar Madam, though Venus govern your desires,

Saturn is dominator over mine
What signifies my deadly-standing eye, 32
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution? 36

No, madam, these are no venerable signs
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, 40 Which never hopes more heaven than rests in
thee,

This is the day of doom for Bassianus,
His Philomel must lose her tongue to day,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity, 44
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll
Now question me no more, we are espied, 48
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives destruction

Tam Ah! my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life

Aar No more, great empress, Bassianus
comes 52

Be cross with him and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be [Exit

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA

Bas Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop? 56
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had, 61
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's, and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs, Unmannerly intruder as thou art! 65

Lav Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning,
And to be doubted that your Moor and you 68

Are singled forth to try experiments Jove shield your husband from his hounds
to-day!

'Tis pity they should take him for a stag Bas Believe me, queen, your swarth Cim-merian 72

Doth make your honour of his body's hue, Spotted, detested, and abominable
Why are you sequester'd from all your train, Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,

And wander'd hither to an obscure plot, 77
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav And, being intercepted in your sport, 80
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-colour'd love,
This valley fits the purpose passing well 84

Bas The king my brother shall have note of
this

Lav Ay, for these slips have made him noted
long

Good king, to be so mightily abus'd!
Tam Why have I patience to endure all
this? 88

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON

Dem How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?
Tam Have I not reason, thank you, to look pale?

These two have 'tuc'd me hither to this place 92
A barren detested vale, you see, it is,

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean, O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe
Here never shines the sun, here nothing breeds, Unless the mighty owl or fatal raven 97

And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body hearing it Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly
No sooner had they told this hellish tale, 105
But straight they told me they would bind me
here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death 108

And then they called me foul adulteress, Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect,
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come, 112

This vengeance on me had they executed
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children

Dem This is a witness that I am thy son 116

[Stabs BASSIANUS

Ch And this for me, struck home to show my strength

[Also stabs BASSIANUS, who dies

Lav Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora,

For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam Give me thy poniard, you shall know, my boy,¹²⁰
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's
wrong
Dem Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her
First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw
This minion stood upon her chastity,¹²⁴
Upon her nuptial vow her loyalty And with that painted hope she braves your mightiness
And shall she carry this unto her grave?
Ch An if she do I would I were an eunuch
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,¹²⁹
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust
Tam But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting¹³² Ch I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure
Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours Lav O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,—¹³⁶
Tam I will not hear her speak, away with
her!
Lav Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a
word
Dem Listen, fair madam, let it be your glory
To see her tears but be your heart to them¹⁴⁰
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain Lav When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?
O! do not learn her wrath, she taught it thee,
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble¹⁴⁴
Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike [To CHIRON] Do thou entreat her show a woman pity
Ch What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?¹⁴⁸ Lav 'Tis true! the raven doth not hatch a lark
Yet have I heard, O! could I find it now,
The lion mov'd with pity did endure
To have his princely paws par'd all away¹⁵²
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests
O! be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful¹⁵⁶ Tam I know not what it means, away with
her!
Lav O, let me teach thee! for my father's sake,
That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears¹⁶⁰ Tam Hadst thou in person ne'er offended
me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain
To save your brother from the sacrifice,¹⁶⁴
But fierce Andronicus would not relent Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav O Tamora! be call'd a gentle queen,¹⁶⁸
And with thine own hands kill me in this place,
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long,
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died Tam What begg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go¹⁷²
Lav 'Tis present death I beg and one thing
more
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell
O! keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,¹⁷⁶
Where never man's eye may behold my body
Do this, and be a charitable murderer Tam So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee¹⁸⁰ Dem Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too
long Lav No grace! no womanhood! Ah, beastly creature
The blot and enemy to our general name Confusion fall—¹⁸⁴
Ch Nay, then I'll stop your mouth Bring thou her husband
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him [DEMETRIUS throws the body of BASSIANUS into the pit, then exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, dragging off LAVINIA Tam Farewell, my sons see that you make her sure
Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed¹⁸⁸
Till all the Andronici be made away
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons thus rull de¹⁹² over
[Exit]
Enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS Aar Come on, my lords the better foot before¹⁹²
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I espied the parther fast asleep
Quin My sight is very dull whate'er it bodes Mart And mine, I promise you were't not for shame¹⁹⁶
Well could I have our sport to sleep awhile [Falls into the pit Quin What! art thou fall'n? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briers,¹⁹⁹
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me Speak brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?
Mart O brother! with the dismall'st object hurt²⁰⁴
That ever eye with sight made heart lament Aar [Aside] Now will I fetch the king to find them here
That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother
[Exit] Mart Why dost not comfort me, and help me out²⁰⁸
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole!

Quin I am surprised with an uncouth fear,
A chilling sweat o' erruns my trembling joints
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see 213

Mart To prove thou hast a true divining
heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death 216
Quin Aaron is gone, and my compassionate
heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise
O' tell me how it is, for ne'er till now 220
Was I a child, to fear I know not what Mart Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,

All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit 224
Quin If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument, 228
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood
O brother! help me with thy fainting hand, 233
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth 236

Quin Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out,

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave 240
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink

Mart Nor I no strength to climb without thy help

Quin Thy hand once more, I will not loose
again,

Till thou art here aloft, or I below 244
Thou canst not come to me I come to thee

[Falls in

Re-enter AARON with SATURNINUS

Sat Along with me I'll see what hole is
here,
And what he is that now is leap'd into it Say, who art thou that lately didst descend 248
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead 252

Sat My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest

He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase,
'Tis not an hour since I left him there 256

Mart We know not where you left him all alive,

But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants, TITUS ANDRO-NICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam Where is my lord, the king?

Sat Here, Tamora, though griev'd with killing grief. 260

Tam Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered

Tam Then all too late I bring this fatal writ, [Giving a letter

The complot of this timeless tragedy, 265
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny

Sat And if we miss to meet him handsomely, 268

*Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him
Thou know'st our meaning Look for thy reward
Among the nettles of the elder-tree 272*

*Which overshades the mouth of that same pit
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus*

*Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends
O Tamora! was ever heard the like? 276*

This is the pit, and thus the elder-tree
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out

That should have murder'd Bassianus here Aar My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold 280

Sat [To TITUS] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison

There let them bide until we have devis'd 284
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam What! are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit High emperor, upon my feeble knee 288
I beg this boon with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,

Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them.—
Sat If it be prov'd, you see it is apparent 292

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?
Tam Andronicus himself did take it up

Tit I did, my lord yet let me be their bail,
For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow 296

They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer their suspicion with their lives

Sat Thou shalt not bail them see thou follow me

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers 300

Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain,
For, by my soul, were there worse end than

death,
That end upon them should be executed

Tam Andronicus, I will entreat the king 304
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit Come, Lucius, come, stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt severally

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Forest

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished, her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can
speak,

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd
thee.

Chu Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,
 An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe 4
Dem See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.
Chu Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands Dem She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash,
 And so let's leave her to her silent walks 8
Chu An twere my case, I should go hang myself Dem If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON]

Enter MARCUS

Mar Who's this? my niece, that flies away so fast?
 Cousin, a word, where is your husband? 12
 If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!
 If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
 That I may slumber in eternal sleep!
 Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands 16
 Have lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare
 Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments, Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
 And might not gain so great a happiness 20
 As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
 Alas! a crimson river of warm blood,
 Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
 Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips, 24
 Coming and going with thy honey breath.
 But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee,
 And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue
 Ah! now thou turn'st away thy face for shame,
 And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood, 29
 As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,
 Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
 Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud. 32
 Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?
 O! that I knew thy heart, and knew the beast,
 That I might rail at him to ease my mind
 Sorrow concealed, like to an oven stopp'd, 36 Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
 And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind
 But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee, 40
 A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,
 And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
 That could have better sew'd than Philomel
 O! had the monster seen those lily hands 44
 Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute,
 And make the silken strings delight to kiss them.
 He would not, then, have touch'd them for his life,
 Or had he heard the heavenly harmony 48
 Which that sweet tongue hath made
 He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
 As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet
 Come, let us go, and make thy father blind, 52

For such a sight will blind a father's eye
 One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads,
 What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?
 Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee 56
 O! could our mourning ease thy misery
 [Exeunt]

ACT III

SCENE I —Rome A Street

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS bound, passing on to the place of execution TITUS going before, pleading Tit Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

 For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
 In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept
 For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed,
 For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd, 5
 And for these bitter tears, which now you see Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks
 Be pitiful to my condemned sons, 8
 Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
 For two and twenty sons I never wept,
 Because they died in honour's lofty bed
 For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write 12
 [He throws himself on the ground]
 My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears
 Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite,
 My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush. [Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, &c, with the Prisoners]

O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain, 16
 That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
 Than youthful April shall with all his showers
 In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still,
 In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow, 20
 And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
 So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn

O reverend tribunes! O gentle, aged men!
 Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death 24
 And let me say, that never wept before,
 My tears are now prevailing orators

Luc O noble father, you lament in vain
 The tribunes hear you not, no man is by, 28
 And you recount your sorrows to a stone

Tit Ah! Lucius for thy brothers let me plead Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—

Luc My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak 32

Tit Why, 'tis no matter, man if they did hear

They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
 They would not pity me, yet plead I must, 36
 All bootless unto them

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones,
 Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
 Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale 40

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me,
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribu'e like to these 44
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones,

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death [Rises]

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn? 48

Luc To rescue my two brothers from their
death

For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment

Tit O happy man! they have befriended
thee 52

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then, 56
From these devourers to be banish'd!
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA

Mar Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep,
Or, if not so thy noble heart to break 60
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age

Tit Will it consume me? let me see it then

Mar This was thy daughter

Tit Why, Marcus, so she is 64

Luc Ay me! this object kills me

Tit Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon
her

Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea, 69
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds 72
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too,
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain,
And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life,
In bootless prayer have they been held up, 76
And they have serv'd me to effectless use
Now all the service I require of them
Is that the one will help to cut the other

'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands, 80
For hands to do Rome service, are but vain

Luc Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd
thee?

Mar O! that delightful engine of her
thoughts,
That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence, 84

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear

Luc O! say thou for her, who hath done this deed? 88

Mar O! thus I found her straying in the park, Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound

Tit It was my dear, and he that wounded
her 92

Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead

For now I stand as one upon a rock Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge 97
Will in his brimish bowels swallow him
This way to death my wretched sons are gone,
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man, 100
And here my brother, weeping at my woes
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight 104
It would have maddened me: what shall I do Now I behold thy lively body so?

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee
Thy husband he is dead, and for his death 109 Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this Look! Marcus, ah! son Lucius, look on her
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew 113
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband,

Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful, 117

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed,

Witness the sorrow that their sister makes 120
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips,
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease

Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius, And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain, 124

Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry,

With mury slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long 128
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb
shows 132

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,

Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come 136

Luc Sweet father, cease your tears, for at your grief

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps Mar Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry
thine eyes

Tit Ah! Marcus, Marcus, brother, well I wot 140

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc Ah! my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks Tit Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs 144

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee

His napkin, with his true tears, all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks 148

O! what a sympathy of woe is this,
As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter AARON

Aar Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor Sends thee this word that, if thou love thy sons,

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
O' any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king he for the same
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive, 156
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise? 160
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor my
hand.

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc Stay, father! for that noble hand of
thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies, 164
Shall not be sent, my hand will serve the turn
My youth can better spare my blood than you And therefore mine shall save my brothers
lives.

Mar Which of your hands hath not defended Rome, 168

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O! none of both but are of high desert
My hand hath been but idle, let it serve 172
To ransom my two nephews from their death,
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along,

For fear they die before their pardon come 176
Mar My hand shall go

Luc By heaven, it shall not go!
Tit Sirs, strive no more such wither'd herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy
son, 180

Let me redeem my brothers both from death Mar And for our father's sake, and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee Tit Agree between you, I will spare my
hand. 184

Luc Then I'll go fetch an axe
Mar But I will use the axe

[Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS
Tit Come hither, Aaron, I'll deceive them
both

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine Aar [Aside] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest, 188

And never, whilst I live, deceive men so
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.
[Cuts off TITUS' hand]

Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit Now stay your strife what shall be is dispatch'd. 192
Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand

Tell him it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers, b'd him bury it,
More hath it mented, that let it have 196
As for my sons, say I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price,
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own Aar I go, Andronicus, and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee 201 [Aside] Their heads, I mean. O! how this villany

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace, Aaron will have his soul black like his face 205

[Exit
Tit O! here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble run to the earth
If any power pities wretched tears, 208
To that I call! [To LAVINIA] What! wilt thou kneel with me?

Do, then, dear heart, for heaven shall hear our prayers,
Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dun, 211

And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms

Mar O! brother speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes

Tit Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom? 216

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar But yet let reason govern thy lament

Tit If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes 220
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? 224
I am the sea, hark! how her sighs do blow,
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth

Then must my sea be moved with her sighs,
Then must my earth with her continual tears

Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd, 229
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,

But like a drunkard must I vomit them

Then give me leave, for losers will have leave 232
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand

Mess Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid

For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons, 236
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back Thy griefs their sports thy resolution mock'd,
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit
Mar Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily 241
And be my heart an ever burning hell!

These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal, 244

But sorrow flouted at is double death

Luc Ah! that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat, 247
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe

[LAVINIA KISSES TITUS]

Mar Alas! poor heart, that kiss is comfort-less

As frozen water to a starved snake

Tit When will this fearful slumber have an end? 252

Mar Now, farewell, flattery die, Andro-nicus,

Thou dost not slumber see, thy two sons' heads,
Thy war-like hand, thy mangled daughter here,
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight 256
Struck pale and bloodless, and thy brother, I, Even like a stony image, cold and numb
Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand 260 Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dismal
sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm, why art thou still?

Tit Ha, ha, ha! 264

Mar Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour

Tit Why, I have not another tear to shed
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes, 268
And make them blind with tributary tears
Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss 272
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again Even in their throats that have committed
them

Come, let me see what task I have to do
You heavy people, circle me about, 276
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs
The vow is made Come, brother, take a head,
And in this hand the other will I bear 280
Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd in these things Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth

As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight,
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay 284
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do

[Exeunt TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA]

Luc Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father,
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome 289
Farewell, proud Rome, till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister, 292 O! would thou wert as thou tofore hast been,
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs, 296
And make proud Saturnine and his empress Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine 300

[Exit]

SCENE II.—The Same A Room in TITUS House A Banquet set out

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS, a Boy

Tit So, so, now sit, and look you eat no
more

Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours
Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wreathen knot 4
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our ten-fold grief With folded arms This poor right hand of
mine

Is left to tyrannize upon my breast, 8
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down

[To LAVINIA] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs! 12

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans,

Or get some little knife between thy teeth, 16
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall

May run into that sink, and, soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears 20

Mar Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life Tit How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I 24
What violent hands can she lay on her life?

Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of
hands,

To bid Aeneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable? 28

O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none

Fie, fie! how frantically I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands, 32

If Marcus did not name the word of hands Come, let's fall to, and, gentle girl, eat this

Here is no drink Hark Marcus, what she says,
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs 36

She says she drinks no other drink but tears, Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought,
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect 40

As begging hermits in their holy prayers Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to
heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet, 44

And by still practice learn to know thy meaning Boy Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale
Mar Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,

Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness 48 Tit Peace, tender sapling, thou art made of
tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away

[MARCUS strikes the dish with a knife What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife? 52

Mar At that that I have kill'd, my lord, a
fly

Tit Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart,

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny
A deed of death, done on the innocent, 56
Becomes not Titus' brother Get thee gone,
I see, thou art not for my company

Mar Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly

Tit But how if that fly had a father and a
mother? 60

How would he hang his slender gilded wings
And buzz lamenting doings in the air!

Poor harmless fly,
That, with his pretty buzzing melody, 64
Came here to make us merry! and thou hast kill'd him.

Mar Pardon me, sir, it was a black illfavour'd fly,

Like to the empress' Moor, therefore I kill'd
him.

Tit O, O O!

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.

Give me thy knife, I will insult on him,
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor 72

Come hither purposely to poison me
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora

Ah! surrah
Yet I think we are not brought so low, 76

But that between us we can kill a fly
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor

Mar Alas! poor man, grief has so wrought
on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances 80

Tit Come, take away Lavinia, go with me
I'll to thy closet, and go read with thee

Sad stories chanced in the times of old Come, boy, and go with me thy sight is young,

And thou shalt read when mine begins to dazzle
[Exeunt

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Rome TITUS' Garden.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS Then enter young
LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him

Boy Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia Follows me everywhere, I know not why

Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean. 4

Mar Stand by me, Lucius, do not fear thine aunt.

Tit She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee
harm

Boy Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did

Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs? 8

Tit Fear her not, Lucius somewhat doth she mean

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee,

Somewhither would she have thee go with her
Ah! boy, Cornelia never with more care 12

Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee
Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator

Mar Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,
Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her, 17

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad,

And I have read that Hecuba of Troy 20
Ran mad through sorrow, that made me to fear,

Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,

And would not, but in fury, fright my youth, 24 Which made me down to throw my books and
fly,

Causeless, perhaps But pardon me, sweet aunt,
And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go

I will most willingly attend your ladyship 28

Mar Lucius, I will [LAVINIA turns over the books which LUCIUS had let fall

Tit Hownow, Lavinia! Marcus, what means
this?

Some book there is that she desires to see
Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy 32

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd,
Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens 36 Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed

Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Mar I think she means that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact ay, more there was,
Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge

Tit Lucius what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses,
My mother gave it me.

Mar For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest 44

Tit Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves!
[Helping her

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philomel,

And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape, 48
And rape I fear, was root of thine annoy

Mar See, brother, see! note how she quotes the leaves

Tit Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was, 52
Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?

See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,— O! had we never, never hunted there,— 56

Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,
By nature made for murders and for rapes

Mar O! why should nature build so foul a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies? 60

Tit Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends,

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed? 64

Mar Sit down, sweet niece brother, sit down by me
Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!
My lord, look here, look here, Lavinia 68
This sandy plot is plain, guide, if thou canst, Thus after me

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with his feet and mouth
I have writ my name

Without the help of any hand at all
Curs'd be that heart that forc'd us to this shift!
Write thou, good niece, and here display at last What God will have discover'd for revenge 74
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the traitors and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes

Tit O! do you read, my lord, what she hath writ? 77

Stuprum, Chiron, Demetrius

Mar What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora Performers of this heinous, bloody deed? 80

Tit Magni dom nator poli, Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?

Mar O! calm thee, gentle lord, although I
know

There is enough written upon this earth 84
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts

And arm the minds of infants to exclaims
My lord, kneel down with me, Lavinia, kneel,

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector shope,
And swear with me, as, with the woeful fere 89

And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,

That we will prosecute by good advice 92
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,

And see their blood, or die with this reproach

Tit 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how,
But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware

The dam will wake, an if she wind you once 97
She's with the lion deeply still in league,

And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list 100

You're a young huntsman, Marcus, let it alone,
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,

And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by the angry northern wind 104

Will blow these sands like Sibyl's leaves abroad, And where's your lesson then? Boy, what say

you?

Boy I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe

For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome, 109

Mar Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full
oft

For his ungrateful country done the like.
Boy And, uncle, so will I, an if I live. 112

Tit Come, go with me into mine armoury
Lucius, I'll fit thee, and withal my boy

Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
Presents that I intend to send them both! 116

Come, come, thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou
not?

Boy Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire

Tit No, boy, not so, I'll teach thee another
course

Lavinia, come Marcus, look to my house, 120
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court

Ay, marry, will we, sir, and we'll be waited on [Exeunt TITUS, LAVINIA, and Boy

Mar O heavens! can you hear a good man
groan,

And not relent or not compassion him? 124
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,

That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield,

But yet so just that he will not revenge 128
Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus! [Exit

SCENE II — The Same A Room in the Palace

Enter, from one side, AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, from the other young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them

Chi Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius,
He hath some message to deliver us

Aar Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather

Boy My lords, with all the humbleness I may, 4

I greet your honours from Andronicus; [Aside] And pray the Roman gods, confound you both!

Dem Gramercy, lovely Lucius what's the
news? 8

Boy [Aside] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,

For villains mark'd with rape [Aloud] May it
please you, 8

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,

To gratify your honourable youth, 12
The hope of Rome, for so he bade me say,

And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that whenever you have need,

You may be armed and appointed well 16
And so I leave you both [Aside] like bloody villains [Exeunt Boy and Attendant.

Dem What's here? A scroll, and written round about?

Let's see —

[Reads] 'Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus, 20 Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu

Chi O! 'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar Ay just, a verse in Horace, right, you have it 24

[Aside] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick,
But were our witty empress well afoot, 29

She would applaud Andronicus' conceit!
But let her rest in her unrest awhile,

[To them] And now, young lords, was't not a happy star 32

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,

Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing 36 Dem But me more good, to see so great a
lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts
Aar Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly? 40 Dem I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust
Chi A charitable wish and full of love Aar Here lacks but your mother for to say
amen 44
Chi And that would she for twenty thousand
more

Dem Come, let us go and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains Aar [Aside] Pray to the devils, the gods have given us over [Trumpets sound Dem Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish
thus? 49
Chi Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son Dem Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child

Nur Good morrow, lords O! tell me, did you see 52
Aaron the Moor?

Aar Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is, and what with Aaron now?
Nur O gentle Aaron! we are all undone 56
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!
Aar Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?
Nur O! that which I would hide from heaven's eye, 60
Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace!
She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd

Aar To whom?
Nur I mean, she's brought a-bed.
Aar Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her? 64
Nur A devil
Aar Why, then she's the devil's dam a joyful issue
Nur A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad 68
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime
The empress sends it thee thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point

Aar 'Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue? 72
Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.
Dem Villain, what hast thou done?
Aar That which thou canst not undo
Chi Thou hast undone our mother 76
Aar Villain, I have done thy mother Dem And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!

Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend! 80
Chi It shall not live
Aar It shall not die
Nur Aaron, it must, the mother wills it so Aar What! must it, nurse? then let no man but I 84

Do execution on my flesh and blood Dem I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point
Nurse, give it me, my sword shall soon dispatch
it Aar Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up 88

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws

Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,
He dies upon my scurritar's sharp point 92
That touches this my first born son and heir
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's
brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war, 96
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands
What, what ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lim'd walls! ye a'house painted signs!
Coal-black is better than another hue, 100
In that it scorns to bear another hue,

For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood 104
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuse it how she can

Dem Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress
thus?

Aar My mistress is my mistress, thus myself, 108

The vigour, and the picture of my youth
Thus before all the world do I prefer,
Thus maugre all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome 112

Dem By this our mother is for ever sham'd Chi Rome will despise her for this foul escape

Nur The emperor in his rage will doom her
death

Chi I blush to think upon this ignomy 116 Aar Why, there's the privilege your beauty
bears

Fie, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer 120
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say 'Old lad, I am thine own'
He is your brother lords, sensibly fed
Of that self blood that first gave life to you, 124
And from that womb where you imprison'd were

He is enfranchised and come to light
Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face 128 Nur Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe 132 Aar Then sit we down, and let us all consult,
My son and I will have the wind of you Keep there now talk at pleasure of your safety

[They sit]

Dem How many women saw this child of his? 136

Aar Why, so, brave lords! when we join in
league,

I am a lamb, but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms 140
But say, again, how many saw the child?

Nur Cornelia the midwife and myself,
And no one else but the deliver d empress

Aar The empress, the midwife, and yourself 144

Two may keep counsel when the third's away
Go to the empress, tell her this I said

[Stabbing her]

'Weke, weke!'

So cries a pig prepared to the spit 148

Dem What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?

Aar O lord, sir, tis a deed of policy
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no
And now be it known to you my full intent 153

Not far, one Muli lives, my countryman,
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed

His child is like to her far as you are 156
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,
And be received for the emperor's heir, 160

And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court,

And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords, you see, I have given her physic,

[Pointing to the Nurse]

And you must needs bestow her funeral, 165
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me 168

The midwife and the nurse well made away
Then let the ladies tattle what they please

Chi Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets

Dem For this care of Tamora, 172
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee

[*Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON,
bearing off the Nurse's body*]

Aar Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow
flies,

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to greet the empress' friends 176

Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you
hence,

For it is you that puts us to our shifts
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,

And feed on curds and whey and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave and bring you up 181

To be a warrior, and command a camp [Exit with the Child]

SCENE III — The Same A Public Place

Enter TITUS, bearing arrows, with letters on the ends of them with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, PUBLIUS, SEMPRONIUS, CAIUS, and other Gentlemen, with bows

Tit Come, Marcus, come, kinsmen, thus is
the way

Sir boy, now let me see your archery Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight

Terras Astræa reliquit

Be you remember d, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled 4

Sirs, take you to your tools You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets,

Happily you may find her in the sea, 8
Yet there's as little justice as at land

No, Publius and Sempronius, you must do it,
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth 12
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,

I pray you, deliver him this petition,
Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,

And that it comes from old Andronicus, 16
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome

Ah! Rome Well, well, I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me 20
Go, get you gone, and pray be careful all,

And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd Thus wicked emperor may have shipp'd her
hence,

And, kinsmen then we may go pipe for justice
Mar O Publius! is not this a heavy case, 25

To see thy noble uncle thus distract?
Pub Therefore, my lord, it highly concerns

By day and night to attend him carefully, 28
And feed his humour kindly as we may,

Till time beget some careful remedy
Mar Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy

Join with the Goths, and with revengful war 32
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,

And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine
Tit Publius, how now! how now, my masters!

What! have you met with her? 36
Pub No, my good lord, but Pluto sends you
word,

If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,

He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else, 40

So that perforce you must needs stay a time
Tit He doth me wrong to feed me with delays

I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Achéron by the heels 44

Marcus we are but shrubs, no cedars we,
No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size,

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back, Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear 48

And sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven and move the gods

To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs
Come, to this gear You are a good archer,

Marcus [He gives them the arrows
Ad Jovem, that's for you here, ad Apollinem
Ad Martem, that's for myself

Here, boy, to Pallas here, to Mercury
 To Saturn, Caus, not to Saturnine, 56
 You were as good to shoot against the wind
 To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid
 Of my word, I have written to effect,
 There's not a god left unsolicited 60

Mar Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into
 the court

We will afflict the emperor in his pride Tit Now, masters, draw [They shoot] O!
 well said Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap give it Pallas 64
 Mar My lord, I am a mule beyond the moon,
 Your letter is with Jupiter by this

Tit Ha! Publius, Publius, what hast thou
 done?

See, see! thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns Mar This was the sport, my lord when Publius shot, 69

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court, And who should find them but the empress' 72 villain?

She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present Tit Why, there it goes God give his lordship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it

News! news from heaven! Marcus, the post is
 come 76

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
 Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo O! the gibbet-maker? He says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week. 81

Tit But what says Jupiter I ask thee?
 Clo Alas! sir, I know not Jupiter, I never drank with him in all my life 84

Tit Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?
 Clo Ay, of my pigeons sir, nothing else

Tit Why, didst thou not come from heaven?
 Clo From heaven! alas! sir, I never came there God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial s men 93

Mar Why sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration, and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you 96

Tit Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life 100

Tit Sirrah, come hither make no more ado,
 But give your pigeons to the emperor
 By me thou shalt have justice at his hands Hold, hold, meanwhile, here's money for thy charges. 104

Give me pen and ink.

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo Ay, sir

Tit Then here is a supplication for you And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver up your pigeons, and then look for your reward I'll be at hand, sir see you do it bravely

Clo I warrant you sir, let me alone 113

Tit Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come let me see it

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration,
 For thou hast made it like a humble suppliant
 And when thou hast given it to the emperor 117
 Knock at my door, and tell me what he says

Clo God be with you, sir, I will

Tit Come, Marcus, let us go Publius, follow me [Exeunt]

SCENE IV —The Same Before the Palace

Enter SATURNINUS TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, Lords, and Others SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that TITUS shot

Sat Why, lords, what wrongs are these!
 Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne,
 Troubled, confronted thus and, for the extent Of equal justice us'd in such contempt? 4
 My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods,— However these disturbers of our peace Buzz in the people's ears,—there nought hath pass'd,

But even with law, against the wilful sons 8
 Of old Andronicus And what an if His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
 Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,
 His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness? 12

And now he writes to heaven for his redress
 See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury,
 This to Apollo, thus to the god of war,
 Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! 16

What's this but libelling against the senate,
 And blazoning our injustice every where?
 A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?

As who would say, in Rome no justice were 20
 But if I live, his feigned ecstasies
 Shall be no shelter to these outrages,

But he and his shall know that justice lives
 In Saturninus health whom, if she sleep, 24 He'll so awake, as she in fury shall

Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives

Tam My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine, Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, 28
 Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus age,
 The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his heart,

And rather comfort his distressed plight 32
 Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempt—[Aside] Why, thus it shall become

High-witted Tamora to gloze with all
 But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick, 36
 Thy life-blood out if Aaron now be wise,
 Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

Clo Yea, forsooth, an your mustership be imperial

Tam Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor

Clo 'Tis he God and Saint Stephengive you good den

I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here

[SATURNINUS reads the letter]

Sat Go, take him away, and hang him presently

Clo How much money must I have?

Tam Come, sirrah, you must be hanged

Clo Hanged! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end [Exit, guarded]

Sat Despiteful and intolerable wrongs! Shall I endure this monstrous villany?

I know from whence this same device proceeds May this be borne? As if his traitorous sons,

That died by law for murder of our brother, Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!

Go, drag the villan hither by the hair, Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege

For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughterman, Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and me

Enter ÆMILIUS

What news with thee, Æmilius?

Æmil Arm, arm, my lord! Rome never had more cause

The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,

They hither march amain, under conduct Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus

Who threatens, in course of this revenge, to do As much as ever Coriolanus did Sat Is war-like Lucius general of the Goths? These tidings nip me, and I hang the head

As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach 'Tis he the common people love so much,

Myself hath often heard them say, When I have walked like a private man,

That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor

Tam Why should you fear? is not your city strong?

Sat Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius, And will revolt from me to succour him

Tam King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name

Is the sun dimm'd that gnats do fly in it? The eagle suffers little birds to sing,

And is not careful what they mean thereby, Knowing that with the shadow of his wings

He can at pleasure stint their melody, Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome

Then cheer thy spirit, for know, thou emperor, I will enchant the old Andronicus

With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,

Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep, Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,

The other rotted with delicious feed

Sat But he will not entreat his son for us

Tam If Tamora entreat him, then he will For I can smooth and fill his aged ear

With golden promises, that, were his heart Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,

Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue [To ÆMILIUS] Go thou before, be our ambassador

Say that the emperor requests a parley Of war-like Lucius, and appoint the meeting,

Even at his father's house, the old Anacronicus

Sat Æmilius, do this message honourably And if he stand on hostage for his safety,

Bid him demand what pledge will please him best

Æmil Your bidding shall I do effectually

Tam Now will I to that old Andronicus, And temper him with all the art I have,

To pluck proud Lucius from the war-like Goths. And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,

And bury all thy fear in my devices

Sat Then go successantly, and plead to him.

ACT V

SCENE I — Plains near Rome

Flourish Enter LUCIUS, and an army of Goths, with drums and colours.

Luc Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,

I have received letters from great Rome, Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,

And how desirous of our sight they are Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,

Imperious and impatient of your wrongs, And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,

Let him make treble satisfaction

First Goth Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort,

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,

Be bold in us we'll follow where thou lead'st, Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day

Led by their master to the flower'd fields, And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Goths And, as he saith, so say we all with him

Luc I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON, with his Child in his arms

Sec Goth Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery, And as I earnestly did fix mine eye

Upon the wasted building, suddenly
 I heard a child cry underneath a wall 24
 I made unto the noise, when soon I heard
 The crying babe controll'd with this discourse
 'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!
 Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art, 28
 Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor
 But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,
 They never do beget a coal-black calf 32 Peace, villain, peace!—even thus he hates the babe,—

'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth, Who, when he knows thou art the empress'
 babe,

Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake ' 36
 With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon
 him,

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
 To use as you think needful of the man

Luc O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil 40

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand
 This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress eye,
 And here's the base fruit of his burning lust Say, wall-ey'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey 44

This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
 Why dost not speak? What! deaf? not a word?
 A halter, soldiers! hang him on this tree,
 And by his side his fruit of bastardy 48

Aar Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood

Luc Too like the sire for ever being good First hang the child that he may see it sprawl,
 A sight to vex the father's soul withal 52 Get me a ladder [A ladder brought,

which AARON is made to ascend Aar Lucius, save the child,

And bear it from me to the empress
 If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
 That highly may advantage thee to hear 56
 If thou wilt not, befall what may befall, I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'

Luc Say on, and if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd Aar An if it please thee! why, assure thee,
 Lucius, 62

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak, For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

Acts of black night, abominable deeds, 64
 Complots of mischief, treason, villainies Ruthful to hear, yet pitously perform'd
 And this shall all be buried by my death,

Unless thou swear to me my child shall live 68 Luc Tell on thy mind I say, thy child shall
 live

Aar Swear that he shall, and then I will begin

Luc Who should I swear by? thou believ'st no god

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?
Aar What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not,

Yet, for I know thou art religious,
 And hast a thing within thee called conscience,

With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies, 76
 Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
 Therefore I urge thy oath, for that I know
 An idiot holds his bauble for a god
 And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,
 To that I'll urge him, therefore thou shalt vow
 By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
 That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
 To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up
 Or else I will discover nought to thee 85

Luc Even by my god I swear to thee I will Aar First, know thou, I begot him on the empress

Luc O most insatiate and luxurious woman!

Aar Tut! Lucius, this was, but a deed of charity 89

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon
 'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus,

They cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her 92
 And cut her hands and trimm'd her as thou saw'st

Luc O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it 96 Luc O barbarous, beastly villains, like thy-
 self!

Aar Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct
 them

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
 As sure a card as ever won the set, 100

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me
 As true a dog as ever fought at head

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth
 I train'd thy brethren to that gulf-hole 104

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay,
 I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
 Confederate with the queen and her two sons

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
 Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
 And, when I had it drew myself apart, 112

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall
 When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads,

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily, 116
 That both mine eyes were rainy like to his

And when I told the empress of this sport,
 She swoonded almost at my pleasing tale,

And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses 120
First Goth What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is Luc Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar Ay, that I had not done a thousand
 more 124

Even now I curse the day, and yet, I think,
 Few come within the compass of my curse,

Wherein I did not some notorious ill
 As kill a man, or else devise his death, 128

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it,
 Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself,

Set deadly enmity between two friends,
Make poor men's cattle break their necks, 132
Set fire on barns and hay stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their
tears,

Off have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends'
doors, 136

Even when their sorrows almost were forgot,
And on their skins as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead' 140 Tut! I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly as one would kill a fly,
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more 144

Luc Bring down the devil, for he must not
die

So sweet a death as hanging presently
Aar If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire, 148
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak
no more

Enter a Goth

Goth My lord, there is a messenger from
Rome 152

Desires to be admitted to your presence

Luc Let him come near

Enter ÆMILIUS

Welcome, Æmilus! what's the news from
Rome?

Æmil Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths, 156

The Roman emperor greets you all by me,
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a pailey at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages 160
And they shall be immediately deliver'd

First Goth What says our general?

Luc Æmilus, let the emperor give his pledges

Unto my father and my uncle Marcus 164
And we will come March away [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Rome Before TITUS' House

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, disguised

Tam Thus, in this strange and sad habili-
ment,

I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps, 5
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge,
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies 8

[They knock.]

Enter TITUS, above

Tit Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me open the door,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,

And all my study be to no effect? 12

You are deceiv'd, for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines I have set down,
And what is written shall be executed

Tam Titus, I am come to talk with thee 16

Tit No, not a word, how can I grace my talk, Wanting a hand to give it action?

Thou hast the odds of me, therefore no more

Tam If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me 20

Tit I am not mad, I know thee well enough Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines,

Witness these trenches made by grief and care,
Witness the tiring day and heavy night, 24

Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.

Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam Know, thou sad man, I am not
Tamora, 28

She is thy enemy, and I thy friend

I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom,

To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes 32

Come down, and welcome me to this world's light,

Confer with me of murder and of death.

There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity or misty vale, 36

Where bloody murder or detested rape
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out,

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,

Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake

Tit Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to
me, 41

To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam I am, therefore come down, and welcome me

Tit Do me some service ere I come to thee

Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands,

Now give some surance that thou art Revenge

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels,

And then I'll come and be thy waggoner, 48

And whirl along with thee about the globe

Provide two proper palfreys, black as jet,

To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,

And find out murderers in their guilty caves 52

And when thy car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel

Trot like a servile footman all day long,

Even from Hyperion's rising in the east 56

Until his very downfall in the sea

And day by day I'll do this heavy task,

So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there

Tam These are my ministers, and come with
me 60

Tit Are these thy ministers? what are they
call'd?

Tam Rapine and Murder, therefore called
so,

*Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are, 64

And you the empress! but we worldly men

Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes

O sweet Revenge! now do I come to thee;

And, if one arm's embracement will content thee, 68

I will embrace thee in it by and by [Exit above
Tam Thus closing with him fits his lunacy Whatever I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Doyou uphold and maintain in your speeches, 72
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge,
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son,
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure, 76
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme 80

Enter TITUS

Tit Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee
Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too
How like the empress and her sons you are! 84
Well are you fitted had you but a Moor
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor, 88
And would you represent our queen aright,
It were convenient you had such a devil
But welcome as you are What shall we do?

Tam What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus? 92
Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him

Tam Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong, 96

And I will be revenged on them all Tit Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him, he s a murderer 100
Go thou with him, and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him, he s a ravisher
Go thou with them, and in the emperor's court 104

There is a queen attended by a Moor,
Well mayst thou know her by thy own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee
I pray thee, do on them some violent death, 108
They have been violent to me and mine

Tam Well hast thou lesson'd us, this shall we do

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son, 112
Who leads towards Rome a band of war-like Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons, 116
The emperor himself, and all thy foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart
What says Andronicus to this device? 120

Tit Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius, Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths Bid him repair to me, and bring with him 124
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths, Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are Tell him, the emperor and the empress too Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love, and so let him, 129
As he regards his aged father's life

Mar This will I do, and soon return again.

[Exit
Tam Now will I hence about thy business, 132
And take my ministers along with me

Tit Nay, nay let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius 136

Tam [Aside to her sons] What say you, boys? will you abide with him, Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest? 140

Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,

And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit [Aside] I know them all, though they suppose me mad,

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam 144

Dem [Aside to TAMORA] Madam, depart at pleasure, leave us here

Tam Farewell, Andronicus Revenge now goes

To lay a complot to betray thy foes [Exit TAMORA

Tit I know thou dost, and, sweet Revenge, farewell 148

Chi Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit Tut! I have work enough for you to do.
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter PUBLIUS and Others

Pub What is your will? 152
Tit Know you these two?

Pub The empress' sons
I take them, Chiron and Demetrius

Tit Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd, 156

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name,
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius,

Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them,
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,

And now I find it therefore bind them sure, 161
And stop their mouths if they begin to cry

[Exit PUBLIUS, &c, seize CHIRON and DEMETRIUS

Chi Villains, forbear! we are the empress' sons.

Pub And therefore do we what we are commanded 164

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word
Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS, with LAVINIA, she bearing a basin, and he a knife

Tit Come, come, Lavinia, look, thy foes are bound

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me, 163

But let them hear what fearful words I utter O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!

Here stands the spring whom you have stam'd with mud,

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd 172
You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off and made a merry jest

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear 176

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd

What would you say if I should let you speak?
Villains! for shame you could not beg for grace

Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you 181
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,

Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood. 184
You know your mother means to feast with me,

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.
Hark! villains, I will grind your bones to dust,

And with your blood and it I'll make a paste,
And of the paste a coffin I will rear, 189

And make two pasties of your shameful heads,
And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,

Like to the earth swallow her own increase 192
This is the feast that I have bid her to,

And thus the banquet she shall surfeit on,
For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,

And worse than Procne I will be reveng'd 196
And now prepare your throats Lavinia, come

[He cuts her throats]
Receive the blood and when that they are dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it, 200

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd Come, come, be every one officious

To make this banquet, which I wish may prove More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.

So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes

[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies]

SCENE III.—The Same Court of Titus'
House A banquet set out

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS and Goths, with AARON prisoner

Luc Uncle Marcus, since it is my father's mind

That I repair to Rome, I am content, First Goth And ours with thine, befall what fortune will

Luc Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor, 4

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil,
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,

Till he be brought unto the empress' face,

For testimony of her foul proceedings 8
And see the ambush of our friends be strong,
I fear the emperor means no good to us

Aar Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter

forth 12
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in

[Exeunt Goths, with AARON Trumpets sound]

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand. 16

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with EMILIUS, Senators, Tribunes, and Others

Sat What! hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc What boots it thee, to call thyself a sun?
Mar Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle,

These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20

The feast is ready which the careful Titus Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places 24

Sat Marcus, we will. [Hautboys sound]

Enter TITUS, dressed like a cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others TITUS places the dishes on the table

Tit Welcome, my gracious lord, welcome, dread queen, Welcome, ye war-like Goths, welcome, Lucius,

And welcome, all Although the cheer be poor,

'Twill fill your stomachs, please you eat of it 29
Sat Why art thou thus attur'd, Andronicus?

Tit Because I would be sure to have all well
To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam We are beholding to you, good Andronicus 33

Tit An if your highness knew my heart, you were

My lord the emperor, resolve me this Was it well done of rash Virginius 36

To slay his daughter with his own right hand, Because she was enforced, stam'd, and deflower'd?

Sat It was, Andronicus

Tit Your reason, mighty lord? 40
Sat Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.
Tit A reason mighty, strong, and effectual,

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant, 44
For me most wretched, to perform the like

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee,
And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die!

[Kills LAVINIA]
Sat What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind? 48

Tit Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woeful as Virginius was,

And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage and it is now done 52

Sat What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed

Tit Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam Why hast thou slain thine only daughter
thus?

Tit Not I 'twas Chiron and Demetrius 56
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong
Sat Go fetch them hither to us presently

Tit Why, there they are both, baked in that pie, 60

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred

'Tis true, 'tis true, witness my knife's sharp point [Kills TAMORA]

Sat Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed! [Kills TITUS]

Luc Can the son's eye behold his father bleed? 65

There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed!
[Kills SATURNINUS. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse] MARCUS, LUCIUS, and their partisans, go up into the balcony

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of
Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl 68
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O! let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,

These broken limbs again into one body, 72
Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,

And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,

Do shameful execution on herself 76
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,

Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,

[To LUCIUS] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst our ancestor, 80

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear

The story of that baleful burning night
When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's

Troy, 84
Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in That gives our Troy, our Rome the civil wound

My heart is not compact of flint nor steel, 88
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
And break my very utterance, even in the time

When it should move you to attend me most, 92
Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him

Luc Then, noble auditory, be it known to
you, 96

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius Were they that murdered our emperor's

brother
And they it was that ravished our suster 99

For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded,
Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd

Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel
out,

And sent her enemies unto the grave
Lastly, myself unkindly banished, 104

The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies,

Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a

friend 108
And I am the turn'd forth, be it known to you,

That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body 112
Alas! you know I am no vaunter, I,

My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just and full of truth

But, soft! methinks I do digress too much, 116
Citing my worthless praise O! pardon me,

For when no friends are by, men praise themselves

Mar Now is my turn to speak Behold this
child, 120

Of this was Tamora delivered,
The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes
The villain is alive in Titus' house,

Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true 124
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge

These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear

Now you have heard the truth, what say you
Romans? 128

Have we done aught amiss, show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,

The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,

And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our houses.

Speak, Romans, speak! and if you say we shall,
Lo! hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall 136

Emul Come, come, thou reverend man of
Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius, our emperor, for well I know

The common voice do cry it shall be so 140 Romans! Lucius, all hail! Rome's royal emperor!

Mar [To Attendants] Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house,

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,

To be adjudg'd some dreadful slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life 145

[Exeunt Attendants]

LUCIUS, MARCUS, and the Others descend

Romans! Lucius, all hail! Rome's gracious governor!

Luc Thanks, gentle Romans may I govern
so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people give me aim awhile, 149

For nature puts me to a heavy task Stand all aloof, but, uncle, draw you near,

To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk. 152

O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips, These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
 face,

The last true duties of thy noble son!

Mar Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
 Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips 157
 O! were the sum of these that I should pay Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc Come hither, boy, come, come, and learn of us 160

To melt in showers thy grandsire lov'd thee
 well

Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
 Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow,
 Many a matter hath he told to thee, 164

Meet and agreeing with thine infancy,
 In that respect, then, like a loving child,

Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
 spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so 168 Friends should associate friends in grief and woe

Bid him farewell, commit him to the grave,
 Do him that kindness, and take leave of him

Boy O grandsire, grandsire! even with all
 my heart 172

Would I were dead, so you did live again
 O Lord! I cannot speak to him for weeping,

My tears will choke me if I ope my mouth

Re-enter Attendants, with AARON

First Rom You sad Andronici, have done with woes 176

Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
 That hath been breeder of these dire events

Luc Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish
 him, 180

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food

If any one relieves or pities him,
 For the offence he dies This is our doom

Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth Aar O! why should wrath be mute, and fury 184 dumb?

 I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
 I should repent the evils I have done

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
 Would I perform, if I might have my will 188

If one good deed in all my life I did,
 I do repent it from my very soul

Luc Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave 192
 My father and Lavinia shall forthwith

Be closed in our household's monument
 As for that heinous tiger, Tamora

No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds, 196
 No mournful bell shall ring her burial,

But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey

Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity,
 And, being so, shall have like want of pity

See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
 By whom our heavy haps had their beginning

Then afterwards, to order well the state,
 That like events may ne'er it ruinate 204

[Exeunt]

PROLOGUE

Enter Chorus

Chor Two households, both alike in dignity,
In far Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes 5
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life,
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffick of our stage, 12
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall muss, our toil shall strive to mend

ACT I

SCENE I.—Verona A Public Place

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with swords and bucklers

Sam Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals
Gre No, for then we should be colliers.
Sam I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw Gre Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar 6
Sam I strike quickly, being moved Gre But thou art not quickly moved to strike Sam A dog of the house of Montague moves
me 10
Gre To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand, therefore, if thou art moved, thou runnest away
Sam A dog of that house shall move me to stand I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's 16

Gre That shows thee a weak slave, for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam 'Tis true, and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre The quarrel is between our masters and us their men 24

Sam 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids, I will cut off their heads

Gre The heads of the maids? 28

Sam Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads, take it in what sense thou wilt

Gre They must take it in sense that feel it

Sam Me they shall feel while I am able to stand, and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh 34

Gre 'Tis well thou art not fish, if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John Draw thy tool, here comes two of the house of the Montagues 37

Enter ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR

Sam My naked weapon is out, quarrel, I will back thee

Gre How! turn thy back and run? 40

Sam Fear me not

Gre No, marry, I fear thee!

Sam Let us take the law of our sides, let them begin. 44

Gre I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list

Sam Nay, as they dare I will bite my thumb at them, which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it. 49

Abr Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam I do bite my thumb, sir

Abr Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? 52

Sam [Aside to GREGORY] Is the law of our side if I say ay?

Gre [Aside to SAMPSON] No
Sam No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir, but I bite my thumb, sir 57
Gre Do you quarrel, sir?
Abr Quarrel, sir! no, sir Sam If you do, sir, I am for you I serve as good a man as you 61
Abr No better
Sam Well, sir
Gre [Aside to SAMPSON] Say, 'better,' here comes one of my master's kinsmen 65
Sam Yes, better, sir
Abr You lie
Sam Draw, if you be men Gregory, remember thy swashing blow [They fight]

Enter BENVOLIO

Ben Part, fools!
 Put up your swords, you know not what you do [Beats down their swords]

Enter TYBALT

Tyb What! art thou drawn among these heartless hunds? 72
Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death Ben I do but keep the peace put up thy
 sword,
 Or manage it to part these men with me Tyb What! drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word 76
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee
Have at thee, coward! [They fight]

Enter several persons of both houses, who join the fray then enter Citizens, with clubs and partisans

Citizens Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike!
 beat them down!
Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues! 80

Enter CAPULET in his gown, and LADY CAPULET

Cap What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!
Lady Cap A crutch, a crutch! Why call you for a sword?
Cap Mysword, I say! Old Montague is come,
 And flourishes his blade in spite of me 84

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE

Mon Thou villain Capulet! Hold me not, let me go Lady Mon Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe

Enter PRINCE with his Train

Prin Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
 Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,— 88
 Will they not hear? What ho! you men, you beasts,
 That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
 With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
 On pain of torture, from those bloody hands 92 Throw your mis-temper'd weapons to the ground,
 And hear the sentence of your moved prince

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
 By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, 96
 Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets,
 And made Verona's ancient citizens
 Cast by their grave beseming ornaments,
 To wield old partisans, in hands as old, 100
 Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate
 If ever you disturb our streets again
 Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace
 For this time, all the rest depart away 104
 You, Capulet, shall go along with me,
 And, Montague, come you this afternoon
 To know our further pleasure in this case,
 To old Free-town, our common judgment-place
 Once more, on pain of death, all men depart 109 [Exeunt all but MONTAGUE, LADY MON-TAGUE, and BENVOLIO]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new a-broach?

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben Here were the servants of your adversary 112

And yours close fighting ere I did approach
 I drew to part them, in the instant came
 The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd,
 Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, 116
 He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
 Who, nothing hurt withal hiss'd him in scorn
 While we were interchanging thrusts and blows, Came more and more, and fought on part and
 part, 120

Till the prince came, who part'd either part Lady Mon O! where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray

Ben Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd
 sun 124

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,
 A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad,
 Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
 That westward rooteth from the city's side, 128
 So early walking did I see your son Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
 And stole into the covert of the wood
 I, measuring his affections by my own, 132
 That most are busied when they're most alone, Pursu'd my humour not pursuing his,
 And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me

Mon Many a morning hath he there been seen, 136

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew, Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
 Should in the furthest east begin to draw 140
 The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
 Away from light steals home my heavy son,
 And private in his chamber pens himself,
 Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
 And makes himself an artificial night 145
 Black and portentous must this humour prove Unless good counsel may the cause remove

Ben My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him

Ben Have you importun'd him by any means?

Mon Both by myself and many other friends
But he, his own affections' counsellor, 152
Is to himself, I will not say how true,
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm, 156
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows
grow
We would as willingly give cure as know 160
Ben See where he comes so please you, step
aside,
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied Mon I would thou wert so happy by thy
stay,
To hear true shrift Come, madam, let's away [Exeunt MONTAGUE and LADY]

Enter ROMEO

Ben Good morrow, cousin
Rom Is the day so young? 165
Ben But new struck nine Rom Ay me! sad hours seem long
Was that my father that went hence so fast?
Ben It was What sadness lengthens
Romeo's hours? 168
Rom Not having that, which having, makes them short Ben In love?
Rom Out—
Ben Of love? 172
Rom Out of her favour, where I am in love.
Ben Alas! that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof Rom Alas! that love, whose view is muffled
still, 176
Should, without eyes see pathways to his will Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was
here?
Yet tell me not for I have heard it all Here's much to do with hate, but more with
love 180
Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing! of nothing first create
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well seeming forms! 184 Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!
Still waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this Dost thou not laugh?
Ben No, coz, I rather weep 188
Rom Good heart, at what?
Ben At thy good heart's oppression
Rom Why, such is love's transgression
Griefs of mine own heavey in my breast, 192
Which thou wilt propagate to have it press'd With more of thine this love that thou hast shown
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs,
Being purg'd, a fire sparking in lovers' eyes, 197
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet. 200

Farewell, my coz
Ben Soft, I will go along, [Going]
An if you leave me so you do me wrong
Rom Tut! I have lost myself, I am not here,
This is not Romeo, he's some other where 204
Ben Tell me in sadness, who is that you love
Rom What! shall I groan and tell thee?
Ben Groan! why, no,
But sadly tell me who Rom Bid a sick man in sadness make his will, 208
Ah! word ill urg'd to one that is so ill
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman Ben I am'd so near when I suppos'd you
lov'd
Rom A right good mark-man! And she's fair I love 212
Ben A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.
Rom Well, in that hit you miss she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit,
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd, 216
From love's weak childish bow she lives un-harm'd
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold 220
O! she is rich in beauty, only poor
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store Ben Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?
Rom She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste, 224
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity
She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair 228
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now
Ben Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her Rom O! teach me how I should forget to
think 232
Ben By giving liberty unto thine eyes
Examine other beauties
Rom 'Tis the way
To call hers exquisite, in question more
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows
Being black put us in mind they hide the fair, 237
He, that is stricken blind cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost
Show me a mistress that is passing fair, 240
What doth her beauty serve but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell thou canst not teach me to forget Ben I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — The Same A Street

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike, and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace
Par Of honourable reckoning are you both,
And pity 'tis you live at odds so long 5

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap But saying o'er what I have said before My child is yet a stranger in the world, 8
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years, Let two more summers wither in their pride
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride

Par Younger than she are happy mothers made 12
Cap And too soon marr'd are those so early made

Earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart, 16
My will to her consent is but a part,
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice
This night I hold an old accustom'd feast, 20
Whereto I have invited many a guest
Such as I love, and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number more

At my poor house look to behold this night 24
Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight 28
Among fresh female buds shall you this night Inherent at my house, hear all, all see,
And like her most whose merit most shall be
Which on more view, of many mine being one 32
May stand in number, though in reckoning none

Come, go with me [To Servant, giving him a paper] Go, sirrah, trudge about Through fair Verona, find those persons out Whose names are written there, and to them say, 36

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay [Exeunt CAPULET and PARIS]

Serv Find them out whose names are written here! It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the taylor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets, but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned. In good time

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO

Ben. Tut! man, one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish; 48
Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning,
One desperate grief cures with another's languish

Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die. 52

Rom Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a mad-man is, 56
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,

Whipp'd and tormented, and—Good den, good fellow

Serv God gi' good den I pray, sir, can you read?

Rom Ay, mine own fortune in my misery 60
Serv Perhaps you have learn'd it without book but, I pray, can you read any thing you see?

Rom Ay, if I know the letters and the language 64

Serv Ye say honestly, rest you merry! [Offering to go]

Rom Stay, fellow, I can read.

Signior Martino and his wife and daughters, County Anselme and his beauteous sisters, the lady widow of Vitruvio, Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces, Mercutio and his brother Valentine mine uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters, my fair niece Rosaline Livia, Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt, Lucio and the lively Helena

A fair assembly whither should they come?

Serv Up 76
Rom Whither?

Serv To supper, to our house
Rom Whose house?

Serv My master's 80

Rom Indeed, I should have asked you that before

Serv Now I'll tell you without asking My master is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine Rest you merry! [Exit]

Ben At this same ancient feast of Capulet's, Supps the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st, 88

With all the admired beauties of Verona
Go thither, and, with unattainted eye

Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow 92

Rom When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

And these, who often drown'd could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars! 96

One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match since first the world begun.

Ben Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,
Herself pois'd with herself in either eye, 100

But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid

That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now shows best 104

Rom I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own

[Exeunt]

SCENE III—The Same A Room in CAPULET'S House

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse

Lady Cap Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me

Nurse Now, by my maidenhead, at twelve year old,—

I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-bird!
God forbid! where's this girl? what, Juliet! 4

Enter JULIET.

Jul How now! who calls?

Nurse Your mother

Jul Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

Lady Cap This is the matter Nurse, give leave awhile

We must talk in secret nurse, come back again, 8

I have remember'd me, thou'st hear our counsel.

Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age

Nurse Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour

Lady Cap She's not fourteen.

Nurse I'll lay fourteen of my teeth— 12

And yet to my teen be it spoken I have but four—

She is not fourteen. How long is it now

To Lammastide?

Lady Cap A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse Even or odd, of all days in the year,

Come Lammastide at night shall she be fourteen. 17

Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—

Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God,

She was too good for me. But, as I said, 20

On Lammastide at night shall she be fourteen,

That shall she, marry, I remember it well

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years,

And she was wean'd, I never shall forget it, 24

Of all the days of the year, upon that day,

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall,

My lord and you were then at Mantua. 28

Nay, I do bear a brain—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug and felt it bitter, pretty fool!

To see it tetchy and fall out with the dug 32

'Shake,' quoth the dove-house 'twas no need,

I trow,

To bid me trudge

And since that time it is eleven years,

For then she could stand high lone, nay, by the rood, 36

She could have run and waddled all about,

For even the day before she broke her brow

And then my husband—God be with his soul!

A' was a merry man—took up the child 40

'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face?

Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more

wit,

Wilt thou not, Jule?' and, by my halidom,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said 'Ay' 44

To see now how a jest shall come about!

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,

I never should forget it 'Wilt thou not, Jule?' 48

quoth he,

And, pretty fool, it stunted and said 'Ay'

Lady Cap Enough of this, I pray thee, hold

thy peace

Nurse Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh,

To think it should leave crying, and say 'Ay'

And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow 52

A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone,

A parlous knock, and it cried bitterly

'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou com'st to

age, 56

Wilt thou not, Jule?' it stunted and said 'Ay'

Jul And stunt thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse Peace, I have done God mark thee to his grace!

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed

An I might live to see thee married once, 61

I have my wish

Lady Cap Marry, that 'marry' is the very

theme

I came to talk of Tell me, daughter Juliet, 64

How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul It is an honour that I dream not of Nurse An honour! were not I thine only nurse,

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat 68

Lady Cap Well, think of marriage now, younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,

Are made already mothers by my count,

I was your mother much upon these years 72

That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief,

The valiant Paris seeks you for his love

Nurse A man, young lady! lady, such a man

As all the world—why, he's a man of wax. 76

Lady Cap Verona's summer hath not such a flower

Nurse Nay, he's a flower, in faith, a very flower

Lady Cap What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast, 80

Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face

And find delight writ there with beauty's pen,

Examine every married lineament,

And see how one another lends content, 84

And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies

Find written in the margin of his eyes

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,

To beautify him, only lacks a cover 88

The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride

For fair without the fair within to hide

That book in many eyes doth share the glory,

That in gold clasps locks in the golden story 92

So shall you share all that he doth possess,

By having him making yourself no less

Nurse No less! nay, bigger, women grow by

men.

Lady Cap Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love? 96

Jul I'll look to like, if looking liking move,

But no more deep will I endart mine eye

Than your consent gives strength to make it fly

Enter a Servant

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse curs'd in the pantry, and everything in extremity I must hence to wait, I beseech

you, follow straight. 104

Lady Cap We follow thee, Juliet, the county

stays.

Nurse Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — The Same A Street

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and Others

Rom What! shall thus speech be spoke for our excuse,
Or shall we on without apology?

Ben The date is out of such prolixity
We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,⁴ Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper,
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance
But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure, and be gone

Rom Give me a torch I am not for this ambling,

Being but heavy, I will bear the light
Mer Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance

Rom Not I, believe me you have dancing shoes

With numble soles, I have a soul of lead
So stakes me to the ground I cannot move¹⁶

Mer You are a lover, borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound

Rom I am too sore pierced with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers, and so bound²⁰

I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe
Under love's heavy burden do I sink

Mer And, to sink in it, should you burden love

Too great oppression for a tender thing²⁴
Rom Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,

Too rude, too boisterous, and it pricks like thorn

Mer If love be rough with you, be rough with love, Prick love for pricking, and you beat love

down²⁸
Give me a case to put my visage in [Putting on a mask]

A visor for a visor! what care I,
What curious eye doth quote deformities?

Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me³² Ben Come, knock and enter, and no sooner in,

But every man betake him to his legs

Rom A torch for me, let wantons, light of heart, Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels,³⁶

For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase, I'll be a candle-holder, and look on.

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done

Mer Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own word⁴⁰

If thou art Dun, we'll draw thee from the mire,
Of—save your reverence—love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Rom Nay, that's not so
Mer I mean, sir, in delay⁴⁴

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day

Take our good meaning, for our judgment sits Five times in that ere once in our five wits

Rom And we mean well in going to this masque,⁴⁸

But 'tis no wit to go
Mer Why, may one ask?

Rom I dream'd a dream to-night.
Mer And so did I.

Rom Well, what was yours?
Mer That dreamers often lie.

Rom In bed asleep, while they do dream things true⁵²

Mer O! then, I see, Queen Mab hath been with you.

Ben Queen Mab! What's she?
Mer She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agate-stone⁵⁶
On the fore-finger of an alderman,

Drawn with a team of little atomies
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs,
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers,⁶¹

The traces, of the smallest spider's web,
The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams,

Her whip, of cricket's bone, the lash, of film,⁶⁴
Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,

Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid,

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,⁶⁸
Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,

Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers
And in this state she gallops night by night

Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love,⁷²

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on curtsies straight, O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees,

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,

Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are⁷⁷

Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit,

And sometimes comes she with a tithes-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as a' lies asleep,⁸¹

Then dreams he of another benefice,
Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,

And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,⁸⁵

Of healths five fathom deep, and then anon
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,

And, being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two,⁸⁸

And sleeps again This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night,

And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs,
Which once untangled much misfortune bodes,

This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them and learns them first to bear,

Making them women of good carriage
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace! Mercutio, peace!⁹⁶
Thou talk'st of nothing

Mer True, I talk of dreams,

Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy,
Which is as thin of substance as the air, 100
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south. 104

Ben This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves,
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom I fear too early, for my mind misgives
Some consequence yet hanging in the stars 108
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my breast
By some vile forfeit of untimely death. 112
But he, that hath the steedge of my course, Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben Strike, drum.

[Exeunt

SCENE V — *The Same A Hall in CAPULET'S
House*

Musicians waiting Enter Servingmen.

First Serv Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

Sec Serv When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing 6

First Serv Away with the joint stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane, and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell Antony! and Potpan! 12

Sec Serv Ay boy, ready 12
First Serv You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for in the great chamber

Third Serv We cannot be here and there
too. 17

Sec Serv Cheerly, boys, be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind

Enter CAPULET and JULIET and Others of his house, meeting the Guests and Maskers

Cap Welcome, gentlemen! ladies that have their toes 20

Unplagu'd with corns will walk a bout with you Ah ha! my mistresses, which of you all

Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty,
she, 26

I'll swear, hath corns, am I come near ye
now? 24

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day
That I have worn a visor, and could tell A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear

Such as would please, 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis
gone 28

You are welcome, gentlemen! Come, musicians, play

A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls [Music plays, and they dance

More light, ye knaves! and turn the tables up And quench the fire, the room has grown too hot. 32

Ah! sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet,
For you and I are past our dancing days,
How long is 't now since last yourself and I 36
Were in a mask?

Sec Cap By'r Lady, thirty years
Cap What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not
so much

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will, 40
Some five and twenty years, and then we mask'd.

Sec Cap 'Tis more, 'tis more; his son is elder, sir

His son is thirty Cap Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago 44
Rom What lady is that which doth enrich the hand

Of yonder knight?
Serv I know not, sir

Rom O! she doth teach the torches to burn bright. 48

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear,
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!

So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows, 52
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And, touching hers, make blessed my rude hand

Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night 57

Tyb This, by his voice, should be a Montague Fetch me my rapier, boy! What! dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an artick face, 60
To fieser and scorn at our solemnity?

Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin

Cap Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so? 64

Tyb Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe,
A villain that is hither come in spite,

To scorn at our solemnity this night
Cap Young Romeo, is it? 68

Tyb 'Tis he, that villain Romeo 68
Cap Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone

He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him

To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth 72
I would not for the wealth of all this town

Here in my house do him disparagement,
Therefore be patient, take no note of him

It is my will, the which if thou respect, 76
Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,

An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast
Tyb It fits, when such a villain is a guest

I'll not endure him
Cap He shall be endur'd 80

What! Goodman boy, I say, he shall, go to,
Am I the master here, or you? go to You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!

You'll make a mutiny among my guests! 84
You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb Why, uncle, 'tis a shame Cap Go to, go to,

You are a saucy boy—is't so indeed?—

This trick may chance to scathe you — I know what 88
 You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time
 Well said, my hearts! You are a princex, go Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—For shame!

I'll make you quiet What! cheerly, my hearts!
Tyb Patience perforce with wilful choler meeting 93
 Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting

I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall Now seeming sweet convert to bitter gall [Exit Rom]
Rom [To JULIET] If I profane with my unworsted hand 97

This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this,
 My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
 To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss

Jul Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much, 101
 Which mannerly devotion shows in this,
 For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss 104
Rom Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?

Jul Ay pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer

Rom O! then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do,
 They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair 108

Jul Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake

Rom Then move not, while my prayers' effect I take Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd

[Kissing her]
Jul Then have my lips the sin that they have took 112

Rom Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!

Give me my sin again
Jul You kiss by the book

Nurse Madam, your mother craves a word with you

Rom What is her mother?
Nurse Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house, 117
 And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous
 I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal,
 I tell you he that can lay hold of her 120

Shall have the chunks
Rom Is she a Capulet?
 O dear account! my life is my foe's debt

Ben Away, be gone, the sport is at the best Rom Ay, so I fear, the more is my unrest

Cap Nay gentlemen, prepare not to be gone, 125
 We have a trifling foolish banquet towards Is it e'en so? Why then, I thank you all,

I thank you, honest gentlemen good-night 128
 More torches here! Come on then, let's to bed Ah! surrah, by my fay, it waxes late,
 I'll to my rest

[Exeunt all except JULIET and Nurse]

Jul Come hither, nurse What is yond gentleman? 132

Nurse The son and heir of old Tiberio
Jul What's he that now is going out of door?

Nurse Marry, that, I think, be young Petruccio
Jul What's he, that follows there, that would not dance? 136

Nurse I know not Jul Go, ask his name — If he be married,
 My grave is like to be my wedding bed

Nurse His name is Romeo and a Montague,
 The only son of your great enemy 141

Jul My only love sprung from my only hate!
 Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
 Prodigious birth of love it is to me, 144

That I must love a loathed enemy Nurse What's this what's this?
Jul A time I learn'd even now

Of one I danc'd withal
 [One calls within, 'JULIET!']
Nurse Anon, anon! —
 Come, let's away, the strangers are all gone 148

[Exeunt]

PROLOGUE

Enter Chorus

Chor Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
 And young affection gapes to be his heir
 That fair for which love groan'd for and would die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair
 Now Romeo is belov'd and loves again, 5
 Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
 But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
 And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks

Being held a foe, he may, not have access To breathe such vows as lovers us'd to swear
 And she as much in love, her means much less
 To meet her new-belov'd any where 12

But passion lends them power, time means, to meet, Tempering extremity with extreme sweet

[Exit]

ACT II

SCENE I — Verona A Lane by the wall of CAPULET'S Orchard

Enter ROMEO

Rom Can I go forward when my heart is here?
 Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it]

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO

Ben Romeo! my cousin Romeo!
Mer He is wise, And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed 4

Ben He ran this way, and leap'd thus orchard wall

Call, good Mercutio

Mer Nay, I'll conjure too

Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!
Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh
Speak but one rhyme and I am satisfied,
Cry but 'Ay me!' couple but 'love' and 'dove,'
Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word.
One nickname for her purblind son and heir,
Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim
When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid
He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not,
The ape is dead, and I must conjure him. 16
I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie, 20
That in thy likeness thou appear to us

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him 'twould anger
him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle 24
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down,
That were some spite my invocation
Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name 28
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,

To be consorted with the humorous night
Blind is his love and best befits the dark. 32

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit
As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.
O Romeo! that she were, O! that she were 37
An open et cetera, thou a poperin pear
Romeo, good night I'll to my truckle-bed,
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep 40
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then, for 'tis in vain
To seek him here that means not to be found.
[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same CAPULET'S Orchard.

Enter ROMEO

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound

[JULIET appears above at a window
But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, 4
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she
Be not her maid, since she is envious,
Her vestal livery is but sick and green, 5
And none but fools do wear it, cast it off.
It is my lady, O! it is my love
O! that she knew she were

She speaks, yet she says nothing what of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answer it. 13
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks.
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven, Having some business, do entreat her eyes 16
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.

What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars

As daylight doth a lamp, her eyes in heaven 20
Would through the airy region stream so bright That birds would sing and think it were not
night

See! how she leans her cheek upon her hand
O! that I were a glove upon that hand, 24
That I might touch that cheek

Jul. Ay me!
Rom. She speaks

O! speak again, bright angel, for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven 28
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air 32

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name,
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet 36

Rom. [Aside] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy,
Thou art thyself though, not a Montague
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot, 40
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Belonging to a man. O! be some other name What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet, 44
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd, Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title Romeo, doff thy name,
And for that name, which is no part of thee, 48
Take all myself

Rom. I take thee at thy word
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd, Henceforth I never will be Romeo

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,

So stumblest on my counsel? 52

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee 56
Had I it written, I would tear the word

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred
words

Of that tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague? 60

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here 65

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls,

For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt;

Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me. 69
Jul. If they do see thee they will murder thee.

Rom Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye Than twenty of their swords look thou but sweet,

And I am proof against their enmity Jul I would not for the world they saw thee
here

Rom I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes,
And but thou love me, let them find me here,
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love

Jul By whose direction foundst thou out this place?

Rom By Love, that first did prompt me to inquire,

He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot, yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise

Jul Thou knowst the mask of night is on my face,

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-
night

Fain would I dwell on form, fain fain deny
What I have spoke but farewell compliment!
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say 'Ay,'
And I will take thy word yet, if thou swearst, Thou mayst prove false, at lovers' perjuries, as They say, Jove laughs O gentle Romeo!
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully
Or if thou thinkst I am too quickly won,
I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay, so
So thou wilt woo, but else, not for the world In truth, fair Montague I am too fond,
And therefore thou mayst think my haviour
light

But trust me, gentleman I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou overheardst, ere I was ware,
My true love's passion therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered

Rom Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul O! swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable

Rom What shall I swear by?

Jul Do not swear at all,
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee

Rom If my heart's dear love—Jul Well, do not swear Although I joy in
thee,

I have no joy of this contract to-night
It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden, Too like the lightning which doth cease to be Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good-night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath, May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Good-night, good-night! as sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart as that within my breast!

Rom O! wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul What satisfaction canst thou have to-
night?

Rom The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine

Jul I gave thee mine before thou didst request it,

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul But to be frank, and give it thee again
And yet I wish but for the thing I have My bounty is as boundless as the sea,

My love as deep, the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite [Nurse calls within

I hear some noise within, dear love, adieu!

Anon, good nurse! Sweet Montague, be true Stay but a little, I will come again

Rom O blessed, blessed night! I am afraid,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,

Too flattering-sweet to be substantial

Re-enter JULIET, above

Jul Three words, dear Romeo, and goodnight indeed

If that thy bent of love be honourable, Thy purpose marriage, send me word tomorrow,

By one that I'll procure to come to thee
Where and what time, thou wilt perform the rite,
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world

Nurse [Within] Madam!

Jul I come, anon —But if thou mean'st not
well

I do beseech thee,—

Nurse [Within] Madam!

Jul By and by, I come —

To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief
To-morrow will I send.

Rom So thrive my soul,—

Jul A thousand times good-night!

[Exit above

Rom A thousand times the worse, to want thy light

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

[Retiring

Re-enter JULIET, above

Jul Hist! Romeo, hist! O! for a falconer's
voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again.
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud,

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine,

With repetition of my Romeo's name
Rom It is my soul that calls upon my name

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by
night

Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul Romeo!

Rom. My dear!

Jul At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom At the hour of nine 168

Jul I will not fail, 'tis twenty years till then.
I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom Let me stand here till thou remember it Jul I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there, 172

Remembering how I love thy company

Rom And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,

Forgetting any other home but this

Jul 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee
gone, 176

And yet no further than a wanton's bird,
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again, 180
So loving-jealous of his liberty

Rom I would I were thy bird

Jul Sweet, so would I
Yet I should kill thee with much chenshing.
Good-night, good-night! parting is such sweet
sorrow 184

That I shall say good-night till it be morrow
[Exit

Rom Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell, 188

His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell
[Exit

SCENE III.—The Same FRIAR LAURENCE'S
Cell

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, with a basket

Fri. L. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,

Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of
light,

And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels
Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye 5
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up fill this osier cage of ours

With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers
The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb, 9
What is her burying grave that is her womb,
And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find, 12
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different

O' mickle is the powerful grace that lies In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities 16

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse 20
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,
And vice sometime's by action dignified

Within the infant rind of this weak flower

Poison hath residence and medicine power 24
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each
part,

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart
Two such opposed foes encamp them still

In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will, 28
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO

Rom Good morrow, father!

Fri. L. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me? 32
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie, 36
But where unbrused youth with unstuff'd brain Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth

reign
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure Thou art up-rous'd by some distemperature, 40
Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom That last is true, the sweeter rest was
mine

Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline? 44

Rom With Rosaline, my ghostly father?
no,

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe
Fri. L. That's my good son but where hast thou been, then? 48

Rom I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again
I have been feasting with mine enemy, 49
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded both our remedies

Within thy help and holy physic lies 52
I bear no hatred blessed man, for, lo!
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift,

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift 56 Rom Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine,

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine 60

By holy marriage when and where and how
We met we woo'd and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass, but thus I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day 64 Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is
here,

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes 68

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sorrow cheeks for Rosaline,
How much salt water thrown away in waste,

To season love, that of it doth not taste! 72
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears,

Lo! here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet, 76

If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine, Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
men.

Rom Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosa-line

Fri L For doting, not for loving, pupil
mine

Rom And bad'st me bury love

Fri L Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have

Rom I pray thee, chide not, she, whom I love now

Doth grace for grace and love for love allow,
The other did not so

Fri L O! she knew well
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell

But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be,

For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love

Rom O! let us hence, I stand on sudden
haste

Fri L Wisely and slow, they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt

SCENE IV —The Same A Street

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO

Mer Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?

Ben Not to his father's, I spoke with his
man.

Mer Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad
Ben Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,

Hath sent a letter to his father's house

Mer A challenge, on my life

Ben Romeo will answer it.

Mer Any man that can write may answer a letter

Ben Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared

Mer Alas! poor Romeo, he is already dead, stabbed with a white wench's black eye, shot through the ear with a love-song, the very pun of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer More than prince of cats, I can tell you.
O! he is the courageous captain of compliments.

He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion, rests me his minims rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom, the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist, a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause Ah! the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!

Ben The what?

Mer The pox of such antic, lisp, affecting fantasticoes, these new tuners of accents!—'By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man! a very good whore'—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois, who stand so much on the new form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons! 38

Enter ROMEO

Ben Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo

Mer Without his roe, like a dried herring O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in Laura to his lady was but a kitchen-wench, marry, she had a better love to be-rime her, Dido a dowdy, Cleopatra a gipsy, Helen and Hero hildings and harlots, Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop You gave us the counterfeits fairly last

night
Rom Good morrow to you both What counterfeits did I give you?

Mer The slip, sir, the slip, can you not conceive?

Rom Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great, and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy

Mer That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams

Rom Meaning—to curtsy

Mer Thou hast most kindly hit it

Rom A most courteous exposition

Mer Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy

Rom Pink for flower

Mer Right

Rom Why, then, is my pump well flowered

Mer Well said, follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out the pump, that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain after the wearing sole singular

Rom O single-soled jest! solely singular for the singleness

Mer Come between us, good Benvolio, my wit fain'ts

Rom Switch and spurs, switch and spurs, or I'll cry a match

Mer Nay, if thy wits run the wild-geese chase, I have done, for thou hast more of the wild-geese in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not here for the goose

Mer I will bite thee by the ear for that jest

Rom Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting, it is a most sharp sauce

Rom And is it not then well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer O! here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad.

Rom I stretch it out for that word 'broad,' which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou

Romeo, now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole 100

Ben Stop there, stop there

Mer Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large. 105

Mer O! thou art deceived, I would have made it short, for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer 109

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two, a shirt and a smock. 112

Nurse Peter!

Peter Anon!

Nurse My fan, Peter

Mer Good Peter, to hide her face, for her fan's the fairer face. 117

Nurse God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse Is it good den? 120

Mer 'Tis no less, I tell you, for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse Out upon you! what a man are you!

Rom One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar 125

Nurse By my troth, it is well said, 'for himself to mar,' quoth a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom I can tell you, but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him I am the youngest of that name for fault of a worse 132

Nurse You say well

Mer Yea! is the worst well? very well took, I' faith, wisely, wisely

Nurse If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you. 137

Ben. She will indite him to some supper

Mer A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom What hast thou found? 140

Mer No hare, sir, unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent. [Sings]

An old hare hoar and an old hare hoar 144

Is very good meat in Lent
But a hare that is hoar is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither 149

Rom I will follow you.

Mer Farewell, ancient lady, farewell,

Lady lady, lady 152

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Nurse Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month. 158

Nurse An a' speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an a' were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks, and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flurt-gills, I am none of his skains-mates [To PETER.] And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure! 165

Peter I saw no man use you at his pleasure, if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side 170

Nurse Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers Scurvy knave! Pray you, sir, a word, and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out, what she bid me say I will keep to myself, but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say for the gentlewoman is young, and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing. 182

Rom Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse Good heart! and, I' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman. 187

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me

Nurse I will tell her, sir, that you do protest, which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer 192

Rom Bid her devise Some means to come to shrift this afternoon, And there she shall at Friar Laurence' cell

Be shriv'd and married Here is for thy pams, 197

Nurse No, truly, sir, not a penny

Rom Go to, I say, you shall Nurse This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there 200

Rom And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey wall

Within this hour my man shall be with thee, And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair, Which to the high top-gallant of my joy 204 Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell! Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pams. Farewell! Commend me to thy mistress Nurse Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir 208

Rom. What sayst thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom I warrant thee my man's as true as steel. 212

Nurse Well, sir, my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord!—when 'twas a little prating thing,—O! there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard, but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man, but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom Ay, nurse what of that? both with an R

Nurse Ah! mocker, that's the dog's name R is for the—No, I know it begins with some other letter and she had the prettest sentences of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it

Rom Commend me to thy lady

Nurse Ay, a thousand times [Exit ROMEO]

Peter! Anon!

Nurse Before, and apace [Exeunt]

SCENE V—The Same CAPULET'S Garden

Enter JULIET

Jul The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse,

In half an hour she promis'd to return
Perchance she cannot meet him that's not so
O! she is lame love's heralds should be thoughts,

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,

Driving back shadows over lowering hills
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours, yet she is not come
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,

She'd be as swift in motion as a ball,
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And hie to me

But old folks, many feign as they were dead, Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God! she comes O honey nurse! what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away

Nurse Peter, stay at the gate [Exit PETER]

Jul Now, good sweet nurse, O Lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily,
If good, thou shalt hear the music of sweet news

By playing it to me with so sour a face Nurse I am aweary, give me leave awhile

Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunce have I had!

Jul I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy news

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak, good, good nurse, speak Nurse Jesu! what haste? can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul How art thou out of breath when thou hast breath?

To say to me that thou art out of breath?

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse

Is thy news good or bad? answer to that,
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance

Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

Nurse Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to choose a man Romeo! no, not he, though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's, and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare He is not the flower of courtesy, but I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb Go thy ways, wench, serve God What! have you dined at home?

Jul No, no but all this did I know before What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse Lord! how my head aches, what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces My back o' t'other side, O! my back, my back!

Beshrew your heart for sending me about,
To catch my death with jauncing up and down.

Jul I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse Your love says, like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where is your mother?

Jul Where is my mother! why, she is within,

Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest 'Your love says like an honest gentleman,

Where is your mother?'

Nurse O! God's lady dear, Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow, 64 Is this the poulitice for my aching bones? Henceforward do your messages yourself

Jul Here's such a coil! come, what says Romeo?

Nurse Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul I have

Nurse Then hie you hence to Friar Laurence's cell,

There stays a husband to make you a wife Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,

They'll be in scarlet straight at any news 73 Hie you to church, I must another way,

To fetch a ladder, by the which your love Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark,

I am the drudge and toil in your delight, 77 But you shall bear the burden soon at night.

Go, I'll to dinner hie you to the cell
Jul Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse, farewell [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—The Same FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO

Fri L So smile the heaven upon this holy act,

That after hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy 4 That one short minute gives me in her sight

Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,

It is enough I may but call her mine

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die, like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss consume the sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness 12
And in the taste confounds the appetite
Therefore love moderately, long love doth so,
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow

Enter JULIET

Here comes the lady O! so light a foot 16
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint
A lover may bestride the gossamer
That idles in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall, so light is vanity 20
Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah! Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more 25
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue Unfold the rragin d happiness that both 28
Receive in either by this dear encounter

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, Brag of his substance, not of ornament
They are but beggars that can count their 32
worth,

But my true love is grown to such excess
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work,

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone 36
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt

ACT III

SCENE I.—Verona. A Public Place

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl,
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stir- 4 ring

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that when he enters the confines of a tavern claps me his sword upon the table and says, 'God send me no need of thee!' and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow? 11

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to? 15

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other.
Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lam asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling! 33

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter 36

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter TYBALT, and Others

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them
Gentlemen, good den! a word with one of you

Mer. And but one word with one of us? 44 Couple it with something, make it a word and a blow

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving? 48

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,— Mer. Consort! What! dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords here's my fiddle-stick, here's that shall make you dance
'Zounds! consort! 52

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of
men

Either withdraw unto some private place, 56
Or reason coldly of your grievances,

Or else depart, here all eyes gaze on us

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze,

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I. 60

Enter ROMEO

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir Here comes my man

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower
Your worship in that sense may call him 'man'

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford
No better term than this,—thou art a villain

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love
thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage 68
To such a greeting, villain am I none,

Therefore farewell, I see thou know'st me not

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me, therefore turn and draw 72

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee,
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love.
And so, good Capulet, which name I tender 76
As dearly as my own, be satisfied,

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

Alla stoccata carries it away [Draws]

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk? 80

Tyb What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out

Tyb [Drawing] I am for you 88

Rom Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up

Mer Come, sir, your passado [They fight]

Rom Draw, Benvolio, beat down their weapons

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage! 92

Tybalt, Mercutio, the prince expressly hath

Forbidden bandying in Verona streets

Hold, Tybalt! good Mercutio!

[Exeunt TYBALT and his Partisans]

Mer I am hurt

A plague o' both your houses! I am sped. 96

Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben What! art thou hurt?

Mer Ay, a scratch, a scratch, marry, 'tis enough.

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

Rom Courage, man, the hurt cannot be much. 100

Mer No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, but 'tis enough, 'twill serve ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world A plague o' both your houses! 'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm. 109

Rom I thought all for the best.

Mer Help me into some house, Benvolio,

Or I shall faint A plague o' both your houses!

They have made worms' meat of me I have 113

it,

And soundly too —your houses!

[Exeunt MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO]

Rom This gentleman, the prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt 116

In my behalf, my reputation stain'd

With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour

Hath been my kinsman. O sweet Juliet!

Thy beauty hath made me effeminate, 120

And in my temper soften'd valour's steel!

Re-enter BENVOLIO

Ben O Romeo, Romeo! brave Mercutio's

dead,

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,

Which too untimeously here did scorn the earth.

Rom This day's black fate on more days

doth depend. 125

Thus but begins the woe others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben Here comes the furious Tybalt back

again.

Rom. Ahve! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!

Away to heaven, respective lenity, 129

And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now!

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again

That late thou gav'st me, for Mercutio's soul

Is but a little way above our heads, 133

Staying for thine to keep him company

Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb Thou wretched boy, that didst consort him here, 136

Shalt with him hence

Rom. This shall determine that

[They fight TYBALT falls]

Ben Romeo, away! be gone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain

Stand not amaz'd the prince will doom thee

death 140

If thou art taken hence! be gone! away!

Rom O! I am Fortune's fool

Ben Why dost thou stay?

[Exit ROMEO]

Enter Citizens, &c

First Cit Which way ran he that kill'd Mer-cutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he? 144

Ben There lies that Tybalt

First Cit Up, sir, go with me.

I charge thee in the prince's name, obey

Enter PRINCE, attended, MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and Others

Prim Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben O noble prince! I can discover all 148

The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl

There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,

That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio

Lady Cap Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's

child! 152

O prince! O cousin! husband! O! the blood is spill'd

Of my dear kinsman. Prince, as thou art true,

For blood of ours shed blood of Montague

O cousin, cousin! 156

Prim. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay

Romeo, that spoke him fair, bade him bethink

How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal 160

Your high displeasure all this, uttered

With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly

bow'd,

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen

Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts 164

With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast,

Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,

And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats

Cold death aside, and with the other sends 168

It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity

Retorts it Romeo he cries aloud,

'Hold, friends! friends, part!' and, swifter than

his tongue

His agile arm beats down their fatal points, 172

And 'twixt them rushes, underneath whose arm

An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life

Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled,

But by and by comes back to Romeo, 176
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning, for, ere I Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt
slain,

And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly 180
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die

Lady Cap He is a kinsman to the Montague, Affection makes him false, he speaks not true
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife
And all those twenty could but kill one life. 185
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give,
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live

Prin Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio,
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's
friend,

His fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt

Prin And for that offence 192
Immediately we do exile him hence
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleed-

ing,
But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine 196
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses,
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses, Therefore use none, let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last. 201 Bear hence this body and attend our will Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill

[Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same CAPULET'S Orchard

Enter JULIET

Jul Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds, Towards Phoebus' lodging, such a waggoner
As Phaethon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately 4
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night!
That runaway's eyes may wink, and Romeo Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseen!
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites 8
By their own beauties, or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night. Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match, 12
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods
Hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle, till strange love, grown bold,

Think true love acted simple modesty 16 Come, night! come, Romeo! come, thou day in
night!

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back Come gentle night, come, loving, black-brow'd
night, 20

Give me my Romeo and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night, 24
And pay no worship to the garish sun.
O! I have bought the mansion of a love,

But not possess'd it, and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd So tedious is this day 28
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes And may not wear them. O! here comes my nurse

Enter Nurse with cords

And she brings news, and every tongue that speaks 32

But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence Now nurse, what news? What hast thou there?
the cords

That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse Ay, ay, the cords [Throws them down

Jul Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands? 36

Nurse Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!

Alack the day! he's gone, he's killed, he's dead!
Jul Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse Romeo can, 40
Though heaven cannot O! Romeo, Romeo,
Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!

Jul What devil art thou that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell 44
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but 'I,'
And that bare vowel, 'I,' shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice

I am not I, if there be such an 'I,' 48
Or those eyes shut that make thee answer 'I,'
If he be slain, say 'I,' or if not 'no'

Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe Nurse I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes, 52

God save the mark! here on his manly breast
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse,
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood, 56
All in gore blood, I swooned at the sight

Jul O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier! 60

Nurse O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had.
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul What storm is this that blows so contrary? 64

Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
My dearest cousin, and my dearest lord?

Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living if those two are gone? 68
Nurse Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished, Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished

Jul O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?

Nurse It did, it did, alas the day! it did. 72
Jul O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! wolfish-ravens lamb!

Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!
O nature! what hadst thou to do in hell
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O! that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace

Nurse There's no trust, 85
No faith, no honesty in men, all naught,
All perjur'd, all dissemblers, all forsworn.
Ah! where's my man? give me some aqua
vita 88
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish! he was not born to shame
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit, 92
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth
O! what a beast was I to chide at him.

Nurse Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin? 96

Jul Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah! poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth
thy name,

When I, thy three hours wife, have mangled it?
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin? 100

That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring,
Your tributary drops belong to woe,

Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy 104
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain, And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband

All this is comfort, wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worser than Tybalt's
death, 108

That murder'd me I would forget it fain,
But O! it presses to my memory,

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds
'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banished!' 112

That 'banished,' that one word 'banished,' Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there

Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship, 116
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why follow'd not, when she said 'Tybalt's dead,' Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both, 119

Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,
'Romeo is banished!' to speak that word

Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead 'Romeo is banished!' 124

There is no end, no limit, measure, bound In that word's death, no words can that woe
sound —

Where is my father and my mother, nurse?

Nurse Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse 128

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither

Jul Wash they his wounds with tears mine shall be spent,

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are be-guil'd, 132

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd
He made you for a highway to my bed,

But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed Come, cords, come, nurse, I'll to my wedding bed, 136

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
Nurse Hie to your chamber, I'll find Romeo

To comfort you I wot well where he is Hark ye, your Romeo will be here to-night 140

I'll to him, he is hid at Laurence's cell Jul O! find him, give this ring to my true
knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell
[Exeunt]

SCENE III — The Same FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE

Fri L Romeo, come forth, come forth, thou fearful man

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity

Enter ROMEO

Rom Father, what news? what is the prince's doom? 4

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri L Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom 8 Rom What less than doomsday is the prince's doom?

Fri L A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,

Not body's death, but body's banishment
Rom Ha! banishment! be merciful, say
'death,' 12

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death do not say 'banish-
ment.'

Fri L Hence from Verona art thou banished.
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide 16

Rom There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death, then 'banished,' 20

Is death mis-term'd? Calling death 'banished,' Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,

And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me
Fri L O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!

Thy fault our law calls death, but the kind
prince, 25

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banish-
ment

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not. 28 Rom 'Tis torture, and not mercy heaven is
here,

Where Juliet lives, and every cat and dog

And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven and may look on her, 32
But Romeo may not more validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies than Romeo they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand, 36
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin,
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly 40
They are free men, but I am banished
And sayst thou yet that exile is not death?
Hast thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground

knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean, 44
But 'banished' to kill me? 'Banished!'
O friar! the damned use that word in hell,
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor, 48
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word 'banished'?

Fri L Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word
Rom O! thou wilt speak again of banish-
ment. 52
Fri L I'll give thee armour to keep off that
word,

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.
Rom Yet 'banished'! Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet, 57
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not: talk no more

Fri L O! then I see that madmen have no
ears 60
Rom How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri L Let me dispute with thee of thy estate Rom Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, 64
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Dotting like me, and like me banished,
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now, 68
Taking the measure of an unmade grave

[Knocking within Fri L Arise, one knocks good Romeo, hide thyself

Rom Not I, unless the breath of heart-sick
groans,

Mist-like, in fold me from the search of eyes 72

[Knocking Fri L Hark! how they knock Who's there? Romeo arise,

Thou wilt be taken. Stay awhile! Stand up, 76

[Knocking
Run to my study By and by! God's will!
What wilfulness is this! I come, I come!

[Knocking Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse [Within] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand.

I come from Lady Juliet

Fri L

Welcome, then

Enter Nurse

Nurse O holy friar! O! tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord? where's Romeo? 81 Fri L There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk

Nurse O! he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case! 84

Fri L O woeful sympathy!
Piteous predicament! Even so lies she, Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubber-
ing

Stand up, stand up, stand, an you be a man.
For Juliet's sake, for her sake rise and stand, Why should you fall into so deep an O? 89

Rom Nurse!
Nurse Ah, sir! ah, sir! Well, death's the end of all

Rom Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with
her? 92

Doth she not think me an old murderer
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says 96

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?
Nurse O! she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps,

And now falls on her bed, and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries, too
And then down falls again

Rom As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her, as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman O! tell me, friar, tell
me, 104

In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion [Drawing his sword

Fri L Hold thy desperate hand
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art Thy tears are womanish, thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast

Unseemly woman in a seeming man,
Or ill-beseeming beast in seeming both! 112
Thou hast amaz'd me by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives, 116
By doing damned hate upon thyself?

Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do
meet

In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst lose 120

Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy
wit,

Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed

Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy
wit. 124

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax, Digressing from the valour of a man

Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury.
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish, 128

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, Misshapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
To set a-fire by thine own ignorance, 132
And thou oismember'd with thine own defence
What! rouse thee, man, thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead,
There art thou happy Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt, there art thou happy too 137

The law that threaten'd death becomes thy friend,

And turns it to exile, there art thou happy
A pack of blessings light upon thy back, 140
Happiness courts thee in her best array,
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserably 144
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed, Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her,
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua, 148
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends, Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation 153
Go before, nurse commend me to thy lady,
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto 156
Romeo is coming

Nurse O Lord! I could have stay'd here all the night

To hear good counsel O! what learning is My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come 160

Rom Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide

Nurse Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late

Rom How well my comfort is reviv'd by this! 164

Fri L Go hence, good-night, and here stands all your state

Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence Sojourn in Mantua, I'll find out your man, 168
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you that chances here
Give me thy hand, 'tis late farewell, good-night.

Rom But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief so brief to part with thee 173
Farewell [Exeunt

SCENE IV —The Same A Room in CAPULET'S House

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS

Cap Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,

And so did I well, we were born to die 4
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago

Par These times of woe afford no time to woo 8

Madam, good-night commend me to your daughter

Lady Cap I will, and know her mind early to-morrow,

To-night she's mew'd up to her heaviness

Cap Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender 12

Of my child's love I think she will be rul'd
In all respects by me, nay, more, I doubt it not

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love, 16

And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—

But soft! what day is this?

Par Monday, my lord
Cap Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,

O! Thursday let it be O! Thursday, tell her, 20
She shall be married to this noble earl

Will you be ready? do you like this haste?

We'll keep no great ado, a friend or two,
For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late, 24

It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much.

Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday? 28

Par My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow

Cap Well, get you gone O! Thursday be it then Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed, Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day 32

Farewell, my lord Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me! it is so very very late,

That we may call it early by and by Good-night [Exeunt

SCENE V —The Same JULIET'S Chamber

Enter ROMEO and JULIET

Jul Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,

That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear,
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree 4

Believe me, love, it was the nightingale

Rom It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale look, love, what envious streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east 8
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops

I must be gone and live, or stay and die

Jul Yon light is not daylight, I know it, I!
It is some meteor that the sun exhales, 12

To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua

Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death 17

I am content, so thou wilt have it so

I'll say you grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow, 20
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads
I have more care to stay than will to go
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so 24
How is't, my soul? let's talk, it is not day
Jul It is, it is, hie hence, be gone, away!
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps
Some say the lark makes sweet division, 29
Thus doth not so, for she divideth us
Some say the lark and loathed toad change
eyes

O! now I would they had chang'd voices too, 32
Since arm from arm that voice doth us asfay, Hunting thee hence with hunts-up to the day
O! now be gone, more light and light it grows Rom More light and light, more dark and dark our woes 36

Enter Nurse.

Nurse Madam!

Jul Nurse!

Nurse Your lady mother is coming to your chamber 39

The day is broke, be wary, look about [Exit]

Jul Then, window, let day in, and let life out.
Rom Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend [Descends]

Jul Art thou gone so? my lord, my love, my friend!

I must hear from thee every day in the hour, 44
For in a minute there are many days
O! by this count I shall be much in years
Ere I again behold my Romeo

Rom Farewell! 48

I will omit no opportunity

That may convey my greetings love, to thee Jul O! think'st thou we shall ever meet
again?

Rom I doubt it not, and all these woes shall serve 52

For sweet discourses in our time to come.
Jul O God! I have an ill-divining soul
Methinks I see thee, now thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb 56

Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale Rom And trust me, love, in my eye so do you Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu! [Exit]

Jul O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle 60

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune, For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back. 64

Lady Cap [Within] Ho, daughter! are you
up?

Jul Who is't that calls? is it my lady mother?
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAULET

Lady Cap Why, how now, Juliet!

Jul Madam, I am not well. 69

Lady Cap Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What! wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?

And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live, 72

Therefore, have done some grief shows much of love,

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Jul Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss

Lady Cap So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend 76

Which you weep for Jul Feeling so the loss,

I cannot choose but ever weep the friend Lady Cap Well, girl, thou weepst not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul What villain, madam?

Lady Cap That same villain, Romeo Jul [Aside] Villain and he be many miles
asunder 82

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart,
And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.

Lady Cap That is because the traitor murderer lives 85

Jul Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands

Would none but I might venge my cousin's death!

Lady Cap We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not 88

Then weep no more I'll send to one in Mantua,
Where that same banish'd runagate doth live,
Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company 92

And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied
Jul Indeed, I never shall be satisfied With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—

Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd 96
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it,
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof
Soon sleep in quiet O! how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him

Lady Cap Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man 104

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl Jul And joy comes well in such a needy
time

What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
Lady Cap Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child, 108

One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for Jul Madam, in happy time, what day is that?

Lady Cap Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn 113

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The County Paris at Saint Peter's church,
Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride 116

Jul Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter
too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride
 I wonder at this haste, that I must wed
 Ere he that should be husband comes to woo
 I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam, 121
 I will not marry yet, and, when I do, I swear,
 It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
 Rather than Paris. These are news indeed! 124 Lady Cap Here comes your father, tell him so yourself,
 And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse

Cap When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew,
 But for the sunset of my brother's son 128
 It rains downright.
 How now! a conduit, girl? what's still in tears?
 Evermore showering? In one little body
 Thou counterfeist a bark, a sea, a wind, 132
 For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea, Do ebb and flow with tears, the bark thy body is,
 Sailing in this salt flood, the winds, thy sighs, Who, raging with thy tears, and they with
 them, 136
 Without a sudden calm, will overset
 Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife!
 Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

Lady Cap Ay, sir, but she will none, she gives you thanks 140

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife

How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?
 Is she not proud? doth she not count her blessing, Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought 145
 So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul Not proud, you have, but thankful, that you have

Proud can I never be of what I hate, 148
 But thankful even for hate, that is meant love

Cap How now! how now, chop-logic! What is this?

'Proud,' and 'I thank you,' and 'I thank you
 not,'

And yet 'not proud,' mistress minion, you, 152
 Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no pouds,

But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
 To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,

Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither 156
 Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!

You tallow face!

Lady Cap Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
 Hear me with patience but to speak a word 160

Cap Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!

I tell thee what, get thee to church o' Thursday,
 Or never after look me in the face

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me, 164
 My fingers itch—Wife, we scarce thought us blessing

That God had lent us but this only child,
 But now I see this one is one too much,

And that we have a curse in having her 168

Out on her, hilding!

Nurse God in heaven bless her!
 You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap And why, my lady wisdom? hold your
 tongue, 171

Good prudence, smatter with your gossips, go

Nurse I speak no treason

Cap O! God ye good den.

Nurse May not one speak?

Cap Peace, you mumbling fool,
 Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
 For here we need it not

Lady Cap You are too hot 176

Cap God's bread! it makes me mad

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play, Alone, in company, still my care hath been

To have her match'd, and having now provided
 A gentleman of noble parentage, 181

Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd, Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts, Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a
 man, 184

And then to have a wretched puling fool,
 A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,

To answer 'I'll not wed,' 'I cannot love,'
 'I am too young,' 'I pray you pardon me,' 188

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you Graze where you will, you shall not house with
 me

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest
 Thursday is near, lay hand on heart, advise 192

An you be mune, I'll give you to my friend, An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
 Nor what is mine shall never do thee good 196

Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn.
 [Exit

Jul Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
 That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O! sweet my mother, cast me not away 200
 Delay this marriage for a month, a week,

Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
 In that dim monument where Tybalt lies

Lady Cap Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word 204

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee [Exit

Jul O God! O nurse! how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven,
 How shall that faith return again to earth, 208

Unless that husband send it me from heaven
 By leaving earth? comfort-me, counsel me

Alack, alack! that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself! 212
 What sayst thou? hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse?

Nurse Faith, here it is. Romeo
 Is banished, and all the world to nothing

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
 Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth 217

Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
 I think it best you married with the county

O! he's a lovely gentleman, 220
 Romeo's a dishclout to him: an eagle, madam,

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match, 224
For it excels your first or if it did not,
Your first is dead, or twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Jul Speakest thou from thy heart?
Nurse And from my soul too, 228
Or else beshrew them both

Jul Amen!
Nurse What!
Jul Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.

Go in, and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence's cell,
To make confession and to be absolv'd. 233

Nurse Marry, I will, and this is wisely done
[Exit]

Jul Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!
Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn, 236
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
So many thousand times? Go, counsellor, Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy 241
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit]

ACT IV

SCENE I—Verona FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Par My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste

Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind

Uneven is the course, I like it not. 4

Par Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,

And therefore have I little talk'd of love,
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears 8

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway,

And in his wisdom hastes our marriage
To stop the inundation of her tears, 12

Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society

Now do you know the reason of this haste.
Fri. L. [Aside] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd. 16

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET

Par Happily met, my lady and my wife!
Jul That may be, sir, when I may be a wife

Par That may be must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul What must be shall be 20
Fri. L. That's a certain text.

Par Come you to make confession to this father?

Jul To answer that, I should confess to you.

Par Do not deny to him that you love me

Jul I will confess to you that I love him. 25

Par So will ye, I am sure, that you love me
Jul If I do so, it will be of more price,

Being spoke behind your back, than to your face 28

Par Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears

Jul The tears have got small victory by that,
For it was bad enough before their spite

Par Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report 32

Jul That is no slander, sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to my face

Par Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul It may be so, for it is not mine own 36
Are you at leisure, holy father, now,

Or shall I come to you at evening mass?
Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now

My lord, we must entreat the time alone 40
Par God shield, I should disturb devotion!

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you Till then, adieu, and keep this holy kiss [Exit]

Jul O! shut the door! and when thou hast done so, 44

Come weep with me, past hope, past cure, past help!

Fri. L. Ah! Juliet, I already know thy grief,
It strains me past the compass of my wits

I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this county 49

Jul Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help, 52

Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd, 56
Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both

Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time, 60
Give me some present counsel, or behold,

'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that

Which the commission of thy years and art 64
Could to no issue of true honour bring

Be not so long to speak, I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy

Fri. L. Hold, daughter, I do spy a kind of hope, 68

Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.

If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself, 72

Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,

That cop'st with death himself to 'scape from it,
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy 76

Jul O! bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder tower,

Or walk in thievish ways, or bid me lurk
Where serpents are, chain me with roaring

bears, 80

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house, O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
bones,
With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls,
Or bid me go into a new-made grave 84
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud, Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble.

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love 88 Fri L Hold, then, go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris Wednesday is to-morrow
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber Take thou this vial, being then in bed, 93
And this distilled liquor drink thou off,
When presently through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, for no pulse 96
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease,
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st,
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pale ashes, thy eyes' windows fall, 100
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life,
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death,
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two-and-forty hours, 105
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning
comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead
Then—as the manner of our country is— 109
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie 112
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come, and he and I Will watch thy waking, and that very night 116
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua
And thus shall free thee from this present shame,
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it 120

Jul Give me, give me! O! tell me not of fear!
Fri L Hold, get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord 124 Jul Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father!

[Exeunt

SCENE II—*The Same Hall in CAPULET'S
House*

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and Servingmen.

Cap So many guests invite as here are writ [Exit Servant.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks Sec Serv You shall have none ill, sir, for I'll try if they can lick their fingers 4

Cap How canst thou try them so?

Sec Serv Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that annot lick his own fingers therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me 8

Cap Go, be gone [Exit Second Servant
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time
What! is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?
Nurse Ay, forsooth 12
Cap Well, he may chance to do some good on her
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is Nurse See where she comes from shrift with merry look 16

Enter JULIET

Cap How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition
To you and your behests, and am enjoin'd 20
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon Pardon, I beseech you!
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you

Cap Send for the county, go tell him of
this 24

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning

Jul I met the youthful lord at Laurence's
cell,

And gave him what became love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty 28

Cap Why, I'm glad on t, this is well stand
up

This is as't should be Let me see the county,
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither
Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar, 32
All our whole city is much bound to him

Jul Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? 36

Lady Cap No, not till Thursday, there is time enough

Cap Go, nurse, go with her We'll to church to-morrow [Exit JULIET and Nurse

Lady Cap We shall be short in our provision

'Tis now near night

Cap Tush! I will stir about, 40
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,
wife

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her,
I'll not to bed to-night, let me alone,
I'll play the housewife for this once What, ho!
They are all forth well, I will walk myself 45
To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow My heart is wondrous
light,

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd 48
[Exit

SCENE III—The Same JULIET'S Chamber

Enter JULIET and Nurse

Jul Ay, those attires are best, but, gentle
nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night,
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state. 4

Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET

Lady Cap What! are you busy, ho? need you my help?

Jul No, madam, we have cull'd such necessities

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you,
For I am sure, you have your hands full all
In this so sudden business

Lady Cap Good-night
Get thee to bed, and rest, for thou hast need [Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse]

Jul Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life

I'll call them back again to comfort me Nurse! What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone
Come, vial

What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?

No, no, this shall forbid it: he thou there [Laying down a dagger]

What if it be a poison, which the friar Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd
Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear it is: and yet methinks, it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man.

I will not entertain so bad a thought
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stuf'd in the vault
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes

in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?

Or, if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place,
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,

Where, for these many hundred years, the bones
Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd,

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies festering in his shroud, where, as they say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort
Alack, alack! is it not like that I,

So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the

earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad

O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught, Envir'd with all these hideous fears,

And madly play with my forefathers' joints,
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's
bone,

As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost

Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay!

Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee
[She falls upon her bed within the curtains]

SCENE IV — The Same Hall in CAPULET'S House

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse

Lady Cap Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse

Nurse They call for dates and quinces in the pastry

Enter CAPULET

Cap Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,

The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica

Spare not for cost
Nurse Go, go, you cot-q lean, go,

Get you to bed, faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching

Cap No, not a whit, what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.
Lady Cap Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time,

But I will watch you from such watching now

[Exeunt LADY CAPULET and Nurse]
Cap A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Servingmen, with spits, logs, and baskets

Now, fellow,

What's there?
First Serv Things for the cook, sir, but I know not what.

Cap Make haste, make haste [Exit first

Serving-man.] Surrah, fetch drier logs Call Peter, he will show thee where they are

Sec Serv I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter [Exit Cap Mass, and well said, a merry whore-son, ha!

Thou shalt be logger-head Goodfaith! 'tis day

The county will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would [Music within] I hear hum near Nurse Wife! what, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris Hie, make haste,

Make haste, the bridegroom he is come already Make haste, I say [Exeunt]

SCENE V — The Same JULIET'S Chamber

Enter Nurse

Nurse Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! fast, I warrant her, she

Why, lamb! why, lady! fie, you slug-a-bed!
Why, love, I say! madam! sweet-heart! why, bride!

What! not a word? you take your pennyworths

now
Sleep for a week, for the next night, I warrant,

The County Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little God forgive me,
Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep! 8
I needs must wake her Madam, madam,
madam!

Ay, let the county take you in your bed,
He'll fight you up, 't' faith Will it not be?
What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again! 12

I must needs wake you Lady! lady! lady!
Alas! alas! Help! help! my lady's dead!
O! well-a-day, that ever I was born
Some aqua-vite, ho! My lord! my lady! 16

Enter LADY CAPULET

Lady Cap What noise is here?

Nurse O lamentable day!

Lady Cap What is the matter?

Nurse Look, look! O heavy day!

Lady Cap O me, O me! my child, my only
life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! 20
Help, help! Call help

Enter CAPULET

Cap For shame! bring Juliet forth, her lord is come

Nurse She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead, alack the day!

Lady Cap Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead! she's dead! 24

Cap Ha! let me see her Out, alas! she's
cold,
Her blood is settled and her joints are stiff Life and these lips have long been separated Death lies on her like an untimely frost 28
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nurse O lamentable day!

Lady Cap O woeful time!

Cap Death that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak 32

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, and PARIS, with Musicians

Fri L Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap Ready to go, but never to return
O sor! the night before thy wedding-day
Hath Death lain with thy wife There she lies, 36
Flower as she was, deflowered by him
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir,
My daughter he hath wedded I will die
And leave him all life living, all is Death's! 40

Par Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this?

Lady Cap Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw 44
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight! 48

Nurse O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day! 52
Never was seen so black a day as this O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slam!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd, 56
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life! no! life, but love in death!
Cap Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now 60
To murder, murder our solemnity?

O child! O child! my soul and not my child!
Dead art thou! dead! alack, my child is dead,
And with my child my joys are burned! 64

Fri L Peace, ho! for shame! confusion cure lives not

In these confusions Heaven and yourself
Hath part in this fair maid, now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid 68

Your part in her you could not keep from death,
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life

The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heaven she should be advanc'd,
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd 72

Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O! in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well 76

She's not well married that lives married long,
But she's best married that dies married young Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse, and, as the custom is, 80

In all her best array, bear her to church!
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment

Cap All things that we ordain'd festival, 84
Turn from their office to black funeral,
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change, 88
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary

Fri L Sir, go you in, and, madam, go with
him,

And go, Sir Paris every one prepare 92
To follow this fair corse unto her grave
The heavens do lower upon you for some ill Move them no more by crossing their high will [Exeunt CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, PARIS, and Friar

First Mus Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone 97

Nurse Honest good fellows, ah! put up, put up for, well you know, this is a pitiful case

[Exit
First Mus Ay, by my troth the case may be amended 101

Enter PETER

Pet Musicians! O! musicians, 'Heart's ease, Heart's ease O! an ye will have me live, play
'Heart's ease' 104

First Mus Why 'Heart's ease'?

Pet O! musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe,' O! play me some merry dump, to comfort me

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Sec Mus Not a dump we, 'tis no time to play now

Enter BALTHASAR, booted

Pet You will not then?
Musicians No

News from Verona! How now, Balthasar? 12
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?

Pet I will then give it you soundly
First Mus What will you give us?

How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again,

Pet No money, on my faith! but the gleek,
I will give you the minstrel

For nothing can be ill if she be well 16
Bal Then she is well, and nothing can be ill,

First Mus Then will I give you the serving-
creature

Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives

Pet Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate, I will carry no crotchets

I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, 20
And presently took post to tell it you

Pet I'll re you, I'll fa you Do you note me? 121 First Mus An you re us, and fa us, you note us

Since you did leave it for my office, sir
Pom Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!

Sec Mus Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit

Thou know'st my lodging get me ink and
paper, 25

Pet Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men 128

And hire post-horses, I will hence to-night
Bal I do beseech you, sir, have patience

When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound—

Your looks are pale and wild, and do import 28
Some misadventure

Why 'silver sound?' why 'music with her silver sound?' What say you, Simon Catling? 133

Rom Tush, thou art deceiv'd,
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do

First Mus Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound

Has't thou no letters to me from the friar?
Bal No, my good lord

Pet Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?
Sec Mus I say 'silver sound,' because musicians sound for silver

No matter, get thee gone, 32
And hire those horses I'll be with thee straight

Pet Pretty too! What say you, James Soundpost? 140

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night
Let's see for means O mischief! thou art swift

Thrd Mus Faith, I know not what to say Pet O! I cry you mercy, you are the singer,
'I will say for you. It is, 'music with her silver sound,' because musicians have no gold for sounding 145

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men 36
I do remember an apothecary,

And hereabouts he dwells, which late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows, Culling of simples, meagre were his looks, 40

Sharp misery had worn him to the bones
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes, and about his shelves 44

A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show 48

Noting this penury, to myself I said
And if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a catiff wretch would sell it him 52

O! this same thought did but fore-run my need,
And this same needy man must sell it me.

As I remember, this should be the house
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. 56

What, ho! apothecary!

Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.

Here lives a catiff wretch would sell it him 52
O! this same thought did but fore-run my need,

First Mus What a pestilent knave is this same! 149

As I remember, this should be the house
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. 56

Sec Mus Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here, tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner
[Exeunt

What, ho! apothecary!

ACT V

SCENE I.—Mantua A Street.

Enter ROMEO

Rom If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,

Enter Apothecary
Ap Who calls so loud?

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne,
And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit 4
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful

Rom Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor,

thoughts
I dreamt my lady came and found me dead,— Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think,—

Hold, there is forty ducats, let me have A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear 60

And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently as hasty powder fir'd 64
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb

As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips, 3
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath

Ap Such mortal drugs I have, but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them

Rom Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness, 68

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hang upon thy back.
The world is not thy friend nor the world's law
The world affords no law to make thee rich, 73
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this

Ap My poverty, but not my will, consents

Rom I pay thy poverty, and not thy will 76

Ap Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off, and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight

Rom There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls, 80

Doing more murders in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none
Farewell, buy food, and get thyself in flesh 84
Come, cordial and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Verona FRIAR LAURENCE'S Cell

Enter FRIAR JOHN

Fri J Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE

Fri L This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua what says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter 4

Fri J Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,

And finding him, the searchers of the town, 8
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,

Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth,
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd 12

Fri L Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

Fri J I could not send it, here it is again,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection 16

Fri L Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,

The letter was not nice, but full of charge
Of dear import, and the neglecting it May do much danger. Friar John, go hence, Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight 21
Unto my cell

Fri J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.
[Exit]

Fri L Now must I to the monument alone,
Within these three hours will fair Juliet wake 24

She will beshrew me much that Romeo Hath had no notice of these accidents,

But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come 28

Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb!
[Exit]

SCENE III.—The Same A Churchyard in it a Monument belonging to the CAPULETS

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing flowers and a torch

Par Give me thy torch, boy hence, and stand aloof,

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along,

Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground. 4
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
Being loose, unfirm with digging up of graves,

But thou shalt hear it whistle then to me,
Assignal that thou hear'st something approach

Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go 9

Page [Aside] I am almost afraid to stand alone

Here in the churchyard, yet I will adventure
[Retires]

Par Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew, 12

O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,

Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans
The obseques that I for thee will keep 16
Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep

[The Page whistles]

The boy gives warning something doth approach

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obseques and true love's rite? 20

What! with a torch?—muffle me, night awhile
[Retires]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch, mattock, &c

Rom Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron

Hold, take this letter, early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father 24

Give me the light upon thy life I charge thee, Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,

And do not interrupt me in my course
Why I descend into this bed of death, 28

Is partly, to behold my lady's face,
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger

A precious ring, a ring that I must use
In dear employment therefore hence, be gone

But, if thou, jealous, dost return to pry 33
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,

And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs 36

The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far

Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.
Bal I will begone, sir, and not trouble you 40

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship Take thou that

Live, and be prosperous, and farewell, good fellow

Bal [Aside] For all this same, I'll hide me here about

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. 44

[Retires.]

Rom Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,
And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!
Par This is that banish'd haughty Montague, That murder'd my love's cousin, with which grief
It is supposed the fair creature died,
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies I will apprehend him.—
[Comes forward]
Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague,
Can vengeance be pursu'd further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee
Obey, and go with me, for thou must die
Rom I must, indeed, and therefore came I hither
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man, Fly hence and leave me: think upon these gone,
Let them affright thee: I beseech thee, youth,
Put not another sin upon my head
By urging me to fury: O! be gone
By heaven, I love thee better than myself
For I come hither arm'd against myself
Stay not, be gone, live, and hereafter say
A madman's mercy bade thee run away
Par I do defy thy conjurations,
And apprehend thee for a felon here
Rom Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy!
[They fight]
Page O Lord! they fight: I will go call the watch Par [Falls] O, I am slain!—If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet
[Dies]
Rom In faith, I will: Let me peruse this face Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!
What said my man when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think He told me Paris should have married Juliet
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so? O! give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour misfortune's book
I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,
A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a feasting presence full of light Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd, [Laying PARIS in the tomb]
How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry! which their keepers call A lightning before death: O! how may I Call this a lightning? O my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty
Thou art not conquer'd, beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there Tybalt, hest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O! what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin! Ah! dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe That unsubstantial Death is amorous,
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that I still will stay with thee,
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again: here, here will I remain With worms that are thy chambermaids, O!
here
Will I set up my everlasting rest,
And shake the yoke of mausoleum stars From this world-wearied flesh: Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here's to my love! [Drinks] O true apothecary!
Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die
[Dies]
Enter, at the other end of the Churchyard, FRIAR
LAURENCE, with a lantern, crow, and spade Fri L Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's
there?
Bal Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well
Fri L Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capel's monument Bal It doth so, holy sir, and there's my master,
One that you love
Fri L Who is it?
Bal Romeo
Fri L How long hath he been there?
Bal Full half an hour
Fri L Go with me to the vault
Bal I dare not, sir
My master knows not but I am gone hence,
And fearfully did menace me with death
If I did stay to look on his intents Fri L Stay then, I'll go alone: Fear comes upon me,
O! much I fear some ill unlucky thing
Bal As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.
Fri L [Advances] Romeo!
Alack, alack! what blood is this which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?
[Enters the tomb]
Romeo! O, pale! Who else? what! Paris too?
And steep'd in blood? Ah! what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance
The lady stirs
[Juliet wakes]
Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?

I do remember well where I should be, 149
And there I am Where is my Romeo?

Fri L I hear some noise Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep 152
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents come, come away
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead,
And Paris too come, I'll dispose of thee 156
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming, Come, go, good Juliet — [Noise again] I dare no longer stay

Jul Go, get thee hence, for I will not away What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
hand? 163

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end
O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly drop
To help me after! I will kiss thy lips, 164
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative [Kisses him Thy lips are warm!]

First Watch [Within] I Lead, boy which way?
Jul Yea, noise? then I'll be brief O happy dagger! [Snatching ROMEO's dagger]
This is thy sheath, [Stabs herself] there rest, and let me die 170

[Falls on ROMEO's body and dies]

Enter Watch, with the Page of PARIS

Page This is the place, there where the torch doth burn.

First Watch The ground is bloody, search about the churchyard 172
Go, some of you, whoever you find, attach [Exeunt some of the Watch]

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain,
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried 176
Go, tell the prince, run to the Capulets, Raise up the Montagues, some others search [Exeunt others of the Watch].

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie,
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry 181

Re-enter some of the Watch, with BALTHASAR.

Sec Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the churchyard

First Watch Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither

Re-enter other of the Watch, with FRIAR LAURENCE

Third Watch Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps; 184
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this churchyard side.

First Watch A great suspicion stay the friar
too 187

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants

Prince What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and Others
Cap What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

Lady Cap The people in the street cry
Romeo,

Some Juliet, and some Paris, and all run 192
With open outcry toward our monument

Prince What fear is this which startles in our ears?

First Watch Sovereign, here lies the County
Paris slain,

And Romeo dead, and Juliet, dead before, 196
Warm and new kill'd

Prince Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes

First Watch Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,

With instruments upon them, fit to open 200
These dead men's tombs

Cap O, heaven!—O wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en!—for, lo, his house
Is empty on the back of Montague— 204

And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom Lady Cap O me! this sight of death is as a bell,

That warns my old age to a sepulchre

Enter MONTAGUE and Others

Prince Come, Montague for thou art early
up, 208

To see thy son and heir more early down.
Mon Alas! my liege, my wife is dead to-
night,

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath.
What further woe conspires against mine
age? 212

Prince Look, and thou shalt see Mon O thou untaught! what manners is in
this,

To press before thy father to a grave?
Prince Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while, 216

Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent,

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death meantime for-
bear, 220

And let mischance be slave to patience.
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri L I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place 224
Doth make against me, of this dreadful murder,
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince Then say at once what thou dost know in this 228

Fri L I will be brief, for my short date of
breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet,

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife
I married them, and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death

Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city,
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd 236
You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,
To County Paris then comes she to me,
And, with wild looks bid me devise some mean
To rid her from this second marriage, 241
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her,—so tutor'd by my art,—
A sleeping potion, which so took effect 244
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave, 248
Being the time the potion's force should cease
But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight Return'd my letter back. Then, all alone, 252
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo 256
But, when I came,—some minute ere the time
Of her awakening,—here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes, and I entreated her come forth, 260
And bear this work of heaven with patience,
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But, as it seems, did violence on herself 264
All this I know, and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time, 268
Unto the rigour of severest law Prince We still have known thee for a holy
man.
Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?
Bal I brought my master news of Juliet's
death 272
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument

This letter he early bid me give his father,
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault, 276
If I departed not and left him there Prince Give me the letter, I will look on it Where is the county's page that rais'd the watch?
Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave, 281
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did,
Anon, comes one with light to open the tomb,
And by and by my master drew on him, 284
And then I ran away to call the watch.
Prince This letter doth make good the friar's
words,
Their course of love, the tidings of her death
And here he writes that he did buy a poison 288
Of a poor apothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
Where be these enemies?—Capulet! Montague!
See what a scourge is laid upon your hate, 292
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love.
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen all are punish'd Cap O brother Montague! give me thy
hand 296
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand
Mon But I can give thee more,
For I will raise her statue in pure gold,
That while Verona by that name is known, 300
There shall no figure at such rate be set
As that of true and faithful Juliet
Cap As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie,
Poor sacrifices of our enmity! 304 Prince A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished
For never was a story of more woe 309
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo [Exeunt

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors

Poet Good day, sir

Pain I am glad you're well

Poet I have not seen you long How goes the world?

Pain It wears, sir, as it grows

Poet Ay, that's well known,

But what particular rarity? what strange, 4

Which manifold record not matches? See,

Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power

Hath conjur'd to attend I know the merchant

Pain I know them both, th' other's a jewel- 8

Mer O! 'tis a worthy lord

Jew Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were,

To an untriable and continue goodness

He passes

Jew I have a jewel here— 12

Mer O! pray, let see it for the Lord Timon, sir?

Jew If he will touch the estimate but, for that—

Poet When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse 16

Which aptly sings the good

Mer [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good form.

Jew And rich here is a water, look ye

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord

Poet A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes 21

From whence 'tis nourish'd the fire i' the flint Shows not till it be struck, our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and, like the current flies 24

Each bound it chafes What have you there?

Pain A picture, sir When comes your book forth?

Poet Upon the heels of my presentment, sir Let's see your piece 28

Pain 'Tis a good piece

Poet So 'tis this comes off well and excellent

Pain Indifferent

Poet Admirable! How this grace

Speaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination 33

Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret

Pain It is a pretty mocking of the life, 36

Here is a touch, is't good?

Poet I'll say of it,

It tutors nature artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the stage

Pain How this lord is follow'd! 40

Poet The senators of Athens happy man!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man, 44

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment my free drift

Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of wax no levell'd malice 48

Infects one comma in the course I hold,

But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain How shall I understand you?

Poet I will unbolt to you. 52

You see how all conditions, how all minds—

As well of glib and slippery creatures as Of grave and austere quality—tender down
Their services to Lord Timon his large fortune, Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, 57
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts, yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better 60
Than to abhor himself even he drops down
The knees before him and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod

Pain I saw them speak together Poet Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill 64

Fearn'd Fortune to be thron'd the base o' the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states amongst them all, 68
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Who n Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to
her,

Whose present grace to present slaves and servants 72

Translates his rivals
Pain 'Tis concern'd to scope
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount 76
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition

Poet Nay, sir, but bear me on.
All those which were his fellows but of late,
Some better than his value, on the moment 80
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance, Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air

Pain Ay, marry, what of these? 84 Poet When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top

Even on their knees and hands, let him slip
down, 88

Not one accompanying his declining foot.
Pain 'Tis common

A thousand moral paintings I can show That shall demonstrate these quick b'ows of Fortune's 92

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter LORD TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every sutor, a Messenger from VENTIDIUS talking with him LUCILIUS and other servants following

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?
Mess Ay, my good lord five talents is his debt, 96

His means most short, his creditors most strait
Your honourable letter he desires

To those have shut him up, which, failing, Periods his comfort.

Tim Noble Ventidius! Well, 100
I am not of that feather to shake off
My friend when he must need me I do know
him

A gentleman that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have I'll pay the debt and free
him 104

Mess Your lordship ever binds him Tim Commend me to him I will send his ransom,

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, 108
But to support him after Fare you well

Mess All happiness to your honour [Exit

Enter an Old Athenian

Old Ath Lord Timon, hear me speak
Tim Freely, good father

Old Ath Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius
Tim I have so what of him? 113

Old Ath Most noble Timon, call the man before thee

Tim Attends he here or no? Lucilius!
Luc Here, at your lordship's service 116

Old Ath This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,

By night frequents my house I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd 120
Than one which holds a trencher

Tim. Well, what further?
Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin
else,

On whom I may confer what I have got
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride, 124
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine Attempts her love I prithee, noble lord,

Join with me to forbid him her resort, 128
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim The man is honest.
Old Ath Therefore he will be, Timon

His honesty rewards him in itself,
It must not bear my daughter

Tim. Does she love him? 132
Old Ath She is young and apt

Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To LUCILIUS] Love you the maid?
Luc Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it

Old Ath If in her marriage my consent be missing, 137

I call the gods to witness, I will choose Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband? 141

Old Ath. Three talents on the present, in future, all.

Tim This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me
long

To build his fortune I will strain a little, 144
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter,

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her

Old Ath Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his 148

Tim My hand to thee, mine honour on my promise

Luc Humbly I thank your lordship never may

That state or fortune fall into my keeping
Which is not ow'd to you! 152

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and Old Athenian Poet Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim I thank you, you shall hear from me anon

Go not away What have you there, my friend?
Pain A piece of painting, which I do beseech 156

Your lordship to accept Tim Painting is welcome

The painting is almost the natural man,
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,

He is but outside these pencil'd figures are 160
Even such as they give out I like your work,

And you shall find I like it wait attendance
Till you hear further from me

Pain The gods preserve you!
Tim Well fare you, gentleman give me your
hand, 164

We must needs dine together Sir, your jewel Hath suffer'd under praise

Jew What, my lord! dispraise?
Tim A mere satiety of commendations

If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd, 168
It would unclew me quite

Jew My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give but you well
know,

Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters Believe 't, dear
lord, 172

You mend the jewel by the wearing it.
Tim Well mock'd

Mer No, my good lord, he speaks the common tongue,

Which all men speak with him. 176 Tim Look, who comes here Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew We'll bear, with your lordship
Mer He'll spare none

Tim Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good
morrow, 180

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves
honest

Tim Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apem Are they not Athenians?
Tim Yes 184

Apem Then I repent not.
Jew You know me, Apemantus?

Apem Thou know'st I do, I call'd thee by thy name. 188

Tim Thou art proud, Apemantus Apem Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon

Tim Whither art going? 192
Apem To knock out an honest Athenian's brains

Tim That's a deed thou'lt die for Apem Right, if doing nothing be death by the law 197

Tim How liketh thou this picture, Apeman-
tus?

Apem The best, for the innocence 200
Tim Wrought he not well that painted it?

Apem He wrought better that made the painter, and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain You're a dog 204
Apem Thy mother's of my generation what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?
Apem No, I eat not lords 208

Tim An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies Apem O! they eat lords, so they come by great bellies

Tim That's a lascivious apprehension 212 Apem So thou apprehendest it, take it for thy labour

Tim How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus? 216

Apem Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit

Tim What dost thou think 'tis worth?
Apem Not worth my thinking How now, poet! 221

Poet How now, philosopher!
Apem Thou liest

Poet Art not one? 224
Apem Yes

Poet Then I lie not.
Apem Art not a poet?

Poet Yes 228
Apem Then thou liest look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow

Poet That's not feigned, he is so 231 Apem Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer Heavens, that I were a lord! 235

Tim What wouldst do then, Apemantus?
Apem Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart. 238

Tim What, thyself?
Apem Ay

Tim Wherefore? 241
Apem That I had no angry wit to be a lord
Art not thou a merchant?

Mer Ay, Apemantus 244 Apem Traffic confound thee, if the gods will
not!

Mer If traffic do it, the gods do it.
Apem Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee! 249

Trumpet sounds Enter a Servant.
Tim What trumpet's that?
Serv 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,
All of companionship 252

Tim Pray, entertain them, give them guide to us
 You must needs dine with me Go not you hence Till I have thanked you, when dinner's done,
 Show me this piece I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company

Most welcome, sir!

Apem. So, so, there! 257
 Aches contract and starve your supple joints!
 That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,
 And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out 260

Into baboon and monkey

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed

Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim Right welcome, sir!
 Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time 264
 In different pleasures Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all except APEMANTUS

Enter two Lords

First Lord What time o' day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

First Lord That time serves still. 268

Apem. The more accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.

Sec Lord Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast?

Apem. Ay, to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools 272

Sec Lord Fare thee well, fare thee well

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice

Sec Lord Why Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none 277

First Lord Hang thyself!

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding make thy requests to thy friend 280

Sec Lord Away, unpeaceable dog! or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of an ass [Exit

First Lord He's opposite to humanity

Come, shall we in, 285

And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
 The very heart of kindness

Sec Lord He pours it out, Plutus, the god of gold, 288

Is but his steward no meed but he repays
 Sevenfold above itself, no gift to him

But breeds the giver a return exceeding 291
 All use of quittance

First Lord The noblest mind he carries
 That ever govern'd man.

Sec Lord Long may he live in fortunes!
 Shall we in? 295

First Lord I'll keep you company [Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same A Room of State in TIMON'S House

Hautboys playing loud music A great banquet served in, FLAVIUS and Others attending then enter LORD TIMON, ALCIBIADES, Lords, and Senators, VENTIDIUS and Attendants Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS discontentedly, like himself

Ven Most honour'd Timon,
 It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my father's
 age,

And call him to long peace
 He is gone happy, and has left me rich 4

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
 To your free heart, I do return those talents,

Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help

I deriv'd liberty

Tim O! by no means, 8
 Honest Ventidius, you mistake my love,

I gave it freely ever, and there's none
 Can truly say he gives, if he receives

If our betters play at that game, we must not dare 12

To imitate them, faults that are rich are fair
Ven. A noble spirit

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON

Tim Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first

To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes, Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown, 17

But where there is true friendship, there needs
 none

Pray, sit, more welcome are ye to my fortunes Than my fortunes to me [They sit

First Lord My lord, we always have confess'd it 21

Apem. Ho, ho! confess'd it, hang'd it, have you not?

Tim O! Apemantus, you are welcome
Apem. No, 24

You shall not make me welcome
 I come to have thee thrust me out of doors

Tim Fie! thou'rt a churl, ye've got a humour
 there

Does not become a man, 'tis much to blame
 They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est, 28

But yond man is ever angry
 Go, let him have a table by himself,

For he does neither affect company,
 Nor is he fit for it, indeed 32

Apem. Let me stay at thine apparel, Timon
 I come to observe, I give thee warning o't.

Tim I take no heed of thee, thou'rt an Athenian, therefore, welcome I myself would have no power, prithee, let my meat make thee silent 38

Apem. I scorn thy meat, 'twould choke me, for I should

Ne'er flatter thee O you gods! what a number Of men eat Timon and he sees them not. 41

It grieves me to see so many dip their meat
 In one man's blood and all the madness is,

He cheers them up too 44

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men Methinks they should invite them without knives,

 Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for't, the fellow that 48 Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him 't has been prov'd If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals, 52

Lest they should spy my wind-pipe's dangerous notes

Great men should drink with harness on their throats

Tim My lord, in heart, and let the health go round

Sec Lord Let it flow this way, my good lord

Apem Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, 60
Honest water, which ne'er left man the mire
This and my food are equals, there's no odds Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods

Immortal gods I crave no pelf 64

I pray for no man but myself

Grant I may never prove so fond,

To trust man on his oath or bond,

Or a harlot for her weeping 68

Or a dog that seems a sleeping

Or a keeper with my freedom

Or my friends, if I should need em. 72

Amen So fall to t

Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now 76

Alcib My heart is ever at your service, my
lord

Tim You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends 80

Alcib So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em I could wish my best friend at such a feast

Apem 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em and bid me to 'em 86

First Lord Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect 91

Tim O! no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you. how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf, and thus far I confirm you O you gods! think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living should we ne'er have use for 'em, and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves Why, I have often wished myself poorer that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits, and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O! what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes O joy! e en made away ere it can be born Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks to forget their faults, I drink to you

Apem Thou weepest to make them drink,
Timon 116

Sec Lord Joy had the like conception in our
eyes,

And, at that instant, like a babe, sprung up

Apem Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard

Third Lord I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much. 120

Apem Much! [Tucket sounded]

Tim What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

How now!

Serv Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance 124

Tim Ladies? What are their wills?

Serv There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their
pleasures 128

Tim I pray, let them be admitted

Enter CUPID

Cup Hail to thee, worthy Timon, and to all
That of his bounties taste! The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron, and come freely 132

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom Th' ear,
Taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy table rise,
They only now come but to feast thine eyes

Tim They are welcome all, let 'em have kind admittance 136

Music, make their welcome! [Exit CUPID]

First Lord You see, my lord, how ample you're belov'd

Music Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing

Apem Hoy-day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way

They dancel they are mad women, 140

Like madness is the glory of this life,

As this pomp shows to a little oil and root

We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves,

And spend our flatteries to drink those men 144

Upon whose age we void it up again,

With poisonous spite and envy

Who lives that's not depraved or depraves?

Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves 148

Of their friend's gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me it has been
done.

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 152

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON; and to show their loves each singles, out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women,

a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease

Tim You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind,
You have added worth unto 't and lustre, 156
And entertain'd me with mine own device,
I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem Faith, for the worst is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me 161

Tim Ladies, there is an idle banquet
Attends you please you to dispose yourselves

All Lad Most thankfully, my lord 164
[Exeunt CUPID and Ladies]

Tim Flavius!

Flav My lord!

Tim The little casket bring me hither

Flav Yes, my lord [Aside] More jewels yet!
There is no crossing hum in 's humour, 168

Else I should tell him well, I' faith, I should, When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind
[Exit] 173

First Lord Where be our men?

Serv Here, my lord, in readiness

Sec Lord Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS with the Casket

Tim O, my friends! I have one word to say to you, 176

Look you, my good lord,
I must entreat you, honour me so much

As to advance this jewel, accept it and wear it, Kind my lord 180

First Lord I am so far already in your gifts—
All So are we all

Enter a Servant.

Serv My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate

Newly alighted, and come to visit you. 184

Tim They are fairly welcome.

Flav I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word, it does concern you near Tim Near! why then another time I'll hear

thee

I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment. 188

Flav [Aside] I scarce know how

Enter another Servant.

Sec Serv May it please your honour, Lord
Lucius,

Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver 192

Tim I shall accept them fairly, let the presents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news?

Third Serv Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds 198

Tim I'll hunt with him, and let them be receiv'd,

Not without fair reward

Flav [Aside] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great
gifts, 201

And all out of an empty coffer

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is, 204

Being of no power to make his wishes good
His promises fly so beyond his state

That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes For every word he is so kind that he now 208

Pays interest for 't, his land's put to their books
Well, would I were gently put out of office

Before I were forc'd out!
Happier he that has no friend to feed 212

Than such as do e'en enemies exceed I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit]

Tim You do yourselves Much wrong, you hate too much of your own merits

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love 216

Sec Lord With more than common thanks
I will receive it

Third Lord O! he's the very soul of bounty Tim And now I remember, my lord, you gave

Good words the other day of a bay courser 220
I rode on it is yours, because you lik'd it

Third Lord O! I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that

Tim You may take my word, my lord, I know no man

Can justly praise but what he does affect 224

I weigh my friend's affection with mine own,
I'll tell you true I'll call to you

All Lords O! none so welcome

Tim I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give, 228

Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary Alcibiades,

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich,
It comes in charity to thee, for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast Lie in a pitch'd field

Alcib Ay defil'd land, my lord

First Lord We are so virtuously bound,— Tim And so

Am I to you

Sec Lord So infinitely endear'd,— 236

Tim All to you. Lights, more lights!

First Lord The best of happiness,
Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord
Timon!

Tim Ready for his friends [Exeunt ALCEBIADES, Lords, &c]

Apem What a coil's here!
Serving of becks and jutting out of burns! 240

I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on curtsies 244

Tim Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I would be good to thee

Apem No, I'll nothing, for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly what need these feasts, pomps, and vain-glories? 252

Tim Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell, and come with better music. [Exit]

Apem So 256
Thou wilt not hear me now, thou shalt not then, I'll lock thy heaven from thee O! that men's ears should be To counsel death, but not to flattery [Exit]

ACT II

SCENE I—Athens. A Room in a Senator's House

Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand

Sen And late, five thousand to Varro and to Isidore

He owes nine thousand, besides my former sum, Which makes it five-and-twenty. Still in motion Of raging waste! It cannot hold, it will not. 4
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold,
If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more Better than he why, give my horse to Timon, 8
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
And able horses. No porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles and still invites All that pass by. It cannot hold, no reason 12
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS

Caph Here, sir, what is your pleasure?

Sen Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon,

Importune him for my moneys, be not ceas'd 16
With slight denial, nor then silenc'd when—'Commend me to your master—and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus,—but tell him,
My uses cry to me. I must serve my turn 20
Out of mine own, his days and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit. I love and honour him,
But must not break my back to heal his finger,
Immediate are my needs, and my relief 25
Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone
Put on a most importunate aspect, 28
A visage of demand, for, I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone 32

Caph I go, sir

Sen 'I go, sir!' Take the bonds along with you,
And have the dates in compt.

Caph
Sen

I will, sir
Go [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand

Flav No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,

That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot takes no account
How things go from him, nor resumes no care. 4
Of what is to continue never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting 8

Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO

Caph Good even, Varro. What!

You come for money?

Var. Serv Is it not your business too?

Caph It is and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv It is so

Caph Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv I fear it 12

Caph Here comes the lord!

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES and Lords, &c

Tim So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,

My Alcibiades. With me? what is your will?

Caph My lord, here is a note of certain dues

Tim Dues! Whence are you?

Caph Of Athens here, my lord 17

Tim Go to my steward

Caph Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month 20

My master is awak'd by great occasion

To call upon his own, and humbly prays you

That with your other noble parts you'll suit

In giving him his right

Tim Mine honest friend, 24

I prithee, but repair to me next morning

Caph Nay, good my lord,—

Tim Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv One Varro's servant, my good

lord,—

Isid. Serv From Isidore,

He humbly prays your speedy payment. 28

Caph If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks

And past

Isid. Serv Your steward puts me off, my

lord, 32

And I am sent expressly to your lordship

Tim Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on,

I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.]

[To FLAVIUS.] Come hither, pray you, 36

How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd

With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
And the detention of long-since due debts,
Against my honour?

Flav Please you, gentlemen, 40
The time is unagreeable to this business
Your importunity cease till after dinner,
That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid

Tim Do so, my friends 44
See them well entertained

Flav Pray, draw near [Exit] [Exit]

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool

Caph Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus let's ha' some sport with 'em.

Var Serv Hang him, he'll abuse us 48

Isid. Serv A plague upon him, dog!

Var Serv How dost, fool?

Apem Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var Serv I speak not to thee 52

Apem No, 'tis to thyself [To the Fool]

Come away

Isid Serv [To VAR SERV] There's the fool

hangs on your back already 56

Apem No, thou stand'st single, thou'rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem He last asked the question Poor rogues, and usurers' men' bawds between gold and want! 61

All Serv What are we, Apemantus?

Apem Asses

All Serv Why? 64

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv Gramercies, good fool How does your mistress? 69

Fool She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are Would we could see you at Corinth! 72

Apem. Good! gramercy

Enter Page

Fool Look you, here comes my mistress'

Page [To the Fool] Why, how now, captain!

what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably 80

Page Prithce, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters I know not

which is which

Apem Canst not read? 84

Page No

Apem There will little learning die then that day thou art hanged This is to Lord

Timon, this to Alcibiades Go, thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd 89

Page Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death Answer not, I am gone [Exit Page]

Apem E'en so thou outrunn'st grace —

Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's

Fool Will you leave me there?

Apem If Timon stay at home You three serve three usurers? 97

All Serv Ay, would they served us!

Apem So would I as good a trick as ever

hangman served thief 100

Fool Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv Ay, fool

Fool I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant my mistress is one, and I am her fool

When men come to borrow of your masters they approach sadly, and go away merry, but they enter my mistress' house merrily and go away sadly the reason of this? 108

Var Serv I could render one

Apem Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave, which, withstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed 112

Var Serv What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool A fool in good clothes, and something like thee 'Tis a spirit sometime 't appears like a lord, sometime like a lawyer, sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than s artificial one He is very often like a knight, and generally in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in 121

Var Serv Thou art not altogether a fool

Fool Nor thou altogether a wise man as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest 125

Apem That answer might have become Ape-

mantus

All Serv Aside, aside, here comes Lord

Timon. 129

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS

Apem Come with me fool come

Fool I do not always follow lover, elder brother and woman, sometime the philosopher

[Exit APEMANTUS and Fool]

Flav Pray you, walk near I'll speak with you anon [Exit Servants]

Tim You make me marvel wherefore, ere this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me,

That I might so have rated my expense 136

As I had leave of means?

Flav You would not hear me,

At many leasures I propos'd

Tim Go to

Perchance some single vantages you took,

When my indisposition put you back, 140

And that unaptness made your minister,

Thus to excuse yourself

Flav O my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts,

Laid them before you, you would throw them

off, 144

And say you found them in mine honesty,

When for some trifling present you have bid me

Return so much, I have shook my head, and

wept,

Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd

you 148

To hold your hand more close I did endure

Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate

And your great flow of debts My loved lord, 152
Though you hear now, too late, yet now 's a time,
The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts

Tim Let all my land be sold Flav 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and
gone, 156

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues, the future comes apace
What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning? 160

Tim To Lacedæmon did my land extend

Flav O my good lord! the world is but a word,
Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone!

Tim You tell me true 164

Flav If you suspect my husbandry or false-
hood,

Call me before the exactest auditors,
And set me on the proof So the gods bless me
When all our offices have been oppress'd 168
With notous feeders, when our vaults have wept
With drunken spith of wine, when every room Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy,

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock, 172
And set mine eyes at flow

Tim Prithce, no more

Flav Heavens! have I said, the bounty of this lord!

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants
This night englutted! Who is not Timon's? 176 What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!
Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise, 179

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made Feast-won, fast-lost, one cloud of winter showers,

These flies are couch'd

Tim Come, sermon me no further,
No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart,
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. 184

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart,
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use 189

As I can bid thee speak

Flav Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them blessings, for by these 192
Shall I try friends You shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes, I am wealthy in my friends Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants

Serv My lord! my lord! 196

Tim I will dispatch you severally. you, to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you I hunted with his honour to-day, you, to Sempronius.

Commend me to their loves, and I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use them toward a supply of money let the request be fifty talents

Flam As you have said, my lord 204

Flav [Aside] Lord Lucius, and Lucullus?

hum

Tim [To another Servant] Go you, sir, to the senators,—

Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing,—bid em send o' the instant 208

A thousand talents to me

Flav I have been bold,—

For that I knew it the most general way,—
To them to use your signet and your name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return

Tim Is't true? can't be? 213

Flav They answer, in a joint and corporate
voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would, are sorry, you are honourable, 216

But yet they could have wish'd, they know not,
Something hath been amiss, a noble nature

May catch a wrench, would all were well, 'tis pity;
And so, intending other serious matters, 220

After distasteful looks and these hard fractions,
With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods
They froze me into silence

Tim You gods, reward them!

Prithce, man, look cheerly These old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary, 225

Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows,
'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind,
And nature, as it grows again toward earth, 228

Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy

[To a Servant] Go to Ventidius —[To FLA-VIUS] Prithce, be not sad,

Thou art true and honest, ingenuously I speak, No blame belongs to thee —[To Servant] Ven-tidius lately 232

Buried his father, by whose death he's stepp'd
Into a great estate, when he was poor,

Imprison'd and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents, greet him from
me, 236

Bid him suppose some good necessity Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd

With those five talents [Exit Servant] [To FLAVIUS] That had, give't these fellows

To whom 'tis instant due Ne'er speak, or think That Timon's fortunes mong his friends can sink.

Flav I would I could not think it that thought is bounty's foe 242

Being free itself, it thinks all others so [Exeunt]

ACT III

SCENE I.—Athens A Room in LUCULLUS'
House

FLAMINIUS waiting Enter a Servant to him,

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside] One of Lord Timon's men! a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right, I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which, in my lord's behalf, I come to untreat your honour to supply, who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas! good lord, a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on't, and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his, I ha' told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from it.

Re-enter Servant with wine

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason, and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well good parts in thee. [To the Servant]—Get you gone, sirrah—[Exit Servant] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidaires for thee good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much suffer,

And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coals be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart? It turns in less than two nights? O you gods! I feel my master's passion. This slave unto his honour

Has my lord's meat in him
Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment
When he is turn'd to poison?

O! may diseases only work upon't, And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature
Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour

SCENE II—The Same A Public Place

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it, he cannot want for money

Sec Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How!

Sec Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord
Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his, yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Servil. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord, I have sweat to see his honour

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well. commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend

Servil. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord, he's ever sending how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Servil. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord, requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me, He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous, I should not urge it half so faithfully

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Servil. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unuckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do, the more beast, I say, I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness, but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship, and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him? 66

Servil. Yes, sir, I shall

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius

[Exit SERVILIUS]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed, And he that's once denied will hardly speed

[Exit]

First Stran. Do you observe this Hostilius?

Sec Stran. Ay, too well

First Stran. Why this is the world's soul, and just of the same piece 72

Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father, And kept his credit with his purse, 76

Supported his estate, nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages, he ne'er drinks

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip, And yet, O! see the monstrousness of man, 80

When he looks out in an ungrateful shape, He does deny him, in respect of his,

What charitable men afford to beggars

Third Stran. Religion groans at it

First Stran. For mine own part, 84

I never tasted Timon in my life, Nor came any of his bounties over me,

To mark me for his friend, yet, I protest, For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, 88

And honourable carriage, Had his necessity made use of me,

I would have put my wealth into donation, And the best half should have return'd to him, 92

So much I love his heart. But, I perceive, Men must learn now with pity to dispense,

For policy suits above conscience [Exeunt]

SCENE III — The Same A Room in SEMPRONIUS'S House

Enter SEMPRONIUS and a Servant of TIMON'S

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't. Hum! 'bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus, And now Ventidius is wealthy too,

Whom he redeem'd from prison all these 4 Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,

They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for

They have all denied him

Sem. How! have they denied him?

Have Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? 8 And does he send to me? Three? hum!

It shows but little love or judgment in him Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians, Thrice give him over, must I take the cure upon me? 12

He has much disgrac'd me in't, I'm angry at him,

That might have known my place. I see no sense for t, 1

But his occasions might have woo'd me first, For, in my conscience, I was the first man 16

That e'er received gift from him And does he think so backwardly of me now,

That I'll requite it last? No So it may prove an argument of laughter 20

To the rest, and I mongst lords be thought a fool

I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum, He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake,

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return, 24

And with their faint reply this answer join, Who hates mine honour shall not know my

com [Exit]

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic, he crossed himself by t and I cannot think but in the end the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire

Of such a nature is his politic love This was my lord's best hope, now all are fled 36

Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead, Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards Many a bounteous year must be employ'd

Now to guard sure their master 40 And this is all a liberal course allows

Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house [Exit]

SCENE IV — The Same A Hall in TIMON'S House

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out

First Var Serv. Well met, good morrow,

Titus and Hortensius

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro

Hor. Lucius!

What! do we meet together!

Luc. Ser. Ay, and I think

One business does command us all, for mine 4 Is money

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother

What do you think the hour?

Phi Labouring for nine. 8

Luc Serv So much?

Phi Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc Serv Not yet.

Phi I wonder on't, he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc Serv Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him.

You must consider that a prodigal course 12

Is like the sun's, but not, like his, recoverable.

I fear,

'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse,

That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet 16

Find little.

Phi I am of your fear for that.

Tit I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor Most true, he does.

Tit And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,

For which I wait for money. 21

Hor It is against my heart.

Luc Serv Mark, how strange it shows,

Timon in this should pay more than he owes

And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,

And send for money for 'em. 25

Hor I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness.

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,

And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth. 28

First Var Serv Yes, mine's three thousand crowns, what's yours?

Luc Serv Five thousand mine.

First Var Serv 'Tis much deep and it should seem by the sum,

Your master's confidence was as above mine, 32

Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc Serv Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth? 36

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit We attend his lordship, pray, signify so much.

Flam I need not tell him that, he knows you are too diligent. [Exit FLAMINIUS.]

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc Serv Hal! is not that his steward muffled

so?

He goes away in a cloud. call him, call him.

Tit Do you hear, sir? 44

Sec Var Serv By your leave, sir.

Flav What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting, 48

'Twere sure enough.

Why then prefer'd you not your sums and bills,

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?

Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts,

And take down the interest into their gluttonous

mans. 53

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up,

Let me pass quietly.

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end, 56

I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc Serv Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as

you.

For you serve knaves. [Exit

First Var Serv How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter? 62

Sec Var Serv No matter what, he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broadly than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit O! here's Servilius, now we shall know some answer. 68

Servil If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't, for, take't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him, he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc Serv Many do keep their chambers are not sick.

And, if it be so far beyond his health, 76

Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts,

And make a clear way to the gods.

Servil Good gods!

Tit We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam [Within] Servilius, help! my lord!

my lord! 80

Enter TIMON in a rage, FLAMINIUS

following.

Tim What! are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now, 84

Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc Serv Put in now, Titus.

Tit My lord, here is my bill.

Luc Serv Here's mine. 88

Hor And mine, my lord.

Both Var Serv And ours, my lord.

Phi All our bills.

Tim Knock me down with 'em. cleave me to the girdle. 92

Luc Serv Alas! my lord,—

Tim Cut my heart in sums.

Tit Mine, fifty talents.

Tim Tell out my blood. 96

Luc Serv Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim Five thousand drops pays that. What yours? and yours?

First Var Serv My lord,—

Sec Var Serv My lord,— 100

Tim Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.

Hor Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their cans at their money. these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Exeunt]

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS

Tim They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves
Creditors' devils!

Flav My dear lord —

Tim What if it should be so?

Flav My lord, —

Tim I'll have it so My steward!

Flav Here, my lord

Tim So fitly! Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus and Sempronius, all I'll once more feast the rascals

Flav O my lord!
You only speak from your distracted soul, 116
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table

Tim Be't not in thy care go
I charge thee, invite them all let in the tide Of knaves once more, my cook and I'll provide
[Exeunt]

SCENE V — The Same The Senate House

The Senate sitting

First Sen My lord, you have my voice to it, the fault's

Bloody, 'tis necessary he should die
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy

Sec Sen Most true, the law shall bruise him

Enter ALCIBIADES, attended

Alcib Honour, health, and compassion to the senate! 5

First Sen Now, captain

Alcib I am a humble suitor to your virtues
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood, Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth
To those that without heed do plunge into't 13
He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues,

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice, — 16
An honour in him which buys out his fault, —
But, with a noble fury and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe, 20
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument

First Sen You undergo too strict a paradox, Striving to make an ugly deed look fair 25 Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling

Upon the head of valour, which indeed 28
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born

He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs — 32

His outsoles, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger
If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill, 36
What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill!

Alcib My lord, —

First Sen You cannot make gross sins look clear,

To revenge is no valour, but to bear 40

Alcib My lords, then, under favour, pardon
me,

If I speak like a captain
Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats? sleep upon't, 44

And let the foes quietly cut their throats Without repugnancy? If there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why then, women are more valiant 48

That stay at home, if bearing carry it,
And the ass more captain than the lion, the felon

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering O my lords! 52

As you are great, be pitifully good
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust,
But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just. 56

To be in anger is impiety,
But who is man that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this Sec Sen You breathe in vain.

Alcib In vain! his service done 60
At Lacedæmon and Byzantium

Were a sufficient bribe for his life
First Sen What's that?

Alcib I say my lords, he has done fair service, 64

And slain in fight many of your enemies
How full of valour did he bear himself

In the last conflict and made plentiful wounds!
Sec Sen He has made too much plenty with
'em, 68

He's a sworn rioter, he has a sin that often Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner,

If there were no foes that were enough
To overcome him, in that beastly fury 72

He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions 'tis unerr'd to us,

His days are foul and his drink dangerous
First Sen He dies 76

Alcib Hard fate! he might have died in war
My lords, if not for any parts in him, —

Though his right arm might purchase his own
time,

And be in debt to none — yet more to move you Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both, 81

And, for I know your reverend ages love Security, I'll pawn my victories, all

My honour to you, upon his good returns. 84
If by this crime he owes the law his life,

Why, let the war receive't in valiant gore,
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

First Sen We are for law, he dies urge it
no more, 88

On height of our displeasure. Friend, or brother,

He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Alcib Must it be so? it must not be My lords,
 I do beseech you, know me. 92
Sec Sen How!
Alcib Call me to your remembrances Thrd Sen What!
Alcib I cannot think but your age has forgot
 me,

It could not else be I should prove so base, 96
 To sue, and be denied such common grace
 My wounds ache at you
First Sen Do you dare our anger?
 'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect,
 We banish thee for ever

Alcib Banish me! 100
 Banish your dotage, banish usury,
 That makes the senate ugly

First Sen If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,

Attend our weightier judgment And, not to swell our spirit, 104
 He shall be executed presently

[Exeunt Senators
Alcib Now the gods keep you old enough, that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you!
 I am worse than mad I have kept back their
 foes, 108

While they have told their money and let out
 Their coin upon large interest, I myself
 Rich only in large hurts all those for this?
 Is this the balsam that the usuring senate 112
 Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
 It comes not ill, I hate not to be banish'd,
 It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
 That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up 116
 My discontented troops, and lay for hearts
 'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds, Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods
 [Exit]

SCENE VI.—The Same A Room of State in TIMON'S House

Music Tables set out Servants attending Enter divers Lords, Senators, and Others, at several doors.

First Lord The good time of day to you, sir

Sec Lord I also wish it you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day 3

First Lord Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends

Sec Lord It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting 9

First Lord I should think so he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off, but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear 14

Sec Lord In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go 20

Sec Lord Every man here's so What would he have borrowed you?

First Lord A thousand pieces

Sec Lord A thousand pieces! 24

First Lord What of you?

Thrd Lord He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes

Enter TIMON and Attendants

Tim With all my heart, gentlemen both,
 and how fare you? 29

First Lord Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship

Sec Lord The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship 33

Tim [Aside] Nor more willingly leaves winter, such summer-birds are men Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound, we shall to't presently 39

First Lord I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty
 messenger

Tim O! sir let it not trouble you

Sec Lord My noble lord,— 44

Tim Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

Sec Lord Mymosthonourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that when your lordship this other day sent to me I was so unfortunate a beggar

Tim Think not on't, sir 49

Sec Lord If you had sent but two hours
 before,—

Tim Let it not cumber your better remembrance [The banquet brought in] Come, bring in all together

Sec Lord All covered dishes!

First Lord Royal cheer, I warrant you. 56

Thrd Lord Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it

First Lord How do you? What's the news?
Thrd Lord Alcibiades is banished hear you
 of it? 61

First Lord Alcibiades banished!

Sec Lord 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord How? how? 64

Sec Lord I pray you, upon what?

Tim My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Thrd Lord I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward 68

Sec Lord Thus is the old man still Thrd Lord Will't hold? will't hold?

Sec Lord It does, but time will—and so— 72

Thrd Lord I do conceive

Tim Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress, your diet shall be in all places alike Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.— 78

You great benefactors sprinkle our society with thankfulness For your own gifts, make yourselves praised but reserve still to give, lest your duties be despised Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another, for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome. Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes uncovered are full of warm water]

Some speak: What does his lordship mean?

Some other: I know not.

Tim: May you a better feast never behold, You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and lukewarm water.

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last, Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces.

[Throwing the water in their faces]

Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long. Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites, Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,

You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies, Cap and knees slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks! Of man and beast the infinite malady. Crust you quite o'er! What! dost thou go? Soft! take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou,—

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.

[Throws the dishes at them]

What! all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest. Burn house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be Of Timon man and all humanity! [Exit]

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, &c

First Lord: How now, my lords!

Sec Lord: Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?

Thrd Lord: Push! did you see my cap?

Fourth Lord: I have lost my gown.

First Lord: He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat did you see my jewel?

Thrd Lord: Did you see my cap?

Sec Lord: Here 'tis.

Fourth Lord: Here lies my gown.

First Lord: Let's make no stay.

Sec Lord: Lord Timon's mad.

Thrd Lord: I feel t upon my bones.

Fourth Lord: One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON

Tim: Let me look back upon thee O thou wall,

That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth, And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent!

Obedience fail in children! slaves and fools, Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench, And minister in their steads! To general filths Convert, o' the instant, green virginity! Do't in your parents' eyes! Bankrupts, hold fast,

Rather than render back, out with your knives, And cut your trusters' throats! Bound servants, steal!—

Large-handed robbers your gravemasters are,— And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed, Thy mistress is o' the brothel! Son of sixteen, Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old lumping sure, With it beat out his brains! Piety, and fear,

Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, Domestic awe, night-rest and neighbourhood,

Instruction, manners, mysteries and trades, Degrees, observances, customs and laws,

Decline to your confounding contraries, And let confusion live! Plagues incident to men,

Your potent and infectious fevers heap On Athens, ripe for stroke! Thou cold sciatica, Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt As lamely as their manners! Lust and liberty

Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth, That 'gaunst the stream of virtue they may strive, And drown themselves in riot! Itches, blains, Sow all the Athenian bosoms, and their crop Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath,

That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee

But nakedness, thou detestable town! Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!

Timon will to the woods, where he shall find The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.

The gods confound—hear me, you good gods all—

The Athenians both within and out that wall! And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow To the whole race of mankind, high and low!

Amen. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in TIMON'S House

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants

First Serv: Hear you, Master steward! where's our master?

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining? Flav: Alack! my fellows, what should I say to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, I am as poor as you.

First Serv: Such a house broke! So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not

One friend to take his fortune by the arm, And go along with him!

Sec Serv: As we do turn our backs From our companion thrown into his grave,

So his familiars to his buried fortunes Sunk all away, leave their false vows with him,

Like empty purses pick'd, and his poor self, A dedicated beggar to the air,

With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav All broken implements of a ruin'd
house 16

Third Serv Yet do our hearts wear Timon's
livery,

That see I by our faces, we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow Leak'd is our bark,
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, 20 Hearing the surges threat we must all part Into this sea of air

Flav Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake 24 Let's yet be fellows, let's shake our heads, and
say,

As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
'We have seen better days' Let each take some,

[Giving them money]
Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word
more 28

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor [They embrace, and part several ways]

O! the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us.
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt? 32
Who would be so mock'd with glory? or so live,
But in a dream of friendship?

To have his pomp and all what state compounds
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends? 36

Poor honest lord! brought low by his own heart, Undone by goodness Strange, unusual blood,

When man's worst sin is he does too much good!
Who then dares to be half so kind again? 40

For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
My dearest lord, bless'd, to be most accur'd,

Rich, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas! kind lord,

He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat 45
Of monstrous friends,

Nor has he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it. 48

I'll follow and inquire him out I'll ever serve his mind with my best will,

Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still. [Exit]

SCENE III.—Woods and Cave near the Sea-shore.

Enter TIMON from the Cave

Tim. O blessed breeding sun! draw from the earth

Rotten humidity, below thy sister's orb Infect the air! Timon's brothers of one womb,

Whose procreation, residence and birth, 4 Scarce is dividant, touch them with several fortunes,

The greater scorns the lesser not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,

But by contempt of nature
Raise me thus beggar, and deny't that lord,

The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,

The beggar native honour
It is the pasture lards the rother's sides, 12
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, 'This man's a flatterer?' if one be,

So are they all, for every grize of fortune 16
Is smooth'd by that below the learned pate Ducks to the golden fool all is oblique,

There's nothing level in our cursed natures
But direct villany Therefore, be abhorr'd 20

All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots! [Digging]

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate 24
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold! yellow, glittering, precious gold! No,

gods,
I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!

Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair, 28

Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.

Ha! you gods, why this? What tins, you gods?
Why, this

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides,

Pluck stout men's pillows from below their head 32

This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions, bless the accur'd,

Make the hoar leprosy ador'd, place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation, 36

With senators on the bench, this is it
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again,

She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices 40

To the April day again. Come, damned earth, Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds

Amongst the rout of nations, I will make thee Do thy right nature.—[March afar off] Ha! a drum? thou'rt quick, 44

But yet I'll bury thee thou'lt go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand

Nay, stay thou out for earnest [Keeping some gold]

Enter ALCEBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner, PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib What art thou there? speak. 48

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,

For showing me again the eyes of man!
Alcib What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee, 52

That art thyself a man?
Tim I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something

Alcib I know thee well,
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange

Tim I know thee too, and more than that I know thee 57

I not desire to know Follow thy drum,
 With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules,
 Religious canons, civil laws are cruel, 60 Then what should war be? This fell whore of
 thine
 Hath in her more destruction than thy sword
 For all her cherubin look.

Phry Thy lips rot off!
Tim I will not kiss thee, then the rot returns 64
 To thine own lips again.

Alcib How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim As the moon does, by wanting light to give

But then renew I could not like the moon, 68
 There were no suns to borrow of Alcib Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?

Tim None, but to maintain my opinion
Alcib What is it, Timon? 72

Tim Promise me friendship, but perform none if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man! 76

Alcib I have heard in some sort of thy miseries

Tim Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity

Alcib I see them now, then was a blessed
 time

Tim As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots 80

Timan Is this the Athenian munion, whom the world

Voic'd so regardfully?

Tim Art thou Timandra?

Timan Yes

Tim Be a whore still, they love thee not that use thee,

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours, season the slaves 85

For tubs and baths, bring down rose-checked
 youth

To the tub-fast and the diet.

Timan Hang thee, monster!

Alcib Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits 88

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,

The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band I have heard and griev'd

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, 93

Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon
 them,—

Tim I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee
 gone. 96

Alcib I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear
 Timon.

Tim How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib Why, fare thee well.

Here is some gold for thee

Tim Keep it, I cannot eat it. 100

Alcib When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib Ay, Timon, and have cause

Tim The gods confound them all in thy conquest, and 104

Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib Why me, Timon?

Tim That, by killing of villains, thou wast born to conquer

My country

Put up thy gold go on,—here's gold,—go on,

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove 109

Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison

In the sick air let not thy sword skip one

Pity not honour'd age for his white beard, 112

He is a usurer Strike me the counterfeit matron,

It is her habit only that is honest,

Herself's a bawd Let not the virgin's cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword, for those milkpaps, 116

That through the window-bars bore at men's eye.

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,

But set them down horrible traitors Spare not the babe,

Whose dumpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy, 120

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle

Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,

And munge it sans remorse. Swear against objects,

Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes, 124

Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers

Make large confusion, and, thy fury spent, 128

Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy confusion.

Tim Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee! 132

Phry } Give us some gold, good Timon

Timan } hast thou more?

Tim Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,

And to make whores a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,

Your aprons mountant you are not oathable,

Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear

Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues 138

The immortal gods that hear you, spare your
 oaths,

I'll trust to your conditions be wheres still;

And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,

Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up,

Let your close fire predominate his smoke,

And be no turncoats yet may your pains, sex
 months, 144

Be quite contrary and thatch your poor thin roofs

With burdens of the dead, some that were hang'd, No matter, wear them, betray with them
whore still,
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face 148
A pox of wrinkles!

Phry. } Well, more gold. What then?
Timon. } Believe t, that we'll do anything for gold.
Tim. Consumptions sow 152
In hollow bones of man, strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring Crack the lawyer's
voice,

That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillies shrilly hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh, 157
And not believes himself down with the nose,
Down with it flat, take the bridge quite away
Of him that, has particular to foresee, 160 Smells from the general weal make curl'd-pate ruffians bald,

And let the unscar'd braggarts of the war Derive some pain from you plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell 164
The source of all erection. There's more gold,
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!

Phry. } More counsel with more money,
Timon. } bounteous Timon. 168 Tim. More where, more mischief first, I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens!
Farewell, Timon

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more

Alcib. I never did thee harm. 173

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take

Thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him. Strike!

[Drum beats. Exeunt ALCEBIADES,

PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's un-

kindness, 177

Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou,

[Digging

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,

Teems, and feeds all, whose self-same mettle,

Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd, 181

Engenders the black toad and adder blue,

The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,

With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven

Whereon Hyperion's quickenng fire doth shame,

Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,

From forth thy plentiful bosom, one poor root!

Ensear thy fertile and conception womb, 188

Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!

Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and
bears,

Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward
face

Hath to the marbled mansion all above 192

Never presented! O! a root, dear thanks:

Dry up thy marrows, vines and plough-torn leas,
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips! 197

Enter APEMANTUS

More man! Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed thither men report

Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use
them. 200

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog

Whom I would imitate consumption catch
thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected,

A poor unmanly melancholy sprung 204

From change of fortune Why this spade? this place?

This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?

Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,

Hug their diseases'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was Shame not these woods

By putting on the cunning of a carper 210

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive

By that which has undone thee hunge thy knee,

And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,

Blow off thy cap, praise his most vicious strain,

And call it excellent Thou wast told thus,

Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bid
welcome, 216

To knaves and all approachers 'tis most just

That thou turn rascal, hadst thou wealth again,

Rascals should have't Do not assume my like-

ness. 219

Tim. Were I like thee I'd throw away myself

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself, 221

A madman so long, now a fool What! think'st

That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,

Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd
trees, 224

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels

And skip when thou point'st out? will the cold
brook,

Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste

To cure the o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures 228

Whose naked natures live in all the spite

Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks

To the conflicting elements expos'd,

Answer mere nature, bid them flatter thee, 232

O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery

Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a castrif.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee 237

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.

Does please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem If thou didst put this sour-cold habit
on

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well, but thou Dost it enforcedly, thou'dst courtier be again
Wert thou not beggar Willing misery
Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before, 244
The one is filling still, never complete,
The other, at high wish best state, contentless, Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content 248
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim Not by his breath that is more miserable

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog 252 Hast thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drudges of it Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd
thyself 256

In general riot, melted down thy youth
In different buds of lust, and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee But myself, 260
Who had the world as my confectionary, The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of
men

At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck as leaves 264
Do on the oak, have with one winter's blast Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows, I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden 268
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time Hath made thee hard in it Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag, 272
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary Hence! be gone!
If thou hast not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer

Apem Art thou proud yet? 277

Tim Ay, that I am not thee Apem I, that I was No prodigal

Tim I, that I am one now
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, 280
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.

Apem Here, I will mend thy feast

Tim First mend my company, take away
thyself 284

Apem So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thee

Tim 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd,

If not, I would it were Apem What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,

Tell them there I have gold, look, so I have

Apem Here is no use for gold

The best and truest,

For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm. 288

Apem Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim Under that's above me

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem Where my stomach finds meat, or, rather, where I eat it

Tim Would poison were obedient and knew
my mind!

Apem Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim To sauce thy dishes

Apem The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends When thou wast in thy guilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity, in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary There's a medlar for thee, eat it

Tim On what I hate I feed not. 306

Apem Dost hate a medlar?

Tim Ay, though it look like thee

Apem An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means? 312

Tim Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem Myself

Tim I understand thee, thou hadst some means to keep a dog 317

Apem What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim Women nearest, but men, men are the things themselves What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem Give it the beasts, to be rid of the
men 324

Tim Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem Ay, Timon. 328

Tim A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee, if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee, if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass, if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livest but as a breakfast to the wolf, if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner, wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury, wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse, wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard, wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life, all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation! 351

Apem If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here, the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city? 357

Apem Yonder comes a poet and a painter the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again. 361

Tim When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus 364

Apem Thou art the cap of all the fools alive
Tim Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse!

Tim All villains that do stand by thee are pure 368

Apem There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim If I name thee
I'll beat thee, but I should infect my hands

Apem I would my tongue could rot them off!

Tim Away, thou issue of a mangy dog! 373
Choler does kill me that thou art alive,
I swoond to see thee

Apem Would thou wouldst burst!

Tim Away,
Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose 376
A stone by thee [Throws a stone at him.

Apem Beast!

Apem Slave!

Tim Toad!

Apem Rogue, rogue, rogue!

Tim I am sick of this false world, and will love nought but even the mere necessities upon't.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave, 380
Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat Thy grave-stone daily make thine epitaph,
That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

[Looking on the gold
O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce 384
Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler
Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!
Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god, 389
That soldier'st close impossibilities, And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every
tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts! 392
Think, thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire

Apem Would 'twere so

But not till I am dead, I'll say thou'st gold

Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly

Tim Throng'd to?

Apem Ay

Tim Thy back, I prithee

Apem Love, and love thy misery!

Tim Long live so, and so die!

[Exit APEMANTUS.
I am quit.

More things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor
them. 400

Enter Thieves

First Thief Where should he have this gold?
It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy 405

Sec Thief It is noised he hath a mass of treasure

Thurd Thief Let us make the assay upon him if he care not for't, he will supply us easily, if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

Sec Thief True, for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid. 412

First Thief Is not this he?

Thieves Where?

Sec Thief 'Tis his description.

Thurd Thief He, I know him 416

All Save thee, Timon.

Tim Now, thieves?

All Soldiers, not thieves

Tim Both too, and women's sons 420

Thieves We are not thieves, but men that much do want

Tim Your greatest want is, you want much of meat

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots,

Within this mule break forth a hundred springs,
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips, 425
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush Lays her full mess before you Want! why want?

First Thief We cannot live on grass, on berries, water, 428

As beasts, and birds, and fishes

Tim Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes,

You must eat men Yet thanks I must you con
That you are thieves profess'd, that you work
not 432

In holier shapes, for there is boundless theft
In limited professions Rascal thieves,

Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape, 435

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging trust not the physician,

His antidotes are poison, and he slays More than you rob take wealth and lives together,

Do villany, do, since you protest to do't, 440
Like workmen I'll example you with thievery

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea, the moon's an arrant thief,

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun, 444
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears, the earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement, each thing's a thief,

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough
power 449

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves,
away!

Rob one another. There's more gold cut
throats,

All that you meet are thieves To Athens go,
Break open shops, no tuing can you steal 453
But thieves do lose it steal no less for this
I give you, and gold confound you howsoever!
Amen 456

Thurd Thief He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it

First Thief 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us, not to have us thrive in our mystery 461

Sec Thief I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade

First Thief Let us first see peace in Athens, there is no time so miserable but a man may be true [Exeunt Thieves

Enter FLAVIUS

Flav O you gods!
Is yond despised and ruinous man my lord? 468
Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made! 472
What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!
How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies! 476
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo Those that would mischief me than those that do!

He hath caught me in his eye. I will present
My honest grief unto him, and, as my lord, 480
Still serve him with my life My dearest master!

TIMON comes forward

Tim Away! what art thou?

Flav Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim Why dost ask that? I have forgot all
men,

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee 484

Flav An honest poor servant of yours

Tim Then I know thee not
I never had an honest man about me, ay all
I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains

Flav The gods are witness, 488

Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

Tim What! dost thou weep? Come nearer
Then I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st 492
Flinty mankind, whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter Pity's sleeping Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth lasts 497

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim Had I a steward

So true, so just, and now so comfortable? 500

It almost turns my dangerous nature mild

Let me behold thy face Surely, this man

Was born of woman.

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness, 504

You perpetual sober gods! I do proclaim

One honest man, mistake me not, but one,
No more, I pray, and he's a steward
How fain would I have hated all mankind! 508
And thou redeem'st tayself but all, save thee,
I fell with curses

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise,
For, by oppressing and betraying me, 512

Thou mightst have sooner got another service

For many so arrive at second masters

Upon their first lord's neck But tell me true,—

For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,—

Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous, 517

If not a usuring kindness and as rich men deal

gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav No, my most worthy master, in whose breast 520

Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac'd too late

You should have fear'd false times when you did feast,

Suspect still comes when an estate is least

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,

Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind, 525

Care of your food and living, and, believe it,

My most honour'd lord,

For any benefit that points to me, 528

Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange

For this one wish, that you had power and wealth

To requite me by making rich yourself

Tim Look thee, 'tis so Thou singly honest

man, 532

Here, take the gods out of my misery,

Have sent thee treasure Go, live rich and happy,

But thus condition'd thou shalt build from men,

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none, 536

But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,

Ere thou relieve the beggar, give to dogs

What thou deny'st to men, let prisons swallow

'em,

Debts wither 'em to nothing, be men like blasted

woods, 540

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!

And so, farewell and thrive

Flav O! let me stay

And comfort you, my master

Tim If thou hatest

Curses, stay not, fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free, 544

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee

[Exeunt severally]

ACT V

SCENE I—The Woods Before TIMON'S Cave

Enter Poet and Painter

Pain As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides

Poet What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true that he is so full of gold? 5

Pain Certain Alcibiades reports it, Phryma and Timandra had gold of him he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity 'Tis said he gave unto his steward mighty sum. 7

Poet Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends

Pain Nothing else, you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having Poet What have you now to present unto him?

Pain Nothing at this time but my visitation, only, I will promise him an excellent piece

Poet I must serve him so too tell him of an intent that's coming towards him

Pain Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time, it opens the eyes of expectation, performance is ever the duller for his act, and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saving is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable, performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Enter TIMON from his cave

Tim [Aside] Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself

Poet I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him it must be a personating of himself, a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatness that follow youth and opulence

Tim [Aside] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee

Poet Nay let's seek him
Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late

Pain True,
When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.

Tim [Aside] I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold,

That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
Than where swine feed!
'Tis thou that riggst the bark and plough'st the foam,

Settlest admired reverence in a slave
To thee be worship, and thy saints for aye

Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone obey Fit I meet them.

Poet Hail, worthy Timon!
Pain Our late noble master! 60
Tim Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted, 63
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off, Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What! to you,
Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words

Tim Let it go naked, men may see't the better 72

You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen and known

Pain He and myself
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it

Tim Ay, you are honest men 76

Pain We are hither come to offer you our service

Tim Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?

Can you eat roots and drink cold water? no
Both What we can do, we'll do, to do you service 80

Tim Ye're honest men. Ye've heard that I have gold,
I am sure you have speak truth, ye're honest men

Pain So it is said, my noble lord but therefore Came not my friend nor I 84

Tim Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit

Best in all Athens thou'rt, indeed, the best,
Thou counterfeit'st most lively

Pain So, so, my lord
Tim E'en so, sir, as I say And, for thy fiction, 88

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art
But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say you have a little fault 92
Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
You take much pains to mend

Both Beseech your honour
To make it known to us

Tim You'll take it ill.
Both Most thankfully, my lord

Tim Will you indeed? 96
Both Doubt it not, worthy lord

Tim There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,
That mightily deceives you

Both Do we, my lord?
Tim Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble, 100

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom, yet remain assur'd
That he's a made-up villain.

Pain I know none such, my lord
Poet Nor I 104

Tim Look you, I love you well, I'll give you gold, Rid me these villains from your companies

Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught, Confound them by some course, and come to me, 108

I'll give you gold enough
Both Name them, my lord, let's know them

Tim You that way and you this, but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 112
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company
If, where thou art two villains shall not be, Come not near him [To the Poet] If thou would not reside

But where one villain is then him abandon Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for gold, ye slaves 117

You have done work for me, there's payment
hence!

You are an alchemist, make gold of that Out, rascal dogs! 120

[Beats them out and then returns to his cave]

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators

Flav It is in vain that you would speak with Timon,

For he is set so only to himself
That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.

First Sen Bring us to his cave 124
It is our part and promise to the Athenians
To speak with Timon.

Sec Sen At all times alike
Men are not still the same 'twas time and griefs That fram'd him thus time, with his fairer
hand, 128

Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him Bring us to
him,

And chance it as it may

Flav Here is his cave 131
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon!
Timon!

Look out, and speak to friends The Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter TIMON, from his cave

Tim Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd 136
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue, Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen Worthy Timon,— Tim Of none but such as you, and you of
Timon. 140

Sec Sen The senators of Athens greet thee,
Timon

Tim I thank them, and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them

First Sen O! forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee. 144
The senators with one consent of love
Entreat thee back to Athens, who have thought On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing

Sec Sen They confess 148
Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross,
Which now the public body, which doth seldom Play the recanter, feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal 152
Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon,
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,

Together with a recompense more fruitful

Than their offence can weigh down by the dram, Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth As shall to thee block out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine

Tim You witch me in it, 160
Surprise me to the very brink of tears
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy senators

First Sen Therefore so please thee to return
with us, 164

And of our Athens—thine and ours—to take
The captainship thou shalt be met with thanks, Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good
name

Live with authority so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild, 169

Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace

Sec Sen And shakes his threat'ning sword Against the walls of Athens

First Sen Therefore, Timon,— 172
Tim Well, sir, I will, therefore, I will, sir,
thus —

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not But if he sack fair
Athens, 176

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war, Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks
it, 180

In pity of our aged and our youth
I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not,
And let him take it at worst, for their knives care not

While you have throats to answer for myself,
There's not a whistle in the unruly camp 185
But I do prize it at my love before The reverend'st throat in Athens So I leave
you

To the protection of the prosperous gods, 188
As thieves to keepers

Flav Stay not, all's in vain.
Tim Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow My long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend, 192
And nothing brings me all things Go, live still

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

First Sen We speak in vain Tim But yet I love my country, and am
not 196

One that rejoices in the common wrack,
As common brut doth put it.

First Sen That's well spoke.

Tim Commend me to my loving country-
men,—
First Sen These words become your lips as they pass through them. 200

Sec Sen And enter in our ears like great trumpeters

In their applauding gates

Tim Commend me to them,
And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades'
wrath

Sec Sen I like this well, he will return again

Tim I have a tree which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it, tell my friends, 212
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree, From high to low throughout, that whose
please

To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, 216
And hang himself I pray you, do my greeting

Flav Trouble him no further, thus you still shall find him

Tim Come not to me again, but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion 220
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood,
Who once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle. 224
Lips, let sour words go by and language end
What is amiss plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works and death their gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Exit]

First Sen His discontents are unremovably
Coupled to nature

Sec Sen Our hope in him is dead let us
return,

And strain what other means is left unto us 232
In our dear peril

First Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt]

SCENE II — Before the Walls of Athens

Enter two Senators and a Messenger

First Sen Thou hast painfully discover'd are his files

As full as thy report?

Mess I have spoke the least,
Besides, his expedition promises

Present approach

Sec Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon

Mess I met a courier, one mine ancient
friend,

Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force, 8
And made us speak like friends this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty which imported

His fellowship i' the cause against your city, 12
In part for his sake mov'd

First Sen. Here come our brothers

Enter Senators from TIMON

Third Sen No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect

The enemies drum is heard, and fearful scouring Doth choke the air with dust In, and prepare

Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare 17
[Exeunt]

SCENE III — The Woods TIMON'S Cave, and a rude Tomb seen

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON

Sold By all description this should be the
place

Who's here? speak, ho! No answer! What is
this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span.
Some beast rear'd this, here does not live a

man. 4

Dead, sure, and this his grave What's on this tomb

I cannot read, the character I'll take with wax
Our captain hath in every figure skill,

An ag'd interpreter, though young in days 8
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is [Exit]

SCENE IV — Before the Walls of Athens

Trumpets sound Enter ALCIBIADES with his Powers

Alcib Sound to this coward and lascivious
town

Our terrible approach [A parley sounded]

Enter Senators, on the Walls

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills 4

The scope of justice, till now myself and such As slept within the shadow of your power

Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly Now the time is flush, 8
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself, 'No more' now breathless wrong

Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,
And pury insolence shall break his wind 12

With fear and horrid flight

First Sen Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,

Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm, 16

To wipe out our ingratitude with loves Above their quantity

Sec Sen So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love

By humble message and by promis'd means 20
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war

First Sen These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom

You have receiv'd your grief, nor are they such That these great towers, trophies, and schools 25

should fall

For private faults in them.

Sec Sen Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out, Shame that they wanted cunning in excess 28
Hath broke their hearts March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners sread
By decimation, and a tithed death,—
If thy revenges hunger for that food 32
Which nature loathes,—take thou the destin'd
tenth,

And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted

First Sen All have not offended,
For those that were, it is not square to take 36
On those that are, revenges crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin 40
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended like a shepherd, Approach the fold and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together

Sec Sen What thou wilt 44
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to't with thy sword

First Sen Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before, 48
To say thou'lt enter friendly

Sec Sen Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers 52 Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire

Alcib Then there's my glove, Descend, and open your uncharged ports
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own 56
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,

Fall, and no more, and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream 60
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer

Both 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib Descend, and keep your words 64
[The Senators descend, and open the gates]

Enter a Soldier

Sold My noble general, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea
And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which With wax I brought away, whose soft impression Interprets for my poor ignorance 69

Alcib Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft

Seek not my name a plague consume you wicked crafts left!

Here lie I, Timon, who, alive, all living men did hate 72

Pass by, and curse thy fill, but pass and stay not here thy gait

These well express in thee thy latter spirits
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs, Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which 76

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven Dead
Is noble Timon, of whose memory 80
Hereafter more Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword,

Make war breed peace, make peace stint war, make each

Prescribe to other as each other's leech 84
Let our drums strike [Exeunt]

SCENE — During a great part of the Play, at Rome, afterwards, Sardis and near Philippi

ACT I

SCENE I — Rome A Street

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certum Commoners

Flav Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home

Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign

O your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Com Why, sir, a carpenter

Mar Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on? 8
You, sir, what trade are you?

Second Com Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler

Mar But what trade art thou? Answer me
directly 12

Sec Com A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience, which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles

Mar What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade? 16

Sec Com Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me yet, if you be out sir, I can mend you

Mar What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow! 20

Sec Com Why, sir, cobble you

Flav Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Sec Com Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes, when they are in great danger, I recover them As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork 29

Flav But wherefore art not in thy shop today?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Sec Com Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work But, indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph

Mar Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home? 36

What tributaries follow him to Rome
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, 40 Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms and there have sat
The livelong day, with patient expectation, 45

To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made a universal shout, 48

That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire? 52
And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone! 56

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude

Flav Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault, 60

Assemble all the poor men of your sort, Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your
tears

Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all. 64

[Exeunt all the Commoners.]

See whe'r their basest metal be not mov'd,
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness

Go you down that way towards the Capitol,

This way will I Disrobe the images
 If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies Mar May we do so?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal
Flav It is no matter, let no images Be hung with Cæsar's trophies I'll about
 And drive away the vulgar from the streets
 So do you too where you perceive them thick These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing
 Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
 Who else would soar above the view of men
 And keep us all in servile fearfulness [Exeunt]

SCENE II — The Same A Public Place

Enter, in procession, with music, CÆSAR, ANTONY, for the course CALPHURNIA, PORTIA, DECIVS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA, a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer Cæs Calphurnia!

Casca Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks [Music ceases] Calphurnia!

Cæs

Cal Here, my lord

Cæs Stand you directly in Antonius' way
 When he doth run his course. Antonius!

Ant Cæsar, my lord

Cæs Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
 To touch Calphurnia, for our elders say,
 The barren, touch'd in this holy chase,
 Shake off their sterile curse

Ant I shall remember

When Cæsar says 'Do this,' it is perform'd

Cæs Set on, and leave no ceremony out.

[Music]

Sooth Cæsar!

Cæs Ha! Who calls

Casca Bid every noise be still peace yet again! [Music ceases]

Cæs Who is it in the press that calls on me?
 I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music, 16

Cry 'Cæsar' Speak, Cæsar is turn'd to hear

Sooth. Beware the ides of March

Cæs What man is that?

Bru A soothsayer bids you beware the ides
 of March

Cæs Set him before me, let me see his face.

Cas Fellow, come from the throng, look upon Cæsar 21

Cæs What sayst thou to me now? Speak once again

Sooth Beware the ides of March.

Cæs He is a dreamer, let us leave him pass [Sennet Exeunt all but BRUTUS and CASSIUS]

Cas Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru Not I

Cas I pray you, do

Bru I am not gamesome I do lack some
 part 28

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony

Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires, I'll leave you.

Cas Brutus, I do observe you now of late 31

I have not from your eyes that gentleness
 And show of love as I was wont to have You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand Over your friend that loves you

Bru Cassius, 36

Be not deceiv'd if I have veil'd my look,

I turn the trouble of my countenance

Merely upon myself Vexed I am

Of late with passions of some difference, 40

Conceptions only proper to myself,

Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours,

But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,—

Among which number, Cassius, be you one,—44

Nor construe any further my neglect,

Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war

Forgets the shows of love to other men

Cas Then, Brutus, I have much mistook

your passion, 48

By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations

Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru No, Cassius, for the eye sees not itself,

But by reflection, by some other things 53

Cas 'Tis just

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,

That you have no such mirrors as will turn 56

Your hidden worthiness into your eye,

That you might see your shadow I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome,—

Except immortal Cæsar,—speaking of Brutus

And groaning underneath this age's yoke, 61

Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes

Bru Into what dangers would you lead me,

Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself 64

For that which is not in me?

Cas Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to

hear,

And, since you know you cannot see yourself

So well as by reflection, I, your glass, 68

Will modestly discover to yourself

That of yourself which you yet know not of

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus

Were I a common laughor, or did use 72

To stale with ordinary oaths my love

To every new protester, if you know

That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,

And after scandal them, or if you know 76

That I profess myself in banqueting

To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout]

Bru What means this shouting? I do fear the people

Choose Cæsar for their king

Cas Ay, do you fear it? 80

Then must I think you would not have it so

Bru I would not, Cassius, yet I love him

well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?

What is it that you would impart to me? 84

If it be aught toward the general good,

Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,

And I will look on both indifferently;

For let the gods so speed me as I love 88

The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour

Well, honour is the subject of my story

I cannot tell what you and other men

Think of this life, but, for my single self,

I had as lief not be as live to be

In awe of such a thing as I myself

I was born free as Cæsar, so were you

We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he

For once, upon a raw and gusty day,

The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,

Cæsar said to me, 'Dar'st thou, Cassius, now

Leap in with me into this angry flood,

And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,

Accoutred as I was, I plunged in

And bade him follow, so, indeed he did.

The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it

With lusty sinews, throwing it aside

And stemming it with hearts of controversy,

But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,

Cæsar cried, 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!'

I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,

Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of

Tiber

Did I the tired Cæsar And this man

Is now become a god, and Cassius is

A wretched creature and must bend his body

If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him

He had a fever when he was in Spain,

And when the fit was on him, I did mark

How he did shake 'tis true this god did shake

His coward lips did from their colour fly,

And that same eye whose bend doth awe the

world

Did lose his lustre, I did hear him groan

Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans

Mark him and write his speeches in their books,

Alas! it cried, 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'

As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,

As a man of such a feeble temper should

So get the start of the majestic world,

And bear the palm alone

Flourish. Shout

Bru Another general shout!

I do believe that these applauses are

For some new honours that are heaped on

Cæsar

Cas Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow

world

Like a Colossus and we petty men

Walk under his huge legs, and peep about

To find ourselves dishonourable graves

Men at some time are masters of their fates

The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,

But in ourselves, that we are underlings

Brutus and Cæsar what should be in that

'Cæsar'?

Why should that name be sounded more than

yours?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name;

Sound them, it doth become the mouth as

well,

Weigh them, it is as heavy, conjure with 'em,

'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar'

Now, in the names of all the gods at once,

Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,

That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd!

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!

When went there by an age, since the great flood,

But it was fam'd with more than with one man?

When could they say, till now, that talk'd of

Rome,

That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?

Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,

When there is in it but one only man

O! you and I have heard our fathers say,

There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd

Th' eternal devil to keep his state in Rome

As easily as a king

Bru That you do love me, I am nothing jealous,

What you would work me to, I have some aim

How I have thought of this and of these times,

I shall recount hereafter, for this present,

I would not, so with love I might entreat you,

Be any further mov'd What you have said

I will consider, what you have to say

I will with patience hear, and find a time

Both meet to hear and answer such high things

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this

Brutus had rather be a villager

Than to repute himself a son of Rome

Under these hard conditions as this time

Is like to lay upon us

Cas I am glad

That my weak words have struck but thus much

show

Of fire from Brutus

Bru The games are done and Cæsar is returning

Cas As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve,

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you

What hath proceeded worthy note to-day

180

Re-enter CÆSAR and his Train

Bru I will do so But, look you, Cassius,

The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,

And all the rest look like a chidden train

Calphurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero

Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes

As we have seen him in the Capitol,

Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas Casca will tell us what the matter is Cas Antonius!

Ant Cæsar

Cas Let me have men about me that are fat,

Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights

Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look,

He thinks too much such men are dangerous

Ant Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous,

He is a noble Roman, and well given

Cas Would he were fatter! but I fear him

not

Yet if my name were hable to fear,

I do not know the man I should avoid

So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,

He is a great observer, and he looks

Quite through the deeds of men, he loves no plays,

As thou dost, Antony, he hears no music,
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort 204
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous 209
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear, for always I am Cæsar
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf, 212
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him

[Sennet. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train
CÆSAR stays behind

Casca You pull'd me by the cloak, would you speak with me?

Bru Ay, Casca, tell us what hath chanc'd to-day,

That Cæsar looks so sad 216

Casca Why, you were with him, were you not?

Bru I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd

Casca Why there was a crown offer'd him, and, being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus, and then the people fell a-shouting Bru What was the second noise for?

Casca Why, for that too 224

Cas They shouted thrice what was the last cry for?

Casca Why, for that too

Bru Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other, and at every putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted

Cas Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca Why, Antony 232

Bru Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca

Casca I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery, I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown, yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets, and, as I told you, he put it by once, but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offer'd it to him again, then he put it by again, but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time, he put it the third time by, and still as he refus'd it the rabblement shouted and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refus'd the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar, for he swoonded and fell down at it: and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air

Cas But soft, I pray you what! did Cæsar swoond? 252

Casca He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless

Bru 'Tis very like he hath the falling-sickness

Cas No, Cæsar hath it not, but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man. 263

Bru What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refus'd the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offer'd them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood cried, 'Alas! good soul,' and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no heed to be taken of them, if Cæsar had stab'd their mothers, they would have done no less. 279

Bru And after that he came, thus sad, away?

Casca Ay

Cas Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca Ay, he spoke Greek

Cas To what effect? 284

Casca Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again, but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads, but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too, Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it. 292

Cas Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca No, I am promis'd forth

Cas Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating. 297

Cas Good, I will expect you

Casca Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit

Bru What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mettle when he went to school

Cas So is he now in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise,

However he puts on this tardy form. 304

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,

Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite

Bru And so it is. For this time I will leave you. 308

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,

I will come home to you, or, if you will,

Come home to me, and I will wait for you

Cas I will do so till then, think of the world

[Exit BRUTUS.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble, yet, I see, 313

Thy honourable metal may be wrought

From that it is dispos'd: therefore 'tis meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes; 316

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?

Cæsar doth bear me hard, but he loves Brutus

If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius

He should not humour me I will this night,
 In several hands, in at his windows throw, 321
 As if they came from several citizens,
 Writings all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name, wherein ob-scurely 324
 Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at
 And after this let Cæsar seat him sure,
 For we will shake him, or worse days endure
 [Exit

SCENE III.—The Same A Street

Thunder and lightning Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO

Cicero Good even, Casca brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?
 Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero! 4
 I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks, and I have seen
 The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam,
 To be exalted with the threaten'ing clouds 8
 But never till to-night, never till now,
 Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.
 Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
 Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, 12
 Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca A common slave—you know him well by sight—

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
 Like twenty torches join'd and yet his hand, 17
 Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
 Besides,—I have not since put up my sword,—
 Against the Capitol I met a lion, 20
 Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
 Without annoying me, and there were drawn Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw 24

Men all in fire walk up and down the streets
 And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
 Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
 Hooting and shrieking When these prodigies
 Do so conjointly meet, let not men say 29
 'These are their reasons, they are natural,'
 For, I believe, they are portentous things Unto the climate that they point upon. 32

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time
 But men may construe things after their fashion, Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow? 36

Casca He doth, for he did bid Antonius
 Send word to you he would be there to-morrow

Cic. Good-night then, Casca this disturbed sky

Is not to walk in.

Casca Farewell, Cicero [Exit CICERO

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca A Roman.

Cas Casca, by your voice Casca Your ear is good Cassius, what might
 is this!

Cas A very pleasing night to honest men Casca Who ever knew the heavens menace
 so? 44

Cas Those that have known the earth so full of faults

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets, Submitting me unto the perilous night,
 And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see, 48
 Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone, And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open

The breast of heaven, I did present myself
 Even in the arm and very flash of it 52

Casca But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble
 When the most mighty gods by tokens send Such dreadful heralds to astonish us 56

Cas You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of
 life

That should be in a Roman you do want,
 Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
 And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, 60
 To see the strange impatience of the heavens,
 But if you would consider the true cause
 Why all these fires, why all these ghiding ghosts, Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind,
 Why old men, fools, and children calculate, 65
 Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
 To monstrous quality, why, you shall find 68
 That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits
 To make them instruments of fear and warning Unto some monstrous state
 Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man 72
 Most like this dreadful night, That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol,
 A man no mightier than thyself or me 76
 In personal action, yet prodigious grown And fearful as these strange eruptions are

Casca 'Tis Cæsar that you mean, is it not,
 Cassius?

Cas Let it be who it is for Romans now so
 Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors,
 But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
 And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits,
 Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish. 84

Casca Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king,
 And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
 In every place, save here in Italy 88

Cas I know where I will wear this dagger
 then,

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong,

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat 92
 Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,

Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit,
But life, being weary of those worldly bars, 96
Never lacks power to dismiss itself
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear
I can shake off at pleasure [Thunder still

Casca So can I 100
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity

Cas And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then?
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf 104
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep,
He were no lion were not Romans hinds
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws, what trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves 109
For the base matter to illuminate So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief!
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak thus Before a willing bondman, then I know 113
My answer must be made but I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent

Casca You speak to Casca, and to such a man 116
That is no fleering tell-tale Hold, my hand
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far As who goes furthest

Cas There's a bargain made 120
Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence, 124
And I do know by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir, or walking in the streets,
And the complexion of the element 128
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible

Casca Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste Cas 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait
He is a friend

Enter CINNA

Cin Cinna, where haste you so? 133
Cin To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas No, it is Casca, one incorporate
To our attempts Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin I am glad on't What a fearful night is this! 137
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights

Cas Am I not stay'd for? Tell me Cin Yes, you are
O Cassius! if you could 140
But win the noble Brutus to our party—

Cas Be you content Good Cinna, take this paper,
And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it, and throw this
In at his window, set this up with wax 145
Upon old Brutus' statue all this done,
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there? 148
Cin All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone
To seek you at your house Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me
Cas That done, repair to Pompey's theatre

[Exit CINNA
Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day 153
See Brutus at his house three parts of him Is ours already, and the man entire

Upon the next encounter yields him ours 156 Casca O! he sits high in all the people's hearts
And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness 160

Cas Hum and his worth and our great need
of him
You have right well concerted Let us go,
For it is after midnight, and ere day
We will awake him and be sure of him 164

ACT II

SCENE I—Rome BRUTUS' Orchard Enter BRUTUS

Bru What, Lucius! ho!
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day Lucius I say!
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly 4 When, Lucius, when! Awake, I say! what, Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS
Luc Call'd you, my lord?
Bru Get me a taper in my study, Lucius
When it is lighted, come and call me here 8
Luc I will, my lord [Exit Bru It must be by his death and, for my part,
I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general He would be crown'd 12 How that might change his nature, there's the
question
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder,
And that craves wary walking Crown him?—
that!

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him, 16
That at his will he may do danger with The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins Remorse from power, and, to speak truth of Cæsar,
I have not known when his affections sway'd 20
More than his reason But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the clumber-upward turns his face,
But when he once attains the upmost round, 24
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend So Cæsar may Then, lest he may, prevent And, since the quarrel 28
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus, that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg 32
D d

Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc The taper burneth in your closet, sir Searching the window for a flint, I found This paper, thus seal'd up, and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed

Bru Get you to bed again, it is not day
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc I know not, sir
Bru Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc I will, sir
Bru The exhalations whizzing in the air
Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter]

Brutus, thou sleep'st awake and see thyself Shall Rome, &c Speak, strike, redress!

Brutus, thou sleep'st awake!
Such instigations have been often dropp'd

Where I have took them up
'Shall Rome, &c' Thus must I piece it out Shall Rome stand under one man sawe? What,
Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king
'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated To speak and strike? O Rome! I make thee
promise,

If th' redress will follow, thou receiv'st
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS

Luc Sir, March is wasted fourteen days [Knocking within]

Bru 'Tis good. Go to the gate somebody knocks [Exit LUCIUS]

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma or a hideous dream
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council, and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS

Luc Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru Is he alone?
Luc No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru Do you know them?
Luc No, sir, their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour

Bru Let 'em enter
[Exit LUCIUS]

They are the faction O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by
night,

When evils are most free? O! then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy,
Hide it in smiles and affability
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention

Enter the Conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS

Cas I think we are too bold upon your rest
Good morrow, Brutus, do we trouble you?

Bru I have been up this hour, awake all
night

Know I these men that come along with you?
Cas Yes, every man of them, and no man
here

But honours you, and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself

Which every noble Roman bears of you
This is Trebonius

Bru He is welcome hither
Cas Thus, Decius Brutus

Bru He is welcome too Cas Thus, Casca thus, Cinna,

And thus, Metellus Cimber

Bru They are all welcome
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas Shall I entreat a word?
[BRUTUS and CASSIUS whisper]

Dec Here lies the east doth not the day break here?

Casca No
Cin O! pardon, sir, it doth, and yon grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day

Casca You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises,
Which is a great way growing on the south,

Weighing the youthful season of the year
Some two months hence up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire, and the high east Stands, as the Capitol, directly here

Bru Give me your hands all over, one by one

Cas And let us swear our resolution
Bru No, not an oath if not the face of men,

The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,
If these be motives weak break off betimes,

And every man hence to his idle bed,
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,

Till each man drop by lottery But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough

To kindle cowards and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women, then, country-
men,

What need we any spur but our own cause
To prick us to redress? what other bond

Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word
And will not palter? and what other oath

Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?

Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,
Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs, unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt, but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,

133

Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think that or our cause or our performance
Did need an oath, when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle

Of any promise that hath pass'd from him 140 Cas But what of Cicero? Shall we sound
him?

I think he will stand very strong with us

Casca Let us not leave him out

Cin No, by no means

Met O! let us have him, for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion 145

And buy men's voices to commend our deeds
It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands,
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity 149

Bru O! name him not let us not break with
him,

For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin

Cas Then leave him out 152

Casca Indeed he is not fit

Dec Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

Cas Decius, well urg'd I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar, 156
Should outlive Cæsar we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver, and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all, which to prevent, 160
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together

Bru Our course will seem too bloody, Caius
Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards, 164
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar

Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers Caius
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar,
And in the spirit of men there is no blood 168

O! then that we could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar But, alas!

Cæsar must bleed for it And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully, 172

Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds

And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage, 176

And after seem to chide 'em This shall make Our purpose necessary and not envious,

Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers 180

And, for Mark Antony, think not of him,
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm

When Cæsar's head is off

Cas Yet I fear him,
For in the engrafted love he bears to Cæsar— 184

Bru Alas! good Cassius, do not think of
him

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do

Is to himself, take thought and die for Cæsar
And that were much he should, for he is given To sports, to wildness, and much company 189 Treb There is no fear in him, let him not
die

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter

[Clock strikes

Bru Peace! count the clock

Cas The clock hath stricken three 192

Treb 'Tis time to part

Cas

But it is doubtful yet

Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no,
For he is superstitious grown of late,

Quite from the main opinion he held once 196
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies

It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,

And the persuasion of his augurers, 200
May hold him from the Capitol to-day

Dec Never fear that if he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him, for he loves to hear

That unicorns may be betray'd with trees 204
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,

Lions with toils, and men with flatterers,
But when I tell him he hates flatterers,

He says he does, being then most flattered 208
Let me work

For I can give him humour the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol

Cas Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch
him 212

Bru By the eighth hour is that the utter-most?

Cin Be that the uttermost, and fail not then

Met Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey

I wonder none of you have thought of him 217
Bru Now, good Metellus, go along by him

He loves me well, and I have given him reasons, Send him but hither and I'll fashion him 220

Cas The morning comes upon's we'll leave you, Brutus

And, friends, disperse yourselves, but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true
Romans

Bru Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily, Let not our looks put on our purposes, 225

But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits and formal constancy

And so good morrow to you every one 228

[Exeunt all except BRUTUS
Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter,

Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies

Which busy care draws in the brains of men, Therefore thou sleep'st so sound. 233

Enter PORTIA

Por Brutus, my lord!

Bru Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise
you now?

It is not for your health thus to committ
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning

Por Nor for yours neither You've un-gently, Brutus, 237

Stole from my bed and yesternight at supper
 You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
 Musing and sighing, with your arms across, 240
 And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
 You star'd upon me with ungentle looks I urg'd you further, then you scratch'd your
 head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot, 244
 Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
 But, with an angry wafture of your hand,
 Gave sign for me to leave you So I did,
 Fearing to strengthen that impatience 248
 Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
 Which sometime hath his hour with every man
 It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep 252
 And could it work so much upon your shape
 As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
 I should not know you, Brutus Dear my lord,
 Make me acquainted with your cause of grief

Bru I am not well in health, and that is all 257
Por Brutus is wise and were he not in health,
 He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru Why, so I do Good Portia, go to bed 260

Por Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
 To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
 Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,
 And will he steal out of his wholesome bed 264
 To dare the vile contagion of the night,
 And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
 To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus
 You have some sick offence within your mind
 Which, by the right and virtue of my place, 269
 I ought to know of, and, upon my knees,
 I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
 By all your vows of love, and that great vow 272
 Which did incorporate and make us one,
 That you unfold to me, your self, your half,
 Why are you heavy, and what men to-night
 Have had resort to you, for here have been 276
 Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
 Even from darkness

Bru Kneel not, gentle Portia
Por I should not need, if you were gentle
 Brutus

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
 Is it excepted, I should know no secrets 281
 That appertain to you? Am I myself
 But, as it were, in sort of limitation,
 To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
 And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs 285

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
 Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife

Bru You are my true and honourable
 wife, 288

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
 That visit my sad heart

Por If this were true then should I know this secret

I grant I am a woman, but, withal, 292
 A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife

I grant I am a woman, but, withal,
 A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter

Think you I am no stronger than my sex, 296

Being so father'd and so husbanded?
 Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.
 I have made strong proof of my constancy,
 Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
 Here, in the thigh can I bear that with patience
 And not my husband's secrets?

Bru O ye gods!
 Render me worthy of this noble wife

[Knocking within]
 Hark! hark! one knocks Portia, go in awhile,
 And by and by thy bosom shall partake 305

The secrets of my heart
 All my engagements I will construe to thee,
 All the charactery of my sad brows 308

Leave me with haste [Exit PORTIA]
 Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS

Luc Here is a sick man that would speak
 with you

Bru Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spoke of Boy, stand aside Caius Ligarius! how? 312

Lig Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble
 tongue

Bru O! what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,

To wear a kerchief Would you were not sick
Lig I am not sick if Brutus have in hand

Any exploit worthy the name of honour 317
Bru Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
 Had you a healthful ear to hear of it

Lig By all the gods that Romans bow before
 I here discard my sickness Soul of Rome! 321

Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!
 Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up

My mortified spirit Now bid me run, 324
 And I will strive with things impossible, Yea, get the better of them What's to do?

Bru A piece of work that will make sick men whole

Lig But are not some whole that we must make sick? 328

Bru That must we also What it is, my Caius,
 I shall unfold to thee as we are going

To whom it must be done
Lig Set on your foot,

And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you, 332
 To do I know not what, but it sufficeth That Brutus leads me on.

Bru Follow me then
 [Exeunt]

SCENE II—The Same CÆSAR'S House

Thunder and lightning Enter CÆSAR in his night-gown

Cæs Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night

Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
 'Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv My lord!

Cæs Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
 And bring me their opinions of success

Serv I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPHURNIA

Cal What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth? 8

You shall not stir out of your house to-day
Cæs Cæsar shall forth the things that threaten d me

Ne'er look d but on my back, when they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished 12

Cal Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets 17
And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead,

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol 21
The noise of battle hurried in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets 24

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them

Cæs What can be avoided
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Cæsar 29

Cal When beggars die there are no comets seen,
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of

princes
Cæs Cowards die many times before their deaths, 32

The valiant never taste of death but once

Of all the wonders that I yet have heard, It seems to me most strange that men should

fear,
Seeing that death, a necessary end, 36
Will come when it will come

Re-enter Servant

What say the augurers?
Serv They would not have you to stir forth to-day

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast 40

Cæs The gods do this in shame of cowardice Cæsar should be a beast without a heart

If he should stay at home to-day for fear
No, Cæsar shall not, danger knows full well 44

That Cæsar is more dangerous than he
We are two lions litter'd in one day,

And I the elder and more terrible
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal Alas! my lord, 48
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence

Do not go forth to-day call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own

We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house, 52
And he shall say you are not well to-day,
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this

Cæs Mark Antony shall say I am not well,
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home 56

Enter DECIVS

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so

Dec Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar

I come to fetch you to the senate-house
Cæs And you are come in very happy time

To bear my greeting to the senators, 61
And tell them that I will not come to-day Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser,

I will not come to-day tell them so, Decius 64
Cal Say he is sick

Cæs Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far

To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come 68

Dec Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause, Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so

Cæs The cause is in my will I will not come,
That is enough to satisfy the senate 72

But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know

Calphurnia here my wife, stays me at home
She dreamt to-night she saw my statua, 76

Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts, Did run pure blood and many lusty Romans

Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it
And these does she apply for warnings and portents, 80

And evils imminent, and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day

Dec This dream is all amiss interpreted,
It was a vision fair and fortunate 84

Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,

Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press

For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance 89
Thus by Calphurnia's dream is signified

Cæs And this way have you well expounded it

Dec I have, when you have heard what I can say 92

And know it now the senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar

If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change Besides, it were a

mock 96
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say
'Break up the senate till another time,

When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams'

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper 100
'Lo! Cæsar is afraid?'

Pardon me, Cæsar, for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,

And reason to my love is liable 104
Cæs How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia!

I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA

And look where Publius is come to fetch me 108

Pub Good morrow, Cæsar
Cæs Welcome, Publius
 What! Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
 Good morrow, Casca Caius Ligarius, Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy 112
 As that same ague which hath made you lean.
 What is t' o'clock?
Bru Cæsar, 'tis strucken eight.
Cæs I thank you for your pains and courtesy

Enter ANTONY

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights 116
 Is notwithstanding up Good morrow, Antony Ant So to most noble Cæsar Cæs Bid them prepare within I am to blame to be thus waited for Now, Cinna now, Metellus, what, Trebonius!
 I have an hour's talk in store for you, 121
 Remember that you call on me to-day
 Be near me, that I may remember you Treb Cæsar, I will — [Aside] and so near will I be, 124
 That your best friends shall wish I had been further Cæs Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me,
 And we, like friends, will straightway go together
Bru [Aside] That every like is not the same,
 O Cæsar! 128
 The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon
 [Exeunt]

SCENE III — The Same A Street near the Capitol

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a paper

Art Cæsar, beware of Brutus take heed of Cassius come not near Casca have an eye to Cinna trust not Trebonius mark well Metel-lus Cimber Decius Brutus loves thee not, thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar If thou be'st not immortal, look about you security gives way to conspiracy The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, 9

ARTEMIDORUS

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
 And as a suitor will I give him this 12
 My heart laments that virtue cannot live
 Out of the teeth of emulation
 If thou read this, O Cæsar! thou mayst live,
 If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive [Exit]

SCENE IV — The Same Another Part of the same Street, before the House of BRUTUS

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS

Por I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house, Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone
 Why dost thou stay?

Luc To know my errand, madam.
Por I would have had thee there, and here
 again, 4

Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there.
 O constancy! be strong upon my side,

Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
 tongue,
 I have a man's mind, but a woman's might 8
 How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
 Art thou here yet?
Luc Madam, what shall I do?
 Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
 And so return to you, and nothing else? 12
Por Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,
 For he went sickly forth, and take good note
 What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him
 Hark, boy! what noise is that? 16
Luc I hear none, madam
Por Prithee listen well
 I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
 And the wind brings it from the Capitol
Luc Sooth, madam, I hear nothing 20

Enter the Soothsayer

Por Come hither, fellow which way hast thou been?
Sooth At mine own house, good lady Por What is't o'clock?
Sooth About the ninth hour lady
Por Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol? 24 Sooth Madam, not yet I go to take my
 stand,
 To see him pass on to the Capitol Por Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not?
Sooth That I have, lady if it will please
 Cæsar 28
 To be so good to Cæsar as to hear me,
 I shall beseech him to befriend himself Por Why, know'st thou any harm 's intended towards him?
Sooth None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance 32
 Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow
 The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
 Of senators, of prætors, common suitors,
 Will crowd a feeble man almost to death 36
 I'll get me to a place more void, and there Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along [Exit] Por I must go in Ay me! how weak a thing
 The heart of woman is O Brutus! 40
 The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise
 Sure, the boy heard me Brutus hath a suit
 That Cæsar will not grant O! I grow faint Run Lucius, and commend me to my lord, 44
 Say I am merry come to me again,
 And bring me word what he doth say to thee
 [Exeunt, severally]

ACT III

SCENE I — Rome Before the Capitol, the Senate sitting above

A crowd of People among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer Flourish Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POP-LIUS, PUBLIUS, and Others

Cæs [To the Soothsayer.] The ides of March are come

Sooth Ay, Cæsar, but not gone
Art Hail, Cæsar! Read this schedule
Dec Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, 4
 At your best leisure, this his humble suit Art O Cæsar! read mine first, for mine's a suit
 That touches Cæsar nearer Read it, great
 Cæsar
Cas What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd 8
Art Delay not, Cæsar, read it instantly
Cas What! is the fellow mad?
Pub Surrah, give place Cas What! urge you your petitions in the street?
 Come to the Capitol 12

CÆSAR goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following All the Senators rise

Pop I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive
Cas What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop Fare you well

[Advances to CÆSAR]

Bru What said Popilius Lena?
Cas He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive 16
 I fear our purpose is discovered Bru Look, how he makes to Cæsar mark
 him
Cas Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention
 Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, 20
 Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,
 For I will slay myself

Bru Cassius, be constant
 Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes, For, look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change 24

Cas Trebonius knows his time, for, look
 you, Brutus,
 He draws Mark Antony out of the way

[Exeunt ANTONY and TREBONIUS CÆSAR and the Senators take their seats]

Dec Where is Metellus Cumber? Let him go,
 And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar 28

Bru He is address'd press near and second
 him

Cin Casca, you are the first that rears your
 hand

Casca Are we all ready? What is now amiss,
 That Cæsar and his senate must redress? 32

Met Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar,

Metellus Cumber throws before thy seat
 A humble heart,— [Kneeling]

Cas I must prevent thee Cumber
 These couchings and these lowly courtesies, 36

Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
 And turn pre-ordination and first decree

Into the law of children Be not fond,
 To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood 40

That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth fools, I mean sweet
 words,

Low-crooked curtsies, and base spaniel fawning

Thy brother by decree is banished 44
 If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
 I spurn thee like a cur out of my way
 Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause
 Will he be satisfied 48

Met Is there no voice more worthy than my own,

To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear
 For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Bru I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery,
 Cæsar, 52

Desiring thee, that Publius Cumber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal

Cas What, Brutus!
Cas Pardon, Cæsar, Cæsar, pardon

As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall, 56
 To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cumber

Cas I could be well mov'd if I were as you,
 If I could pray to move, prayers would move
 me,

But I am constant as the northern star, 60
 Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality

There is no fellow in the firmament
 The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,

They are all fire and every one doth shine, 64
 But there's but one in all doth hold his place

So, in the world, 'tis furnish'd well with men,
 And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive,

Yet in the number I do know but one 68
 That unassailable holds on his rank,

Unshak'd of motion and that I am he,
 Let me a little show it, even in this,

That I was constant Cumber should be banish'd,
 And constant do remain to keep him so 73

Cin O Cæsar,— Cas Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus!

Dec Great Cæsar,— Cas Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca Speak, hands, for me! 76
[They stab Cæsar]

Cas Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Cæsar! [Dies]
Cin Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets Cas Some to the common pulpits, and cry
 out, 80

'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!'
Bru People and senators be not affrighted,

Fly not, stand still, ambition's debt is paid Casca Go to the pulpit, Brutus

Dec And Cassius too 84
Bru Where's Publius?

Cin Here, quite confounded with this mutiny

Met Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's

Should chance— 88
Bru Talk not of standing Publius, good cheer,

There is no harm intended to your person,
 Nor to no Roman else, so tell them, Publius.

Cas And leave us, Publius, lest that the
 people, 92

Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief

Bru Do so, and let no man abide this
 But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS

Cas Where's Antony?Tre Fled to his house amaz'd 96
Men, wives and children stare, cry out and run
As it were doomsday*Bru* Fates, we will know your pleasures
That we shall die, we know, 'tis but the time And drawing days out, that men stand upon 100*Casca* Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life

Cuts off so many years of fearing death

Bru Grant that, and then is death a benefit
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd 104
His time of fearing death Stoop, Romans, stoop,And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place,
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads, 109
Let's all cry, Peace, freedom, and liberty!Cas Stoop, then, and wash How many ages henceShall this our lofty scene be acted o'er, 112 In states unborn and accents yet unknown!Bru How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,That now on Pompey's basis lies along No worthier than the dust!Cas So oft as that shall be, 116
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty*Dec* What! shall we forth?Cas Ay, every man away
Brutus shall lead and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of
Rome 121

Enter a Servant

Bru Soft! who comes here? A friend of Antony's*Serv* Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel,Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down, 124
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest, Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving Say I love Brutus and I honour him, 128 Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd himIf Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death, 132
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living, but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus Thorough the hazards of this untrod state 136
With all true faith So says my master Antony*Bru* Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman,
I never thought him worse
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied, and, by my honour, 141
Depart untouched*Serv* I'll fetch him presently [Exit] Bru I know that we shall have him well to friend*Cas* I wish we may but yet have I a mindThat fears him much, and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose 146

Re-enter ANTONY

Bru But here comes Antony Welcome,
Mark Antony*Ant* O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, 151
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument Of half that worth as those your swords, made richWith the most noble blood of all this world 156
I do beseech ye, if ye bear me hard, Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die 160
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age*Bru* O Antony! beg not your death of us Though now we must appear bloody and cruel, 165
As, by our hands and thus our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands
And thus the bleeding business they have done
Our hearts you see not, they are painful, 169
And pity to the general wrong of Rome—
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—Hath done this deed on Cæsar For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony, 173Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence 176
Cas Your voice shall be as strong as any man'sIn the disposing of new dignities Bru Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear, 180
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded*Ant* I doubt not of your wisdom
Let each man render me his bloody hand 184
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you, Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand,
Now, Decius Brutus, yours, now yours, Metel-lus,
Yours, Cinna, and, my valiant Casca, yours, 188 Though last, not least in love, yours, good Tre-boniusGentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer 193
That I did love thee, Cæsar, O! 'tis true
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace, 197
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes.

Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
 Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, 200
 Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
 It would become me better than to close
 In terms of friendship with thine enemies Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart, 204
 Here didst thou fall, and here thy hunters stand, Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy leth.
 O world! thou wast the forest to this hart,
 And thus, indeed O world! the heart of thee 208
 How like a deer, stricken by many princes, Dost thou here lie!

Cas Mark Antony,—

Ant Pardon me, Caius Cassius
 The enemies of Cæsar shall say thus, 212
 Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty

Cas I blame you not for praising Cæsar so,
 But what compact mean you to have with us?
 Will you be prick'd in number of our friends, 216
 Or shall we on and not depend on you?

Ant Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
 Sway'd from the point by looking down on
 Cæsar

Friends am I with you all, and love you all, 220
 Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous

Bru Or else were this a savage spectacle
 Our reasons are so full of good regard 224
 That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
 You should be satisfied

Ant That's all I seek
 And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market place 228
 And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
 Speak in the order of his funeral

Bru You shall, Mark Antony
Cas Brutus, a word with you [Aside to BRUTUS] You know not what you do, do not consent 232

That Antony speak in his funeral Know you how much the people may be mov'd
 By that which he will utter?

Bru By your pardon, 236
 I will myself into the pulpit first,
 And show the reason of our Cæsar's death
 What Antony shall speak, I will protest
 He speaks by leave and by permission,
 And that we are contented Cæsar shall 240
 Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies
 It shall advantage more than do us wrong

Cas I know not what may fall, I like it not Bru Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's
 body 244

You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
 But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar,
 And say you do't by our permission,
 Else shall you not have any hand at all 248
 About his funeral, and you shall speak
 In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
 After my speech is ended.

Ant Be it so, 252
 I do desire no more

Bru Prepare the body then, and follow us

[Exeunt all but ANTONY]

Ant O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of
 earth,

That I am meek and gentle with these butchers, Thou art the ruins of the noblest man 256
 That ever lived in the tide of times
 Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
 Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,
 Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips, 260

To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,
 A curse shall light upon the limbs of men,
 Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
 Shall cumber all the parts of Italy, 264
 Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
 And dreadful objects so familiar,
 That mothers shall but smile when they behold
 Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war,
 All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds 269
 And Cæsar's spirit, i'angering for revenge,
 With Ate by his side come hot from hell,
 Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
 Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war, 273
 That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
 With carnion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not? 276

Serv I do, Mark Antony

Ant Cæsar did write for him to come to
 Rome

Serv He did receive his letters, and is coming,
 And bid me say to you by word of mouth— 280

[Seeing the body]

O Cæsar!—

Ant Thy heart is big, get thee apart and
 weep

Passion, I see, is catching, for mine eyes, Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, 284
 Began to water Is thy master coming?

Serv He lies to-night within seven leagues of
 Rome

Ant Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
 No Rome of safety for Octavius yet, 289
 Hie hence and tell him so Yet, stay awhile, Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corpse
 Into the market-place, there shall I try, 292
 In my oration, how the people take
 The cruel issue of these bloody men,
 According to the which thou shalt discourse
 To young Octavius of the state of things 296 Lend me your hand

[Exeunt, with CÆSAR's body]

SCENE II.—The Same The Forum

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens

Citizens We will be satisfied let us be satisfied

Bru Then follow me, and give me audience,
 friends

Cassius, go you into the other street,

And part the numbers

Those that will hear me speak, let'em stay here, 4

Those that will follow Cassius, go with him,
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death

First Cit I will hear Brutus speak 8 Sec Cit I will hear Cassius, and compare their reasons,

When severally we hear them rendered [Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens,

BRUTUS goes into the pulpit

Thrd Cit The noble Brutus is ascended silence!

Bru Be patient till the last 12 Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him, as he was fortunate I rejoice at it as he was valiant, I honour him, but, as he was ambitious, I slew him There is tears for his love, joy for his fortune, honour for his valour, and death for his ambition Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak for him have I offended Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak, for him have I offended Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak, for him have I offended I pause for a reply 37

Citizens None, Brutus, none

Bru Then none have I offended I have done no more to Cæsar, than you shall do to Brutus The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol, his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death 44

Enter ANTONY and Others, with CÆSAR's body Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony who, though he had no hand in his death shall receive the benefit of his dying a place in the commonwealth, as which of you shall not?
With this I depart that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome I have the same dagger for myself when it shall please my country to need my death 52

Citizens Live, Brutus! live! live!

First Cit Bring him with triumph home unto his house

Sec Cit Give him a statue with his ancestors

Thrd Cit Let him be Cæsar

Fourth Cit Cæsar's better parts shall be crown'd in Brutus 57

First Cit We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours

Bru My countrymen,—

Sec Cit Peace! silence! Brutus speaks

First Cit Peace, ho! 60

Bru Good countrymen let me depart alone,
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,
By our permission, is allow'd to make 65

I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke [Exit

First Cit Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark
Antony 68

Thrd Cit Let him go up into the public chair,

We'll hear him Noble Antony, go up Ant For Brutus sake, I am beholding to you [Goes up

Fourth Cit What does he say of Brutus?

Thrd Cit He says, for Brutus' sake,
He finds himself beholding to us all 73

Fourth Cit 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here

First Cit This Cæsar was a tyrant Thrd Cit Nay that's certain

We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him 76

Sec Cit Peace! let us hear what Antony can
say

Ant You gentle Romans,— Citizens Peace, ho! let us hear him

Ant Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears,

I come to bury Cæsar not to praise him 80
The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones
So let it be with Cæsar The noble Brutus

Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious, 84
It it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it

Here under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
For Brutus is an honourable man, 88

So are they all, all honourable men,—
Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral

He was my friend faithful and just to me 92
But Brutus says he was ambitious,
And Brutus is an honourable man

He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill

Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious? 96 When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath
wept,

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious,

And Brutus is an honourable man 100
You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious, 104
And sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know

You all did love him once, not without cause What cause withholds you then to mourn for
him? 109

O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason Bear with me,

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar, 112
And I must pause till it come back to me

First Cit Methinks there is much reason in his sayings

Sec Cit If thou consider rightly of the matter
Cæsar has had great wrong
Thurd Cit Has he, masters? 116
 I fear there will a worse come in his place Fourth Cit Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown, Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious
First Cit If it be found so, some will dear abide it 120
Sec Cit Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping Thurd Cit There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony Fourth Cit Now mark him, he begins again to speak Ant But yesterday the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world, now lies he there, And none so poor to do him reverence O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, 128 I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong, Who, you all know, are honourable men I will not do them wrong, I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you, Than I will wrong such honourable men 133 But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar, I found it in his closet, 'tis his will Let out the commons hear this testament— 136 Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read— And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds, And dip their napkins in his sacred blood, Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, 140 And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it as a rich legacy Unto their issue
Fourth Cit We'll hear the will read it, Mark Antony 144 Citizens The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will Ant Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it
 It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you You are not wood, you are not stones, but men, And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar, 149 It will inflame you, it will make you mad 'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs, For if you should, O! what would come of it.
Fourth Cit Read the will! we'll hear it, Antony, 153
 You shall read us the will, Cæsar's will Ant Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile?
 I have o'er-shot myself to tell you of it. 156 I fear I wrong the honourable men Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar, I do fear it.
Fourth Cit They were traitors honourable men!
Citizens The will! the testament! 160
Sec Cit They were villains, murderers The will! read the will.
Ant You will compel me then to read the will?
 Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar, And let me show you him that made the will. 164

Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?
Citizens Come down.
Sec Cit Descend [ANTONY comes down
Thurd Cit You shall have leave 168
Fourth Cit A ring, stand round
First Cit Stand from the hearse, stand from the body
Sec Cit Room for Antony, most noble Antony
Ant Nay, press not so upon me, stand far off 172 Citizens Stand back! room! bear back!
Ant If you have tears, prepare to shed them now
 You all do know this mantle I remember The first time ever Cæsar put it on, 176 'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent, That day he overcame the Nervii Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through See what a rent the envious Casca made 180 Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd, And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away, Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it, As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd 184 If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no, For Brutus as you know, was Cæsar's angel Judge, O you gods! how dearly Cæsar lov'd him
 This was the most unkindest cut of all, 188 For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab, Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms, Quite vanquish'd him then burst his mighty heart,
 And, in his mantle muffling up his face, 192 Even at the base of Pompey's statue, Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell O! what a fall was there, my countrymen, Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, 196 Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us O! now you weep, and I perceive you feel The dint of pity, these are gracious drops Kind souls, what! weep you when you but be- hold 200
 Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here, Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors First Cit O piteous spectacle!
Sec Cit O noble Cæsar! 204
Thurd Cit O woeful day!
Fourth Cit O traitors! villains!
First Cit O most bloody sight!
Sec Cit We will be revenged 208
Citizens Revenge!—About!—Seek!—Burn! Fire!—Kill!—Slay! Let not a traitor live Ant Stay, countrymen!
First Citizen Peace there! Hear the noble Antony 212
Sec Cit We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.
Ant Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up To such a sudden flood of mutiny They that have done this deed are honourable What private griefs they have, alas! I know not, 217 That made them do it, they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts.
I am no orator, as Brutus is,
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend, and that they know full well

That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on,
I tell you that which you yourselves do know, Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths,

And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Cæsar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Citizens We'll mutiny.

First Cit We'll burn the house of Brutus.

Third Cit Away, then! come, seek the conspirators.

Ant Yet hear me, countrymen, yet hear me speak.

Citizens Peace, ho!—Hear Antony,—most noble Antony.

Ant Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.

Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?
Alas! you know not I must tell you then.
You have forgot the will I told you of.

Citizens Most true: The will! let's stay and hear the will.

Ant Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal
To every Roman citizen he gives,

To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
Sec Cit Most noble Cæsar! we'll revenge his death.

Third Cit O royal Cæsar!

Ant Hear me with patience.

Citizens Peace, ho!

Ant Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tiber, he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever, common pleasures,
To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Cæsar! when comes such another?

First Cit Never never! Come, away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.

Sec Cit Go fetch fire.

Third Cit Pluck down benches.

Fourth Cit Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.

[Exeunt Citizens, with the body]
Ant Now let it work mischief, thou art afoot,

Take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow!

Serv Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant Where is he?

Serv He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant And thither will I straight to visit him.
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,

And in this mood will give us any thing.
Serv I heard him say Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.
Ant Belike they had some notice of the people,
How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CINNA, the Poet.

Cin I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,
And things unlucky charge my fantasy.
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

First Cit What is your name?

Sec Cit Whither are you going?

Third Cit Where do you dwell?

Fourth Cit Are you a married man, or a bachelor?

Sec Cit Answer every man directly.

First Cit Ay, and briefly.

Fourth Cit Ay, and wisely.

Third Cit Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Sec Cit That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry, you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed, directly.

Cin Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.

First Cit As a friend or an enemy?

Cin As a friend.

Sec Cit That matter is answered directly.

Fourth Cit For your dwelling, briefly.

Cin Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

Third Cit Your name, sir, truly.

Cin Truly, my name is Cinna.

Sec Cit Tear him to pieces, he's a conspirator.

Cin I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

Fourth Cit Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Sec Cit It is no matter, his name's Cinna, pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

Third Cit Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! firebrands! To Brutus', to Cassius', burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's, some to Ligarius'. Away! go!

[Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Rome. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Oct Your brother too must die, consent you, Lepidus?

Lep I do consent

Oct Prick him down, Antony

Lep Upon condition Publius shall not live, 4
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony

Ant He shall not live, look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house,
Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine 8
How to cut off some charge in legacies

Lep What! shall I find you here?

Oct Or here or at the Capitol

[Exit LEPIDUS]

Ant This is a slight unmeritable man, 12
Meet to be sent on errands is it fit,
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Oct So you thought him,
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die,
In our black sentence and proscription 17

Ant Octavius, I have seen more days than you

And though we lay these honours on this man
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, 20
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way, 23
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons

Oct You may do your will,
But he's a tried and valiant soldier 28

Ant So is my horse, Octavius, and for that I do appoint him store of provender
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on, 32
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so,
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth,
A barren-spirited fellow, one that feeds 36
On abject orts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and stal'd by other men,
Begin his fashion do not talk of him
But as a property And now, Octavius, 40
Listen great things Brutus and Cassius Are levying powers, we must straight make
head,

Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out, 44
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open perils surest answered

Oct Let us do so for we are at the stake, 48
And bay'd about with many enemies,
And some that smile have in their hearts I fear, Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt

SCENE II — Camp near Sardis Before BRUTUS' Tent.

Drum Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them

Bru Stand, ho!

Lucil Give the word ho! and stand

Bru What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?

Lucil He is at hand, and Pindarus is come 4
To do you salutation from his master

[PINDARUS gives a letter to BRUTUS] Bru He greets me well Your master, Pin-
darus,

In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish 8
Things done, undone, but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied

Pin I do not doubt

But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour 12

Bru He is not doubted A word, Lucilius,
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd

Lucil With courtesy and with respect
enough,

But not with such familiar instances, 16
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old

Bru Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay, 20
It useth an enforced ceremony

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith,
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand, Make gallant show and promise of their mettle, 24

But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades, Sink in the trial Comes his army on?

Lucil They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd, 28

The greater part the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius

Bru Hark! he is arriv'd [Low march within.]
March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Ca Stand, ho! 32

Bru Stand, ho! Speak the word along

First Sold Stand!

Sec Sold Stand!

Thrd Sold Stand! 36

Cas Most noble brother, you have done me
wrong

Bru Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas Brutus, thus sober form of yours hides
wrongs, 40

And when you do them—

Bru Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs softly I do know you well

Before the eyes of both our armies here, Which should perceive nothing but love from us, 44

Let us not wrangle bid them move away,
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience

Cas Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off 48
A little from this ground

Bru Lucilius, do you the like, and let no man

Come to our tent till we have done our conference

Let Lucius and Tullius guard our door 52
[Exeunt]

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of BRUTUS.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS

Cas That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians, Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off

Bru You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case

Cas In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment

Bru Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm,
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.

Cas I an itching palm! 12
You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or by the gods, this speech were else your last

Bru The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chasteisement doth therefore hide his head

Cas Chasteisement! 17
Bru Remember March, the ides of March remember

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, 20

And not for justice? What! shall one of us
That struck the foremost man of all this world
But for supporting robbers, shall we now

Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, 24
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?

I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman

Cas Brutus, bay not me, 28
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in: I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru Go to, you are not, Cassius 32
Cas I am

Bru I say you are not
Cas Urge me no more, I shall forget myself,
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no

further 36
Bru Away, slight man!
Cas Is't possible?

Bru Hear me, for I will speak
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted when a madman stares? 40

Cas O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?

Bru All this! ay, more: fret till your proud heart break

Go show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble: Must I
budge?

Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch

Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you, for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish

Cas Is it come to this?
Bru You say you are a better soldier
Let it appear so, make your vaunting true, 52
And it shall please me well: For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men

Cas You wrong me every way, you wrong me, Brutus,
I said an elder soldier, not a better 56
Did I say, 'better'?

Bru If you did, I care not Cas When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me

Bru Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him

Cas I durst not! 60
Bru No
Cas What! durst not tempt him!

Bru For your life you durst not, Cas Do not presume too much upon my
love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for 64 Bru You have done that you should be sorry for

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind, 68
Which I respect not: I did send to you
For certain sums of gold: which you denied me,
For I can raise no money by vile means
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash By any indirection: I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions, 76
Which you denied me: was that done like Cassius?

Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends, 80
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts, Dash him to pieces!

Cas I denied you not Bru You did
Cas I did not: he was but a fool That brought my answer back: Brutus hath riv'd my heart 84
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,— But Brutus makes mine greater than they are

Bru I do not, till you practise them on me Cas You love me not.
Bru I do not like your faults 88 Cas A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru A flatterer's would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus Cas Come, Antony, and young Octavius,
come, 92
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is weary of the world,
Hated by one he loves, brav'd by his brother,

Check'd like a bondman all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O! I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes. There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast, within, a heart too
Dearer than Plutus mine, richer than gold
If that thou be'st a Roman take it forth,
I, that demed thee gold, will give my heart
Strike, as thou didst at Cæsar, for, I know, 104
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'd'st him better

Then ever thou lov'd'st Cassius
Bru Sheathe your dagger
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope,
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour
O Cassius! you are yoked with a lamb 109
That carries anger as the flint bears fire,
Who much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again

Cas Hath Cassius liv'd 112
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?

Bru When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd
too

Cas Do you confess so much? Give me your
hand 116

Bru And my heart too
Cas O Brutus!

Bru What's the matter?
Cas Have not you love enough to bear with
me,

When that rash humour which my mother gave
me

Makes me forgetful?
Bru Yes, Cassius, and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus, 121 He'll think your mother chides, and leave you
so

Poet [Within] Let me go in to see the generals,
There is some grudge between 'em, 'us not meet
They be alone 125

Lucil [Within] You shall not come to them Poet [Within] Nothing but death shall stay
me

Enter Poet, followed by LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, and LUCIUS

Cas How now! What's the matter? 128 Poet For shame, you generals! What do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be,
For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye

Cas Ha, ha! how vilely doth this civic rime!
Bru Get you hence, sirrah, saucy fellow,
hence! 133

Cas Bear with him, Brutus, 'tis his fashion Bru I'll know his humour, when he knows his time

What should the wars do with these juggling fools? 136

Companion, hence!
Cas Away away! be gone

[Exit Poet]
Bru Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to night

Cas And come yourselves, and bring Mes-sala with you 140

Immediately to us

[Exit LUCILIUS and TITINIUS]

Bru Lucius a bowl of wine! [Exit LUCIUS] Cas I did not think you could have been so angry

Bru O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs
Cas Of your philosophy you make no use 144

If you give place to accidental evils Bru No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead

Cas Ha! Portia!
Bru She is dead 148

Cas How 'scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so?

O unsupportable and touching loss!
Upon what sickness?

Bru Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark
Antony 152

Have made themselves so strong,—for with her death

That tidings came—with this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire

Cas And died so?
Bru Even so

Cas O ye immortal gods! 156

Enter LUCIUS, with wine and tapers

Bru Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl
of wine

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks]
Cas My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup, 160
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love

[Drinks]
Bru Come in, Titinius [Exit LUCIUS]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA

Welcome, good Messala
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities 164

Cas Portia, art thou gone?
Bru No more, I pray you

Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power, 168

Bending their expedition towards Philippi Mes Myself have letters of the self same tenour

Bru With what addition?
Mes That by proscription and bills of outlawry, 172

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru 'Tiserein our letters do not well agree,
Mine speak of seventy senators that died 176

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cas Cicero one!

Mes Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?
Bru No Messala 181

Mes Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Bru Nothing, Messala
Mes That, methinks, is strange Bru Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours? 184
Mes No, my lord
Bru Now as you are a Roman, tell me true
Mes Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell
 For certain she is dead, and by strange manner Bru Why, farewell, Portia. We must die,
 Messala 189
 With meditating that she must die once,
 I have the patience to endure it now Mes Even so great men great losses should endure 192
Cas I have as much of this in art as you,
 But yet my nature could not bear it so Bru Well, to our work alive What do you think
 Of marching to Philippi presently? 196
Cas I do not think it good Bru Your reason?
Cas This is it
 'Tis better that the enemy seek us
 So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers, Doing himself offence, whilst we, lying still, 200
 Are full of rest, defence, and numbness Bru Good reasons must, of force, give place to better,
 The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground
 Do stand but in a forc'd affection, 204
 For they have grudg'd us contribution
 The enemy, marching along by them,
 By them shall make a fuller number up,
 Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd,
 From which advantage shall we cut him off, 209
 If at Philippi we do face him there,
 These people at our back
Cas Hear me, good brother Bru Under your pardon. You must note beside, 212
 That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
 Our legions are brim full, our cause is ripe
 The enemy increaseth every day,
 We, at the height, are ready to decline 216
 There is a tide in the affairs of men,
 Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune,
 Omitted, all the voyage of their life 220
 Is bound in shallows and in miseries
 On such a full sea are we now afloat,
 And we must take the current when it serves,
 Or lose our ventures
Cas Then, with your will, go on,
 We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi 224
Bru The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
 And nature must obey necessity,
 Which we will niggard with a little rest.
 There is no more to say?
Cas No more Good-night 228
 Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.
Bru Lucius!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

My gown [Exit LUCIUS]
 Farewell, good Messala

Good-night, Titinius Noble, noble Cassius, Good-night, and good repose
Cas O my dear brother! 232
 This was an ill beginning of the night
 Never come such division 'tween our souls!
 Let it not, Brutus
Bru Everything is well.
Cas Good-night, my lord
Bru Good-night, good brother 236
Tit } Good-night, Lord Brutus Mes }
Bru Farewell, every one
 [Exit CASSIUS, TITINIUS, and MESSALA]

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown

Give me the gown Where is thy instrument?
Luc Here in the tent
Bru What! thou speak'st drowsily?
 Poor knave, I blame thee not, thou art o'erwatch'd 240
 Call Claudius and some other of my men,
 I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.
Luc Varro! and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var Calls my lord? 244
Bru I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep
 It may be I shall raise you by and by
 On business to my brother Cassius Var So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure 248
Bru I will not have it so, lie down, good sirs,
 It may be I shall otherwise bethink me
 Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so,
 I put it in the pocket of my gown 252
 [VARRO and CLAUDIUS lie down]
Luc I was sure your lordship did not give it
 me
Bru Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful
 Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
 And touch thy instrument a strain or two? 256
Luc Ay, my lord, an't please you Bru It does, my boy
 I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing Luc It is my duty, sir Bru I should not urge thy duty past thy might, 260
 I know young bloods look for a time of rest.
Luc I have slept, my lord, already Bru It was well done, and thou shalt sleep
 again,
 I will not hold thee long if I do live, 264
 I will be good to thee [Music, and a Song
 This is a sleepy tune. O murderous slumber!
 Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,
 That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good-
 night, 268
 I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee
 If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument, I'll take it from thee, and, good boy, good-night Let me see, let me see, is not the leaf turn'd
 down 272
 Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR

How ill this taper burns! Ha! who comes here?
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous apparition. 276
It comes upon me Art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare?

Speak to me what thou art 280

Ghost Thy evil spirit, Brutus

Bru Why com'st thou?

Ghost To tell thee thou shalt see me at

Philippi

Bru Well, then I shall see thee again?

Ghost Ay, at Philippi.

Bru Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.

[Ghost vanishes]

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest 285
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee Boy, Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!
Claudius! 288

Luc The strings, my lord, are false

Bru He thinks he still is at his instrument.

Lucius, awake!

Luc My lord! 292

Bru Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Luc My lord, I do not know that I did cry

Bru Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?

Luc Nothing, my lord 296

Bru Sleep again, Lucius Sirrah, Claudius!
Fellow thou! awake!

Var My lord!

Clau My lord! 300

Bru Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var } Did we, my lord?

Clau } Ay saw you any thing?

Bru No, my lord, I saw nothing

Clau } Nor I, my lord

Bru Go, and commend me to my brother

Cassius 304

Bid him set on his powers betimes before,

And we will follow

Var } It shall be done, my lord.

Clau }

[Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I—The Plains of Philippi

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army

Oct Now, Antony, our hopes are answered
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions,
It proves not so, their battles are at hand, 4
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it they could be content, 8
To visit other places, and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face

To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage,
But 'tis not so

Enter a Messenger

Mess Prepare you, generals 12

The enemy comes on in gallant show,

Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,

And something to be done immediately

Ant Octavius, lead your battle softly on, 16

Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct Upon the right hand I, keep thou the

left

Ant Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct I do not cross you, but I will do so 20

[March]

Drum Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army, LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others

Bru They stand, and would have parley

Cas Stand fast, Titinius we must out and talk

Oct Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant No, Cæsar, we will answer on their

charge 24

Make forth, the generals would have some

words

Oct Stir not until the signal.

Bru Words before blows is it so, country-

men?

Oct Not that we love words better, as you do

Bru Good words are better than bad strokes,

Octavius 29

Ant In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words

Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,

Crying, 'Long live! hail, Cæsar!'

Cas Antony, 32

The posture of your blows are yet unknown,

But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,

And leave them honeyless

Ant Not stingless too

Bru O! yes, and soundless too, 36

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,

And very wisely threat before you sting

Ant Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar 40

You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd

like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet,

Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind

Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers! 44

Cas Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank your-

self

This tongue had not offended so to-day,

If Cassius might have rul'd

Oct Come, come, the cause if arguing make us sweat, 48

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look,

I draw a sword against conspirators,

When think you that the sword goes up again?

Never, till Cæsar's three-and-thirty wounds 53

Be well aveng'd, or till another Cæsar

Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors Bru Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands, 56

Unless thou bring'st them with thee
Oct So I hope, I was not born to die on Brutus' sword

Bru O' if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
 Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable 60

Cas A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour, Join'd with a masquer and a reveller

Ant Old Cassius still!
Oct Come, Antony away!

Defiance, traitors hurl we in your teeth 64
 If you dare fight to-day, come to the field,
 If not, when you have stomachs

[Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army
Cas Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard 68
Bru Ho!

Lucilius hark, a word with you Lucil My lord?

[BRUTUS and LUCILIUS talk apart
Cas Messala!

Mes What says my general?
Cas Messala,

This is my birth-day as this very day 72
 Was Cassius born Give me thy hand, Messala Be thou my witness that against my will,
 As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set Upon one battle all our liberties 76

You know that I held Epicurus strong,
 And his opinion now I change my mind,
 And partly credit things that do presage

Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign 80
 Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd, Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands,
 Who to Philippi here consorted us

This morning are they fled away and gone 84
 And in their stead do ravens, crows, and kites Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
 As we were sickly prey their shadows seem

A canopy most fatal, under which 88
 Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes Believe not so Cas I but believe it partly,
 For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd
 To meet all perils very constantly 92

Bru Even so, Lucilius.
Cas Now, most noble Brutus,

The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
 Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
 But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
 Let's reason with the worst that may befall 97

If we do lose this battle, then is this
 The very last time we shall speak together
 What are you then, determined to do? 100

Bru Even by the rule of that philosophy
 By which I did blame Cato for the death
 Which he did give himself, I know not how,
 But I do find it cowardly and vile, 104

For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
 The time of life arming myself with patience,
 To stay the providence of some high powers

That govern us below

Cas Then, if we lose this battle, 108
 You are contented to be led in triumph Thorough the streets of Rome?

Bru No, Cassius, no think not, thou noble Roman,
 That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome, 112

He bears too great a mind but this same day
 Must end that work the ides of March begun,
 And whether we shall meet again I know not Therefore our everlasting farewell take 116

For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
 If we do meet again why, we shall smile,
 If not, why then, thus parting was well made

Cas For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
 If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed, 121
 If not, 'tis true this parting was well made

Bru Why, then, lead on O' that a man might know
 The end of this day's business, ere it come, 124
 But it sufficeth that the day will end,
 And then the end is known Come, ho! away!
 [Exeunt

SCENE II — The Same The Field of Battle

Alarum Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA

Bru Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills Unto the legions on the other side

[Loud alarum
 Let them set on at once, for I perceive
 But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, 4
 And sudden push gives them the overthrow Ride, ride, Messala let them all come down
 [Exeunt

SCENE III — Another Part of the Field

Alarum Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS

Cas O' look, Titinius, look, the villains fly Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy,
 This ensign here of mine was turning back,
 I slew the coward, and did take it from him 4

Tit O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early Who, having some advantage on Octavius,
 Took it too eagerly his soldiers fell to spoil, Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed 8

Enter PINDARUS

Pin Fly further off, my lord, fly further off, Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord
 Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off

Cas This hull is far enough Look, look, Titinius, 12
 Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit They are, my lord.
Cas Titinius, if thou lov'st me,
 Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
 Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops
 And here again, that I may rest assur'd 17
 Whether yond troops are friend or enemy

Tit I will be here again, even with a thought.
 [Exit

Cas Go, Pindarus get higher on that hill,
My sight was ever thick, regard Titinius, 21
And tell me what thou hast about the field

[PINDARUS ascends the hill]

This day I breathed first, time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end, 24
My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pin [Above] O my lord!

Cas What news?

Pin Titinius is enclosed round about 28
With horsemen, that make to him on the spur,
Yet he spurs on now they are almost on him Now, Titinius! now some light, O! he lights
too,

He's ta'en, [Shout] and, hark! they shout for joy 32

Cas Come down, behold no more
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

PINDARUS descends

Come hither, sirrah 36
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do, Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath, 40

Now be a freeman, and with this good sword,
That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom

Stand not to answer, here, take thou the hilts,
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now, 44
Guidethou the sword! Cæsar thou art reveng'd, Even with the sword that kill'd thee [Dies]

Pin So, I am free, yet would not so have been

Durst I have done my will O Cassius, 48
Far from this country Pindarus shall run, Where never Roman shall take note of him
[Exit]

Re-enter TITINIUS with MESSALA

Mes It is but change, Titinius, for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power, 52
As Cassius' legions are by Antony

Tit These tidings will well comfort Cassius

Mes Where did you leave him?

Tit All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill. 56 Mes Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit He lies not like the living O my heart!

Mes Is not that he?

Tit No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more O setting sun! 60
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set,
The sun of Rome is set Our day is gone, Clouds, dews, and dangers come, our deeds are
done. 64

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed

Mes Mistrust of good success hath done this deed

O hateful error, melancholy's child!

Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of
men 68

The things that are not? O error! soon conceiv'd,

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee Tit What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pin-
darus? 72

Mes Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears, I may say, thrusting it,
For piercing steel and darts envenom'd 76
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight

Tit Hie you, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while

[Exit MESSALA]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they 81
Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas! thou hast misconstru'd every thing 84
But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow, Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius 88
By your leave, gods this is a Roman's part Come, Cassius sword, and find Titinius' heart [Kills himself]

Alarum Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, Young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS

Bru Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? 92

Mes Lo, yonder and Titinius mourning it Bru Titinius' face is upward

Cato He is slain.

Bru O Julius Cæsar! thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails [Low alarums]

Cato Brave Titinius! 96
Look where he have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Bru Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible that ever Rome 100 Should breed thy fellow Friends, I owe more
tears

To this dead man than you shall see me pay —
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time — Come therefore, and to Thassos send his body 104

His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us Lucius, come,
And come, young Cato, — let us to the field.
Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on — 108
'Tis three o'clock, and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Another Part of the Field

Alarum Enter fighting, Soldiers of both armies, then BRUTUS, Young CATO, LUCILIUS, and Others

Bru Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads!

Cato What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend,
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Bru And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I, Brutus, my country's friend, know me for Brutus!

[Exit, charging the enemy
Cato is overpowered, and falls

Lucil O young and noble Cato, art thou down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And mayst be honour'd being Cato's son.

First Sold Yield, or thou diest

Lucil Only I yield to die
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight.

[Offering money
Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

First Sold We must not A noble prisoner!

Sec Sold Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en

First Sold I'll tell the news here comes the general.

Enter ANTONY

Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant Where is he?

Lucil Safe, Antony, Brutus is safe enough
I dare assure thee that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus

The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself

Ant This is not Brutus, friend, but, I assure
you,

A prize no less in worth Keep this man safe,

Gave him all kindness I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,

And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead,

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,

How every thing is chanc'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE V—Another Part of the Field

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS

Bru Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Ch. Statilius show'd the torch-light, but, my
lord,

He came not back he is or ta'en or slain.

Bru Sit thee down, Clitus, slaying is the
word,

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus

[Whispers Ch What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru Peace, then! no words

Ch I'll rather kill myself

Bru Hark thee, Dardanius [Whispers

Dar Shall I do such a deed? 8

Ch O, Dardanius!

Dar O, Clitus!

Ch What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Ch Now is that noble vessel full of grief, 13
That it runs over even at his eyes

Bru Come hither, good Volumnius list a
word.

Vol What says my lord?

Bru Why this, Volumnius 16

The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me

Two several times by night, at Sardis once,

And this last night here in Philippi fields

I know my hour is come

Vol Not so, my lord. 20

Bru Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes,

Our enemies have beat us to the pit

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, 24

Than tarry till they push us Good Volumnius,

Thou know'st that we two went to school together

Even for that our love of old, I prithee,

Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it 28

Vol That's not an office for a friend, my lord [Alarum still

Ch Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying
here

Bru Farewell to you, and you, and you,
Volumnius

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep, 32

Farewell to thee too, Strato Countrymen,

My heart doth joy that yet, in all my life,

I found no man but he was true to me

I shall have glory by this losing day, 36

More than Octavius and Mark Antony

By this vile conquest shall attain unto

So fare you well at once, for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history 40

Night hangs upon mine eyes, my bones would
rest,

That have but labour'd to attain this hour

[Alarum Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!'

Ch Fly, my lord, fly

Bru Hence! I will follow

[Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord 44

Thou art a fellow of a good respect,

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato? 48

Str Give me your hand first fare you well,
my lord

Bru Farewell, good Strato—[He runs on his sword] Cæsar, now be still,

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. [Dies

Alarum. Retreat Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and Army

Oct What man is that? 52

Mes My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?

Str Free from the bondage you are in,
Messala,

The conquerors can but make a fire of him,

For Brutus only overcame himself, 56

And no man else hath honour by his death

Lucil So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true

Oct All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain
them. 60

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Stra Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct Do so, good Messala

Mes How died my master, Strato? 64

Stra I held the sword, and he did run on it

Mes Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest service to my master

Ant This was the noblest Roman of them all, 68

All the conspirators save only he Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar,

He only, in a general honest thought

And common good to all, made one of them. 72

His life was gentle, and the elements

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world, 'This was a man'!

Oct According to his virtue let us use him,

With all respect and rites of burial 77

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably

So, call the field to rest, and let's away, 80

To part the glories of this happy day [Exeunt]

SCENE I —A desert Heath

Thunder and lightning Enter three Witches
First Witch When shall we three meet again
 In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
Sec Witch When the hurlyburly's done,
 When the battle's lost and won.
Thurd Witch That will be ere the set of sun.
First Witch Where the place?
Sec Witch Upon the heath

SCENE II.—A Camp near Forres

Alarum within. Enter KING DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.
Dun What bloody man is that? He can report,
 As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
 The newest state
Mal This is the sergeant
 Who, like a good and hardy soldier fought
 'Gainst my captivity Hail, brave friend!
 Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
 As thou didst leave it Serg Doubtful it stood,
 As two spent swimmers, that do cling together And choke their art. The merciless Macdon-wald—
 Worthy to be a rebel, for to that The multiplying villanies of nature
 Do swarm upon him—from the western isles
 Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied,

And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
 Show'd like a rebel's whore but all's too weak, For brave Macbeth,—well he deserves that
 name,—
 Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
 Which smok'd with blood, execution,
 Like valour's minion carv'd out his passage
 Till he fac'd the slave, Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to
 him,
 Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
 And fix'd his head upon our battlements
Dun O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Serg As whence the sun 'gins his reflection Shipwracking storms and direful thunders
 break,
 So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to
 come Discomfort swells Mark, King of Scotland,
 mark
 No sooner justice had with valour arm'd Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,
 But the Norweyan lord surveying vantage,
 With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men Began a fresh assault.
Dun Dismay'd not this
 Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Serg Yes,
 As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion
 If I say sooth, I must report they were
 As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks,
 So they Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe
 Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
 Or memorize another Golgotha,
 I cannot tell—
 But I am faint, my gashes cry for help Dun So well thy words become thee as thy wounds,

They smack of honour both Go, get him surgeons [Exit Sergeant, attended

Enter ROSS

Who comes here?

Mal The worth' Thane of Ross

Len What a haste looks through his eyes!

So should he look

That seems to speak things strange

Ross God save the king! 48

Dun Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?

Ross From Fife, great king,

Where the Norwegian banners flout the sky

And fan our people cold Norway himself,

With terrible numbers, 52

Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,

The Thane of Cawdor began a dismal conflict,

Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,

Confronted him with self-comparisons, 56

Point against point, rebellious arm against arm,

Curbing his lavish spirit and, to conclude,

The victory fell on us —

Dun Great happiness! 60

Ross That now

Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition,

Nor would we deign him burial of his men

Till he disbursed, at Saint Colme's Inch,

Ten thousand dollars to our general use 64

Dun No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest Go pronounce his present

death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth

Ross I'll see it done 68

Dun What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won [Exeunt

Thunder Enter the three Witches

First Witch Where hast thou been, sister?

Sec Witch Killing swine

Thurd Witch Sister, where thou?

First Witch A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap, 4

And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd

'Gave me,' quoth I

'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronyon cries

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger

But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do

Sec Witch I'll give thee a wind.

First Witch Thou'rt kind 12

Thurd Witch And I another

First Witch I myself have all the other,

And the very ports they blow,

All the quarters that they know

I' the shipman's card

I'll dram him dry as hay

Sleep shall neither night nor day

Hang upon his pent-house lid,

He shall live a man forbid 20

Weary se'nights nine times nine

Shall he dwindle, peak and pine

Though his bark cannot be lost, 24

Yet it shall be tempest-tost

Look what I have

Sec Witch Show me, show me

First Witch Here I have a pilot's thumb, 28

Wrack'd as homeward he did come [Drum within

Thurd Witch A drum! a drum!

Macbeth doth come

All The weird sisters, hand in hand, 32

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about

Thrice to thine and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine 36

Peace! the charm's wound up

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO

Macb So foul and fair a day I have not seen Ban How far is t call'd to Forres? What are these,

So wither'd and so wild in their attire, 40

That look not like th' inhabitants o' the earth,

And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her choppy finger laying 44

Upon her skinny lips you should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so

Macb Speak if you can what are you?

First Witch All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,

Thane of Glamis! 48

Sec Witch All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,

Thane of Cawdor!

Thurd Witch All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter

Ban Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? I' the name of truth, 52

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace and great prediction

Of noble having and of royal hope, 56

That he seems rapt withal to me you speak

not

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow and which will

not,

8 Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear 60

Your favours nor your hate

First Witch Hail!

Sec Witch Hail!

Thurd Witch Hail! 64

First Witch Lesser than Macbeth, and greater

Sec Witch Not so happy, yet much happier

Thurd Witch Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none

So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo! 68

First Witch Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me

more.

By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis,

But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,

- A prosperous gentleman, and to be king
 Stands not within the prospect of belief
 No more than to be Cawdor Say, from whence
 You owe this strange intelligence? or why Upon this blasted heath you stop our way With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge you [Witches vanish]
Ban The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
 And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd?
Macb Into the air, and what seem'd corporal melted
 As breath into the wind Would they had stay'd!
Ban Were such things here as we do speak about?
 Or have we eaten on the insane root
 That takes the reason prisoner?
Macb Your children shall be kings.
Ban You shall be king Macb And Thane of Cawdor too, went it
 not so?
Ban To the self-same tune and words.
 Who's here?
 Enter ROSS and ANGUS Ross The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
 The news of thy success, and when he reads
 Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
 His wonders and his praises do contend Which should be thine or his Silence with
 that,
 In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,
 He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks, Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make,
 Strange images of death As thick as hail Came post with post, and every one did bear
 Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
 And pour'd them down before him
Ang We are sent
 To give thee from our royal master thanks,
 Only to herald thee into his sight,
 Not pay thee
Ross And, for an earnest of a greater honour, He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Caw-dor
 In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
 For it is thine
Ban What! can the devil speak true?
Macb The Thane of Cawdor lives why do you dress me
 In borrow'd robes?
Ang Who was the thane lives yet,
 But under heavy judgment bears that life Which he deserves to lose Whether he was combin'd
 With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
 With hidden help or vantage, or that with both He labour'd in his country's wrack, I know not,
 But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
 Have overthrow'n him.
Macb [Aside] Glamis, and Thane of Caw-
 dor
 The greatest is behind [To ROSS and ANGUS.]
 Thanks for your pains.
 [To BANQUO] Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
 When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to
 me
 Promis'd no less to them?
Ban That, trusted home,
 Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
 Besides the Thane of Cawdor But 'tis strange
 And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
 The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
 Win us with honest trifles, to betray's
 In deepest consequence
 Cousins, a word, I pray you Macb [Aside] Two truths are told,
 As happy prologues to the swelling act
 Of the imperial theme I thank you, gentlemen.
 [Aside] This supernatural soliciting Cannot be ill, cannot be good, if ill,
 Why hath it given me earnest of success, Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Caw-
 dor
 If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
 Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
 And make my seated heart knock at my ribs, Against the use of nature? Present fears Are less than horrible imaginings,
 My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical, Shakes so my single state of man that function Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is But what is not Ban Look, how our partner's rapt Macb [Aside] If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
 Without my stir
Ban New honours come upon him, Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould
 But with the aid of use Macb [Aside] Come what come may,
 Time and the hour runs through the roughest
 day
Ban Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure
Macb Give me your favour my dull brain was wrought
 With things forgotten Kind gentlemen, your pains
 Are register'd where every day I turn
 The leaf to read them Let us toward the king Think upon what hath chanc'd, and, at more
 time,
 The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
 Our free hearts each to other Ban Very gladly
Macb Till then, enough Come, friends
 [Exeunt]
 SCENE IV — Forres A Room in the Palace
 Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONAL-BARN, LENNOX, and Attendants
Dun Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not Those in commission yet return'd?
Mal My liege,
 They are not yet come back; but I have spoke With one that saw him die, who did report

That very frankly he confess'd his treasons, Implored your highness' pardon and set forth
 A deep repentance. Nothing in his life
 Became him like the leaving it, he died
 As one that had been studied in his death
 To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
 As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun There's no art
 To find the mind's construction in the face 12
 He was a gentleman on whom I built An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS and ANGUS

O worthiest cousin!
 The sin of my ingratitude even now
 Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before 16
 That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
 To overtake thee, would thou hadst less deserved,

 That the proportion both of thanks and pay-

ment
 Might have been mine! only I have left to say, 20
 More is thy due than more than all can pay

Macb The service and the loyalty I owe In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
 Is to receive our duties and our duties 24 Are to your throne and state, children and

servants,
 Which do but what they should, by doing everything

 Safe toward your love and honour

Dun Welcome hither
 I have begun to plant thee, and will labour 28
 To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
 That hast no less deserved, nor must be known
 No less to have done so, let me infold thee
 And hold thee to my heart.

Ban There if I grow, 32
 The harvest is your own.

Dun My plenteous joys Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
 In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
 And you whose places are the nearest, know 36
 We will establish our estate upon Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
 The Prince of Cumberland, which honour must Not unaccompanied invest him only, 40
 But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
 On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
 And bind us further to you.

Macb The rest is labour, which is not us'd
 for you 44
 I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
 The hearing of my wife with your approach,
 So, humbly take my leave.

Dun My worthy Cawdor!
Macb [Aside] The Prince of Cumberland! 48 that is a step

On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap,
 For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
 Let not light see my black and deep desires,
 The eye wink at the hand, yet let that be 52
 Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

[Exit.

Dun True, worthy Banquo, he is full so
 valiant,

And in his commendations I am fed,
 It is a banquet to me. Let's after him, 56
 Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome.
 It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V —Inverness MACBETH's Castle

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter

They met me in the day of success and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge
 When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, 'Thane of Cawdor', by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, 'Hail, king that shalt be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee.
 Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor, and shalt be 16 What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy

nature,
 It is too full o' the milk of human kindness To catch the nearest way, thou wouldst be great,

 Art not without ambition, but without 20
 The illness should attend it, what thou wouldst highly,

 That thou wouldst holily, wouldst not play

false,
 And yet wouldst wrongly win, thou'dst have,
 great Glamis,

That which cries, 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it' 24

And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee
 hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
 And chastise with the valour of my tongue 28
 All that impedes thee from the golden round, Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger

What is your tidings?

Mess The king comes here to-night.

Lady M Thou'rt mad to say it. 32

Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,

Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess So please you, it is true: our thane is coming,

One of my fellows had the speed of him, 36

Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more

Than would make up his message.

Lady M Give him tending,

He brings great news — [Exit Messenger.] The raven himself is hoarse

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan 40

Under my battlements. Come, you spirits

That tend on mortal thoughts! unsex me here,

And fill me from the crown to the toe top full
 Of direst cruelty, make thick my blood, 44

Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts, And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,

Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
night,
And pall thee in the dunest smoke of hell, 52
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes, Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
To cry, 'Hold, hold!'

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! 56
Thy letters have transported me beyond This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant

Macb My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night
Lady M And when goes hence? 60
Macb To-morrow, as he purposes Lady M O! never

Shall sun that morrow see
Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters To beguile the time,
Look like the time, bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue look like the innocent
flower,

But be the serpent under't He that's coming
Must be provided for and you shall put 68
This night's great business into my dispatch,
Which shall to all our nights and days to come Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom

Macb We will speak further Lady M Only look up clear, 72
To alter favour ever is to fear
Leave all the rest to me [Exeunt

SCENE VI — The Same Before the Castle

Hautboys and torches Enter DUNCAN, MAL-COLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MAC-DUFF, ROSS, ANGUS and Attendants

Dun This castle hath a pleasant seat the air Nimble and sweetly recommends itself Unto our gentle senses

Ban This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve 4
By his lov'd mansionry that the heaven's breath Smells wooingly here no jutting, frieze Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird Hath made his pendent bed and procreant cradle 8
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd
The air is delicate

Enter LADY MACBETH

Dun See, see, our honour'd hostess!
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love Herein I teach
you 12

How you shall bid God 'eyld us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble

Lady M All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and singlebusiness, to contend 16 Against those honours deep and broad wherewith

Your majesty loads our house for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits

Dun Where's the Thane of Cawdor? 20
We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor, but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp
him

To his home before us Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night

Lady M Your servants ever 25 Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own

Dun Give me your hand 28 Conduct me to mine host we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess [Exeunt

SCENE VII — The Same A Room in the Castle

Hautboys and torches Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service Then, enter MACBETH

Macb If it were done when 'tis done, then
'twere well

It were done quickly if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success that but this blow 4
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come But in these cases
We still have judgment here, that we but teach Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return 9

To plague the inventor, this even-handed justice Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips He's here in double trust 12
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject, Strong both against the deed, then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been 17
So clear in his great office, that his virtues Will plead like angels trumpet tongu'd against The deep damnation of his taking-off, 20
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye, 24
That tears shall drown the wind I have no spur To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition which o'er leaps itself And falls on the other —

Enter LADY MACBETH

How now! what news? 28

Lady M He has almost supp'd why have you left the chamber?

Macb Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M Know you not he has?

Macb We will proceed no further in this business

He hath honour'd me of late, and I have bought

Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since,

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time

Such I account thy love Art thou afraid

To be the same in thine own act and valour

As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that

Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,

And live a coward in thine own esteem,

Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,'

Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb Pnthee, peace

I dare do all that may become a man,

Who dares do more is none

Lady M What beast was't, then,

That made you break this enterprise to me?

When you durst do it then you were a man,

And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man Nor time nor place

Did then adhere, and yet you would make

both

They have made themselves, and that their fitness now

Does unmake you I have given suck, and know

How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me

I would, while it was smiling in my face,

Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,

And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as

you

Have done to this

Macb If we should fail,—

Lady M We fail!

But screw your courage to the sticking-place,

And we'll not fail When Duncan is asleep,

Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey

Soundly invite him, his two chamberlains

Will I with wine and wassail so convince

That memory, the warder of the brain,

Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason

A limbeck only, when in swinish sleep

Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,

What cannot you and I perform upon

The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon

His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt

Of our great quell?

Macb Bring forth men-children only

For thy undaunted mettle should compose

Nothing but males Will it not be receiv'd,

When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy

two

Of his own chamber and us'd their very daggers,

That they have done?

Lady M Who dares receive it other,

As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar

Upon his death?

Macb I am settled, and bend up

Each corporal agent to this terrible feat

Away, and mock the time with fairest show

False face must hide what the false heart doth

know

[Exeunt]

ACT II

SCENE I—Inverness Court within the Castle

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a Servant bearing a torch before him

Ban How goes the night, boy?

Fle The moon is down, I have not heard the clock

Ban And she goes down at twelve

Fle I tell e't, 'tis later, sir

Ban Hold, take my sword There's husbandry in heaven,

Their candles are all out Take thee that too

A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,

And yet I would not sleep merciful powers!

Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature

Gives way to in repose

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch

Give me my sword—

Who's there?

Macb A friend

Ban What, sir? not yet at rest? The king's a-bed

He hath been in unusual pleasure and Sent forth great largess to your offices

This diamond he greets your wife withal,

By the name of most kind hostess, and shut up

In measureless content

Macb Being unprepar'd,

Our will became the servant to defect,

Which else should free have wrought

Ban All's well

I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters

To you they have show'd some truth

Macb I think not of them

Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,

We would spend it in some words upon that

business,

If you would grant the time

Ban At your kind'st leisure

Macb If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,

It shall make honour for you

Ban So I lose none

In seeking to augment it, but still keep

My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear,

I shall be counsell'd

Macb Good repose the while!

Ban Thanks, sir the like to you

[Exeunt BANQUO and FLEANCE]

Macb Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready

She strike upon the bell Get thee to bed

[Exit Servant]

Is't is a dagger which I see before me

The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
 Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? or art thou but A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
 I see thee yet, in form as palpable
 As this which now I draw Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going,
 And such an instrument I was to use Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,
 Or else worth all the rest I see thee still,
 And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood, Which was not so before. There's no such thing
 It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes Now o'er the one half-
 world
 Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
 The curtain'd sleep, witchcraft celebrates Pale Hecate's offerings, and wither'd murder, Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
 Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
 With Tarquin's ravishing strides, toward his design
 Moves like a ghost Thou sure and firm-set
 earth,
 Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
 The very stones prate of my whereabouts,
 And take the present horror from the time, Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat he lives
 Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives
 I go, and it is done, the bell invites me
 Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell
 That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

[Exit

SCENE II —The Same

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold,
 What hath quenched them hath given me fire
 Hark!
 Peace!
 It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman, Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it
 The doors are open, and the surfeited grooms Do mock their charge with snores I have drugg'd their possets,
 That death and nature do contend about them,
 Whether they live or die
 Macb [Within] Who's there? what, ho!
 Lady M Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
 And 'tis not done, the attempt and not the deed Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready,
 He could not miss them. Had he not resembled
 My father as he slept I had done't. My husband!

Enter MACBETH.

Macb I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry
 Did not you speak?
 Macb When?
 Lady M Now
 Macb As I descended?
 Lady M Ay
 Macb Hark!
 Who lies i' the second chamber?
 Lady M Donalbain.
 Macb [Looking on his hands] This is a sorry
 sight
 Lady M A foolish thought to say a sorry
 sight.
 Macb There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!'
 That they did wake each other I stood and heard them,
 But they did say their prayers, and address'd
 them
 Again to sleep
 Lady M There are two lodg'd together Macb One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen'
 the other
 As they had seen me with these hangman's hands
 Listening their fear, I could not say 'Amen',
 When they did say 'God bless us!'
 Lady M Consider it not so deeply Macb But wherefore could not I pronounce
 'Amen'?
 I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'
 Stuck in my throat
 Lady M These deeds must not be thought
 After these ways, so, it will make us mad Macb Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep
 no more!
 Macbeth does murder sleep', the innocent sleep,
 Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
 The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second
 course,
 Chief nourisher in life's feast,—
 Lady M What do you mean?
 Macb Still it cried, 'Sleep no more!' to all the house
 'Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor
 Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no
 more!
 Lady M Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
 You do unbend your noble strength to think
 So brainsickly of things Go get some water,
 And wash this filthy witness from your hand Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
 They must be there go carry them, and smear
 The sleepy grooms with blood
 Macb I'll go no more
 I am afraid to think what I have done, Look on't again I dare not.
 Lady M Infirm of purpose!
 Give me the daggers The sleeping and the dead
 Are but as pictures, 'tis the eye of childhood That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed, so

I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit Knocking within] Macb Whence is that knocking?
How is 't with me, when every noise appals me?
What hands are here! Ha! they pluck out mine
eyes 60

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No, thus my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine
Making the green one red. 64

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M My hands are of your colour, but I
shame

To wear a heart so white — [Knocking within]
I hear a knocking

At the south entry, retire we to our chamber,
A little water clears us of this deed, 68

How easy is it, then! Your constancy Hath left you unattended [Knocking within]
Hark! more knocking

Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers Be not lost 72
So poorly in your thoughts

Macb To know my deed 'twere best not know myself [Knocking within] Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exeunt]

SCENE III — The Same

Knocking within. Enter a Porter

Porter Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate he should have old turning the key [Knocking within] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty come in time, have napkins enough about you, here you'll sweat for 't. [Knocking within] Knock, knock!
Who's there i' the other devil's name! Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale, who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven O! come in, equivocator [Knocking within] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose come in, tailor, here you may roast your goose [Knocking within] Knock, knock, never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking within] Anon, anon!
I pray you, remember the porter 24

[Opens the gate]

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,

That you do lie so late?

Port Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock, and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things. 29

Macd What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes, it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance Therefore much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery, it makes him, and it mars him, it sets him on,
and it takes him off, it persuades him, and dis-heartens him, makes him stand to, and not stand to, in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him 41

Macd I believe drink gave thee the lie last
night

Port That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me but I requited him for his lie, and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd Is thy master stirring? 48

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awak'd him, here he comes

Len Good morrow, noble sir

Macb Good morrow, both.

Macd Is the king stirring, worthythane?

Macb Not yet.

Macd He did command me to call timely
on him 52

I have almost slipp'd the hour

Macb I'll bring you to him

Macd I know this is a joyful trouble to you,
But yet 'tis one

Macb The labour we delight in physics pain.
This is the door

Macd I'll make so bold to call, 57

For 'tis my limited service [Exit]

Len Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb He does he did appoint so

Len The night has been unruly where we lay, 60

Our chimneys were blown down, and, as they
say,

Lamentings heard i' the air, strange screams of
death,

And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion and confus'd events 64

New hatch'd to the woeful time The obscure
bird

Clamour'd the hvelong night, some say the
earth

Was feverous and did shake.

Macb 'Twas a rough night.

Len My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it. 69

Re-enter MACDUFF

Macd O horror! horror! horror! Tongue nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb

Len

What's the matter?

Macd Confusion now hath made his masterpiece! 72

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope

The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence

The life o' the building!

- Macb* What is't you say? the life? 76
Len Mean you his majesty?
Macd Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
 With a new Gorgon do not bid me speak,
 See, and then speak yourselves
 [Exeunt MACBETH and LENNOX
 Awake! awake! 80
 Ring the alarm-bell Murder and treason!
 Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
 Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfart,
 And look on death itself! up, up, and see 84
 The great doom's image! Malcolm! Banquo!
 As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,
 To countenance this horror! Ring the bell [Bell rings
 Enter LADY MACBETH.
Lady M What's the business, 88
 That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
 The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!
Macd O gentle lady!
 'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak,
 The repetition in a woman's ear 92
 Would murder as it fell.
 Enter BANQUO
 O Banquo! Banquo!
 Our royal master's murder'd!
Lady M Woe, alas!
 What! in our house?
Ban Too cruel any where Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself, 96
 And say it is not so
 Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX Macb Had I but died an hour before this chance
 I had liv'd a blessed time, for, from this instant, There's nothing serious in mortality, 100
 All is but toys, renown and grace is dead,
 The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees Is left this vault to brag of Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN
Don What is amiss?
Macb You are, and do not know't
 The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood Is stopp'd, the very source of it is stopp'd.
Macd Your royal father's murder'd Mal O! by whom?
Len Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't 108
 Their hands and faces were all badg'd with
 blood,
 So were their daggers, which unwip'd we found Upon their pillows they star'd, and were distracted, no man's life
 Was to be trusted with them 112
Macb O! yet I do repent me of my fury,
 That I did kill them.
Macd Wherefore did you so?
Macb Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,
 Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man 116
 The expedition of my violent love
 Outran the pauser, reason Here lay Duncan,
 His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood,
 And his gash'd stabs lock'd like a breach in
 nature 120
 For ruin's wasteful entrance there, the murderers,
 Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers Unmannerly breech'd with gore who could refrain,
 That had a heart to love, and in that heart 124
 Courage to make's love known?
Lady M Help me hence, ho!
Macd Look to the lady Mal [Aside to DONALBAIN] Why do we hold our tongues,
 That most may claim this argument for ours?
Don [Aside to MALCOLM] What should be spoken 128
 Here where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
 May rush and seize us? Let's away our tears
 Are not yet brew'd Mal [Aside to DONALBAIN] Nor our strong
 sorrow
 Upon the foot of motion.
Ban Look to the lady 132
 [LADY MACBETH is carried out
 And when we have our naked frailties hid,
 That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
 And question this most bloody piece of work,
 To know it further Fears and scruples shake us
 In the great hand of God I stand, and thence 137 Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
 Of treasonous malice
Macd And so do I
All So all
Macb Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
 And meet it the hall together
All Well contented 140
 [Exeunt all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN Mal What will you do? Let's not consort with them
 To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
 Which the false man does easy I'll to England.
Don To Ireland, I, our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer where we are, There's daggers in men's smiles the near in
 blood,
 The nearer bloody
Mal This murderous shaft that's shot
 Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way 149
 Is to avoid the aim therefore, to horse,
 And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
 But shift away there's warrant in that theft
 Which steals itself when there's no mercy left.
 [Exeunt
 SCENE IV — The Same Without the Castle
 Enter ROSS and an Old Man.
 Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember well,
 Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore
 night

Hath trifled former knowings

Ross Ah! good father, 4 Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,
Threaten his bloody stage by the clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb, 9
When living light should kiss it?

Old Man 'Tis unnatural, Evenlike the deed that's done On Tuesday last,
A falcon, towering in her pride of place 12
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd

Ross And Duncan's horses,—a thing most strange and certain,—

Beauteous and swift the minions of their race, Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung
out, 16

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would Make war with mankind

Old Man 'Tis said they eat each other Ross They did so, to the amazement of mine
eyes,

That look'd upon't Here comes the good Macduff 20

Enter MACDUFF

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd Why, see you not?
Ross Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd Those that Macbeth hath slain
Ross Alas, the day! 21

What good could they pretend?
Macd They were suborn'd 24

Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled, which puts upon them Suspicion of the deed

Ross 'Gainst nature still!
Thrifless ambition, that wilt rav'n up 28 Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth

Macd He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be invested.

Ross Where is Duncan's body? 32
Macd Carried to Colmekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones

Ross Will you to Scone?
Macd No, cousin, I'll to Fife
Ross Well, I will thither 36

Macd Well, may you see things well done there adieu!

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!
Ross Farewell, father Old Man God's benison go with you; and with those 40

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! [Exeunt

ACT III

SCENE I.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban Thou hast it now: King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,

As the weird women promis'd, and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for't, yet it was said
It should not stand in thy posterity, 4
But that myself should be the root and father Of many kings If there come truth from
them,—

As upon thee, Macbeth their speeches shine,— Why, by the vertues on thee made good, 8
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more

Sennet sounded Enter MACBETH, as king LADY MACBETH, as queen LENNOX, ROSS, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants

Macb Here's our chief guest Lady M If he had been forgotten 12

It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-th'ing unbecoming

Macb To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence

Ban Let your highness Command upon me, to the which my duties 16
Are with a most indissoluble tie

For ever knit
Macb Ride you this afternoon?

Ban Ay, my good lord 20 Macb We should have else desir'd your good advice—

Which still hath been both grave and prosperous—

In this day's council, but we'll take to-morrow
Is't far you ride? 24

Ban As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper, go not my horse the
better,

I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain

Macb Fail not our feast 28
Ban My lord, I will not

Macb We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd

In England and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers 32
With strange invention, but of that to-morrow,
When therewithal we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly Hie you to horse, adieu Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?

Ban Ay, my good lord our time does call upon's 37

Macb I wish your horses swift and sure of foot,

And so I do commend you to their backs
Farewell. [Exit BANQUO

Let every man be master of his time 41
Till seven at night, to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone, while then, God be with you! [Exeunt all but MACBETH and an Attendant.

Sirrah, a word with you Attend those men 45
Our pleasure?

Atten They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb Bring them before us. [Exit Attendant.] To be thus is nothing, 48

But to be safely thus Our fears in Banquo Stuck deep, and in his royalty of nature Reigns that which would be fear'd 'tis much he dares,
 And, to that dauntless temper of his mind 52
 He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
 To act in safety There is none but he Whose being I do fear, and under him
 My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said 56 Mark Antony's was by Caesar He chid the sisters

When first they put the name of king upon me,
 And badeth speak to him, then, prophet-like,
 They hail'd him father to a line of kings. 60
 Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
 And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
 Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
 No son of mine succeeding If't be so, 64
 For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind,
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd,
 Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
 Only for them, and mine eternal jewel 68
 Given to the common enemy of man,
 To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
 Rather than so, come fate into the list, And champion me to the utterance! Who's
 there? 72

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers
 Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant.]

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

First Mur It was, so please your highness

Macb Well then, now

Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know 76

That it was he in the times past which held you

So under fortune, which you thought had been

Our innocent self This I made good to you

In our last conference, pass'd in probation with

you, 80

How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,

Who wrought with them, and all things else that might

To half a soul and to a notion craz'd

Say, 'Thus did Banquo'

First Mur You made it known to us 84

Macb I did so, and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find

Your patience so predominant in your nature

That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd

To pray for this good man and for his issue, 89

Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave

And beggar'd yours for ever?

First Mur We are men, my liege

Macb Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men, 92

As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels,

curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept

All by the name of dogs the val'd file

Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, 96

The housekeeper, the hunter, every one

According to the gift which bounteous nature

Hath in him clos'd, whereby he does receive

Particular addition from the bill 100

That writes them all alike, and so of men.

Now, if you have a station in the file,
 Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it,
 And I will put that business in your bosoms, 104
 Whose execution takes your enemy off,
 Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
 Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
 Which in his death were perfect.

Sec Mur I am one, my liege, 108
 Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world Have so incens'd that I am reckless what I do to spite the world.

First Mur And I another,
 So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune, 112
 That I would set my life on any chance,
 To mend it or be rid on't.

Macb Both of you Know Banquo was your enemy

Sec Mur True, my lord.

Macb So is he mine, and in such bloody distance 116

That every minute of his being thrusts

Against my near'st of life and though I could

With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight

And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, 120

For certain friends that are both his and mine,

Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall

Whom I myself struck down, and thence it is That I to your assistance do make love, 124

Masking the business from the common eye

For sundry weighty reasons

Sec Mur We shall, my lord,

Perform what you command us

First Mur Though our lives—

Macb Your spirits shine through you With—in this hour at most 128

I will advise you where to plant yourselves,

Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,

The moment on t, for't must be done to-night,

And something from the palace always thought

That I require a clearness and with him— 133

To leave no rubs nor botches in the work—

Fleance his son, that keeps him company,

Whose absence is no less material to me 136

Than is his father's, must embrace the fate

Of that dark hour Resolve yourselves apart,

I'll come to you anon

Sec Mur We are resolv'd, my lord

Macb I'll call upon you straight abide with—

in. [Exit Murderers]

It is concluded Banquo, thy soul's flight, 141

If it find heaven, must find it out to-night [Exit]

SCENE II.—The Same Another Room in the Palace

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv Ay, madam, but returns again to-night

Lady M Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv Madam, I will. [Exit]

Lady M Nought's had, all's spent, 4

Where our desire is got without content.

'Tis safer to be that which we destroy

Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone, 8
Of sorriest fancies your companions making, Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard what's done is done Macb We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd

it 13
She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor
malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer, 16

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams

That shake us nightly Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace,

Than on the torture of the mind to lie 21
In restless ecstasy Duncan is in his grave,
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well,

Treason has done his worst nor steel, nor poison 24

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
Can touch him further

Lady M Come on,
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks,

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night
Macb So shall I, love, and so, I pray, be you

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo, Present him eminence, both with eye and

tongue
Unsafe the while, that we 32

Must lave our honours in these flattering streams,

And make our faces vizards to our hearts, Disguising what they are

Lady M You must leave this Macb O! full of scorpions is my mind, dear

wife, 36
Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance

lives
Lady M But in them nature's copy's not

eternae
Macb There's comfort yet, they are assail-

able,
Then be thou jocund Ere the bat hath flown 40

His cloister'd flight, ere, to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be

done
A deed of dreadful note

Lady M What's to be done? 44
Macb Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest

chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed Come, seeling night,

Scarf up to the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand 48

Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood,
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,

Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse 53

Thou marvell'st at my words but hold thee
still,

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill

So, prithee, go with me [Exeunt

SCENE III — The Same A Park, with a Road leading to the Palace

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur But who did bid thee join with us?
Thurd Mur Macbeth

Sec Mur He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers

Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just

First Mur Then stand with us 4
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day
Now spurs the lated traveller apace

To gain the timely inn, and near approaches
The subject of our watch.

Thurd Mur Hark! I hear horses 8
Ban [Within] Give us a light there, ho!

Sec Mur Then 'tis he the rest
That are within the note of expectation

Already are i the court
First Mur His horses go about

Thurd Mur Almost a mile, but he does usually, 12

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Sec Mur A light, a light!
Thurd Mur 'Tis he.

First Mur Stand to't.
Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a torch

Ban It will be rain to-night.
First Mur Let it come down 16

[They set upon BANQUO Ban O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!

Thou mayst revenge O slave!

[Dies FLEANCE escapes
Thurd Mur Who did strike out the light?

First Mur Was't not the way?
Thurd Mur There's but one down, the son is fled.

Sec Mur We have lost 20

Best half of our affair First Mur Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt

SCENE IV — The Same A Room of State in the Palace

A Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, LADY MAC-

BETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants

Macb You know your own degrees, sit down at first and last,

The hearty welcome.
Lords Thanks to your majesty.

Macb Ourself will mingle with society
And play the humble host. 4

Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
We will require her welcome,

Lady M Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends,
For my heart speaks they are welcome 8

Enter First Murderer, to the door

Macb See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks, Both sides are even here I'll sit i' the midst
Be large in mirth, anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round. [Approaching the door]
There's blood upon thy face 12

Mur 'Tis Banquo's, then.
Macb 'Tis better thee without than he within.
Is he dispatch'd? 16

Mur My lord, his throat is cut, that I did for him Macb Thou art the best o' the cut-throats, yet he's good That did the like for Fleance if thou didst it, Thou art the nonpareil.
Mur Most royal sir, 20

Fleance is 'scap'd.
Macb Then comes my fit again I had else been perfect, Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in 24

To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?
Mur Ay, my good lord, safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trenched gashes on his head,
The least a death to nature
Macb Thanks for that 28

There the grown serpent lies the worm that's fied
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present. Get thee gone, to-morrow We'll hear ourselves again. [Exit Murderer]
Lady M My royal lord, 32

You do not give the cheer the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,
'Tis given with welcome to feed were best at home,
From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony, 36
Meeting were bare without it.
Macb Sweet remembrancer!
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!
Len May it please your highness sit?
[The Ghost of BANQUO enters, and sits in MACBETH'S place] Macb Here had we now our country's honour roof'd, 40

Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present,
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!
Ross His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your highness 44

To grace us with your royal company Macb The table's full Len Here is a place reserv'd, sir Macb Where?
Len Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness? 48

Macb Which of you have done this?

Lords What, my good lord?
Macb Thou canst not say I did it never shake

Thy gory locks at me
Ross Gentlemen, rise, his highness is not well.
Lady M Sit, worthy friends my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth pray you, keep seat,
The fit is momentary, upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note him 56
You shall offend him and extend his passion Feed and regard him not Are you a man?

Macb Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that Which might appal the devil
Lady M O proper stuff! 60

This is the very painting of your fear,
This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said
Led you to Duncan. O! these flaws and starts—Impostors to true fear—would well become 64
A woman's story at a winter's fire, Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You look but on a stool. 68

Macb Prithee, see there! behold! look! lo!
how say you?
Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too
If charnel-houses and our graves must send Those that we bury back, our monuments 72
Shall be the maws of kites [Ghost disappears]
Lady M What! quite unmann'd in folly?
Macb If I stand here, I saw him
Lady M Fie, for shame!
Macb Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time,
Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal, 76
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd Too terrible for the ear the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end, but now they rise again, 80
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools this is more strange Than such a murder is Lady M My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.
Macb I do forget 84

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends,
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me Come, love and health to all,
Then, I'll sit down. Give me some wine, fill full
I drink to the general joy of the whole table, 89
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss,
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords Our duties, and the pledge. 92

Re-enter Ghost
Macb Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold,

Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom 'tis no other, 97
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time

Macb What man dare, I dare Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger, 101
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves Shall never tremble or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword, 104
If trembling I inhabit then, torment me
The baby of a girl! Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! [Ghost vanishes]

Why, so, being gone,
I am a man again Pray you, sit still 108
Lady M You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder

Macb Can such things be
And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder? You make me
strange 112
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear

Ross What sights, my lord? 116 Lady M I pray you, speak not, he grows worse and worse,

Question enrages him At once, good-night
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once

Len Good-night, and better health 120
Attend his majesty!

Lady M A kind good-night to all!
[Exeunt Lords and Attendants]

Macb It will have blood, they say, blood will have blood

Stones have been known to move and trees to
speak,

Augurs and understood relations have 124
By maggot-pies and choughs and rooks brought
forth

The secret'st man of blood What is the night?
Lady M Almost at odds with morning,
which is which

Macb How sayst thou, that Macduff denies his person 128

At our great bidding?

Lady M Did you send to him, sir?
Macb I hear it by the way, but I will send.

There's not a one of them but in his house
I keep a servant fee'd I will to-morrow— 132

And betimes I will—to the weird sisters More shall they speak, for now I am bent to
know

By the worst means, the worst. For mine own
good

All causes shall give way I am in blood 136
Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er
Strange things I have in head that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd

Lady M You lack the season of all natures,
sleep. 141

Macb Come, we'll to sleep My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear that wants hard use
We are yet but young in deed [Exeunt]

SCENE V—A Heath

Thunder Enter the three Witches, meeting
HECATE

First Witch Why, how now, Hecate! you look angrily

Hec Have I not reason, beldams as you are, Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth 4

In riddles and affairs of death,
And I, the mistress of your charms,

The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part, 8

Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done

Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful, who, as others do, 12

Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now get you gone,

And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me: the morning thither he 16

Will come to know his destiny
Your vessels and your spells provide,

Your charms and every thing beside
I am for the air, this night I'll spend 20

Unto a dismal and a fatal end
Great business must be wrought ere noon

Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound, 24

I'll catch it ere it come to ground
And that distill'd by magic sleights

Shall raise such artificial sprites
As by the strength of their illusion 28

Shall draw him on to his confusion
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear

His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear,
And you all know security 32

Is mortals' chiefest enemy [Song within, 'Come away, come away,' &c.]

Hark! I am call'd, my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me [Exit.]

First Witch Come, let's make haste, she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—Forres A Room in the Palace

Enter LENNOX and another Lord

Len My former speeches have but hit your
thoughts,

Which can interpret further only, I say, Things have been strangely borne. The gracious

Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth marry, he was dead 4

And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late, Whom, you may say, if 't please you, Fleance

kill'd,
For Fleance fled men must not walk too late

Who cannot want the thought how monstrous 's
It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain

To kill their gracious father? damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight

In pious rage the two delinquents tear, 12
That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too,
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive 16
To hear the men deny't. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well, and I do think That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,— As, an't please heaven, he shall not,—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father, so should Fleance
But, peace! for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd 21

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell Where he bestows himself?

Lord The son of Duncan, 24
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace
That the malevolence of fortune nothing 28 Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid
To wake Northumberland and war-like Siward
That, by the help of these—with him above 32
To ratify the work—we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights, Free from our feasts and banquets bloody
knives,

Do faithful homage and receive free honours,
All which we pine for now. And this report 37 Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt at war

Len Sent he to Macduff?
Lord He did, and with an absolute, 'Sir, not I' 40

The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say, 'You'll rue the
time

That clogs me with this answer'

Len And that well might Advise him to a caution to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel 45
Fly to the court of England and unfold
His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country 48
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord I'll send my prayers with him!
[Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I—A Cavern. In the middle, a boiling Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath
mew'd

Sec Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin'd

Thrd Witch. Harper cries 'Tis time, 'tis
time

First Witch. Round about the cauldron go, 4
In the poison'd entrails throw

Toad, that under cold stone Days and nights hast thirty-one Swelter'd venom sleeping got, 8

Boil thou first i' the charmed pot
All Double, double toil and trouble,
Fire burn and cauldron bubble
Sec Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake, 12
In the cauldron boil and bake,
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting, 16
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing,
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble
All Double, double toil and trouble, 20
Fire burn and cauldron bubble
Thrd Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf, Witches' mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark, 24
Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse, 28
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips, Finger of birth-strangled babe
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab 32
Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron
All Double, double toil and trouble, 36
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Sec Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE

Hec. O! well done! I commend your pains,
And every one shall share i' the gains 40
And now about the cauldron sing,
Like elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

[Music and a song, 'Black Spirits,' &c
Sec Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs, 44 Something wicked this way comes

Open, locks,
Whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags! 48

What is't you do?

All A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,—

Howe'er you come to know it,—answer me
Though you untie the winds and let them fight 52
Against the churches, though the yesty waves
Confound and swallow navigation up, Though bladed corn be lodg'd and trees blown
down,

Though castles topple on their warders' heads,
Though palaces and pyramids do slope 57 Their heads to their foundations, though the treasure

Of Nature's germens tumble all together, Even till destruction sicken, answer me 60
To what I ask you.

First Witch. Speak.

Sec Witch. Demand.

Thrd Witch. We'll answer.

First Witch Say if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?

Macb Call 'em let me see 'em.

First Witch Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten 64

Her nine farrow, grease, that's sweaten
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame

All Come, high or low,
Thyself and office deftly show 68

Thunder First Apparition of an armed Head

Macb Tell me, thou unknown power,—

First Witch He knows thy thought Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

First App Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
beware Macduff,

Beware the Thane of Fife Dismiss me Enough [Descends

Macb Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks, 73

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright But one word
more,—

First Witch He will not be commanded here's another,
More potent than the first. 76

Thunder *Second Apparition, a bloody
Child*

Sec App Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb Had I three ears, I'd hear thee

Sec App Be bloody, bold, and resolute, laugh to scorn

The power of man, for none of woman born 80 Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends

Macb Then live, Macduff what need I fear
of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate thou shalt not live, 84
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder

Thunder Third Apparition, a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand

What is this,

That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round 88
And top of sovereignty?

All Listen, but speak not to't

Third App Be lion-metled, proud, and take no care

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until 92

Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill Shall come against him. [Descends

Macb That will never be

Who can impress the forest, bid the tree Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements! 96
good!

Rebellion's head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth

Shall hve the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart 100

Throbs to know one thing tell me—if your art
Can tell so much,—shall Banquo's issue ever

Reign in this kingdom?

All

Macb I will be satisfied deny me this, 104
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys

First Witch. Show!

Sec Witch. Show! 108

Thurd Witch. Show!

All Show his eyes, and grieve his heart,
Come like shadows, so depart.

A show of Eight Kings the last with a glass in his hand. BANQUO'S Ghost following

Macb Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo,
down! 112

Thy crown does sear mine eyeballs and thy hair, Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first

A third is like the former Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start,

eyes! 116

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet? A seventh! I'll see no more
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass

Which shows me many more, and some I see That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry 122

Hornble sight! Now, I see, 'tis true,
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his [Apparitions vanish

What! is this so? 124

First Witch Ay, sir, all this is so but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?

Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights 128

I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antick round,

That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay 132

[Music The Witches dance, and then vanish with HECATE.

Macb Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour

Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter LENNOX.

Len. What's your Grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord. 136

Macb Came they not by you?

Len No indeed, my lord.

Macb Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them! I did
hear

The galloping of horse who was't came by? 140

Len 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb Fled to England!

Len. Ay, my good lord

Macb Tume, thou anticpat'st my dread exploits, 144

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it, from this moment

The very firstings of my heart shall be

The firstings of my hand And even now, 148
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done
The castle of Macduff I will surprise,
Seize upon Fife, give to the edge of the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls: 152 That trace him in his line No boasting like a fool,
Thus deed I'll do, before this purpose cool
But no more sights! Where are these gentle-
men?
Come, bring me where they are [Exeunt]

SCENE II—Fife MACDUFF'S Castle

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS

L. Macd What had he done to make him fly the land?
Ross You must have patience, madam.
L. Macd He had none
His flight was madness when our actions do
not,
Our fears do make us traitors.
Ross You know not 4
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear
L. Macd Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion and his titles in a place From whence himself does fly? He loves us
not, 8
He wants the natural touch, for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight—
Her young ones in her nest—against the owl.
All is the fear and nothing is the love, 12
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason

Ross My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows 16
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much
further
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors
And do not know ourselves, when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea 21
Each way and move I take my leave of you Shall not be long but I'll be here again.
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward 24
To what they were before My pretty cousin, Blessing upon you!

L. Macd Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless Ross I am so much a fool, should I stay longer, 28

It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort
I take my leave at once [Exit]

L. Macd Surrah, your father's dead
And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son As birds do, mother

L. Macd What! with worms and flies? 32

Son With what I get, I mean, and so do they L. Macd Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime,

The pit-fall nor the gin

Son Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for 36

My father is not dead, for all your saying
L. Macd Yes, he is dead how wilt thou do for a father? 36

Son Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Macd Why, I can buy me twenty at any market 40

Son Then you'll buy 'em to sell again
L. Macd Thou speak'st with all thy wit, and yet, I' faith,

With wit enough for thee

Son Was my father a traitor, mother? 44

L. Macd Ay, that he was Son What is a traitor?

L. Macd Why, one that swears and lies

Son And be all traitors that do so? 48

L. Macd Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged

Son And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?

L. Macd Every one

Son Who must hang them? 52

L. Macd Why, the honest men

Son Then the liars and swearers are fools, for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men, and hang up them 56

L. Macd Now God help thee, poor monkey!
But how wilt thou do for a father? 56

Son If he were dead, you'd weep for him if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father 61

L. Macd Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger

Mess Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect 64
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly

If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here hence, with your little ones

To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage,
To do worse to you were fell cruelty, 69

Which is too nigh your person Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer

L. Macd Whither should I fly? [Exit]
I have done no harm But I remember now 72

I am in this earthly world, where, to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime

Accounted dangerous folly, why then, alas!
Do I put up that womanly defence, 76

To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers

What are these faces?
Mur Where is your husband?

L. Macd I hope in no place so unsanctified Where such as thou mayst find him

Mur He's a traitor 80
Son Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain.

Mur What! you egg.
Young fry of treachery! [Stabbing him.]

Son He has killed me, mother.

Run away, I pray you!

[Dies

[Exit LADY MACDUFF, crying 'Murder', and pursued by the Murderers

SCENE III —England Before the KING's Palace

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF

Mal Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there

Weep our sad bosoms empty

Macd Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom, each new morn

New widows howl, new orphans cry, new so-rows

Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out Like syllable of dolour

Mal What I believe I'll wail, 8
What know believe, and what I can redress, As I shall find the time to friend, I will
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance Thistyrant, whosesolename blistersour tongues, Was once thought honest you have lov'd him
well, 13

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young, but something

You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb 16
To appease an angry god

Macd I am not treacherous

Mal But Macbeth is A good and virtuous nature may recoil In an imperial charge But I shall crave your pardon, 20

That which you are my thoughts cannot trans-pose,

Angels are bright still though the brightest fell, Though all things foul would wear the brows of
grace,

Yet grace must still look so

Macd I have lost my hopes 24 Mal Perchance even there where I did find my doubts

Why in that rawness left you wife and child—Those precious motives, those strong knots of
love—

Without leave-taking? I pray you, 28
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours, But mine own safeties you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think

Macd Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, 32
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs,

The title is affeer'd! Fare thee well, lord
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal Be not offended 37
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

I think our country sinks beneath the yoke,
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash 40

Is added to her wounds I think withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right,
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands but, for all this, 44
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever, 48
By him that shall succeed

Macd What should he be?

Mal It is myself I mean, in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state 53 Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms

Macd Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd 56
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name, but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness your wives, your daughters, 61

Your matrons and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust and my desire

All continent impediments would o'erbear 64
That did oppose my will, better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign

Macd Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny, it hath been Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne, 68
And fall of many kings But fear not yet

To take upon you what is yours, you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink. 72

We have willing dames enough, there cannot
be

That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves, Finding it so inclin'd

Mal With this there grows 76
In my most ill-compos'd affection such A stanchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other's house, 80
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal, Destroying them for wealth

Macd This avarice 84
Stacks deeper, grows with more pernicious root Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings yet do not fear, Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will, 88
Of your mere own, all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd

Mal But I have none the king-becoming graces,

As justice, verity, temperance, stableness, 92
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several crime, 96

Acting it many ways Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd O Scotland, Scotland! 100
Mal If such a one be fit to govern, speak
I am as I have spoken

Macd Fit to govern!
No, not to live O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd, 104
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd, And does blasphemy his breed? Thy royal father 108
Was a most sainted king, the queen that bore
thee,

Off'n'd upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself 112
Have banish'd me from Scotland O my breast, Thy hope ends here!

Mal Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the blackscruples, reconcil'd my thoughts To thy good truth and honour Devilish Mac- beth 117

By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste, but God above 120
Deal between thee and me! for even now I put myself to thy direction, and Unspoke mine own detraction, here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself, 124
For strangers to my nature I am yet Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my faith, would not betray 128
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth than life, my first false speaking Was thus upon myself What I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command, 132
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand war-like men,
Already at a point, was setting forth
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent? 137

Macd Such welcome and unwelcome things
at once

'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor

Mal Well, more anon. Comes the king forth, I pray you? 140

Doct Ay, sir, there are a crew of wretched
souls

That stay his cure, their malady convinces
The great assay of art, but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, 144
They presently amend.

Mal I thank you, doctor
[Exit Doctor.]

Macd What's the disease he means?

Mal 'Tis call'd the evil-
A most miraculous work in this good king,

Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do How he solicits heaven, 149 Himself best knows, but strangely-visited
people,

All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures, 152
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers, and 'tis spoken
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction With this strange virtue, 156

He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne
That speak him full of grace

Macd See, who comes here?
Mal My countryman, but yet I know him
not. 160

Enter ROSS

Macd My ever-gentle cousin, welcome
hither

Mal I know him now Good God, betimes remove

The means that make us strangers!

Ross Sir, amen.

Macd Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross Alas! poor country, 164

Almost afraid to know itself It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave, where

nothing,

But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile,

Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rent

the air 168

Are made, not mark'd, where violent sorrow

seems

A modern ecstasy, the dead man's knell

Is there scarce ask'd for who, and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps, 172

Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd O! relation

Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal What's the newest grief?

Ross That of an hour's age doth hiss the

speaker,

Each minute teems a new one

Macd How does my wife? 176

Ross Why, well.

Macd And all my children?

Ross Well too

Macd The tyrant has not batter'd at their

peace? 180

Ross No, they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd Be not a miggard of your speech how goes 't? 180

Ross When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour

Of many worthy fellows that were out,

Which was to my belief witness'd the rather 184

For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot.

Now is the time of help, your eye in Scotland

Would create soldiers, make our women fight,

To doff their dire distresses.

Mal Be't their comfort, 188

We are coming thither Gracious England hath

Lent us good Sward and ten thousand men,
An older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out

Ross Would I could answer 192
This comfort with the like! But I have words
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief 196
Due to some single breast?

Ross No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part Pertains to you alone

Macd If it be mine
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it 200

Ross Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,

Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard

Macd Hum! I guess at it

Ross Your castle is surpris'd, your wife and
babes 204

Savagely slaughter'd, to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal Merciful heaven!

What! man, ne'er pull your hat upon your brows, 208

Give sorrow words, the grief that does not speak Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break

Macd My children too?

Ross Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found

Macd And I must be from thence! 212
My wife kill'd too?

Ross I have said

Mal Be comforted
Let's make us medicine of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief

Macd He has no children All my pretty
ones? 216

Did you say all? O hell-kite! All?
What! all my pretty chickens and their dam

At one fell swoop?

Mal Dispute it like a man

Macd I shall do so,
But I must also feel it as a man 220

I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me Did heaven look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff!

They were all struck for thee Naught that I am, 224

Not for their own demerits, but for mine, Fell slaughter on their souls Heaven rest them
now!

Mal Be thus the whetstone of your sword let grief

Convert to anger, blunt not the heart, enrage
it. 228

Macd O! I could play the woman with mine
eyes,

And braggart with my tongue But, gentle
heavens,

Cut short all intermission, front to front 231
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself, Within my sword's length set him, if he 'scape, Heaven forgive him too!

Mal This tune goes manly Come, go we to the king, our power is ready,
Our lack is nothing but our leave Macbeth 236

Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments Receive what cheer

you may,
The night is long that never finds the day

[Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I — Dunsinane A Room in the Castle
Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentle-
woman

Doct I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report When was it she last walked? 3

Gen Since his majesty went into the field,
I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed, yet all this while in a most fast sleep 9

Doct A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gen That, sir, which I will not report after
her 16

Doct You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should

Gen Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech 20

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper

Lo you! here she comes This is her very guise, and, upon my life, fast asleep Observe her,
stand close

Doct How came she by that light? 24

Gen Why, it stood by her she has light by her continually, 'tis her command.

Doct You see, her eyes are open.

Gen Ay, but their sense is shut. 28

Doct What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands

Gen It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands I have known her to continue in this a quarter of an hour 33

Lady M Yet here's a spot

Doct Hark! she speaks I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly 37

Lady M Out, damned spot! out, I say! One, two why, then, 'tis time to do't Hell is murky!

Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him? 44

Doct Do you mark that?

Lady M The Thane of Fife had a wife where is she now? What! will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that you mar all with this starting 49 Doct Go to, go to, you have known what you should not

Gen She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that Heaven knows what she has known. 54

Lady M Here's the smell of the blood still all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand Oh! oh! oh! 57

Doct What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged

Gen I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body 61

Doct Well, well, well

Gen Pray God it be, sir

Doct This disease is beyond my practice yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds 66

Lady M Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried, he cannot come out on's grave

Doct Even so? 71

Lady M To bed, to bed there's knocking at the gate Come, come, come, give me your hand What's done cannot be undone To bed, to bed, to bed [Exit] 76

Doct Will she go now to bed?

Gen Directly

Doct Foul whisperings are abroad Un-natural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles, infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets, More needs she the divine than the physician. 81
 God, God forgive us all! Look after her, Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her So, good-night My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight. I think, but dare not speak

Gen. Good-night, good doctor [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane

Enter, with drum and colours, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers

Ment The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff Revenges burn in them, for their dear causes
 Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm 4
 Excite the mortified man.

Ang Near Birnam wood
 Shall we well meet them, that way are they coming

Caith Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len For certain, sir, he is not I have a file Of all the gentry there is Siward's son, 9
 And many unrough youths that even now Protest their first of manhood

Ment

Caith What does the tyrant? Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies
 Some say he's mad, others that lesser hate him
 Do call it valiant fury, but, for certain,

He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
 Within the belt of rule

Ang Now does he feel 16
 His secret murders sticking on his hands,
 Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach,
 Those he commands move only in command,
 Nothing in love, now does he feel his title 20
 Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief

Ment Who then shall blame
 His pester'd senses to recoil and start,
 When all that is within him does condemn 24
 Itself for being there?

Caith Well, march we on,
 To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd,
 Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal,
 And with him pour we in our country's purge 28
 Each drop of us

Len Or so much as it needs
 To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds

Make we our march towards Birnam

[Exeunt, marching]

SCENE III.—Dunsinane A Room in the Castle

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants

Macb Bring me no more reports, let them fly all

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
 I cannot taint with fear What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know 4
 All mortal consequences have pronounc'd me thus

'Fear not, Macbeth, no man that's born of woman Shall e'er have power upon thee' Then fly, false thanes,

And mangle with the English epicures 8
 The mind I sway by and the heart I bear

Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear

Enter a Servant

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!

Where gott'st thou that goose look? 12

Serv There is ten thousand—

Macb Geese, villain?

Serv Soldiers, sir

Macb Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy What soldiers, patch?

Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine

Are counsellors to fear What soldiers, whey-face? 17

Serv The English force, so please you

Macb Take thy face hence [Exit Servant.]

Seyton!—I am sick at heart

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push 20

Will cheer me ever or disseat me now

I have liv'd long enough my way of life

Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf,

And that which should accompany old age, 24

As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have, but, in their stead, Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour,
breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not. 28
Seyton!

Enter SEYTON

Sey What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb What news more?

Sey All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported

Macb I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd 32

Gave me my armour

Sey 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb I'll put it on

Send out more horses, skirr the country round, Hang those that talk of fear Give me mine
armour 36

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest

Macb Cure her of that Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd, 40
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct Therein the patient 45
Must minister to himself

Macb Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none
of it

Come, put mine armour on, give me my staff Seyton, send out — Doctor, the thanes fly from
me — 49

Come, sir, dispatch — If thou couldst, doctor,
cast

The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health, 52
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again — Pull't off, I say —

What rhubarb senna, or what purgative drug Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them? 56

Doct Ay, my good lord, your royal preparation

Makes us hear something

Macb Bring it after me
I will not be afraid of death and bane

Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane 60

Doct [Aside] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Country near Birnam Wood

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, ROSS, and Soldiers marching

Mal Cousins, I hope the days are near at
hand

That chambers will be safe

Men

Siw What wood is this before us?

Men The wood of Birnam 4

Mal Let every soldier hew him down a bough
And bear't before him thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us

Sold.

Siw It shall be done 8
We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before 't

Mal

'Tis his main hope,
For where there is advantage to be given, 12
Both more and less have given him the revolt,
And none serve with him but constrained things
Whose hearts are absent too

Macd

Let our just censures
Attend the true event, and put we on 16
Industrious soldiership

Siw

The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know What we shall say we have and what we owe Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate, 21
Towards which advance the war

[Exeunt, marching]

SCENE V — Dunsinane Within the Castle

Enter, with drum and colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers

Macb Hang out our banners on the outward walls,

The cry is still, 'They come', our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn, here let them lie Till famine and the ague eat them up, 4 Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours,

We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,

And beat them backward home

[A cry of women within]

What is that noise?

Sey It is the cry of women, my good lord 8

[Exit]

Macb I have almost forgot the taste of fears
The time has been my senses would have cool'd
To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir 12
As life were in't I have supp'd full with horrors, Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts, Cannot once start me

Re-enter SEYTON

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey The queen, my lord, is dead 16

Macb She should have died hereafter,
There would have been a time for such a word.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, 20
To the last syllable of recorded time,
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player 24

That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more, it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing

But bear-like I must fight the course What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one 28 Am I to fear, or none 4

Enter a Messenger

Thou com'st to use thy tongue, thy story quickly Mess Gracious my lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb Well, say, sir 32
Mess As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I look'd towards Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move

Macb Liar and slave!
Mess Let me endure your wrath if 't be not
so

Within this three mile may you see it coming,
I say, a moving grove

Macb If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cunn thee, if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much. 41
I pull in resolution and begin

To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth, 'Fear not, till Birnam wood Do come to Dunsinane', and now a wood 45
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here 48
I go to be aweary of the sun,

And wish the estate o' the world were now un-
done

Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come, wrack!

At least we'll die with harness on our back. 52
[Exeunt]

SCENE VI—The Same A Plain before the Castle

Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c, and their Army, with boughs

Mal Now near enough, your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,

Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle, worthy Macduff and we 4
Shall take upon's what else remains to do,
According to our order

Siw Fare you well
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight. 8

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak, give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Same Another Part of the Plain.Alarums Enter MACBETH

Macb They have tied me to a stake, I cannot fly,

Enter Young SIWARD

Young Siw What is thy name?

Macb Thou'lt be afraid to hear it Young Siw No, though thou call st thyself a hotter name

Than any is in hell.

Macb My name's Macbeth.

Young Siw The devil himself could not pronounce a title 8

More hateful to mine ear

Macb No, nor more fearful Young Siw Thou hest, abhorred tyrant, with my sword

I'll prove the lie thou speak'st

[They fight and Young SIWARD is slain
Macb Thou wast born of woman
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born 13
[Exit]

Alarums Enter MACDUFF

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show
thy face

If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine, My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me
still 16

I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hur'd to bear their staves either thou, Macbeth,

Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst
be, 20

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruted Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. [Exit Alarums]

Enter MALCOLM and Old SIWARD

Siw This way, my lord, the castle's gently render'd 24

The tyrant's people on both sides do fight,
The noble thanes do bravely in the war,
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do

Mal We have met with foes 28
That strike beside us.

Siw Enter, sir, the castle [Exeunt Alarums]

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb Why should I play the Roman fool,
and die
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn! 32

Macb Of all men else I have avoided thee
But get thee back, my soul is too much chang'd
With blood of thine already

Macd I have no words;
My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain 36

Than terms can give thee out! [They fight
Macb Thou lovest labour
 As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air
 With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed
 Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests, 40
 I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
 To one of woman born.

Macb Despair thy charm,
 And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd 45

Macb Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me
 so,

For it hath cow'd my better part of man
 And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd, 48
 That palter with us in a double sense,
 That keep the word of promise to our ear,
 And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee

Macb Then yield thee, coward, 52
 And live to be the show and gaze o' the time We'll have thee as our rarer monsters are, Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
 'Here may you see the tyrant'

Macb I will not yield 56
 To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
 And to be baited with the rabble's curse
 Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
 And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born, 60
 Yet I will try the last before my body
 I throw my war-like shield. Lay on, Macduff, And damn'd be him that first cries, 'Hold,
 enough!'

[Exeunt, fighting.]

Retreat Flourish Re-enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, Old SIWARD, ROSS, Thanes, and Soldiers

Mal I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd. 64

Siw Some must go off, and yet, by these I
 see,

So great a day as this is cheaply bought

Mal Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Ross Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt 68

He only liv'd but till he was a man,
 The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
 In the unshrinking station where he fought,
 But like a man he died.

Siw Then he is dead? 72 Ross Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
 It hath no end

Siw Had he his hurts before?

Ross Ay on the front.

Siw Why then, God's soldier be he! 76
 Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
 I would not wish them to a fairer death
 And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal He's worth more sorrow,
 And that I'll spend for him

Siw He's worth no more, 80
 They say, he parted well, and paid his score And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head

Macb Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands

The usurper's curs'd head the time is free 84
 I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
 That speak my salutation in their minds,
 Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,
 Hail, King of Scotland! 88

All Hail, King of Scotland! 88
 [Flourish]

Mal We shall not spend a large expense of
 time

Before we reckon with your several loves,
 And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do, 93

Which would be planted newly with the time,
 As calling home our exil'd friends abroad
 That fled the snares of watchful tyranny, 96
 Producing forth the cruel ministers

Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,
 Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
 Took off her life, this, and what needful else 100
 That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace

We will perform in measure, time, and place
 So, thanks to all at once and to each one,
 Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone 104

[Flourish. Exeunt]

ACT I

SCENE I.—Elsnore A Platform before the Castle

FRANCISCO at his post Enter to him BERNARDO

Ber Who's there?
Fran. Nay, answer me stand, and unfold yourself

Ber Long live the king!

Fran Bernardo?

Ber He

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour

Ber 'Tis now struck twelve, get thee to bed, Francisco

Fran For this relief much thanks, 'tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber Have you had quiet guard?

Fran Not a mouse stirring

Ber Well, good-night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, 12

The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste

Fran I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS

Hor Friends to this ground

Mar And liegemen to the Dane

Fran Give you good-night

Mar O' farewell, honest soldier 16

Who hath relief'd you?

Fran Bernardo has my place

Give you good-night [Exit

Mar Holla! Bernardo!

Ber Say,

What! is Horatio there?

Hor A piece of him Ber Welcome, Horatio, welcome, good Marcellus 20

Mar What! has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber I have seen nothing

Mar Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy, 24
 And will not let belief take hold of him

Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us

Therefore I have entreated him along

With us to watch the minutes of this night, 28

That if again this apparition come,

He may approve our eyes and speak to it

Hor Tush, tush! 'twill not appear

Ber Sit down awhile,

And let us once again assail your ears, 32

That are so fortified against our story,

What we two nights have seen

Hor Well, sit we down,

And let us hear Bernardo speak of this

Ber Last night of all,

When yond same star that's westward from the pole 36

Had made his course to illumine that part of

heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,

The bell then beating one,—

Mar Peace! break thee off, look, where it comes again! 40

Enter Ghost.

Ber In the same figure, like the king that's dead

Mar Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio

Ber Looks it not like the king? mark it,

Horatio

Hor Most like it harrows me with fear and wonder 44 Ber It would be spoke to Mar Question it, Horatio
Hor What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,
 Together with that fair and war-like form
 In which the majesty of burn'd Denmark 48 Did sometimes march ' by heaven I charge thee,
 speak!
Mar It is offended
Ber See! it stalks away
Hor Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost
Mar 'Tis gone, and will not answer 52
Ber How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale
 Is not this something more than fantasy?
 What think you on't?
Hor Before my God, I might not thus believe Without the sensible and true avouch
 Of mine own eyes
Mar Is it not like the king?
Hor As thou art to thyself
 Such was the very armour he had on 60
 When he the ambitious Norway combated,
 So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
 He smote the sledged Polacks on the ice
 'Tis strange 64
Mar Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
 With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch Hor In what particular thought to work I know not,
 But in the gross and scope of my opinion, 68
 This bodes some strange eruption to our state
Mar Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows, Why this same strict and most observant watch
 So nightly toils the subject of the land, 72
 And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
 And foreign mart for implements of war,
 Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
 Does not divide the Sunday from the week, 76
 What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
 Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day
 Who is't that can inform me?
Hor That can I,
 At least, the whisper goes so Our last king, 80
 Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
 Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
 Thereto prick'd on by a most enlurate pride,
 Dar'd to the combat, in which our valiant
 Hamlet— 84
 For so this side of our known world esteem'd
 him—
 Did slay this Fortinbras, who by a seal'd command, act,
 Well ratified by law and heraldry
 Did forfeit with his life all those his lands 88
 Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror Against the which, a moiety competent Was gaged by our king, which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras, 92
 Had he been vanquisher, as, by the same covenant,
 And carriage of the article design'd,
 His fell to Hamlet Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
 Of unimproved mettle hot and full, 96
 Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute,
 For food and diet, to some enterprise
 That hath a stomach in't, which is no other—
 As it doth well appear unto our state— 101
 But to recover of us, by strong hand
 And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands
 So by his father lost And thus, I take it, 104
 Is the main motive of our preparations,
 The source of this our watch and the chief head
 Of this post-haste and romage in the land.
Ber I think it be no other but even so, 108
 Well may it sort that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch, so like the
 king
 That was and is the question of these wars
Hor A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye 112
 In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
 A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
 The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted
 dead
 Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets, 116
 As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood, Disasters in the sun, and the moist star
 Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands
 Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse, 120
 And even the like precursor of fierce events,
 As harbingers preceding still the fates
 And prologue to the omen coming on,
 Have heaven and earth together demonstrated Unto our climatures and countrymen 125
 But, soft! behold! lo! where it comes again.

Re-enter Ghost

I'll cross it, though it blast me Stay illusion!
 If thou hast any sound, or use of voice, 128
 Speak to me
 If there be any good thing to be done,
 That may to thee do ease and grace to me,
 Speak to me 132
 If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
 Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
 O! speak,
 Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life 136
 Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
 For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death, [Cock crows Speak of it stay, and speak! Stop it, Marcellus 139
Mar Shall I strike at it with my partisan?
Hor Do, if it will not stand Ber 'Tis here!
Hor 'Tis here! [Exit Ghost
Mar 'Tis gone!
 We do it wrong, being so majestic,
 To offer it the show of violence, 144
 For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
 And our vain blows malicious mockery Ber It was about to speak when the cock crew

Hor And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard, 149
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day, and at his warning, 152
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine, and of the truth herein
This present object made probation 156

Mar It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long, 160
And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad,
The nights are wholesome, then no planets strike,

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time 164

Hor So have I heard and do in part believe it
But, look, the morn in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill,
Break we our watch up and by my advice 168
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet, for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty? 173

Mar Let's do't, I pray, and I this morning
know
Where we shall find him most conveniently
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — A Room of State in the Castle

Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's
death
The memory be green, and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe, 4
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore, our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this war-like state, 9
Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,
With one auspicious and one dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage, 12

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,
Taken to wife nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along for all, our thanks 16
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras, Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, 20
Collegued with the dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law, 24
To our most valiant brother So much for him
Now for ourself and for this time of meeting.

Thus much the business is we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras, 23
Who, impotent and bed-ridden, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose, to suppress
His further gait herein, in that the levies,
The lists and full proportions, are all made 32
Out of his subject, and we here dispatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway,
Giving to you no further personal power 36
To business with the king more than the scope Of these delated articles allow Farewell and let your haste commend your duty Cor } In that and all things will we show our Vol } duty 40
King We doubt it nothing heartily fare-
well.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS
And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit, what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane, 44
And lose your voice, what wouldst thou beg, Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth, 48
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer Dread my lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France,
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark, 52

To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward
France

And bow them to your gracious leave and
pardon 56
King Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition, and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent 60
I do beseech you, give him leave to go

King Take thy fair hour, Laertes, time be
thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will.
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son, — 64

Ham [Aside] A little more than kin, and less than kind

King How is it that the clouds still hang on
you?

Ham Not so, my lord, I am too much i' the sun.

Queen Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour
off, 68

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark,
Do not for ever with thy veiled lids Seek for thy noble father in the dust

Thou know'st 'tis common, all that live must
die, 72

Passing through nature to eternity
Ham Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham Seems, madam! Nay, it is, I know not
'seems' 76
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye, 80
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play 84
But I have that within which passeth show,
These but the trappings and the suits of woe King 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father 88
But, you must know, your father lost a father
That father lost, lost his, and the survivor bound In filial obligation for some term
To do obsequious sorrow, but to persevere 92
In obstinate condolement is a course Of impious stubbornness, 'tis unmanly grief
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient, 96
An understanding simple and unschool'd
For what we know must be and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition 100
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd, whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried, 104
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
'This must be so' We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe and think of us
As of a father, for let the world take note, 108
You are the most immediate to our throne,
And with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son
Do I impart toward you For your intent 112
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire,
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye, 116
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.
Queen Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet
I pray thee, stay with us, go not to Wittenberg Ham I shall in all my best obey you, madam.
King Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply
Be as ourself in Denmark Madam, come,
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet Sits smiling to my heart, in grace whereof, 124
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit
again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder Come away 128
[Exeunt all except HAMLET] Ham O! that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew,
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O
God! 132
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.

Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden, That grows to seed, things rank and gross in nature 136
Possess it merely That it should come to this!
But two months dead nay, not so much, not two
So excellent a king, that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr so loving to my mother 140
That he might not bemoan the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown 144
By what it fed on, and yet, within a month, Let me not think on't Foully, thy name is woman!
A little month, or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears, why she, even she,— 149
O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason, Would have mourn'd longer,—married with mine uncle,
My father's brother, but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules within a month, 153
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married O! most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets 157
It is not nor it cannot come to good,
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO

Hor Hail to your lordship!
Ham I am glad to see you well 160
Horatio, or I do forget myself Hor The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever Ham Sir, my good friend, I'll change that name with you
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?
Marcellus? 165

Mar My good lord,— Ham I am very glad to see you. [To BER-NARDO] Good even, sir
But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?
Hor A truant disposition, good my lord, 169
Ham I would not hear your enemy say so,
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it trustor of your own report 172
Against yourself, I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.
Hor My lord, I came to see your father's funeral. 176
Ham I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student,

I think it was to see my mother's wedding.
Hor Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.
Ham Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats 180
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Ere I had ever seen that day, Horatio!
My father, methinks I see my father 184
Hor O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio
Hor I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again 188
Hor My lord, I think I saw him yesternight Ham Saw who?
Hor My lord, the king your father
Ham The king, my father!
Hor Season your admiration for a while 192
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you
Ham For God's love, let me hear
Hor Two mights together had these gentlemen, 196
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd a figure like your father,
Armed at points exactly, cap-a-pe, 200
Appears before them, and with solemn march Goes slow and stately by them thrice he walk'd
By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes, Within his truncheon a length, whilst they, dis-till'd 204
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did,
And I with them the third night kept the watch, Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time, 209
Form of the thing, each word made true and good
The apparition comes I knew your father, These hands are not more like Ham But where was this?
Mar My lord, upon the platform where we
watch'd 213
Ham. Did you not speak to it?
Hor My lord I did,
But answer made it none, yet once methought
It lifted up its head and did address 216
Itself to motion, like as it would speak,
But even then the morning cock crew loud,
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away
And vanish'd from our sight.
Ham 'Tis very strange 220
Hor As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true,
And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it Ham Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles
me 224
Hold you the watch to-night?
Mar } We do, my lord.
Ber }
Ham Arm'd, say you?
Mar } Arm'd, my lord
Ber }
Ham From top to toe?
Mar } My lord, from head to foot.
Ber }
Ham Then saw you not his face? 228
Hor O yes! my lord, he wore his beaver up Ham What! look'd he frowningly?
Hor A countenance more in sorrow than in anger
Ham Pale or red? 232
Hor Nay, very pale
Ham And fix'd his eyes upon you?
Hor Most constantly
Ham. I would I had been there

Hor It would have much amaz'd you
Ham Very like, very like Stay'd it long? 236 Hor While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred Mar } Longer, longer
Ber }
Hor Not when I saw it
Ham His beard was grizzled, no?
Hor It was, as I have seen it in his life, 240
A sable silver'd
Ham I will watch to-night,
Perchance 'twill walk again.
Hor I warrant it will Ham If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape 244
And bid me hold my peace I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still,
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night, 248
Give it an understanding, but no tongue
I will requite your loves So, fare you well
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you
All Our duty to your honour 252
Ham Your loves, as mine to you Farewell [Exeunt HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO
My father's spirit in arms! all is not well, I doubt some foul play would the night were
come!
Till then sit still, my soul foul deeds will rise, 256 Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes [Exit

SCENE III — A Room in POLONIUS' House

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA

Laer My necessities are embark'd, farewell
And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you
Oph Do you doubt that? 4 Laer For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting, 8
The perfume and suppliance of a minute,
No more
Oph No more but so?
Laer Think it no more
For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thews and bulk, but, as this temple waxes, 12
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmear
The virtue of his will, but you must fear, 16
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own,
For he himself is subject to his birth,
He may not, as unvalu'd persons do,
Carve for himself, for on his choice depends 20
The safety and the health of the whole state,
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves
you, 24

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
 As he in his particular act and place
 May give his saying deed, which is no further Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal 28
 Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
 If with too credent ear you list his songs,
 Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaster'd importunity 32
 Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister,
 And keep you in the rear of your affection,
 Out of the shot and danger of desire
 The chariest maid is prodigal enough 36
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon,
 Virtue herself 'scapes not calumnious strokes,
 The canker galls the infants of the spring
 Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd, 40
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary then: best safety lies in fear
 Youth to itself rebels, though none else near 44 Oph I shall th' effect of this good lesson keep,
 As watchman to my heart. But, good my
 brother,

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
 Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
 Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine, 49
 Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
 And recks not his own rede

Laer O! fear me not
 I stay too long, but here my father comes 52

Enter POLONIUS

A double blessing is a double grace,
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave

Pol Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame!

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail, 56
 And you are stay'd for: There, my blessing with
 thee!

And these few precepts in thy memory Look thou character: Give thy thoughts no
 tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act. 60
 Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar,
 The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
 Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel,
 But do not dull thy palm with entertainment 64
 Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade: Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in,
 Bear't that th' opposed may beware of thee
 Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice, 68 Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
 But not express'd in fancy, rich, not gaudy,

For the apparel oft proclaims the man, 72
 And they in France of the best rank and station Are most select and generous, chief in that.

Neither a borrower, nor a lender be,
 For loan oft loses both itself and friend, 76
 And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry
 This above all to thine own self be true,
 And it must follow, as the night the day,
 Thou canst not then be false to any man. 80
 Farewell, my blessing season this in thee!

Laer Most humbly do I take my leave, my
 lord

Pol The time invites you, go, your servants
 tend.

Laer Farewell, Ophelia, and remember well
 What I have said to you.

Oph 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
 And you yourself shall keep the key of it 86

Laer Farewell [Exit]

Pol What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet

Pol Marry, well bethought
 'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late

Given private time to you, and you yourself 92 Have of your audience been most free and bounteous

If it be so,—as so 'tis put on me,
 And that in way of caution,—I must tell you,

You do not understand yourself so clearly 96
 As it behoves my daughter and your honour
 What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders

Of his affection to me 100 Pol Affection! pooh! you speak like a green
 girl,

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance
 Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph I do not know, my lord, what I should
 think. 104

Pol Marry, I'll teach you. think yourself a baby,

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
 Which are not sterling: Tender yourself more dearly,

Or,—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
 Running it thus,—you'll tender me a fool 109

Oph My lord, he hath importun'd me with love

In honourable fashion.

Pol Ay, fashion you may call it: go to, go to Oph And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord, 113

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do
 know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul 116
 Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
 Even in their promise, as it is a-making,

You must not take for fire: From this time 120
 Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence,
 Set your entreatments at a higher rate
 Than a command to parley: For Lord Hamlet,

Believe so much in him, that he is young, 124
 And with a larger tether may he walk
 Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,

Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers,
 Not of that dye which their investments show,
 But mere implorators of unholy suits, 129
 Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,
 The better to beguile: This is for all
 I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
 Have you so slander any moment's leisure, 133
 As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.

Look to't, I charge you, come your ways
Oph I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS

Ham The air bites shrewdly, it is very cold.

Hor It is a nipping and an eager air

Ham What hour now?

Hor I think it lacks of twelve

Mar No, it is struck.

Hor Indeed? I heard it not then it draws near the season

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within]

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring reels,

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
 The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
 The triumph of his pledge.

Hor Is it a custom?

Ham Ay, marry, is't

But to my mind,—though I am native here
 And to the manner born,—it is a custom More honour'd in the breach than the obser-

ance
 Thus heavy-headed revel east and west
 Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations, They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase

Soil our addition, and indeed it takes From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute
 So, oft it chances in particular men,
 That for some vicious mole of nature in them,

As, in their birth,—wherein they are not guilty,
 Since nature cannot choose his origin,—
 By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
 Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason,
 Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens

The form of plausible manners, that these men,
 Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
 Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,

Their virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
 As infinite as man may undergo,
 Shall in the general censure take corruption
 From that particular fault the dram of eale

Doth all the noble substance of a doubt,
 To his own scandal.

Enter GHOST

Hor Look, my lord, it comes.
Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!

Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd, Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from
 hell,

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
 Thou com'st in such a questionable shape

That I will speak to thee I'll call thee Hamlet, King, father, royal Dane, O! answer me

Let me not burst in ignorance, but tell
 Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,

Have burst their cerements, why the sepulchre,
 Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd,

Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
 To cast thee up again. What may this mean,

That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,

Making night hideous, and we fools of nature
 So horribly to shake our disposition

With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?

Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

[The Ghost beckons HAMLET]

Hor It beckons you to go away with it,
 As if it some impartment did desire
 To you alone

Mar Look, with what courteous action
 It waves you to a more removed ground
 But do not go with it

Hor No, by no means

Ham It will not speak, then, will I follow it.

Hor Do not, my lord

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin's fee,
 And for my soul, what can it do to that,
 Being a thing immortal as itself?

It waves me forth again, I'll follow it

Hor What if it tempt you toward the flood,
 my lord,

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff
 That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
 And there assume some other horrible form,

Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
 And draw you into madness? think of it,
 The very place puts toys of desperation,
 Without more motive, into every brain

That looks so many fathoms to the sea
 And hears it roar beneath

Ham It waves me still. Go on, I'll follow
 thee

Mar You shall not go, my lord.

Ham Hold off your hands!

Hor Be rul'd, you shall not go

Ham My fate cries out,
 And makes each petty artery in this body
 As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve

[Ghost beckons]
 Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen,

[Breaking from them]
 By heaven! I'll make a ghost of him that lets
 me

I say, away! Go on, I'll follow thee

[Exeunt Ghost and HAMLET]

Hor He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar Let's follow, 'tis not fit thus to obey
 him.

Hor Have after To what issue will this
 come?

Mar Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor Heaven will direct it.

Mar Nay, let's follow him.
 [Exeunt]

SCENE V—Another Part of the Platform.Enter Ghost and HAMLETHam Whither wilt thou lead me? speak,I I go no further*Ghost* Mark me*Ham* I will*Ghost*

When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames

Must render up myself

Ham Alas! poor ghost 4*Ghost* Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing

To what I shall unfold

Ham Speak, I am bound to hear*Ghost* So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear

Ham What? 8*Ghost* I am thy father's spirit

Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,

And for the day confin'd to fast in fires,

Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature

Are burnt and purg'd away But that I am forbid 13

To tell the secrets of my prison-house,

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word

Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young

blood, 16

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres

Thy knotted and combined locks to part

And each particular hair to stand an end,

Like quills upon the fretful porpentine 20

But this eternal blazon must not be

To ears of flesh and blood List, list, O list!

If thou didst ever thy dear father love—

Ham O God! 24*Ghost* Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder

Ham Murder!Ghost Murder most foul, as in the best it is,

But this most foul, strange, and unnatural 28

Ham Haste me to know't, that I, with wings as swift

As meditation or the thoughts of love,

May sweep to my revenge

Ghost

I find thee apt,

And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed

That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, 33

Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet,

hear

'Tis given out that, sleeping in mine orchard,

A serpent stung me, so the whole ear of Denmark 36

Is by a forged process of my death

Rankly abus'd, but know, thou noble youth,

The serpent that did sting thy father's life

Now wears his crown.

Ham

O my prophetic soul! 40

My uncle!

Ghost Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate

beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,—

O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power 44

So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust

The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen.

O Hamlet! what a falling-off was there,
 From me, whose love was of that dignity 48
 That it went hand in hand even with the vow
 I made to her in marriage, and to decline Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
 To those of mine! 52

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
 Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,
 So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
 Will sate itself in a celestial bed, 56

And prey on garbage
 But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air,
 Brief let me be Sleeping within mine orchard,
 My custom always in the afternoon, 60

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
 With juice of cursed hebona in a vial,
 And in the porches of mine ears did pour
 The leperous distilment, whose effect 64

Holds such an enmity with blood of man
 That swift as quicksilver it courses through The natural gates and alleys of the body,
 And with a sudden vigour it doth posset 68

And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
 The thin and wholesome blood so did it mine,
 And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
 Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust, 73

All my smooth body
 Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
 Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd,
 Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin, 76

Unhous'd d, disappointed, unanel'd,
 No reckoning made, but sent to my account
 With all my imperfections on my head
 O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! 80

If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not,
 Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for luxury and damned incest.
 But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act, 84

Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive Against thy mother aught, leave her to heaven,
 And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
 To prick and sting her Fare thee well at once! 89

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
 And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire,
 Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me [Exit,
Ham O all you host of heaven! O earth! 92

What else?
 And shall I couple hell? O fie! Hold, hold,
 my heart! 96

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
 But bear me stiffly up! Remember thee!
 Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
 In this distracted globe. Remember thee! 97

Yea, from the table of my memory
 I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
 All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
 That youth and observation copied there, 101

And thy commandment all alone shall live
 Within the book and volume of my brain, Unmix'd with baser matter yes, by heaven! 104

O most pernicious woman!
 O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
 My tables,—meet it is I set it down,
 That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain, 109

At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark 109

[Writing]

So, uncle, there you are Now to my word,
 It is, 'Adieu, adieu' remember me'
 I have sworn t.
Hor [Within] My lord! my lord!
Mar [Within] Lord Hamlet!
Hor [Within] Heaven secure him!
Mar [Within] So be it!
Hor [Within] Hillo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar How is't, my noble lord?
Hor What news, my lord? 117
Ham O! wonderful.
Hor Good my lord, tell it.
Ham No, you will reveal it.
Hor Not I, my lord, by heaven!
Mar Nor I, my lord 120 Ham How say you, then, would heart of man once think it?
 But you'll be secret?

Mar } Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Hor }
Ham There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark,

But he's an arrant knave 124
Hor There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,
 To tell us this

Ham. Why, right, you are i' the right,
 And so, without more circumstance at all,
 I hold it fit that we shake hands and part, 128
 You, as your business and desire shall point
 you,—

For every man hath business and desire,
 Such as it is,—and, for mine own poor part,
 Look you, I'll go pray 132

Hor These are but wild and whirling words,
 my lord
Ham I am sorry they offend you, heartily,
 Yes, faith, heartily

Hor There's no offence, my lord Ham Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is,
 Horatio, 136

And much offence, too Touching this vision
 here,

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you,
 For your desire to know what is between us, O ermaster't as you may And now, good
 friends, 140

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
 Give me one poor request.

Hor What is't, my lord? we will.
Ham Never make known what you have seen to-night 144

Hor } My lord, we will not.
Mar }

Ham } Nay, but swear't Hor } In faith,

My lord, not I.
Mar } Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham Upon my sword
Mar We have sworn, my lord, already

Ham Indeed, upon my sword, indeed 148
Ghos [Beneath] Swear

Ham Ah, ha, boy! sayst thou so? art thou there, true-penny?

112 Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellar-
 age,—

Consent to swear
Hor Propose the oath, my lord 152

Ham Never to speak of this that you have
 seen,

Swear by my sword
Ghost [Beneath] Swear

Ham Hic et ubique? then we'll shift our ground 156

Come hither, gentlemen,
 And lay your hands again upon my sword

Never to speak of this that you have heard,
 Swear by my sword 160

Ghost [Beneath] Swear
Ham Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy pioner! once more remove, good
 friends

Hor O day and night, but this is wondrous strange! 164

Ham And therefore as a stranger give it
 welcome

There are more things in heaven and earth,
 Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy
 But come, 168

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
 How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself,

As I perchance hereafter shall think meet
 To put an antic disposition on, 172

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
 With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
 As, 'Well, well, we know', or, 'We could, an if we would', 176

Or, 'If we list to speak', or, 'There be an if they might',

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
 That you know aught of me this not to do,

So grace and mercy at your most need help you,
 Swear 180

Ghost [Beneath] Swear [They swear] Ham Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentle-
 men,

With all my love I do commend me to you
 And what so poor a man as Hamlet is 184

May do, to express his love and friending to you, God willing, shall not lack Let us go in together,

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray
 The time is out of joint, O cursed spite, 188

That ever I was born to set it right!
 Nay, come, let's go together [Exeunt

ACT II

SCENE I—A Room in POLONIUS' House

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO

Pol Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey I will, my lord.

Pol You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquiry
Of his behaviour

Rey My lord, I did intend it

Pol Marry, well said, very well said Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris,
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense, and finding
By this encompassment and drift of question That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it Take you, as twere, some distant knowledge of
him,

As thus, 'I know his father, and his friends,
And, in part, him', do you mark thus, Reynaldo?

Rey Ay, very well, my lord

Pol 'And, in part, him, but', you may say,
'not well

But if it be he I mean, he's very wild,
Addicted so and so, and there put on him
What forgeries you please, marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him, take heed of that,
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known To youth and liberty

Rey As gaming, my lord?

Pol Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,

Drabbing, you may go so far

Rey My lord, that would dishonour him

Pol Faith, no, as you may season it in the charge

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency
That's not my meaning, but breathe his faults so quantly

That they may seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unclaimed blood,
Of general assault

Rey But, my good lord,—

Pol Wherefore should you do this?

Rey Ay, my lord,

I would know that

Pol Marry, sir, here's my drift,

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant

You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence,

'Good sir', or so, or 'friend', or 'gentleman', According to the phrase or the addition Of man and country

Rey Very good, my lord

Pol And then, sir, does he thus,—he does,— what was I about to say? By the mass I was about to say something where did I leave?

Rey At 'closes in the consequence.'

At 'friend or so', and 'gentleman'

Pol At 'closes in the consequence', ay, marry,
He closes with you thus. 'I know the gentleman,

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day,
Or then, or then, with such, or such, and, as you say,

There was a 'gaming, there o'ertook in's rouse,
There falling out at tennis', or perchance,
'I saw him enter such a house of sale',
Videhæet, a brothel, or so forth.

See you now,
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth,
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out
So by my former lecture and advice Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey My lord, I have

Pol God be wi' you, fare you well.

Rey Good my lord!

Pol Observe his inclination in yourself

Rey I shall, my lord

Pol And let him ply his music

Rey Well, my lord

Pol Farewell! [Exit REYNALDO]

Enter OPHELIA

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?

Oph Alas! my lord, I have been so affrighted.

Pol With what, in the name of God?

Oph My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrac'd,
No hat upon his head, his stockings foul'd, Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle,
Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other,
And with a look so piteous in purport
As if he had been loosed out of hell

To speak of horrors, he comes before me

Pol Mad for thy love?

Oph My lord, I do not know,

But truly I do fear it

Pol What said he?

Oph He took me by the wrist and held me hard,

Then goes he to the length of all his arm,

And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face

As he would draw it Long stay'd he so,

At last, a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and down,

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound

That it did seem to shatter all his bulk

And end his being That done, he lets me go,

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes,

For out o' doors he went without their help,

And to the last bended their light on me

Pol Come, go with me, I will go seek the
king

This is the very ecstasy of love,

Whose violent property fordoes itself

And leads the will to desperate undertakings

As oft as any passion under heaven

That does afflict our natures I am sorry

What! have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph No, my good lord but, as you did command,

I did repeat his letters and denied

His access to me

Pol That hath made him mad
I am sorry that with better head and judgment
I had not quoted him, I fear'd he did but trifle, And meant to wrack thee, but, beshrew my jealousy!¹¹³

By heaven it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions¹¹⁶
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king
This must be known, which, being kept close, might move
More grief to hide than hate to utter love
Come¹¹⁷ [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-STERN, and Attendants

King Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern!
Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation, so I call it,⁵ Since nor the exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should be More than his father's death, that thus hath put him⁸

So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of. I entreat you both,
That, being of so young days brought up with him,
And since so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,¹²

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time, so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,¹⁶
Wher' aught to us unknown afflicts him thus,
That, open'd, lies within our remedy

Queen Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd
of you,

And sure I am two men there are not living²⁰
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us awhile,
For the supply and profit of our hope,²⁴
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance

Ros Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty

Gul But we both obey,²⁹
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded³²

King Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz,

And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son. Go some of you,³⁶
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is Gul Heavens make our presence, and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen Ay, amen!
[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and some Attendants]

Enter POLONIUS

Pol The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,⁴⁰
Are joyfully return'd

King Thou still hast been the father of good
news

Pol Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good
liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,⁴⁴
Both to my God and to my gracious king
And I do think—or else thus brain of mine Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do—that I have found⁴⁸
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy

King O! speak of that, that do I long to hear Pol Give first admittance to the ambassadors,

My news shall be the fruit to that great feast⁵² King Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in [Exit POLONIUS]

He tells me my sweet queen, that he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper

Queen I doubt it is no other but the main,
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage
King Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS

Welcome, my good friends!
Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt Most fair return of greetings, and desires⁶⁰

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack,⁶⁴
But, better look'd into, he truly found

It was against your highness wherewith griev'd,
That so his sickness, age, and impotence

Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests⁶⁸
On Fortinbras, which he, in brief obeys, Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine,

Makes vow before his uncle never more
To give the assay of arms against your majesty

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,⁷²
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,
And his commission to employ those soldiers,

So levied as before, against the Polack,
With an entreaty, herein further shown,⁷⁶

That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As thereon are set down. [Giving a paper]

King It likes us well,⁸⁰
And at our more consider'd time we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business

Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour

Go to your rest, at night we'll feast together

Most welcome home

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS]

Pol This business is well ended 85
My bege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time
Therefore, since brevity is the sou of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,

I will be brief Your noble son is mad 92
Mad call I it, for to define true madness,
What is't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go

Queen More matter, with less art
Pol Madam, I swear I use no art at all 96
That he is mad, 'tis true, 'tis true 'tis pity,
And pity tis tis true a foolish figure,
But farewell it, for I will use no art Mad let us grant him, then, and now remain
That we find out the cause of this effect, 101
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause, Thus it remains and the remainder thus Perpend 105

I have a daughter have while she is mine,
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this now, gather and surmise
To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia — 109

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase beautified' is a vile phrase but you shall hear Thus
In her excellent white bosom, these, &c — 112

Queen Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol Good madam, stay awhile, I will be faithful

Doubt thou the stars are fire
Doubt that the sun doth move, 116
Doubt truth to be a liar
But never doubt I love

O dear Ophelia! I am ill at these numbers I have not art to reckon my groans but that I love thee best O most best! believe it Adieu

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him,

HAMLET

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me,
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear

King But how hath she 128
Receiv'd his love?

Pol What do you think of me?

King As of a man faithful and honourable

Pol I would fain prove so But what might you think, 131

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me,—what might you,
Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk or table-book, 136
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb,
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight, What might you think? No, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak 140

'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star,
This mus' not be and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens 144
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice,
And he, repulsed,—a short tale to make,—
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness, 148
Thence to a lightness, and by this declension
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And all we wait for King Do you think 'tis thus?

Queen It may be, very likely 152

Pol Hath there been such a time,—I d fain know that,—

That I have positively said, "'Tis so',
When it prov'd otherwise?

King Not that I know

Pol Take this from this, if this be otherwise

[Pointing to his head and shoulder]

If circumstances lead me, I will find Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed Within the centre

King How may we try it further?

Pol You know sometimes he walks four hours together 160

Here in the lobby

Queen So he does indeed

Pol At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him,

Be you and I behind an arras then,
Mark the encounter, if he love her not, 164

And be not from his reason fallen thereon,

Let me be no assistant for a state,

But keep a farm, and carters

King We will try it

Queen But look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading 168

Pol Away! I do beseech you, both away

I'll board him presently

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and Attendants]

Enter HAMLET, reading

O! give me leave

How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham Well, God a-mercy 177

Pol Do you know me, my lord?

Ham Excellent well, you are a fishmonger

Pol Not I, my lord

Ham Then I would you were so honest a
man. 177

Pol Honest, my lord!

Ham Ay, sir, to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand 181

Pol That's very true, my lord.

Ham For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter? 185

Pol I have, my lord.

Ham Let her not walk i' the sun, conception is a blessing, but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend, look to't. 189

Pol [Aside] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter. yet he knew me not at first, he said I was a fishmonger he is far gone, far gone and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love, very near this I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord?

Ham Words, words, words 196

Pol What is the matter, my lord?

Ham Between who?

Pol I mean the matter that you read, my lord 200

Ham Slanders, sir, for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum, and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down, for you yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward 210

Pol [Aside] Though this be madness, yet there is method in't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham Into my grave? 214

Pol Indeed that is out o' the air [Aside] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you 222

Ham You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal, except my life, except my life, except my life

Pol Fare you well, my lord [Going]

Ham These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN

Pol You go to seek the Lord Hamlet: there he is 228

Ros [To POLONIUS] God save you, sir! [Exit POLONIUS]

Gul Mine honoured lord!

Ros My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both? 234

Ros As the indifferent children of the earth

Gul Happy in that we are not over happy, On Fortune's cap we are not the very button

Ham Nor the soles of her shoe? 238

Ros Neither, my lord

Ham Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours? 241

Gul Faith, her privates we

Ham In the secret parts of Fortune? O! most true, she is a strumpet. What news? 244

Ros None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest

Ham Then is doomsday near, but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Gul Prison, my lord! 252

Ham Denmark's a prison.

Ros Then is the world one.

Ham A goodly one, in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one o' the worst 257

Ros We think not so, my lord

Ham Why, then, 'tis none to you, for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so to me it is a prison 261

Ros Why, then your ambition makes it one, 'tis too narrow for your mind

Ham O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams

Gul Which dreams, indeed, are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream 269

Ham A dream itself is but a shadow

Ros Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow 273

Ham Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason. 277

Ros We'll wait upon you

Gul No such matter, I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros To visit you, my lord, no other occasion 285

Ham Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks but I thank you and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come, deal justly with me, come, come, nay, speak

Gul What should we say, my lord? 292

Ham Why anything, but to the purpose. You were sent for, and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour. I know the good king and queen have sent for you 297

Ros To what end, my lord?

Ham That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no! 305

Ros [Aside to GUILDENSTERN] What say you?

Ham. [Aside] Nay, then, I have an eye of you. If you love me, hold not off 309

Gul My lord, we were sent for

Ham I will tell you why, so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mould no feather. I have of late,—but wherefore I know not,—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises, and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory, this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave overarching firmament ment, this majestic roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me, no, nor woman neither, though, by your smiling, you seem to say so 331

Ros My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts

Ham Why did you laugh then, when I said, 'man delights not me'? 335

Ros To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you we coted them on the way, and hither are they coming, to offer you service 340

Ham He that plays the king shall be welcome, his majesty shall have tribute of me, the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target, the lover shall not sigh gratis, the humorous man shall end his part in peace, the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere, and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for t What players are they? 349

Ros Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city

Ham How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways 354

Ros I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation

Ham Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed? 359

Ros No, indeed they are not

Ham How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace but there is, sir, an aery of children little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't these are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages,—so they call them,—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills, and dare scarce come thither 368

Ham What! are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players,—as it is most like, if their means are no better,—their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession? 376

Ros Faith, there has been much to-do on both sides and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question. 381

Ham Is it possible?

Gul O! there has been much throwing about of brains 384

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros Ay, that they do, my lord, Hercules and his load too 387

Ham It is not very strange, for my uncle is King of Denmark and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out [Flourish of trumpets within]

Gul There are the players 395

Ham Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore Your hands comethen, the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players—which, I tell you, must show fairly outward—should more appear like entertainment than yours You are welcome but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived 404

Gul In what, my dear lord?

Ham I am but mad north-north-west when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw

Enter POLONIUS

Pol Well be with you, gentlemen! 408

Ham Hark you, Guildenstern and you too, at each ear a hearer that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts 411

Ros Happily he's the second time come to them, for they say an old man is twice a child

Ham I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players, mark it You say right, sir, o Monday morning, 'twas so indeed 416

Pol My lord, I have news to tell you

Ham My lord, I have news to tell you When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol The actors are come hither, my lord

Ham Buzz, buzz! 421

Pol Upon my honour,—

Ham Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men

Ham O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou! 432

Pol What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham Why

One fair daughter and no more,

The which he loved passing well 436

Pol [Aside] Still on my daughter

Ham Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well 440

Ham Nay, that follows not

Pol What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

As by lot, God wot 444

And then, you know,

It came to pass, as most like it was —

The first row of the pious chanson will show you more, for look where my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players

You are welcome, masters, welcome, all I am glad to see thee well welcome, good friends O, my old friend! Thy face is valanced since I saw thee last comest thou to beard me in Denmark? What! my young lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring Masters, you are all welcome We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at anything we see we'll have a speech straight Come, give us a taste of your quality, come, a passionate speech

First Play What speech, my good lord?

Ham I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted, or, if it was, not above once, for the play, I remember, pleased not the million, twas caviare to the general but it was—as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning I remember one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affectation, but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine One speech in it I chiefly loved, 'twas Æneas tale to Dido, and thereof of it especially where he speaks of Priam's slaughter If it live in your memory, begin at this line let me see, let me see —

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,— 'tis not so, it begins with Pyrrhus —
The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arm,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couched in the ominous horse, 485 Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd

With heraldry more dismal head to foot
Now is he total gules, horribly trick'd 488
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons, Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,
That lend a tyrannous and damned light
To their vile murders roasted in wrath and fire,
And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandsire Priam seeks

So proceed you

Pol 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion.

First Play Anon, he finds him
Striking too short at Greeks his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, 500
Repugnant to command Unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives in rage strikes wide,
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerv'd father falls Then senseless Ilium, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear for lo! his sword,
Which was declining on the milky head 508
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood,

And like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing 512
But, as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still The bold winds speechless and the orb below
As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder 516
Doth rend the region so, after Pyrrhus' pause, Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars's armour, forg'd for proof eterne, 520
With less remorse than Pyrrhus bleeding sword
Now fall's on Priam
Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods,
In general synod, take away her power 524
Break all the spokes and felloes from her wheel,
And bow! the round nave down the hull of heaven,
As low as to the fiends!

Pol This is too long

Ham It shall to the barber's, with your beard Prithee, say on he's for a jug or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps Say on, come to Hecuba

First Play But who, O! who had seen the mobled queen—

Ham The mobled queen?—

Pol That's good, mobled queen' is good

First Play Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames

With bisson rheum a clout upon that head
Where late the diadem stood and, for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up 540
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounced

But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs, 545
The instant burst of clamour that she made—Unless things mortal move them not at all—Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven, 548
And passion in the gods

Pol Look! wh'er he has not turned his colour and has tears in's eyes Prithee, no more

Ham 'Tis well, I'll have thee speak out the rest soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used, for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live

Pol My lord, I will use them according to their desert

Ham God's bodikins, man, much better, use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty Take them in.

Pol Come, sirs.

Ham Follow him, friends we'll hear a play to-morrow [Exit POLONIUS, with all the Players but the First] Dost thou hear me, old friend, can you play the Murder of Gonzago?

First Play Ay, my lord

Ham We'll ha't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in't, could you not?

First Play Ay, my lord. 576

Ham Very well. Follow that lord, and look you mock him not [Exit First Player] [To ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN] My good friends, I'll leave you till night, you are welcome to Elsinore 581

Ros Good my lord!

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN]

Ham Ay, so, God be wi' ye! Now I am alone
O' what a rogue and peasant slave am I 584
Is it not monstrous that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit 587
That from her working all his visage wann'd, Tears in his eyes, distraction in a' aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
With forns to his conceit? and all for nothing!
For Hecuba! 592

What's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba
That he should weep for her? What would he do Had he the motive and the cue for passion That I have? He would drown the stage with
tears, 596

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech,
Make mad the guilty and appal the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed
The very faculties of eyes and ears 600

Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing, no, not for a king, 604
Upon whose property and most dear life
A damn'd defeat was made Am I a coward?
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face? 608 Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the
throat,

As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
Ha!

Swords, I should take it, for it cannot be 612
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter, or ere this I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal Bloody, bawdy villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain! 617

O! vengeance!

Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, 620
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,

A scullion! 624
Fie upon't! foh! About, my brain! I have heard,

That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently 628
They have proclaim'd their malefactions, For murder, though it have no tongue, will
speak

With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players

Play something like the murder of my father 632
Before mine uncle I'll observe his looks,
I'll tent him to the quick if he but blench
I know my course The spirit that I have seen
May be the devil and the devil hath power 636
To assume a pleasing shape, yea, and perhaps
Out of my weakness and my melancholy—
As he is very potent with such spirits—
Abuses me to damn me I'll have grounds 640
More relative than this the play's the thing Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king
[Exit]

ACT III

SCENE I—A Room in the Castle

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN

King And can you, by no drift of circumstance,

Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy? 4

Ros He does confess he feels himself distracted,

But from what cause he will by no means speak Gul Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof, 8
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state

Queen Did he receive you well?

Ros Most like a gentleman

Gul But with much forcing of his disposition 12

Ros Niggard of question, but of our demands
Most free in his reply

Queen Did you assay him
To any pastime?

Ros Madam, it so fell out that certain players 16

We over-raught on the way, of these we told
him,

And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it they are about the court,
And, as I think, they have already order'd 20
This night to play before him.

Pol 'Tis most true,
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter

King With all my heart, and it doth much content me 24

To hear him so inclin'd.
Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights

Ros We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

King Sweet Gertrude, leave us too,
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither, 29
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here Affront Ophelia.

Her father and myself, lawful espials, 32
Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,

We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be the affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers for Queen I shall obey you.

And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wildness, so shall I hope your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours

Oph Madam, I wish it may [Exit QUEEN]

Pol Ophelia, walk you here Gracious, so
please you,

We will bestow ourselves [To OPHELIA.] Read on this book,

That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness We are oft to blame in this,
'Tis too much prov'd, that with devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er

The devil himself
King [Aside] O! 'tis too true, How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience!

The harlot's cheek beautied with plastering art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it Than is my deed to my most painted word
O heavy burden!

Pol I hear him coming, let's withdraw, my
lord
[Exeunt KING and POLONIUS]

Enter HAMLET

Ham To be, or not to be that is the question

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die to sleep,
No more and, by a sleep to say we end
The heart ache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wish'd To die, to sleep,
To sleep perchance to dream ay, there's the rub,

For in that sleep of death what dreams may
come

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life, For who would bear the whips and scorns of
time,

The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,

The pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay, 72
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear, 76
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will, 80
And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?

Thus conscience does make cowards of us all,
And thus the native hue of resolution 84
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action Soft you now! 88
The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons Be all my sins remember'd

Oph Good my lord
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham I humbly thank you, well, well, well
Oph My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver,
I pray you, now receive them

Ham No, not I,
I never gave you aught

Oph My honour'd lord, you know right well you did,

And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd

As made the things more rich their perfume
lost,

Take these again, for to the noble mind 100
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind
There, my lord

Ham Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph My lord! 104

Ham Are you fair?

Oph What means your lordship?

Ham That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty 109

Oph Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham Ay, truly, for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof I did love thee once 117

Oph Indeed, my lord, you made me believe
so

Ham You should not have believed me, for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it I loved you not

Oph I was the more deceived 123

Ham Get thee to a nunnery why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious, with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in What should such fellows as I do crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant
